17 And it was in the heart of David my father to build an house for the name of the LORD God of Israel.

18 And the LORD said unto David my father, Whereas it was in thine heart to build an house unto my name, thou didst well that it was in thine heart.

19 Nevertheless thou shalt not build the house; but thy son that shall come forth out of thy loins, he shall build the house unto my name.

20 And the LORD hath performed his word that he spake, and I am risen up in the room of David my father, and sit on the throne of Israel, as the LORD promised, and have built an house for the name of the LORD God of Israel.

21 And I have set there a place for the ark, wherein is the covenant of the LORD, which he made with our fathers, when he brought them out of the land of Egypt.

¹ 2 Chron.
G. 13.

22 ¶ And Solomon stood before ¹ the altar of the LORD in the presence of all the congregation of Israel, and spread forth his hands toward heaven:

² 2 Macc.
2. 8.

23 And he said, ² LORD God of Israel, there is no God like thee, in heaven above, or on earth beneath, who keepest covenant and mercy with thy servants that walk before thee with all their heart:

24 Who hast kept with thy servant David my father that thou promisedst him: thou spakest also with thy mouth, and hast fulfilled it with thine hand, as it is this day.

23. — Lord God of Israel, &c.] This prayer of Solomon on the dedication of the temple is one of the noblest and most sublime compositions in the Bible, exhibiting the most exalted conceptions of the omnipresence of the Deity, and of His superintending providence, and of the peculiar protection He afforded to the Israelite nation, from the time that they came out of Egypt; and imploring forgiveness for all their sins and transgressions in the land, and during their ensuing captivities, in the prophetick spirit of Moses. Dr. Hales.

24. Who hast kept with thy servant David &c.] This relates to that part of God's promises to David, which had respect to his son's building for Him a house. The fulfilment of this Solomon looked upon as an earnest, ver. 5, that God would also fulfil the other great promises of kindness to his posterity, made to him at the same time, 2 Sam. vii. 12, 13. Bp. Patrick.

27. But will God indeed dwell &c.] As if he had said, Let it be far from us to imagine either that Thy infinite and unbounded presence should be confined to any one place, or that the mere outward grandeur and splendour of any temple should be enough to gain Thy favour towards worshippers, regardless of the true qualifications and real ends of religious worship. Yet, as Thou hast been pleased to appoint us here the place and manner of publicly serving Thee, grant us acceptance of all the devotions, duly directed toward the sacred ark of Thy residence, for imploring Thy mercies, and obtaining the pardon of our sins. Pyle.

Behold, the heaven and heaven of heavens cannot contain thee;] We have here a striking description of the immensity

25 Therefore now, LORD God of Israel, keep with thy servant David my father that thou promisedst him, saying, ³ † There shall not fail thee a man in my sight to sit on the throne of Israel; † so that thy children take heed to their way, that they walk before me as thou hast walked before me.

26 And now, O God of Israel, let thy word, I pray thee, be verified, which thou spakest unto thy servant David my father.

27 But will God indeed dwell on the earth? behold, the heaven and heaven of heavens cannot contain thee; how much less this house that I have builded?

28 Yet have thou respect unto the prayer of thy servant, and to his supplication, O LORD my God, to hearken unto the cry and to the prayer, which thy servant prayeth before thee to day:

29 That thine eyes may be open toward this house night and day, even toward the place of which thou hast said, ⁴ My name shall be there: that thou mayest hearken unto the prayer which thy servant shall make || toward this place.

30 And hearken thou to the supplication of thy servant, and of thy people Israel, when they shall pray || toward this place: and hear thou in heaven thy dwelling place: and when thou hearest, forgive.

31 ¶ If any man trespass against his neighbour, † and an oath be laid upon him to cause him to swear, and the oath come before thine altar in this house:

32 Then hear thou in heaven, and do,

Before
CHRIST
1004.

³ Chap. 2.

⁴ 2 Sam. 7.

⁵ 12.

† Heb.

There shall not be cut off unto thee

a man from my sight.

† Heb.

only if.

¹ 1. Cent. 12.

|| Or, in this place.

|| Or, in this place.

† Heb.

and he require an

oath of him.

and omnipresence of God. We have frequent expressions in Scripture of God being "in heaven:" the meaning of which is, not that He who is in all places can be confined to any, or that any proper habitation can be ascribed to Him, whom, as Solomon declares, the "heaven of heavens cannot contain;" but they are intended to represent His amazing height and dignity, not in place, but in power. Thus, when we speak of God, the supreme invisible Father, as being "in heaven," we must be understood to express, that He is exalted over all in sovereignty and dominion; that He is the high and holy One; great, glorious, and supreme above all. There is also another reason of the expression of God's being "in heaven;" and that is, to signify that, though of His real actual presence there is no confinement, yet of His glory and majesty there is in the heavens a particular manifestation. There it is that His glory is declared, and there the righteous shall see His face, and be blessed with the peculiar manifestation of His power and majesty. In like manner, here upon earth; in those places where He has been pleased more particularly to manifest His glory, to place His name and to receive the homage of His servants, there God, in Scripture-phrases, is said to be. Thus, in the temple at Jerusalem, He, whom the "heaven of heavens cannot contain," did at this time deign to dwell, having appointed there to receive His tribute of worship. Dr. S. Clarke.

31. If any man trespass &c.] In any great debates of right, injury, or trespass, between man and man, when an appeal is made by oath before Thy sacred altar; do Thou, who alone knowest the heart, clear the innocent, and punish the guilty, in ways most suitable to Thy all-wise providence. Pyle.

^{Before}
^{CHRIST}
^{1004.} and judge thy servants, condemning the wicked, to bring his way upon his head; and justifying the righteous, to give him according to his righteousness.

33 ¶ When thy people Israel be smitten down before the enemy, because they have sinned against thee, and shall turn again to thee, and confess thy name, and pray, and make supplication unto thee || in this house:

34 Then hear thou in heaven, and forgive the sin of thy people Israel, and bring them again unto the land which thou gavest unto their fathers.

35 ¶ When heaven is shut up, and there is no rain, because they have sinned against thee; if they pray toward this place, and confess thy name, and turn from their sin, when thou afflictest them:

36 Then hear thou in heaven, and forgive the sin of thy servants, and of thy people Israel, that thou teach them the good way wherein they should walk, and give rain upon thy land, which thou hast given to thy people for an inheritance.

37 ¶ If there be in the land famine, if there be pestilence, blasting, mildew, locust, or if there be caterpillar; if their enemy besiege them in the land of their || cities; whatsoever plague, whatsoever sickness there be;

¶ Or,
jurisdiction.

38 What prayer and supplication soever be made by any man, or by all thy people Israel, which shall know every man the plague of his own heart, and spread forth his hands toward this house:

39 Then hear thou in heaven thy dwelling place, and forgive, and do, and give to every man according to his ways, whose heart thou knowest; (for thou, even thou only, knowest the hearts of all the children of men;)

^{Before}
^{CHRIST}
^{1004.}

40 That they may fear thee all the days that they live in the land which thou gavest unto our fathers.

41 Moreover concerning a stranger, that is not of thy people Israel, but cometh out of a far country for thy name's sake;

42 (For they shall hear of thy great name, and of thy strong hand, and of thy stretched out arm;) when he shall come and pray toward this house;

43 Hear thou in heaven thy dwelling place, and do according to all that the stranger calleth to thee for: that all people of the earth may know thy name, to fear thee, as do thy people Israel; and that they may know that † this house, which I have builded, is called by thy name.

† Heb.
thy name is called upon this house.

44 ¶ If thy people go out to battle against their enemy, whithersoever thou shalt send them, and shall pray unto the LORD † toward the city which thou hast chosen, and toward the house that I have built for thy name:

† Heb.
the way of the city.

45 Then hear thou in heaven their prayer and their supplication, and maintain their || cause.

¶ Or, right.

46 If they sin against thee, (* for there is no man that sinneth not,) and thou be angry with them, and deliver them to the enemy, so that they carry them away captives unto the land of the enemy, far or near;

* 2 Chron.
6. 36.
Eccles. 7.
22.
1 John 1.
8, 10.

47 Yet if they shall † bethink themselves

† Heb.
bring back to their heart.

35. When heaven is shut up, &c.] Whatever judgments Thou shalt most righteously inflict upon them, in degrees answerable to their transgressions, whether it be famine, war, or pestilence; let their true repentance never be too late to recover Thy lost favour: let not the penitent continue in sufferings for the sake of the obstinate; but remove Thy judgments for the honour of Thy Name, and for the continuance of Thy true religion amongst us. Pyle.

By these several instances we may learn that all things are under the dispensation of Divine Providence; that war, famine, pestilence, &c. are by God's permission; that the only remedy for all evil is by prayer to God; and, lastly, that He will hear the prayers of men, and will help them, when they truly repent of those sins for which judgments are sent into the world. Bp. Wilson.

36. — that thou teach them the good way] These words are better translated at 2 Chron. vi. 27, (where the words are the very same in the Hebrew,) "When Thou hast taught them the good way, wherein they should walk." He does not desire their pardon till their affliction had taught them better obedience. Bp. Patrick.

37. If there be in the land famine, &c.] From the whole of the passage which follows in this admirable prayer of Solomon's, we have the truth forcibly impressed upon us, that, in any case of public judgment or calamity, the humiliation and repentance of a nation must begin with particular persons. The individuals which compose the nation must humble themselves before God, every one for his own personal sins and miscarriages, by which they have provoked God and increased the publick guilt, before God will hear the prayers and forgive the sins of the nation. There cannot be a general reformation without the reformation of particular persons, which constitute and make up the generality. Abp. Tillotson.

41. — concerning a stranger, &c.] Concerning "a stranger" that "cometh out of a far country" to be a proselyte to the true religion, and worship God alone, though he be not circumcised, and thereby bound to keep the whole law. Such strangers came to pray at the temple, though they might not offer any sacrifice except only a burnt offering; there was a court in the temple, called the court of the Gentiles, beyond that of the Israelites, which was designed entirely for the Gentile proselytes. Bp. Patrick.

43. — that this house — is called by thy name.] That is, "that it is Thy house." Locke.

44. — whithersoever thou shalt send them,] It is here to be observed, that the Israelites were not to make war, without a warrant and commission from God, upon the neighbouring nations; not for the satisfying of their ambition and vainglory, but by His command, and for just and necessary reasons, which would warrant them to implore and expect God's blessings on their arms. Bp. Patrick.

Before
CHRIST
1004.

in the land whither they were carried captives, and repent, and make supplication unto thee in the land of them that carried them captives, saying, We have sinned, and have done perversely, we have committed wickedness;

48 And so return unto thee with all their heart, and with all their soul, in the land of their enemies, which led them away captive, and pray unto thee toward their land, which thou gavest unto their fathers, the city which thou hast chosen, and the house which I have built for thy name:

Or,
right.

49 Then hear thou their prayer and their supplication in heaven thy dwelling place, and maintain their || cause,

50 And forgive thy people that have sinned against thee, and all their transgressions wherein they have transgressed against thee, and give them compassion before them who carried them captive, that they may have compassion on them:

51 For they be thy people, and thine inheritance, which thou broughtest forth out of Egypt, from the midst of the furnace of iron:

52 That thine eyes may be open unto the supplication of thy servant, and unto the supplication of thy people Israel, to hearken unto them in all that they call for unto thee.

¹ Exod. 19.
6.

53 For thou didst separate them from among all the people of the earth, to be thine inheritance, ¹as thou spakest by the hand of Moses thy servant, when thou broughtest our fathers out of Egypt, O Lord God.

54 And it was so, that when Solomon had made an end of praying all this prayer and supplication unto the LORD, he arose from before the altar of the LORD, from

48. — and pray unto thee toward their land, &c.] The very looking towards this place, with earnest imploring of the mercy of God, and desire of His help, was to own Him that dwelt here, and to acknowledge Him alone for their God, which was a means of preserving them from idolatry. All other nations of the world turned their faces towards the east when they worshipped; but the Jews (when they were in captivity) to the west, where the holy temple was. And for this cause, when the temple and the holy city were destroyed, and the ark of the testimony gone, yet good men looked and prayed towards the place where it used to be, as appears by the Prophet Daniel. Dean Allix.

54. — when Solomon had made an end of praying] From this prayer of Solomon we learn, that all events proceed from God; that war, pestilence, famine, and other judgments, are inflicted by His hand, when men provoke Him by their sins; that to have recourse to God by prayer, confession of sins, and true repentance, is the way to remedy these evils; and that He is always ready to hear and to deliver those who call upon Him in their necessities, and with all their hearts turn unto Him. We here see, lastly, with what fervency and joy Solomon gave thanks kneeling on his knees with his hands spread up to heaven. Before

CHRIST
1004.

55 And he stood, and blessed all the congregation of Israel with a loud voice, saying,

56 Blessed be the LORD, that hath given rest unto his people Israel, according to all that he promised: there hath not ^{† Heb.} failed ^{fallen.} one word of all his good promise, which he promised by the hand of Moses his servant.

57 The LORD our God be with us, as he was with our fathers: let him not leave us, nor forsake us:

58 That he may incline our hearts unto him, to walk in all his ways, and to keep his commandments, and his statutes, and his judgments, which he commanded our fathers.

59 And let these my words, wherewith I have made supplication before the LORD, be nigh unto the LORD our God day and night, that he maintain the cause of his servant, and the cause of his people Israel ^{† Heb.} at all times, as the matter shall require: ^{the thing of a day in his day.}

60 That all the people of the earth may know that the LORD is God, and that there is none else.

61 Let your heart therefore be perfect with the LORD our God, to walk in his statutes, and to keep his commandments, as at this day.

62 ¶ And ^m the king, and all Israel with ^m 2 Chron. 7. 4. him, offered sacrifice before the LORD.

63 And Solomon offered a sacrifice of peace offerings, which he offered unto the LORD, two and twenty thousand oxen, and an hundred and twenty thousand sheep. So the king and all the children of Israel dedicated the house of the LORD.

64 ⁿ The same day did the king hallow ⁿ 2 Chron. 7. 7.

to God, and implored His blessing in behalf of all the people. Let us join with him in both these duties; praising God for all His blessings, and especially for spiritual mercies; above all, with fervent devotion, beseeching Him to turn our hearts towards Him, that we may keep His commandments faithfully and with perseverance. Ostervald.

63. — two and twenty thousand oxen, &c.] We must not suppose that all these were offered in one day, much less on one altar. The continuance of this solemn meeting was for fourteen days; seven in the feast of tabernacles, and seven in the feast of dedication, ver. 65: and “because the brasen altar that was before the LORD was too little to receive the burnt offerings, &c.” ver. 64, Solomon, by a special licence from God, “hallowed the middle of the court &c.” that is, ordered other altars to be erected in the court of the priests, and perhaps in other places, which were to serve only during this present solemnity, when such a vast number of sacrifices were to be offered. At other times, no other altar was to be allowed but the brasen altar which Solomon had made. Bp. Patrick, Stackhouse.

64. — did the king hallow the middle of the court] It does not the middle of the court that was before the house of the LORD: for there he offered burnt offerings, and meat offerings, and the fat of the peace offerings: because the brasen altar that was before the LORD was too little to receive the burnt offerings, and meat offerings, and the fat of the peace offerings.

65 And at that time Solomon held a feast, and all Israel with him, a great congregation, from the entering in of Hamath unto the river of Egypt, before the LORD our God, seven days and seven days, even fourteen days.

66 On the eighth day he sent the people away: and they || blessed the king, and went unto their tents joyful and glad of heart for all the goodness that the LORD had done for David his servant, and for Israel his people.

CHAP. IX.

¹ God's covenant in a vision with Solomon. ¹⁰ The mutual presents of Solomon and Hiram. ¹⁵ In Solomon's works the Gentiles were his bondmen, the Israelites honourable servants. ²⁴ Pharaoh's daughter removeth to her house. ²⁵ Solomon's yearly solemn sacrifices. ²⁶ His navy fetcheth gold from Ophir.

AND ^a it came to pass, when Solomon had finished the building of the house of the LORD, and the king's house, and all Solomon's desire which he was pleased to do, ^b That the LORD appeared to Solomon the second time, ^c as he had appeared unto him at Gibeon.

^c 3 And the LORD said unto him, I have heard thy prayer and thy supplication, that thou hast made before me: I have hallowed this house, which thou hast built, ^c to put my name there for ever; and mine eyes and mine heart shall be there perpetually.

4 And if thou wilt walk before me, as

David thy father walked, in integrity of heart, and in uprightness, to do according to all that I have commanded thee, and wilt keep my statutes and my judgments:

5 Then I will establish the throne of thy kingdom upon Israel for ever, ^d as I promised to David thy father, saying, There shall not fail thee a man upon the throne of Israel.

6 But if ye shall at all turn from following me, ye or your children, and will not keep my commandments and my statutes which I have set before you, but go and serve other gods, and worship them:

7 Then will I cut off Israel out of the land which I have given them; and this house, which I have hallowed ^e for my name, will I cast out of my sight; and Israel shall be a proverb and a byword among all people:

8 And at this house, which is high, every one that passeth by it shall be astonished, and shall hiss; and they shall say, ^f Why hath the LORD done thus unto this land, and to this house?

9 And they shall answer, Because they forsook the LORD their God, who brought forth their fathers out of the land of Egypt, and have taken hold upon other gods, and have worshipped them, and served them: therefore hath the LORD brought upon them all this evil.

10 ¶ And ^g it came to pass at the end of twenty years, when Solomon had built the two houses, the house of the LORD, and the king's house, 11 (Now Hiram the king of Tyre had furnished Solomon with cedar trees and fir trees, and with gold, according to all his desire,) that then king Solomon gave Hiram twenty cities in the land of Galilee.

12 And Hiram came out from Tyre to see the cities which Solomon had given him; and they ^h pleased him not.

mean that he consecrated it, for this had been done before; but he treated it as a sacred place, and shewed his reverence for it by religious acts there performed. Jos. Mede.

65. — from the entering in of Hamath &c.] From the northern to the southern extremity of the land of Israel. For Hamath see note on 2 Sam. viii. 9; and for the river of Egypt, see the note on Gen. xv. 18.

66. On the eighth day he sent the people away:] It is added at 2 Chron. vii. 10, that this was the twenty-third day of the seventh month. It would thus appear, that the fourteen days of the feast were not all kept together; for the great day of expiation was on the tenth of this month. It is probable, therefore, that before this day the seven days of the dedication were kept; and that afterwards they rested till the 15th, when the feast of tabernacles began; so that the whole feast ended on the 23d day of the month. Bp. Patrick.

Chap. IX. This chapter is to be compared with 2 Chron. vii. 12, to the end, and chap. viii.

Ver. 1. — when Solomon had finished the building] It is meant, after he had not only finished the building, but completed also the festival of the dedication, and the prayer, which has been detailed in the last chapter: this appears from ver. 3. Bp. Patrick.

4. — if thou wilt walk before me, &c.] In this passage it is strikingly expressed how much the safety, welfare, and happiness of kings and people depend entirely on their obedience to the laws of God. Bp. Wilson.

11. — twenty cities] These were not cities in the land of promise, which, as being God's gift to His people, could not be alienated; but were cities conquered by David, and not yet inhabited by Israel. Bp. Wilson.

Before
CHRIST
932.

That is,
displeasing,
or, dirty.

13 And he said, What cities are these which thou hast given me, my brother? And he called them the land of || Cabul unto this day.

14 And Hiram sent to the king sixscore talents of gold.

about 992.

15 ¶ And this is the reason of the levy which king Solomon raised; for to build the house of the LORD, and his own house, and Millo, and the wall of Jerusalem, and Hazer, and Megiddo, and Gezer.

about 1014.

16 For Pharaoh king of Egypt had gone up, and taken Gezer, and burnt it with fire, and slain the Canaanites that dwelt in the city, and given it for a present unto his daughter, Solomon's wife.

17 And Solomon built Gezer, and Beth-horon the nether,

18 And Baalath, and Tadmor in the wilderness, in the land,

13. — he called them the land of Cabul] It is commonly thought that Hiram called them by way of derision Cabul, which signifies "a dirty country," or "displeasing," as our margin translates; but others understand the word to signify "a boundary," as this was the tract of land which bounded the lower Galilee. Bp. Patrick. The reason of Hiram's refusing these lands probably was, that the Tyrians, being very commodiously situated for navigation, were in a manner wholly addicted to it, and were therefore unwilling to remove from the seacoast, and settle in a country where they could only live by the hard labours of agriculture, to which they were little accustomed. Bedford. The Greek translators render Cabul by a word which signifies "a bound or coast," but Hebrew writers by no means give that sense to the word. Josephus says, Cabul signifies, in the Phenician tongue, "that which does not please." Dr. Lightfoot.

According to another conjecture, Cabul signifies "bond land," land granted in discharge of a debt; and the name was sarcastically imposed by Hiram, to express how ill Solomon had discharged his obligation to him. Michaelis.

Respecting the situation of this "land of Cabul," opinions have differed; but the prevailing one has been, that it was in the immediate neighbourhood of Tyre. Calmet.

15. — and the wall of Jerusalem,] There are said to have been three walls, one within another; the inner wall compassing the house of God, and the house of the king; the middle wall compassing the houses of the Prophets and great persons; and the third compassing the houses of all the people. Bp. Patrick.

16. — Pharaoh — had — taken Gezer,] It appeared from Josh. xvi. 10, that when the Ephraimites took possession of Gezer, they suffered the Canaanites to dwell in it, who afterwards gave them no small disturbance; when therefore Pharaoh contracted an alliance with Solomon, he thought that he could not do him a more acceptable service, than by expelling the Canaanites from Gezer, and giving the city as a present with his daughter. Stackhouse.

18. — Tadmor in the wilderness,] Tadmor was a very famous city, known among the Greeks by the name of Palmyra, situated in the wilderness of Syria, on the borders of Arabia Deserta, inclining towards the Euphrates. Josephus places it two days' journey from Upper Syria, one day's journey from the Euphrates, and six days' journey from Babylon. If we may guess by the ruins which later travellers describe of this city, it was one of the finest and most magnificent in the East; and it is somewhat surprising, that history should give us so little account when or by whom it was reduced to the sad condition in which it now appears. The reason of Solomon's building this city in so desolate a place, was probably the commodiousness of its situation, to cut off all

19 And all the cities of store that Solomon had, and cities for his chariots, and cities for his horsemen, and † that which Solomon desired to build in Jerusalem, and in Lebanon, and in all the land of his dominion.

Before
CHRIST
about 992.

† Heb.
the desire of Solomon which he desired.

20 And all the people that were left of the Amorites, Hittites, Perizzites, Hivites, and Jebusites, which were not of the children of Israel, 21 Their children that were left after them in the land, whom the children of Israel also were not able utterly to destroy, upon those did Solomon levy a tribute of bondservice unto this day.

22 But of the children of Israel did Solomon ^b make no bondmen: but they were ^b Lev. 25. 39. men of war, and his servants, and his princes, and his captains, and rulers of his chariots, and his horsemen.

commerce between the Syrians and Mesopotamians, and to prevent their caballing and conspiring against him, as they had done against his father David. Stackhouse, Dr. Wells.

From the earliest times there seems to have been some communication between Mesopotamia and other provinces on the banks of the Euphrates, and those parts of Syria and Palestine which lay near the Mediterranean. The migration of Abram from Ur of the Chaldees to Sichem in the land of Canaan, is an instance of this, Gen. xi, xii. The journey through the desert, which separated these countries, was much facilitated by its affording one station abounding with water, and capable of cultivation. As the intercourse increased, the possession of this station became an object of so much importance, that Solomon, when he turned his attention towards the extension of commerce amongst his subjects, built a fenced city there. Its Syrian name of "Tadmor in the wilderness," and its Greek name of Palmyra, are both descriptive of its situation, in a spot adorned with palm trees. This is not only plentifully supplied with water, but surrounded by a portion of fertile land, which, though of no great extent, renders it a delightful habitation in the midst of barren sands, and an inhospitable desert. Its happy position, at the distance, according to M. D'Anville, of sixty miles from the Euphrates, and 203 from the Mediterranean, or, according to Major Rennell, of eighty-five miles from the Euphrates, and about 117 from the nearest coast of the Mediterranean, induced its inhabitants to enter with ardour into the trade of conveying commodities from one of these to the other. Its opulence and power increased rapidly; and, from the peculiar advantages of its situation, as well as the spirit of its inhabitants, it long maintained its independence, though surrounded by powerful and ambitious neighbours. Towards the close of the seventeenth century, some gentlemen of the English factory at Aleppo, incited by what they heard in the East concerning the wonderful ruins of Palmyra, ventured, notwithstanding the danger and fatigue of a journey through the desert, to visit them. To their astonishment they beheld a fertile spot of some miles in extent, arising like an island out of a vast plain of sand, covered with the remains of temples, porticoes, aqueducts, and other publick works, which in magnificence and splendour, and some of them in elegance, were not unworthy of Athens or of Rome, in their most prosperous state. Palmyra owed its aggrandizement to the opulence acquired by extensive commerce. After its conquest by Aurelian, trade never revived there. At present a few miserable huts of beggarly Arabs are scattered in the courts of its stately temples, or deform its elegant porticoes; and exhibit an humiliating contrast to its ancient magnificence. Dr. Robertson.

Before
CHRIST
about 992.

23 These were the chief of the officers that were over Solomon's work, five hundred and fifty, which bare rule over the people that wrought in the work.

2 Chron.
v. 11.

24 ¶ But ¹ Pharaoh's daughter came up out of the city of David unto her house which Solomon had built for her: then did he build Millo.

† Heb.
upon it.

25 ¶ And three times in a year did Solomon offer burnt offerings and peace offerings upon the altar which he built unto the LORD, and he burnt incense [†] upon the altar that was before the LORD. So he finished the house.

26 ¶ And king Solomon made a navy of ships in Ezion-geber, which is beside Eloth, 23. — five hundred and fifty.] At 2 Chron. viii. 10, the number is stated at 250. The most probable solution is, that there were 250 set over those who wrought in the temple; and the rest had the superintendence of publick works in other places. Bp. Patrick.

26. — Ezion-geber, which is beside Eloth.] We read at Numb. xxxiii. 35, that one of the encampments of the Israelites was at Ezion-gaber; and both Eloth and Ezion-gaber are mentioned at Deut. ii. 8. It is clear from Scripture that Ezion-geber was on the Red sea, but its exact situation is matter of dispute. Dr. Wells.

The chief foundation of riches to the Jews was the trade which they carried on by the Red sea, to the coasts of Africa on the west, and also to those of Arabia, Persia, and India, on the east. King David was the first who began it; for, having conquered the kingdom of Edom, and reduced it to be a province of the empire, 2 Sam. viii. 14, he thereby became master of these seaports, Eloth and Ezion-geber, and seeing the advantage which might be made of these two places, he wisely took advantage of it, and there began the traffick. Solomon, not being perplexed with wars as his father David was, had greater leisure for commercial pursuits, and he much improved this trade, as well by his greater application to it, as by his superiour wisdom. For the better settling of it, he went to Eloth and Ezion-geber in person, 2 Chron. viii. 17, and planted in these towns such inhabitants as might best be able to further his designs, bringing many from the seacoasts of Palestine, and being furnished with Tyrians by Hiram his friend and ally, 1 Kings ix. 27; 2 Chron. viii. 18. As the use of the compass was then unknown, navigation was carried on entirely by coasting, which made that to be a voyage of three years which would now be completed in three months. However, under the wise management of Solomon, this trade grew to such a pitch, that he drew to these ports, and thence to Jerusalem, all the trade of Africa, Arabia, Persia, and India, which was the chief source of the immense wealth he acquired, and in which he surpassed all the kings of his time as much as he did by his wisdom; so that he made silver to be at Jerusalem as the stones of the street, chap. x. 27, by reason of its great abundance there during his reign. Dean Prideaux.

28. And they came to Ophir.] It is agreed by all writers, that the trade carried on under Solomon was the same as that which is now in the hands of our East India merchants; yet there are great disputes among learned men, in what parts of the Eastern world Ophir and Tharshish, the two places of resort mentioned in Scripture, lay. Some suppose Ophir to have been the island of Socotra, which lies on the eastern coast of Africa, a little without the straits of Babel-mandel. Others contend for the island of Ceylon, which supposition is thus far confirmed, that an ancient author, Eupolemus, states Ophir to have been an island. But we have no certain means of information; we have no account in Scripture of the situation of Ophir, or of the length of the voyage to it, only we are told that there were brought from it "gold, on the [†] shore of the Red sea, in the land of Edom.

Before
CHRIST
about 992.
† Heb. lip.

27 And Hiram sent in the navy his servants, shipmen that had knowledge of the sea, with the servants of Solomon.

28 And they came to Ophir, and fetched from thence gold, four hundred and twenty talents, and brought it to king Solomon.

CHAP. X.

1 The queen of Sheba admireth the wisdom of Solomon.
14 Solomon's gold. 16 His targets. 18 The throne of ivory. 21 His vessels. 24 His presents. 26 His chariots and horse. 28 His tribute.

2 Chron.
9. 1.
Matth. 12.
42.
Luke 11.
31.

AND when the ^a queen of Sheba heard of the fame of Solomon concerning almug trees, and precious stones," chap. x. 11; therefore any place in the Southern or Indian oceans which could furnish these may be supposed to be the Ophir of Scripture. This however should be remarked, that if the southern part of Arabia furnished the world in those times with the best gold, and in the greatest quantity, as many authors affirm, those who assert Ophir to have been there situated seem to have the best reason for their conjecture. Dean Prideaux. On the other hand, the authors of the Universal History deem it the most probable conjecture, that Ophir was in some of those remote rich countries of India beyond Ganges, and perhaps as far as China or Japan; which last still abounds with the finest gold, and with several other commodities in which Solomon's fleet dealt, as silver, precious stones, ebony, &c.

In what region of the earth we should search for the famous ports of Tharshish and Ophir, is an inquiry which has long exercised the industry of learned men. They were early supposed to be situated in some part of India, and the Jews were held to be one of the nations which traded with that country. But the opinion more generally adopted is, that Solomon's fleets, after passing the straits of Babel-mandel, held their course along the southeast coast of Africa, as far as the kingdom of Sofala, a country celebrated for its rich mines of gold and silver, (from which it has been denominated the Golden Sofala by Oriental writers,) and abounding in all the other articles which composed the cargoes of the Jewish ships. This opinion, which the accurate researches of M^d D'Anville rendered highly probable, seems now to be established with the utmost certainty by a late learned traveller, Mr. Bruce; who, by his knowledge of the monsoons in the Arabian gulf, and his attention to the ancient mode of navigation, both in that sea, and along the African coast, has not only accounted for the extraordinary length of time which the fleets of Solomon took in going and returning, but has shewn, from circumstances mentioned concerning the voyage, that it was not made to any place in India. This commercial effort, which the Jews made in the reign of Solomon, was merely a transient one; and they quickly returned to their former state of unsocial seclusion from the rest of mankind. Dr. Robertson.

— gold, four hundred and twenty talents.] It is said at 2 Chron. viii. 18, that they brought 450 talents: a difference which is of little importance, whether we attribute it to a variation in the value of the talent, or in the quantity of the metal, the one referring to the quantity of pure gold, the other of gold with alloy; or whether we suppose 450 talents to be the gross produce of the voyage, 420 the produce with the deduction of expenses. Bp. Patrick.

Chap. X. This chapter is to be compared with 2 Chron. i. and ix.

Ver. 1. — the queen of Sheba] It has been a great subject of dispute, what was the situation of this Sheba. Some writers, and among these Josephus, place it in Africa; but the best supported

Before
CHRIST
about 992.

the name of the LORD, she came to prove him with hard questions.

2 And she came to Jerusalem with a very great train, with camels that bare spices, and very much gold, and precious stones: and when she was come to Solomon, she communed with him of all that was in her heart.

† Heb.
words.

3 And Solomon told her all her † questions: there was not any thing hid from the king, which he told her not.

4 And when the queen of Sheba had seen all Solomon's wisdom, and the house that he had built, standing.

† Heb.

|| Or,
butlers.

5 And the meat of his table, and the sitting of his servants, and the † attendance of his ministers, and their apparel, and his || cupbearers, and his ascent by which he went up unto the house of the LORD; there was no more spirit in her.

† Heb.

word.

|| Or,

sayings.

6 And she said to the king, It was a true † report that I heard in mine own land of thy || acts and of thy wisdom.

7 Howbeit I believed not the words, until I came, and mine eyes had seen it: and, behold, the half was not told me:

† thy wisdom and prosperity exceedeth the fame which I heard.

Before
CHRIST
about 992.

8 Happy are thy men, happy are these thy servants, which stand continually before thee, and that hear thy wisdom.

† Heb.
thou hast added wisdom and goodness to the fame.

9 Blessed be the LORD thy God, which delighted in thee, to set thee on the throne of Israel: because the LORD loved Israel for ever, therefore made he thee king, to do judgment and justice.

10 And she gave the king an hundred and twenty talents of gold, and of spices very great store, and precious stones: there came no more such abundance of spices as these which the queen of Sheba gave to king Solomon.

11 And the navy also of Hiram, that brought gold from Ophir, brought in from Ophir great plenty of almug trees, and precious stones.

12 And the king made of the almug trees || † pillars for the house of the LORD, and for the king's house, harps also and psalteries for singers: there came no such almug trees, nor were seen unto this day.

|| Or, rails.
† Heb.
a prop.

^b 2 Chron.
9. 10.

opinion is, that the kingdom of Sheba lay in the south part of Arabia Felix. This accords with the title of "queen of the south" given by our Saviour, Matt. xii. 42, to the queen of Sheba; Arabia Felix too abounded very much in gold and spices, which were brought by that queen to Solomon. Dr. Wells.

— concerning the name of the Lord.] The most natural meaning is, she had heard of his fame concerning matters of religion, or with respect to religious knowledge in general, and particularly to the temple, built with such splendour and magnificence, for the honour of God's name, and the maintenance of true religion. Pyle. If this princess came from Arabia, she may have been descended from Abraham, by his wife Keturah, one of whose sons begat Sheba, the first planter of this country; and consequently she may have had some knowledge of revealed religion, by tradition at least, from her pious ancestors. Accordingly, it was Solomon's fame concerning "the name of the Lord," that is, concerning his knowledge of the Supreme Being, and the proper manner of worshipping Him, which excited her to take so long a journey. And therefore our Saviour says, that, as she came so far to "hear his wisdom," (his wisdom, no doubt, concerning the nature and worship of Almighty God,) Matt. xii. 42, she would, at the day of judgment, "rise up" against that generation which had refused to listen to Him. Stackhouse. See 2 Chron. ix. 8, and the note.

— came to prove him with hard questions.] Came to try whether his wisdom was so great as was reported, by proposing to him hard questions. Dr. Wells.

2. — she communed with him of all &c.] She had the liberty of propounding to him all questions respecting which she desired a solution, probably either in natural or divine things. Bp. Patrick.

5. — there was no more spirit in her.] She was transported beyond herself with admiration. Bp. Hall. She was perfectly astonished. This phrase very properly denotes a very high degree of astonishment. Pyle.

9. — to do judgment and justice.] This was a most excellent admonition, both to the people and to the king; that the people should feel their obligation to God, who had given them such a king; and that he should remember the end for which God had made him king, to be, to govern his people justly. Bp. Patrick.

11. And the navy also of Hiram.] There seems reason to conjecture that verse 13 ought to come before these two verses, 11 and 12: that so all that relates to the queen of Sheba may be concluded without any break. Houbigant.

The Phenicians are some of the most early navigators mentioned in history. Every circumstance in their character and situation was favourable to the commercial spirit. The territory which they possessed was neither large nor fertile. It was from commerce only that they could derive either opulence or power. Accordingly the trade carried on by the Phenicians of Sidon and Tyre was extensive and adventurous; not long confined to the countries bordering on the Mediterranean, but enlarged by the early acquisition of ports in the Arabian gulf: and both in their manners and policy they resembled the great commercial states of modern times more than any people in the ancient world. The Jews, by their vicinity to Tyre, had such an opportunity of observing the wealth, which flowed into that city from the lucrative commerce carried on by the Phenicians from their settlements in the Arabian gulf, as incited them to aim at obtaining some share in it. This they effected under the prosperous reigns of David and Solomon. Dr. Robertson.

— great plenty of almug trees.] It is not well ascertained what description of tree is meant by this name. The Latin translators call it thyne wood. Respecting which Theophrastus says, that the thyon or thya tree grows near the temple of Jupiter Ammon in Africa, that it resembles the cypress tree in its boughs, leaves, stalks, and fruit; and that its wood never rots. It was in high esteem among the heathen, who frequently made of this wood the doors of their temples, and the images of their gods. It should be observed, however, that Josephus calls the almug trees of Solomon "pitch or torch trees:" but cautions us against supposing that the wood of them was like what was known in his time by that name; for it was, says he, rather like that of the fig tree, but more white and shining. Parkhurst.

12. — pillars for the house of the Lord.] Or rather, "rails," (as we translate in the margin of our Bibles,) which were made on either side of the causeway, which went up from the king's house to the house of the Lord. Bp. Patrick.

Before
CHRIST
about 992.

† Heb.
according to the hand of king Solomon.

13 And king Solomon gave unto the queen of Sheba all her desire, whatsoever she asked, beside that which Solomon gave her † of his royal bounty. So she turned and went to her own country, she and her servants.

14 ¶ Now the weight of gold that came to Solomon in one year was six hundred threescore and six talents of gold, 15 Beside that he had of the merchantmen, and of the traffick of the spice merchants, and of all the kings of Arabia, and of the ‖ governors of the country.

‖ Or,
captains.

16 ¶ And king Solomon made two hundred targets of beaten gold: six hundred shekels of gold went to one target.

17 And he made three hundred shields of beaten gold; three pound of gold went to one shield: and the king put them in the † house of the forest of Lebanon.

† Chap. 7.
2.

18 ¶ Moreover the king made a great throne of ivory, and overlaid it with the best gold.

† Heb. on the hinder part thereof.

19 The throne had six steps, and the top of the throne was round † behind: and there were † stays on either side on the place of the seat, and two lions stood beside the stays.

Before
CHRIST
about 992.

† Heb.
hands.

20 And twelve lions stood there on the one side and on the other upon the six steps: there was not † the like made in any kingdom.

† Heb. so.

21 ¶ And all king Solomon's drinking vessels were of gold, and all the vessels of the house of the forest of Lebanon were of pure gold; ‖ none were of silver: it was nothing accounted of in the days of Solomon.

‖ Or, there was no silver in them.

22 For the king had at sea a navy of Tharshish with the navy of Hiram: once in three years came the navy of Tharshish, bringing gold, and silver, ‖ ivory, and apes, and peacocks.

‖ Or, elephants'
teeth.

23 So king Solomon exceeded all the kings of the earth for riches and for wisdom.

24 ¶ And all the earth † sought to Solomon, to hear his wisdom, which † God had put in his heart.

† Heb. sought the face of.

25 And they brought every man his pre-and embossing parts of it; but not so as to conceal the whole. Script. illust.

20. And twelve lions stood] An account is given by Sir Thomas Roe of a throne of the Mogul, much resembling this of Solomon: "He hath at Agra a most glorious throne within his palace, the ascent to which is by divers steps, covered with plates of silver; on the top of the ascent stand four lions upon pedestals of marble, which lions are all of massy silver, in part gilt. These lions support a canopy of fine gold, under which the Mogul sits when he appears in his greatest state and glory." Fragments to Calmet.

21. — Solomon's drinking vessels were of gold,] The magnificence of the modern kings of Persia is astonishing, but perhaps not exceeding that of Solomon. One of them, Shah Abbas, caused gold to the amount of forty-two Jewish talents to be melted into royal drinking vessels; and we may well suppose that those of Solomon were equally weighty, when we read, ver. 16, that his 200 targets were little less. Harmer.

22. — a navy of Tharshish] In regard to the situation of Tharshish, we are here told that "the navy of Tharshish came once in three years, bringing gold, and silver, ivory, &c." therefore any place in the Southern or great Indian ocean, at the distance of three years' voyage from Ezion-gaber, according to the navigation of those times, which could best furnish the merchants with these commodities, may be guessed to be the Tharshish of the Holy Scriptures. Dean Prideaux. By the circumstance of the navy of Tharshish being here mentioned as joined with the navy of Hiram, (from Tyre,) and by the fact of Jonah's taking ship at Joppa, to go to Tharshish, many conclude that Tharshish was in the Mediterranean, or, at least, in the Atlantick, sea. They that hold this opinion, suppose that either Carthage, or else Tartessus in Spain, was the old Tharshish. From Tartessus the merchants might fetch gold and silver, (for some hills and some rivers in Spain did, in those early times, produce gold,) and from Carthage the ivory, apes, and peacocks; and this trading from port to port might, in those times, make a three years' voyage. But there are other passages, as chap. xxii. 48, and 2 Chron. xx. 36, from which it would seem that Tharshish is spoken of in the Indian sea. Dr. Wall.

— peacocks.] Some have rather understood the Hebrew word to mean "parrots." Buxtorf.

13. — all her desire, whatsoever she asked,] That the queen of Sheba should have asked for presents may appear strange at first sight; but the circumstance is perfectly agreeable to modern Eastern customs, which are derived, it is probable, from remote antiquity. Irwin and many other travellers have related, that principal persons in those countries not only expect presents, but will often, directly and without ceremony, ask for any thing which happens to please them; expecting that their request should be immediately complied with; and this practice is by no means held to be degrading, or a mark of rapacious meanness. Harmer.

14. Now the weight of gold &c.] It has pleased God, in these instances of Solomon's greatness, honour, and riches, to convey to us the most sensible instruction; to point out the danger of riches, to shew how apt they are to become temptations to luxury and pride, how naturally they lead men to forget and forsake their God; and, in consequence, to teach us that they must ever be received with fear, and used with great caution, and to good purposes; or they will prove the destruction of those who possess them, as was unhappily the case with Solomon and his family. Bp. Wilson.

18. — made a great throne of ivory,] We never read of ivory till about the time of Solomon, who perhaps brought elephants from India, or, at least, caused great quantities of ivory to be imported from thence. At this time it was as precious as gold: we must not suppose, therefore, that this throne of Solomon's was entirely overlaid with gold, but only in particular places, that so the mixture of gold and ivory, which gave a lustre to each other, might make the throne look more beautiful. "There was not the like made in any kingdom," ver. 20; of course, the sacred writer means, in those days. In afterages we read that the throne of the Parthian kings was of gold encompassed with four golden pillars beset with precious stones, and that the Persian kings sat in judgment under a golden vine, the bunches of whose grapes were made of several sorts of precious stones. This serves to illustrate the splendour of Eastern monarchs. Stackhouse, Bp. Patrick.

— and overlaid it with the best gold.] It is by no means probable that he covered the ivory with gold; for in that case any common wood would have answered the purpose as well as ivory. It seems to be meant, that he inlaid it with gold, ornamenting

Before
CHRIST
about 992.

2 Chron.
1. 14.

† Heb. same.

2 Chron.
1. 16. & 9.
28.

† Heb.
And the going forth of the horses which was Solomon's.

sent, vessels of silver, and vessels of gold, and garments, and armour, and spices, horses, and mules, a rate year by year.

26 ¶ And Solomon gathered together chariots and horsemen: and he had a thousand and four hundred chariots, and twelve thousand horsemen, whom he bestowed in the cities for chariots, and with the king at Jerusalem.

27 And the king † made silver to be in Jerusalem as stones, and cedars made he to be as the sycamore trees that are in the vale, for abundance.

28 ¶ † And Solomon had horses brought out of Egypt, and linen yarn: the king's merchants received the linen yarn at a price.

26. — chariots and horsemen:] It appears evident that, in David's time, horses were not used in Israel; for Absalom, when he had lost the battle, fled upon a mule, to make his escape; and David ordered his own mule to carry Solomon to be anointed. It seems that the country did not produce horses; but Solomon, being able to afford large expenses, procured them from Egypt, and maintained, as is here mentioned, a great number of chariots and horsemen. Bp. Patrick. See notes at ver. 28, and chap. iv. 26.

27. — made silver to be — as stones,] To be as common as pebbles. Bp. Patrick.

— to be as the sycamore trees] By the sycamore is here meant, a tree called the Egyptian fig; its name denotes it to partake of the nature of the fig tree and the mulberry tree. It resembles the mulberry tree in its leaves, and the fig tree in its fruit. Its fruit resembles the fig in shape and size, and its taste is pretty much that of the wild fig. These sycomores were very common in Egypt, also in Judea; we read, Luke xix. 4, that Zaccheus climbed up into a sycamore tree, to see Jesus as He passed by. Sycamore trees appear to have furnished the more ordinary timber, as cedars did the most precious. See Isai. ix. 10. Calmel.

28. And Solomon had horses brought out of Egypt,] See Deut. xvii. 16, and the note there. It is very much to be remarked, that, from the coming out of Egypt to the end of David's reign, the people of Israel never suffered for want of force and strength in war. Troops, few in number, and seemingly unfit for action, supported neither by chariots nor by horsemen, proved an overmatch for royal armies. This may be verified in the instances of Gideon, Barak, Jephthah, and Samuel, and of all others called forth by God to save His people. During this period also the kingdom of Israel was carried to its utmost height by David. He held the kings about him, how gallantly soever they and their troops were mounted, under tribute and subjection, though he himself rode on a mule, and provided no better equipage for his son on his coronation day; see ch. i. 33, 34. When David looked back and meditated on this state of things, he might well say, "Some trust in chariots, and some in horses: but we will remember the name of the Lord our God," Ps. xx. 7. In the reign of Solomon things quickly changed. He married the daughter of the king of Egypt, and opened a commerce between that country and his own: and the next news we hear of him is, that he "had forty thousand stalls of horses for his chariots, and twelve thousand horsemen," chap. iv. 26. They who succeeded him followed his example; and from his time the kings of Judah and Israel had, whenever they were able to keep them, a strength of chariots and horsemen. Let us now see what they got by this change: Solomon came to a kingdom firmly established, the princes round him were tributary to him, and those at a distance feared and admired him: but troubles soon overtook him; the Edomite on one side, the king of Damascus on the other, insulted

29 And a chariot came up and went out of Egypt for six hundred shekels of silver, and an horse for an hundred and fifty: and so for all the kings of the Hittites, and for the kings of Syria, did they bring them out † by their means.

Before
CHRIST
about 992.

† Heb. by their
hand.

CHAP. XI.

1 Solomon's wives and concubines. 4 In his old age they draw him to idolatry. 9 God threateneth him. 14 Solomon's adversaries were Hadad, who was entertained in Egypt, 23 Rezon, who reigned in Damascus, 26 and Jeroboam, to whom Ahijah prophesied. 41 Solomon's acts, reign, and death: Rehoboam succeedeth him.

2 Deut. 17.

17.

Eccle^{us} 47.

19.

|| Or,
besides.

BUT king Solomon loved ^a many strange women, || together with the daughter him: nor was he able with all his new forces to quell these upstart enemies. But the most remarkable event, and that which seems designed by Providence to humble the pride of Israel, was the division of the kingdom upon the death of Solomon, which produced a war of many years' continuance between Israel and Judah, wherein their forces were employed, with various success, in weakening and destroying one another. During this time the king of Egypt, the country which had furnished Solomon with all his horses, came up against Jerusalem, and took it, and carried away all the treasures of the temple, and of the royal palace, which had been long gathering by David and Solomon: and Rehoboam, the son of Solomon, became servant to the king of Egypt, 2 Chron. xii. 8, 9. Thus did Solomon and his house prosper with their great strength of chariots and horses. Indeed we may from this time date the ruin of Israel. Bp. Sherlock. See Is. ii. 7; xxxi. 1; Hos. xiv. 3.

— the king's merchants received &c.] It is acknowledged by all interpreters that these words, and those which follow in the next verse, are very obscure. Bochart seems to have thrown the greatest light upon them, by taking the Hebrew word, translated linen yarn, to signify the toll or custom which was paid for horses brought out of Egypt. He translates the whole thus: "Horses were brought up to Solomon out of Egypt; and as to the toll or custom, the merchants of king Solomon hired it at a price, (that is, paid constantly a certain sum for it to the king of Egypt;) and a chariot coming out of Egypt went out for 600 shekels of silver, and a horse for 150: and so to all the kings of the Hittites, and for the king of Syria, did they bring by their hands." The sense of which words is plainly this, that good horses being found in those times in few countries but Egypt, Pharaoh would not suffer them to be carried from thence without a great tribute. Solomon therefore, bringing many thousand horses out of Egypt, prevailed with his father-in-law to free him from this grievous tribute, and to accept a fixed annual sum instead of it. Bp. Patrick. This interpretation of Bochart gives an easy sense to this otherwise very obscure passage. Pyle.

Chap. XI. ver. 1. — loved many strange women,] Solomon committed no fault in marrying Pharaoh's daughter, as she was a proselyte, according to the common opinion, to the Jewish religion. But, in marrying so many other women besides, he committed two sins against the law, the one in multiplying wives, and the other in marrying those of strange nations, who still retained their idolatrous religion. The Jews were permitted to marry wives of other nations, provided they embraced the Jewish religion; but they were most expressly forbidden to marry from the seven Canaanitish nations, even if they did embrace that religion, lest the venom of idolatry might lurk amongst them, and at last break out and infect them. Bp. Patrick.

It was the charge of God to the kings of Israel, before they ex-

Before CHRIST about 992. of Pharaoh, women of the Moabites, Ammonites, Edomites, Zidonians, and Hittites;

2 Of the nations concerning which the LORD said unto the children of Israel, ^b Ye shall not go in to them, neither shall they come in unto you: for surely they will turn away your heart after their gods: Solomon clave unto these in love.

3 And he had seven hundred wives, princesses, and three hundred concubines: and his wives turned away his heart.

about 984. 4 For it came to pass, when Solomon was old, that his wives turned away his heart after other gods: and his heart was not perfect with the LORD his God, as was the heart of David his father. Before CHRIST about 984.

5 For Solomon went after ^c Ashtoreth ^e Judg. 2. 13. the goddess of the Zidonians, and after Milcom the abomination of the Ammonites.

6 And Solomon did evil in the sight of the LORD, and [†] went not fully after the LORD, as did David his father. [†] Heb. fulfilled not after.

7 Then did Solomon build an high place for Chemosh, the abomination of Moab, in the hill that is before Jerusalem, and for isted, that they should not multiply wives. Solomon had gone beyond the law, and now is ready to lose himself amongst a multiplicity of wives. O Solomon, where was thy wisdom, when thine affections ran away with thee into such wild voluptuousness? What availeth it thee to discourse of all things, when thou knowest not thyself? It is not of so much consequence to take heed, how the soul is informed, as how it is disciplined: the light of knowledge doeth well; but the due ordering of the affections doeth better. No man ever knew so much as Solomon; yet many, who have known less, have had more command of themselves. A competent estate well husbanded is better than a vast patrimony neglected. Bp. Hall. Solomon had long worshipped the true God, and revered the law of Moses as divine; and he is one of the most clear and impressive teachers of religious truth and moral duty that ever enlightened mankind: yet, in the decline of life and of reason, excessive sensuality, inflamed by the long enjoyment of royal power and uninterrupted prosperity, lulled to sleep the vigilance of his piety, and betrayed him into guilt. Such, as is a melancholy but certain truth, is the weakness and corruption of human nature! Every reader of Scripture should again and again be warned against adopting a notion, very injurious to the cause of religion with unthinking minds, that all the individuals, whom God made use of for the deliverance of His people, are brought forward to our notice in Scripture, as deserving of Divine favour, and fit models for our imitation, in the entire tenour of their lives. They generally indeed possessed the important and praise-worthy qualities of zeal and intrepidity in defence of their national religion and constitution, and were active and effective instruments in restoring the worship of Jehovah; and thus, in the main, forwarded the interests of virtue and religion. Hence God frequently assisted their efforts with miraculous aid, or is said to have raised them up, or to have been with them, as judges or kings of Israel; but we must by no means conceive this to imply that the Divine approbation attended all their conduct. The excesses of Samson, the rash vow of Jephthah, the excessive indulgence of Eli to his profligate sons, the crimes of David and of Solomon—all these facts supply abundant proofs that, as in the people, so in the chiefs, there was a mixture of weakness and unsteadiness, an immaturity of intellect, and dulness of sentiment, as to morality and religion, which, though controlled and overruled by Providence, so as to prevent them from defeating the great objects of the Divine dispensations, yet should always prevent us from considering them to be held forth in Scripture, as in every instance of their conduct, favoured by God, and to be imitated by man. We are rather called upon to compare their conduct with the perfect model of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, and by this comparison judge to what extent they are deserving of our imitation. Dr. Graves.

3. — he had seven hundred wives, &c.] It was matter of sumptuousness and pomp with Eastern princes to have a great number of wives and concubines. Among others, Darius Codomannus was wont to carry in his camp 350 concubines in time of war. Thus we may probably account for the excessive number of wives here recorded of Solomon, by his desire of surpassing all his contemporaries in this as well as in other kinds of pomp and magnificence. Stackhouse. As to the sins and debaucheries of Solomon, we have nothing to do with them but to avoid them; and to give full credit to his experience when he preaches to us his admirable sermon on the vanity of every thing but piety and virtue. Bp. Watson.

4. — when Solomon was old,] This great offence of Solomon took place, it is thought, about the thirty-fourth year of his reign, when he was about fifty-four years of age. Dr. Hales.

How many have begun and proceeded well, who, like Solomon, have yet shamed themselves in the last stage. If God uphold us not, we cannot stand; if God uphold us, we cannot fall. When we are at the strongest, it is best to be weak in ourselves; and, when at our weakest, strong in Him, in whom we can do all things. Bp. Hall.

4. — his wives turned away his heart] Here Solomon himself gives an unhappy example of idolatry in his own person, being seduced to idols by the charms and softnesses of his many heathen women. So fatal an evil is lust to the best understandings, which, whensoever it possesses them, it perfectly besots, and reigns over them with uncontrolled power. Abp. Tenison.

Solomon's wives, gaining an ascendant over him, might abate his zeal against idolatry, and prevail with him for a publick toleration of their religion; they might obtain money of him for the making of their idols, the support of their priests, and the expense of their sacrifices; nay, and perhaps might sometimes persuade him, in complaisance, to go with them to their worship, or to partake of their lewd and riotous feasts: but that they should ever be able to alter his notions concerning the true God, or prevail with him to believe, that the images they worshipped, were informed with any kind of divinity, is a thing incredible. Stackhouse.

We should seriously consider how lamentably this prince, who had been enriched with so many graces, who had been so wise in his youth, and who had dedicated the temple of Jerusalem with so great zeal and devotion, forsook God in his old age, and fell into idolatry; he built temples to the idols which his wives adored; in these temples he worshipped false gods himself, and drew his subjects into the same sin. If the wisest of men so greatly erred, who dare be off their guard? Even those who have received the greatest favours from God ought to improve by this example, and confess, that, notwithstanding all these advantages, they may fall into the greatest disorders, and become wholly corrupt; those especially, who in their youth have had, through the grace of God, sentiments of piety and virtue, ought to preserve them with great care, lest they lose them, and God entirely forsake them. Ostervald.

— his heart was not perfect with the Lord] This expression means, not that he neglected to serve the Lord at all, but that he did not serve Him solely and entirely. Jos. Mede.

The meaning is, not that he forsook the true God, (see ver. 6,) but that he joined with His worship the worship of false gods. This no man of common sense could have done, who had so lately acknowledged in his prayer that there was no other God but the Lord, if his mind had not been enervated, and his understanding darkened by sensual pleasures. Bp. Patrick.

7. — the hill that is before Jerusalem,] The mount of Olives,

Before
CHRIST
about 984.

Molech, the abomination of the children of Ammon.

8 And likewise did he for all his strange wives, which burnt incense and sacrificed unto their gods.

* Chap. 3.
5. & 9. 2.

9 ¶ And the Lord was angry with Solomon, because his heart was turned from the Lord God of Israel, ^d which had appeared unto him twice,

* Chap. 6.
12.

10 And ^e had commanded him concerning this thing, that he should not go after other gods: but he kept not that which the Lord commanded.

† Heb.
is with thee.

11 Wherefore the Lord said unto Solomon, Forasmuch as this [†] is done of thee, and thou hast not kept my covenant and my statutes, which I have commanded thee, ^f I will surely rend the kingdom from thee, and will give it to thy servant.

* Chap. 12.
15.

12 Notwithstanding in thy days I will not do it for David thy father's sake: but I will rend it out of the hand of thy son.

13 Howbeit I will not rend away all the kingdom; but will give one tribe to thy son for David my servant's sake, and for Jerusalem's sake which I have chosen.

14 ¶ And the Lord stirred up an adversary unto Solomon, Hadad the Edomite: he was of the king's seed in Edom.

* 2 Sam. 8.
14.

15 ^g For it came to pass, when David was in Edom, and Joab the captain of the host was gone up to bury the slain, after he had smitten every male in Edom;

16 (For six months did Joab remain there with all Israel, until he had cut off every male in Edom:)

17 That Hadad fled, he and certain Edomites of his father's servants with him, to go into Egypt; Hadad being yet a little child.

18 And they arose out of Midian, and came to Paran: and they took men with them out of Paran, and they came to Egypt, unto Pharaoh king of Egypt; which gave him an house, and appointed him vic-tuals, and gave him land.

distant about half a mile from Jerusalem to the east; so close to it, that all the inhabitants of the city could see what he did. Bp. Patrick.

9. — which had appeared unto him twice,] It is a sore aggravation of sin, when it is committed after great mercies and deliverances vouchsafed to us, because this is an argument of great ingratitude. God is greatly displeased when we are unthankful to the instruments of our deliverance, but much more, when we are ungrateful to Him, the Author of it. On this account, His anger was the greater against Solomon, for turning away from Him, who had "appeared unto him twice." Abp. Tillotson.

11. — I will surely rend the kingdom from thee, &c.] How is the great and wise Solomon fallen! How should all men, and 19 And Hadad found great favour in the sight of Pharaoh, so that he gave him to wife the sister of his own wife, the sister of Tahpenes the queen.

Before
CHRIST
about 984.

20 And the sister of Tahpenes bare him Genubath his son, whom Tahpenes weaned in Pharaoh's house: and Genubath was in Pharaoh's household among the sons of Pharaoh.

21 And when Hadad heard in Egypt that David slept with his fathers, and that Joab the captain of the host was dead, Hadad said to Pharaoh, [†] Let me depart, that I may go to mine own country.

† Heb.
Send me
away.

22 Then Pharaoh said unto him, But what hast thou lacked with me, that, behold, thou seekest to go to thine own country? And he answered, [†] Nothing: howbeit let me go in any wise.

† Heb. Not.

23 ¶ And God stirred him up another adversary, Rezon the son of Eliadah, which fled from his lord Hadadezer king of Zobah:

24 And he gathered men unto him, and became captain over a band, ^h when David slew them of Zobah: and they went to Damascus, and dwelt therein, and reigned in Damascus.

* 2 Sam. 8.
3. & 10. 18.

25 And he was an adversary to Israel all the days of Solomon, beside the mischief that Hadad did: and he abhorred Israel, and reigned over Syria.

26 ¶ And ⁱ Jeroboam the son of Nebat, ^j an Ephrathite of Zereda, Solomon's servant, whose mother's name was Zeruah, a widow woman, even he lifted up his hand against the king.

* 2 Chron.
13. 6.

27 And this was the cause that he lifted up his hand against the king: Solomon built Millo, and [†] repaired the breaches of the city of David his father.

† Heb.
closed.

28 And the man Jeroboam was a mighty man of valour: and Solomon seeing the young man that he [†] was industrious, he made him ruler over all the [†] charge of the house of Joseph.

† Heb.
did work.
† Heb.
burden.

especially men of light and knowledge above others, take warning by this example, lest they also fall when they think they stand! Bp. Wilson. Solomon here exhibits an instance of the most lamentable fall that ever was, excepting that of the fallen angels. Dr. Wall.

15. — when David was in Edom,] For the purpose of conquering the country, 2 Sam. viii. 14.

25. — he was an adversary — all the days of Solomon,] This is not to be understood of the whole reign of Solomon, which was for the most part peaceable; but of all the days which now remained of his life, from the time that his wives publicly exercised their idolatry, unto the day of his death. Bp. Patrick.

28. — made him ruler over all the — house of Joseph,] Solomon

Before
CHRIST
about 980.

29 And it came to pass at that time when Jeroboam went out of Jerusalem, that the prophet Ahijah the Shilonite found him in the way; and he had clad himself with a new garment; and they two were alone in the field:

30 And Ahijah caught the new garment that was on him, and rent it in twelve pieces:

31 And he said to Jeroboam, Take thee ten pieces: for thus saith the LORD, the God of Israel, Behold, I will rend the kingdom out of the hand of Solomon, and will give ten tribes to thee:

32 (But he shall have one tribe for my servant David's sake, and for Jerusalem's sake, the city which I have chosen out of all the tribes of Israel:)

33 Because that they have forsaken me, and have worshipped Ashtoreth the goddess of the Zidonians, Chemosh the god of the Moabites, and Milcom the god of the children of Ammon, and have not walked in my ways, to do that which is right in mine eyes, and to keep my statutes and my judgments, as did David his father.

34 Howbeit I will not take the whole kingdom out of his hand: but I will make him prince all the days of his life for David my servant's sake, whom I chose, because he kept my commandments and my statutes:

appointed him to superintend the revenue of "the house of Joseph," that is, the tribes of Ephraim and Manasseh. The Hebrew writers say, that this advancement made him the more presumptuous in instilling discontent into the people, who were needlessly burdened to support Solomon's vanity, in the vast buildings which he undertook. Bp. Patrick.

29. — Ahijah the Shilonite] Ahijah was a native of Shiloh, and one of those who wrote the annals of king Solomon's reign, 2 Chron. ix. 29: he is thought to have been the person who spake twice to Solomon from God; once when he was building the temple, at which time He promised him His protection, 1 Kings vi. 12; and at another time when he had fallen into all his irregularities, and God expressed His indignation against him in bitter threats and reproaches, 1 Kings xi. 11. Cabnet.

30. — and rent it in twelve pieces:] By this action, the Prophet conveyed his meaning more forcibly than by words. This is the first symbolical action we meet with in any Prophet; but in afterages, instances of this kind became more frequent. The people of the East, especially those who took upon them the character of Prophets, were fond of discovering their minds in signs and emblematical actions; because they looked upon such representations to be more lively and affecting than any, that proceeded from the mouth only, could be. Stackhouse.

36. — that David — may have a light alway before me] Meaning, that the posterity of David may not be entirely extinct, that his race may not remain in obscurity and oblivion. By "a light," or "a lamp," in Scripture, is sometimes signified a posterity, Ps. cxxxii. 17; Prov. xiii. 9; and sometimes reputation, glory, kingdom, 2 Kings viii. 19; 2 Sam. xxii. 29. Cabnet.

40. Solomon sought therefore &c.] How Solomon became acquainted with what had passed between Ahijah and Jeroboam, is 35 But [†] I will take the kingdom out of his son's hand, and will give it unto thee, even ten tribes.

Before
CHRIST
about 980.

† Chap. 12.
15.

36 And unto his son will I give one tribe, that David my servant may have a [†] light alway before me in Jerusalem, the city which I have chosen me to put my name there.

† Heb.
lamp, or,
candle.

37 And I will take thee, and thou shalt reign according to all that thy soul desireth, and shalt be king over Israel.

38 And it shall be, if thou wilt hearken unto all that I command thee, and wilt walk in my ways, and do that is right in my sight, to keep my statutes and my commandments, as David my servant did; that I will be with thee, and build thee a sure house, as I built for David, and will give Israel unto thee.

39 And I will for this afflict the seed of David, but not for ever.

40 Solomon sought therefore to kill Jeroboam. And Jeroboam arose, and fled into Egypt, unto Shishak king of Egypt, and was in Egypt until the death of Solomon.

about 980.

41 ¶ And the rest of the ^{||} acts of Solomon, and all that he did, and his wisdom, are they not written in the book of the acts of Solomon?

|| Or, words, or,
things.

42 And the [†] time that Solomon reigned in Jerusalem over all Israel was [†] forty years.

† Heb. days.
† 2 Chron.
9. 30.

a question of no great importance: perhaps the Prophet made no scruple of reporting what he had done in the name of the Lord; and perhaps Jeroboam himself, being puffed up with this assurance, could not refrain from telling what had happened to some of his friends, who spread it abroad. Stackhouse.

— unto Shishak king of Egypt,] Egypt appears to have been at this time a common place of refuge for discontented persons. All the kings of Egypt had the general title of Pharaoh, from the time of Abraham; and this is the first instance of any one being called in Scripture by his proper or individual name, to distinguish him from the other Pharaohs. It is thought by some learned persons that the Shishak here mentioned is the famous Sesostris, who, having subdued Ethiopia, extended his conquests into Asia, as far as the Assyrians and Medes. Bp. Patrick.

41. — in the book of the acts of Solomon?] The kings of Israel were accustomed to maintain some wise persons, who committed to writing all that passed in their reign. Perhaps this practice was begun by Solomon; for we read not of any book of the acts of David. Out of these annals, the sacred writer of this book took what he thought most useful, and omitted the rest, which he did not judge so necessary and instructive. Bp. Patrick.

It should be well observed, that the matters related in these historical books of Scripture entirely agree with the publick records which were extant among the people: this is manifest, if we consider how often the sacred penmen refer us to the histories and annals of those kings of whom they speak, and of whom they only quote the principal stories in short, while they pursue their main design, of bringing under one view the state of religion and government among the Jews. Dean Allix.

Before
CHRIST
about 975.
Matth. 1.
7, called Reboam.

43 And Solomon slept with his fathers, and was buried in the city of David his father: and ^a Rehoboam his son reigned in his stead.

CHAP. XII.

¹ The Israelites, assembled at Shechem to crown Rehoboam, by Jeroboam make a suit of relaxation unto him. ⁶ Rehoboam, refusing the old men's counsel, by the advice of young men, answereth them roughly. ¹⁶ Ten tribes revolting, kill Adoram, and make Rehoboam to flee. ²¹ Rehoboam, raising an army, is forbidden by Shemaiah. ²⁵ Jeroboam strengtheneth himself by cities, ²⁶ and by the idolatry of the two calves.

^a 2 Chron.
10. 1.

AND ^a Rehoboam went to Shechem: for all Israel were come to Shechem to make him king.

^b Chap. 11.
40.

² And it came to pass, when Jeroboam the son of Nebat, who was yet in ^b Egypt, heard of it, (for he was fled from the presence of king Solomon, and Jeroboam dwelt in Egypt;)

³ That they sent and called him. And Jeroboam and all the congregation of Israel came, and spake unto Rehoboam, saying,

^c Chap. 4.
7.

⁴ Thy father made our ^c yoke grievous:

43. And Solomon slept with his fathers,] He is thought to have been about fifty-eight years of age when he died. Stackhouse. He lost the great privilege of long life, which God promised, if he performed such sincere obedience as David did, unto whose age he did not attain. Bp. Patrick.

Thus ended the reign of this prince, so remarkable for an uncommon degree of abilities and greatness; yet stained and tarnished with the foulest vices and imprudences. Pyle.

Solomon in wisdom and knowledge surpassed all his contemporaries; he was a poet, a natural and experimental philosopher, and a political and moral philosopher. Unhappily he did not practise himself all the excellent rules which he delivered to others. He violated the laws of Moses, especially in taking pagan and idolatrous wives and concubines, the number of whom also was highly scandalous and immoral; and when he grew old, these women seduced him so far as to set up the worship of their false gods in his dominions. For these transgressions God punished him, and raised him up enemies to disquiet him at the latter end of his reign; and when he died, he left behind him a discontented people, and a foolish son and successor, who soon lost more than half of the kingdom. One would think it impossible that Solomon could ever have committed such errors and such crimes. He had received his crown directly from the hand of God, who had preferred him to it, though a younger son; he had been favoured with Divine revelations; he had been appointed to build a magnificent temple for the service of God; he had received promises of wisdom, knowledge, wealth, glory, peace, power, prosperity, and every temporal blessing; and these promises had been signally accomplished. How could such a prince shut his eyes against such evidence! How could he be guilty of such monstrous forgetfulness and ingratitude! It is too often seen, as in his instance, that the follies of men of uncommon parts and penetration are greater than those of men of mean abilities and low capacities; and Solomon stands a memorable example of great accomplishments and great frailties, and of the dangerous effects of too much power and prosperity. Dr. Jortin.

now therefore make thou the grievous service of thy father, and his heavy yoke which he put upon us, lighter, and we will serve thee.

Before
CHRIST
975.

⁵ And he said unto them, Depart yet for three days, then come again to me. And the people departed.

⁶ ¶ And king Rehoboam consulted with the old men, that stood before Solomon his father while he yet lived, and said, How do ye advise that I may answer this people?

⁷ And they spake unto him, saying, If thou wilt be a servant unto this people this day, and wilt serve them, and answer them, and speak good words to them, then they will be thy servants for ever.

⁸ But he forsook the counsel of the old men, which they had given him, and consulted with the young men that were grown up with him, and which stood before him:

⁹ And he said unto them, What counsel give ye that we may answer this people, who have spoken to me, saying, Make the yoke which thy father did put upon us lighter?

Chap. XII. This chapter is to be compared with 2 Chron. x. and xi.

Ver. 1. And Rehoboam went to Shechem:] It is unknown whether Solomon had any other children besides Rehoboam and the two daughters mentioned at chap. iv. 11, 15; if he had any other children, the sacred writer does them not the honour to mention them, but passes them by in silence. Rehoboam, as it afterwards appears, (chap. xiv. 21, 31,) was the son of an Ammonitish woman; however, though he was not entirely an Israelite, he pretended to the kingdom, being certainly the eldest if not the only son of Solomon, to whom it belonged by the law, which was then established, and which ever after continued in Judah. The people came to Shechem to make him king, because this was the most convenient place, being in the middle of the kingdom; or, as others think, because it was in the tribe of Ephraim, where they could speak their minds more freely than they durst at Jerusalem, which was in the tribe of Judah. Bp. Patrick.

4. Thy father made our yoke grievous:] We may gather from 1 Kings iv. 7, &c. that the particular grievances of which the people complained were the tributes exacted by Solomon for his buildings, the expenses of his family, and the maintenance of his chariots and horses; which ought perhaps to have been borne more contentedly by a people enjoying so large a share of peace and plenty, and from a prince who had brought in such vast riches to his subjects. But people are too often more sensible of their pressures than of their enjoyments, and feel the least burdens when they are most at ease. It is observable however, that, among all their complaints, they take no notice of Solomon's idolatry, or the strange worship which he had introduced, though this, it might be thought, should have been reckoned among the greatest of their grievances. Or, if the complaints of Solomon's hard usage were indeed well founded, it is probable that he fell into tyrannical behaviour towards his subjects, at the time when he was seduced into avarice and idolatry, and the love of strange women. Bp. Patrick, Stackhouse.

JUDAH & ISRAEL

ILLUSTRATING THE BOOK'S

of Kings.

English Miles

Handwritten text in two columns, likely a ledger or account book. The text is extremely faded and illegible. The left column appears to contain dates and descriptions, while the right column contains numerical entries.

Handwritten text in two columns, continuing the ledger or account book. The text is extremely faded and illegible. The layout is consistent with the top section, with descriptions on the left and numbers on the right.

Before
CHRIST
975.

10 And the young men that were grown up with him spake unto him, saying, Thus shalt thou speak unto this people that spake unto thee, saying, Thy father made our yoke heavy, but make thou it lighter unto us; thus shalt thou say unto them, My little finger shall be thicker than my father's loins.

11 And now whereas my father did lade you with a heavy yoke, I will add to your yoke: my father hath chastised you with whips, but I will chastise you with scorpions.

12 ¶ So Jeroboam and all the people came to Rehoboam the third day, as the king had appointed, saying, Come to me again the third day.

13 And the king answered the people † roughly, and forsook the old men's counsel that they gave him;

14 And spake to them after the counsel of the young men, saying, My father made your yoke heavy, and I will add to your yoke: my father also chastised you with whips, but I will chastise you with scorpions.

† Heb.
hardly.

10. — the young men that were grown up with him] Though they are called "young men," they were probably of an age to have acted with more discretion: for Rehoboam was forty-one years old when he began to reign, chap. xiv. 21; and, as these men had grown up with him, they were probably about the same age. Bp. Patrick.

— My little finger &c.] "The easiest impositions that I shall lay upon you, shall be more grievous than the heaviest that you complain of from my father." Bp. Hall.

11. — with scorpions.] That is, with briars tied to whips, or with whips full of iron rowels in them, to prick and tear the flesh. It is a figure to denote the extremest punishment and oppression. Pyle.

15. — for the cause was from the Lord,] It was thus that Providence permitted the passionate and corrupt temper of this prince to produce that fatal distraction in the nation, whereby was completed the threatening made against Solomon, and the prediction to Jeroboam, chap. xi. Pyle. The tribe of Ephraim, to which Jeroboam belonged, had all along envied Judah her precedence; and God now made them the instruments of correction to both. For "the cause was from the Lord" to fulfil His threat to Solomon, and His promise to Jeroboam. Such are the incidental traits that distinguish sacred history from profane. In the latter, revolutions of states are usually attributed to human sagacity and secondary causes; in the former, they are uniformly attributed to the Supreme Governour of the universe, guiding and directing the operations of all inferior agents, according to His sole will and pleasure. Dr. Hales.

16. — neither have we inheritance in the son of Jesse:] They hereby renounce all subjection to the posterity of David, whom, by way of contempt, they call the son of Jesse, referring to the meanness of his origin. Dr. Wells.

18. — sent Adoram, who was over the tribute;] It was certainly an act of imprudence to send any one to treat with persons so highly exasperated; but to send one who was already obnoxious, as having the principal care of the very tributes of which they complained, was perfect infatuation; because nothing is so natural as that men should hate those who are the real or supposed instruments of their oppression. Bp. Patrick.

19. So Israel rebelled against the house of David] The separa-

15 Wherefore the king hearkened not unto the people; for the cause was from the LORD, that he might perform his saying, which the LORD ^dspake by Ahijah the Shilonite unto Jeroboam the son of Nebat.

Before
CHRIST
975.

^d Chap. 11.
11.

16 ¶ So when all Israel saw that the king hearkened not unto them, the people answered the king, saying, What portion have we in David? neither have we inheritance in the son of Jesse: to your tents, O Israel: now see to thine own house, David. So Israel departed unto their tents.

17 But as for the children of Israel which dwelt in the cities of Judah, Rehoboam reigned over them.

18 Then king Rehoboam sent Adoram, who was over the tribute; and all Israel stoned him with stones, that he died. Therefore king Rehoboam † made speed to get him up to his chariot, to flee to Jerusalem.

† Heb. strengthened himself.

19 So Israel ¶ rebelled against the house of David unto this day.

¶ Or, fell away.

tion of the ten tribes from the house of David, and their establishment in a separate kingdom under Jeroboam, is an event which, at first view, may appear to indicate a total contempt of the Mosaic law, since it was attended with a deplorable schism and idolatrous corruption in the Jewish church—a corruption, which, as it was supported by worldly policy in the monarchs, and by the propensity to self-indulgence and idolatry in the mass of the people, was unhappily permanent; for every king of Israel, however praiseworthy in other respects, adhered to "the sin of Jeroboam, who made Israel to sin." A close attention, however, to the circumstances of this event will shew, that it is perfectly consistent with the reality of that Divine superintendence, which directed the Jewish dispensation. The origin of this separation is declared to have been a Divine judgment on the house of David, in consequence of the idolatrous worship introduced by the foreign wives of Solomon, and criminally permitted or partaken of by that prince. Had this offence remained unpunished, so contagious an example would have probably infected the whole mass of the people, who would thus have irretrievably sunk into idolatry and vice: and does it not appear probable, that, so long as the whole nation continued united under one sovereign, this danger might frequently recur? Does not this division of the people, under two monarchs, appear, even to our short-sighted views, not only a just punishment for the crimes of Solomon, but the most probable method of preventing that universal apostasy, caused by similar misconduct in future, which might have entirely defeated the design of the Jewish dispensation? Thus we must consider this revolution in its first origin as a providential dispensation. Yet it was not brought about by any resistless operation of Divine power; human passions and human agency were, in appearance, its only effective cause. The imprudent and tyrannical answer of Rehoboam to the demands of the Jewish people for a redress of grievances, at the commencement of his reign, (see ver. 8, &c.) was its immediate occasion; but, when the king of Judah made preparations to reduce the revolted tribes, the Deity interposed to prevent the miseries of civil war, in opposition to a measure originating in His decree, and commanded by His Prophet, "Ye shall not go up, nor fight against your brethren, for this thing is from Me," ver. 24. Nor should it be forgotten, that this schism and idolatry of the ten tribes gave occasion for the most

Before
CHRIST
975.

20 And it came to pass, when all Israel heard that Jeroboam was come again, that they sent and called him unto the congregation, and made him king over all Israel: there was none that followed the house of David, but the tribe of Judah only.

* Chap. 11.
13.

21 ¶ And when Rehoboam was come to Jerusalem, he assembled all the house of Judah, with the tribe of Benjamin, an hundred and fourscore thousand chosen men, which were warriors, to fight against the house of Israel, to bring the kingdom again to Rehoboam the son of Solomon.

* Chron.
11. 2.

22 But the word of God came unto Shemaiah the man of God, saying,

23 Speak unto Rehoboam, the son of Solomon, king of Judah, and unto all the house of Judah and Benjamin, and to the remnant of the people, saying, signal displays of Divine power, and the most emphatic denunciations and manifestations of Divine justice, in the correction and government of this perverse race and their guilty monarchs. The miraculous reproof and punishment of Jeroboam himself, the death of his favourite son, the utter destruction of the three royal houses of Jeroboam, of Baasha, and of Ahab, all foretold by the Prophets, afforded awful examples of the Divine vengeance. Among these ten tribes also were exhibited the miracles of Elijah and Elisha; concerning them too and their kings were pronounced some of the most distinguished prophecies of Amos, Hosea, and Isaiah; and, finally, after a series of striking and instructive chastisements, God executed His final judgment on this deluded and corrupted race, for He "removed Israel out of His sight, &c." 2 Kings xvii. 18. Nor were corresponding effects wanting from this schism on the remaining two tribes; for it proved the most powerful means of preserving in them whatever degree of attention to the Divine law subsisted among them. It made it the obvious political interest of the kings of Judah, to adhere with strictness to the law of Moses, and to promote its observance amongst their subjects; a line of conduct which became the boasted distinction of these kings, and the popular topick by which they maintained their superiority over the kings of Israel. Dr. Graves.

24 Thus saith the LORD, Ye shall not go

22. — Shemaiah the man of God.] This Prophet was very well known in the reign of Rehoboam. He is supposed to have written the annals of that prince. What authority he possessed in Judah, we may gather from this passage, where it is related, that he prevailed with the king and 180,000 men to lay down their arms, and return home, merely by declaring that the separation which had taken place was by the order and appointment of God. Calmel.

24. — for this thing is from me.] "I have ordered and contrived this matter for the just punishment of thy father's defection from Me." Bp. Hall.

25. — built Shechem &c.] He enlarged and beautified both Shechem and Penuel for his own residence, either out of love for variety and grandeur, the very fault upon which he was wont to raise his insinuations against his master Solomon; or else to the end that, by fortifying these two places, one in the east, and the other in the west part of his dominions, he might keep his subjects in better awe and dominion. Pyle.

26. And Jeroboam said in his heart, Now shall the kingdom return to the house of David: &c.] Jeroboam, from the name of a person become the character of impiety, is reported to posterity eminent, or rather infamous, for two things: usurpation of government, and innovation of religion. It is confessed, the former is expressly said to have been from God: but since God may turn to His pur-up, nor fight against your brethren the children of Israel: return every man to his house; for this thing is from me. They hearkened therefore to the word of the LORD, and returned to depart, according to the word of the LORD.

Before
CHRIST
975.

25 ¶ Then Jeroboam built Shechem in mount Ephraim, and dwelt therein; and went out from thence, and built Penuel.

26 And Jeroboam said in his heart, Now shall the kingdom return to the house of David:

27 If this people go up to do sacrifice in the house of the LORD at Jerusalem, then shall the heart of this people turn again unto their lord, even unto Rehoboam king of Judah, and they shall kill me, and go again to Rehoboam king of Judah.

28 Whereupon the king took counsel, and made two calves of gold, and said unto poses actions which He does not approve, the design of the first cause does not excuse the malignity of the second. However, from his attempts upon the civil power, Jeroboam proceeds to innovate in God's worship; and, from the subjection of men's bodies and estates, to enslave their consciences, as knowing that true religion is no friend to an unjust title. Foolishly thinking policy the best piety, he thus argues: "If this people go up to do sacrifice" &c. see ver. 27. As if he should have said, The true worship of God, and the conversation of those who use it, dispose men to a considerate lawful subjection; and, therefore, I must take another course: my practice must not be better than my title; what was won by force must be continued by delusion. Thus sin is usually seconded with sin, and a man seldom commits one sin to please himself, but he commits another to defend himself. Dr. South.

27. If this people go up to do sacrifice &c.] Jeroboam easily foresaw, that, when the people should go up to the temple at Jerusalem, whither their religion obliged them to repair; when they should attend the appointed Divine service, and hear the priest expound the law of God to them, they would quickly recollect themselves, and their consciences would smite them for withdrawing from their God by withdrawing from their king. Rebellion never did, never can, take deep root, while Scripture is hearkened to, and the priests put the people in mind of those parts of Scripture which relate to this subject, and enforce their true sense on their understandings and consciences. Lord Clarendon.

28. — made two calves of gold.] It is not improbable, as some learned men have conjectured, that Jeroboam made two calves for idolatrous worship, in imitation of the Egyptians, amongst whom he had lived, who had two oxen, the objects of their idolatry: one called Apis, at Memphis, the metropolis of Upper Egypt; the other called Mnevis, at Hierapolis, which was the chief city of Lower Egypt. Bp. Patrick. Jeroboam being born an Israelite, and bred in the court of a Solomon, could not but know the express charge of God against the making of images, and the erection of any rival altars to that of Jerusalem; yet now he sets up images and altars when he sees that both these will avail to advance his ambitious project. Wicked men hesitate not to make hold with God in cases of their own advantage; if the laws of their Maker lie in the way of their profit or promotion, they spurn them away, and tread upon them at pleasure. Bp. Hall.

Jeroboam, by a wicked policy, in order to prevent the reunion of the ten tribes to Judah, 1st, detached them from the national worship prescribed by the law of Moses, saying to the people, "It is too much for you, &c. behold thy gods, O Israel, which brought thee up out of the land of Egypt," repeating the proclamation of Aaron, Exod. xxxii. 4. 2d, Rejecting those priests

Before
CHRIST
975.

Exod. 32.
8.

them, It is too much for you to go up to Jerusalem: ² behold thy gods, O Israel, which brought thee up out of the land of Egypt.

29 And he set the one in Beth-el, and the other put he in Dan.

30 And this thing became a sin: for the people went to worship before the one, even unto Dan.

31 And he made an house of high places, and made priests of the lowest of the people, which were not of the sons of Levi.

32 And Jeroboam ordained a feast in the eighth month, on the fifteenth day of the month, like unto the feast that is in Judah, and he offered upon the altar. So did he in Beth-el, offering unto the calves that he had made: and he placed in Beth-el the priests of the high places which he had made.

Or, went up to the altar,
&c.
Or,
to sacrifice.

33 So he offered upon the altar which he had made in Beth-el the fifteenth day of the eighth month, even in the month which he had devised of his own heart; and ordained a feast unto the children of Israel: and he offered upon the altar, and burnt incense.

Before
CHRIST
975.

Or, went up to the altar,
&c.
† Heb. to burn incense.

CHAP. XIII.

1 Jeroboam's hand, that offered violence to him that prophesied against his altar at Beth-el, withereth, 6 and at the prayer of the prophet is restored. 7 The prophet, refusing the king's entertainment, departeth from Beth-el. 11 An old prophet, seducing him, bringeth him back. 20 He is reproved by God, 23 slain by a lion, 26 buried by the old prophet, 31 who confirmeth his prophecy. 33 Jeroboam's obstinacy.

AND, behold, there came a man of God out of Judah by the word of the Lord unto Beth-el: and Jeroboam stood by the altar to burn incense.

Or,
to offer.

and Levites who refused to conform to his idolatrous worship, he appointed "the lowest of the people," who had neither learning nor religion, to be priests of the high places which he had made. 3d, He changed the feast of tabernacles from the seventh month, as prescribed by the law of Moses to the eighth month, (ver. 32,) "even in the month which he had devised with his own heart." And, 4th, On this festival he acted as high priest himself, ver. 33. Dr. Hales. This piece of false policy proved the ruin of Jeroboam and of his family, which, had he trusted in God and not in his own wisdom, would have been established in the kingdom. Bp. Wilson.

— behold thy gods, O Israel, &c. As if he had said, "God is every where in His essence, and cannot be included in any place; He dwells among you here, as well as at Jerusalem; and, if you require any symbols of His presence, behold here they are in these calves, which I have set up." For they could not be so stupid as to believe that the idols, taken just before out of the furnace, had been their deliverers so many ages ago. It is evident that the worship of these calves was not looked upon by the sacred writers, and by the Prophets, as an absolute heathen idolatry, but only as a separation, which was indeed very criminal in itself, but did not come up to the degree of a total apostasy; for the history of the revolt of the ten tribes introduces Jeroboam speaking, not like a person whose intention was to make the people change their religion, but as representing to them that the true God was every where, was not confined to any certain place, and therefore might be worshipped by them, as well in Dan and Beth-el, as at Jerusalem. Levis.

This conduct of Jeroboam, though it proves a most criminal inattention to the injunctions of the Mosaic law, yet implies no deliberate disbelief of its Divine original, or rejection of its authority, either in the monarch, or in the people; on the contrary, it bears the strongest attestation to the Divine authority of that law. Apprehensive as he was, lest the observance of its ordinances should seduce his subjects, and endanger his crown, yet he attempts not to dispute its authority, or discredit its rites; he merely introduces an innovation as to the place where these rites were to be observed, and the persons by whom they were to be performed: he endeavours to captivate a people addicted to idolatrous emblems, by introducing the same symbols of the Divine presence which the Jews had compelled Aaron to set up, and to which he himself had been familiarized in Egypt: he yet declares them the symbols of that Divinity, who had delivered the nation out of Egypt, thus acknowledging the reality of that Divine interposition on which the Mosaic law was founded; and still more, he appoints a feast, similar to the feast of tabernacles at Jerusalem, which solemnly recognised the abode of the Jews in the wilderness, and all the miracles which attended it. Dr. Graves.

Jeroboam first rebels against his king, then forsakes the true worship of his God. His revolt from the house of David tempts him also to divide from the church of Jerusalem: and his impious policy proceeds to establish idolatry by law, as a necessary expedient for securing his new acquisition and ill-gotten power. Thus irreligious princes do often prefer reasons of state to the concerns of religion: thus prejudice and pride are the first steps to schism, and worldly interests confirm and establish it. Wogan.

29. And he set the one — in Dan. He set them up at Dan and Beth-el, the former as being in the north part, the latter in the south part, of the kingdom of Israel.

31. — and made priests of the lowest of the people, The Hebrew words properly signify "out of all the people," and not "the lowest of the people:" the meaning therefore seems to be, not that Jeroboam employed the refuse of the people only, but that he employed any persons whatever to officiate as priests, though they were not of the tribe of Levi, and though they had no qualifications to recommend them. Bp. Patrick.

Jeroboam having procured his people gods, the next thing was to provide priests. Hereupon, after having set up the calves, he admits the meanest and lowest of the people to minister in that service. Thus did he take the surest means to ruin the civil power, by destroying the worship of God in the right exercise of religion; and the most effectual way to destroy religion, by debasing the teachers and dispensers of it. Dr. South.

The impenitence of Jeroboam is very striking. Like a true politician of this world, he hardened himself against all these undeniable warnings of God, not reforming any one enormity which he had committed, but going on to make priests of the meanest of the people, without any regard to tribe, family, or condition of the persons; which was such a flagrant dishonour of God, and contempt of His law, that it provoked Him to send dreadful judgments on Jeroboam and his people. Reading.

Chap. XIII. ver. 1. — there came a man of God That is, a Prophet; for none are called men of God, but Prophets. Bp. Patrick. Behold the patience and mercy of our long-suffering God! He will not strike even a Jeroboam unwarned. Bp. Hall.

— and Jeroboam stood by the altar to burn incense. Jeroboam having perfected divine worship, and prepared both gods and priests, (see the end of the last chapter,) in the next place, that he might the better teach his false priests the way of their new worship, he begins the service himself, and so countenances

Before
CHRIST
975.

2 Kings
23. 17.

2 And he cried against the altar in the word of the LORD, and said, O altar, altar, thus saith the LORD; Behold, a child shall be born unto the house of David, Josiah by name; and upon thee shall he offer the priests of the high places that burn incense upon thee, and men's bones shall be burnt upon thee.

3 And he gave a sign the same day, saying, This is the sign which the LORD hath spoken; Behold, the altar shall be rent, and the ashes that are upon it shall be poured out.

4 And it came to pass, when king Jeroboam heard the saying of the man of God, which had cried against the altar in Bethel, that he put forth his hand from the altar, saying, Lay hold on him. And his hand, which he put forth against him, dried up, so that he could not pull it in again to him.

Before
CHRIST
975.

5 The altar also was rent, and the ashes poured out from the altar, according to the sign which the man of God had given by the word of the LORD.

6 And the king answered and said unto the man of God, Intreat now the face of the LORD thy God, and pray for me, that my hand may be restored me again. And the man of God besought the LORD, and the king's hand was restored him again, and became as it was before.

† Heb.
the face of the LORD.

7 And the king said unto the man of God, Come home with me, and refresh thyself, and I will give thee a reward.

8 And the man of God said unto the by his example, what he had enjoined by his command. "Burning of incense" was then part of the ministerial office, as preaching is now amongst us: so that, to represent the nature of Jeroboam's action, it was as if in a Christian nation the chief governor should authorize and encourage all the scum and refuse of the people to preach, and call them to the ministry by using to preach and invade the ministerial function himself. Dr. South.

Not only did Jeroboam ordain base priests out of undue tribes, to offer unto God; but he himself also presumptuously took upon him the execution of those sacred functions; he therefore stood before the altar to burn incense. Bp. Hall.

2. — Behold, a child shall be born, — Josiah by name;] This is one of the most remarkable prophecies that we have in Scripture. It foretells an action that exactly came to pass above 340 years afterwards. It describes the circumstances of the action, and specifies the name of the person that was to do it; and therefore every Jew, who lived in the time of its accomplishment, must have been convinced of the Divine authority of a religion founded on such prophecies as this, since none but God could foresee, and consequently none but God could foretell, events at a distance. Stackhouse.

This prediction is set forth in such particular circumstances, as nothing but the wisdom of God could delineate so long beforehand. For He alone sees things that are not, as if they were actually existing: whereas the most subtil of His creatures can but make random conjectures at things which are much nearer the birth. This prophecy therefore is a noble argument, that the whole book was written by the inspiration of the Spirit of God; and though there are many other good uses to be made of it, yet it well deserved to be recorded, had it been for no other end, but to confirm our faith in the word of God. Reading.

— upon thee shall he offer the priests &c.] The meaning is, not that he should burn the priests alive, but, as is explained in the execution of this prophecy, that he should slay the priests of the high places, and then burn their bones, as he did the bones of those that had been buried, and thereby defile this altar. See 2 Kings xxiii. 15, &c. Bp. Patrick.

4. — he put forth his hand from the altar, saying, Lay hold on him.] Jeroboam was not content with his invasion of the ministerial function; but, while he was busy in his work, and a Prophet, immediately sent by God, declared against his idolatry, he endeavours to seize upon and commit him. Thus we have him completing his sin, and persecuting the true Prophets, as well as ordaining false. But it was a natural transition; and no way wonderful to see him, who stood affronting God with false incense in the right hand, persecuting with the left; and abetting the idolatry of one arm with the violence of the other. Dr. South.

— saying, Lay hold on him.] So far from repentance was Jeroboam, that his pride and resentment overcame all conviction of conscience, and all fear of God's judgments. He rather meditates war against Heaven, and presumes to lift up his hand against that God who had given him his being and his crown. But his impiety and ingratitude, his folly and madness, are rebuked by the withering of his hand: — a gentle, but significant reproof! to convince the proudest sinner of God's power and his own weakness. Wogan. How easy is it for God to cool the courage of proud Jeroboam! The hand, which his rage stretches out, dries up, and cannot be pulled back again: and now stands the king of Israel in a posture of impotent endeavour; so disabled from hurting the Prophet, that he has no command over his own limb. What are the great potentates of the world, in the powerful hand of the Almighty! Bp. Hall.

6. — Intreat now the face of the Lord &c.] A marvellous change! He that just before threatened, now humbly supplicates the Prophet who smote him. Convinced that healing must come from that hand which gave the wound, he knew it was in vain to have recourse now to his idols. Bp. Patrick. This wicked prince is compelled to own the power of God, and to sue for His mercy; yet too proud to give glory to either. He feels the stroke of God's justice, yet will not submit; he receives the favour he petitioned for, yet will not be thankful. Wogan.

— And the man of God besought the Lord,] In the Prophet's ready intercession for Jeroboam, we see the benign temper and spirit of a true "man of God;" and how very different it is from that of the wicked, or the men of the world. A good man is kinder to his enemy, than bad men are to their friends. He prays for his persecutor, and intreats for the hand that was stretched out for his ruin. In a word, a good man is like his Master; merciful as He is merciful: he hates no enemies but those of his soul; he fears no power but that of God. He pities, rather than resents, the ill usage of man; and sees no danger while God is on his side. Wogan. It well becomes the Prophets of God to be merciful. This Prophet does not upbraid Jeroboam, but immediately sues for his cure: and, that God might abundantly magnify both His power and mercy, he is heard and answered with success. We do not savour of heaven, if we have not learned to return good for evil. Bp. Hall.

7. — Come home with me, and refresh thyself,] Though a cure had been wrought on the body of Jeroboam, his mind remained insensible to those feelings which ought to have been excited by this event. Instead of promising reformation in his conduct, he only invited the Prophet to a banquet and a present. Pyle. However unthankful he may have been to the Author of his recovery, he is at least thankful to the instrument. He now kindly invites him whom he had before threatened; offers a gift where he had endeavoured to punish. Wogan.

Before
CHRIST
975.

king, If thou wilt give me half thine house, I will not go in with thee, neither will I eat bread nor drink water in this place:

9 For so was it charged me by the word of the LORD, saying, Eat no bread, nor drink water, nor turn again by the same way that thou camest.

10 So he went another way, and returned not by the way that he came to Beth-el.

11 ¶ Now there dwelt an old prophet in Beth-el; and his sons came and told him all the works that the man of God had done that day in Beth-el: the words which he had spoken unto the king, them they told also to their father.

12 And their father said unto them, What way went he? For his sons had seen what way the man of God went, which came from Judah.

13 And he said unto his sons, Saddle me the ass. So they saddled him the ass: and he rode thereon, 14 And went after the man of God, and found him sitting under an oak: and he said unto him, Art thou the man of God that camest from Judah? And he said, I am.

15 Then he said unto him, Come home with me, and eat bread.

16 And he said, I may not return with thee, nor go in with thee: neither will I eat bread nor drink water with thee in this place:

17 For † it was said to me by the word

† Heb.
a word was.

9. — nor turn again by the same way] The reason is obvious why this Prophet was forbidden to eat or drink with the people of Beth-el, because he was to have no familiarity with idolaters; but why he should not “return by the same way” is not quite so evident. Perhaps God gave this injunction to the Prophet for the purpose of concealment, lest Jeroboam, intending to do him some mischief for his severe denunciations against his altar and method of worship, might send men after him to bring him back. Stackhouse. Or else, because, as the way by which he came to Beth-el was polluted with objects of idolatry, God marked His abhorrence of these idolatries by forbidding His Prophet to retrace his steps in the same way. Pole's Syn. Crit.

11. — an old prophet in Beth-el;] Probably one who for many years had been a Prophet before this apostasy, a worshipper of the true God, though dwelling among this idolatrous people. He was originally of Samaria, as we learn from 2 Kings xxiii. 18, but removed to Beth-el, it is probable, since this revolution, that he might see what Jeroboam designed. Bp. Patrick.

It is somewhat obscure, whether this old Prophet of Beth-el was a true or a false prophet, a good one, or a bad one. If a true Prophet, why did he lie to him? ver. 18. If a false one, how could he foretell him of his end? He was probably a true Prophet, and the other good man knew that he was a true Prophet; and the lie which he told was not perhaps with the intention of doing him an injury, but an officious lie, to persuade him to go home with him. He desires to have the company of this good man; and, seeing no arguments will persuade him, invents a falsehood of an angel having spoken to him, and commanded him to bring him back;

VOL. I.

Before
CHRIST
975.

of the LORD, Thou shalt eat no bread nor drink water there, nor turn again to go by the way that thou camest.

18 He said unto him, I am a prophet also as thou art; and an angel spake unto me by the word of the LORD, saying, Bring him back with thee into thine house, that he may eat bread and drink water. But he lied unto him.

19 So he went back with him, and did eat bread in his house, and drank water.

20 ¶ And it came to pass, as they sat at the table, that the word of the LORD came unto the prophet that brought him back:

21 And he cried unto the man of God that came from Judah, saying, Thus saith the LORD, Forasmuch as thou hast disobeyed the mouth of the LORD, and hast not kept the commandment which the LORD thy God commanded thee, 22 But camest back, and hast eaten bread and drunk water in the place, of the which the LORD did say to thee, Eat no bread, and drink no water; thy carcase shall not come unto the sepulchre of thy fathers.

23 ¶ And it came to pass, after he had eaten bread, and after he had drunk, that he saddled for him the ass, to wit, for the prophet whom he had brought back.

24 And when he was gone, a lion met him by the way, and slew him: and his carcase was cast in the way, and the ass stood by it, the lion also stood by the carcase.

and so the poor man is deceived and undone. Dr. Lightfoot. Doubtless he was a Prophet of God, but corrupt; he held the truth, but in unrighteousness; had knowledge, but without zeal. The spirit of prophecy does not necessarily imply sanctity. Wogan. It does not follow, that, because he was honoured with the gift of prophecy, he became from thenceforward incapable of sinning. God bestows His gifts for publick use, and does not always approve of what men so gifted may do. Dr. Waterland.

18. — But he lied unto him.] It should here be well observed, how great the guilt, and how fatal the effect of lying is. Not only the command of God is here violated by a bold lie, but the life of one Prophet is destroyed by its means, and the souls of both the deceiver and deceived are exposed to the danger of eternal death: of the one for his lie; of the other for believing it. This shews the great reason our Lord had for joining the liar and the murderer in the character of the devil, John viii. 44. Satan's lie betrayed all mankind to death, as the old Prophet's did his too credulous brother. This latter, indeed, had not the same malice, yet it had the same unhappy effect—even the death of him that was deceived thereby. Wogan.

24. — a lion — slew him:] It might appear that the offence of the Prophet hardly deserved so severe a fate; but then we should do well to consider, that whenever God in an extraordinary manner discovers His will to a Prophet, He always makes such a sensible impression on his mind, that he cannot but perceive himself actuated by a Divine spirit, and consequently cannot but be assured of the evidence of his own revelation. This evidence the Prophet that was sent to Beth-el had; for, as he was able by the power

Before
CHRIST
975.

25 And, behold, men passed by, and saw the carcase cast in the way, and the lion standing by the carcase: and they came and told it in the city where the old prophet dwelt.

† Heb.
broken.

26 And when the prophet that brought him back from the way heard thereof, he said, It is the man of God, who was disobedient unto the word of the LORD: therefore the LORD hath delivered him unto the lion, which hath † torn him, and slain him, according to the word of the LORD, which he spake unto him.

27 And he spake to his sons, saying, that was given him to work miracles, he could not but be sensible that he had a Divine mission, and that the particular injunction of not eating or drinking in the town of Beth-el, was as much the will of God as any other part of his commission. Stackhouse. There are several aggravations of the Prophet of Judah's crime. He suffered himself to be imposed upon by a stranger, by one whom he did not know, and against the express command of God, whom he did know; this stranger too, one of whose honesty he had no assurance, and who might probably have corrupt views in the business. Again, besides the fact that no good end was answered by his returning with the old Prophet, there was a marked difference in the manner in which the two opposite commands were conveyed to him. The one came directly from God, or from an angel of God; the other from a man only. There ought to have been the same proof and certainty of a Divine repeal, as there had before been of a Divine command. A Prophet might lie; God Himself, or an angel of God, could not. The man of God should have insisted on a sign to prove this Prophet's commission for saying what he did; or should have waited till God Himself might direct what he should do. It is remarkable, that the deceiving Prophet was not punished, but the deceived one was. And we are taught from this instance not to pass any judgment, as to God's final favour or disfavour, from His outward dispensations, any farther than we have special grounds for it. The Prophet that was spared appears to have been a much worse man in every view than the Prophet that was punished. But his account was adjourned to another time, or another world. Every history supplies us with many similar instances of the best men being taken off first, and the worst being left behind, to live longer and repent, or to meet with a severer doom. Whatever the reason be, the fact is certain, that so it often is. And it is no more an argument against Scripture, than it is against the being and providence of God; that is, it is none at all; for a life to come will adjust every seeming inequality, and set all things right. Dr. Waterland.

The Prophet, who had a Divine direction given to himself by a revelation, of the truth whereof he was perfectly assured, both by the internal conviction of his own mind, and by the outward testimony of a miracle added to it, ought not to have suffered himself to be countermanded, even by one who had the reputation of a true Prophet, without as great or greater evidence, that God had discharged him from the first command. The subject of the command, indeed, does not appear to have been in its own nature indispensable, and therefore might have been superseded by the same authority which gave it: but then he ought to have had as plain and full an assurance of its revocation, as he had at first of the command; without this, to disobey was a manifest transgression of a known duty. Whether he had an inclination to stay and be entertained at Beth-el, which might make him desirous to have the command relaxed, and, therefore, too ready to believe it so; or, whether he had only too implicit a confidence in the old Prophet, because of his age and authority, and therefore did not give himself time to weigh the evidence for and against his pretended message, is not very material. Certain it is, that his conduct was Saddle me the ass. And they saddled him. Before

CHRIST
975.

28 And he went and found his carcase cast in the way, and the ass and the lion standing by the carcase: the lion had not eaten the carcase, nor † torn the ass.

† Heb.
broken.

29 And the prophet took up the carcase of the man of God, and laid it upon the ass, and brought it back: and the old prophet came to the city, to mourn and to bury him.

30 And he laid his carcase in his own grave; and they mourned over him, saying, Alas, my brother!

blamable in being determined by a less evidence against a greater, in a matter of Divine revelation. Bp. Leng.

If thy heart be moved, sinner, to dispute against the severity of God in this case, let me say this to calm thee, But thou art yet alive, who art as great a transgressor as the Prophet of Judah. He was a good man, a holy man, a holy Prophet, and yet was so fearfully cut off for violating but one command, and being deceived too in that miscarriage. And how many commands hast thou broken, knowingly, wittingly, wilfully: and how far, how many degrees art thou short of the holiness of this man, and yet alive! Hast thou any heart to complain of the severity of God against this poor man? look home and see what cause thou hast to stand amazed at His patience towards thee. He for breaking one command—How many hast thou broken? Nay, if God had reckoned to cut thee off at the hundredth or the thousandth breach of His commands, had not the account been a hundred or a thousand times over? And yet thou art here. Dr. Lightfoot.

28. — the ass and the lion standing by the carcase:] This circumstance seems to be mentioned, to shew that the lion acted by a supernatural direction. In the ordinary course of things, this animal would not have attacked the man, unless impelled by the cravings of hunger; and, that this was not the case in the present instance, is proved by the fact of its having remained for a considerable time without touching the carcase of the ass. Again, the ass seems to have acted under supernatural direction in not attempting to escape, as if convinced that the fury of the lion was only directed against one object.

— the lion had not eaten the carcase, &c.] Though God so severely punished the Prophet of Judah unto death, yet He shewed a miracle for him when he was dead. This shews that God had not cast away all care of him, though he punished him so sorely, and may be a fair sign that He did not suffer his soul to be cast away. It is true, indeed, that he died for transgressing God's command; but had he not repented of that transgression? It is observable, as is related at ver. 21, that the old Prophet "cried unto the man of God," whom he had brought back. When God revealed to him what wrong he had done in lying to the unhappy Prophet, and making him transgress the Divine command, and how sad a fate would befall him for his transgression, he cried out with sadness and affection, and told him how it would fare with him. And can we think that the good man, having his sin so laid before him, and his dreadful punishment, was not deeply touched with the sense of his sin, and with all earnestness prayed to God for pardon? We may not judge of him by ourselves: we little take to heart what we have misdone, and what is denounced by God against our sinning; but a holy Prophet was of better temper, and of a tenderer heart, and deeply sorrowed, no doubt, for his transgression when he was convinced of it; sought pardon for it, and obtained it: so that though he died for his sin, yet he died not in it. Dr. Lightfoot.

30. — Alas, my brother!] He and his sons made the usual lamentations over the deceased Prophet, of which this was the form in aftertimes, as we find at Jer. xxii. 18. Bp. Patrick.

Before
CHRIST
975.

31 And it came to pass, after he had buried him, that he spake to his sons, saying, When I am dead, then bury me in the sepulchre wherein the man of God is buried; lay my bones beside his bones:

32 For the saying which he cried by the word of the LORD against the altar in Bethel, and against all the houses of the high places which are in the cities of Samaria, shall surely come to pass.

about 974.

† Heb. returned and made.

† Heb. filled his
hand.

33 ¶ After this thing Jeroboam returned not from his evil way, but † made again of the lowest of the people priests of the high places: whosoever would, he † consecrated him, and he became one of the priests of the high places.

31. — lay my bones beside his bones:] This he seems to have said, partly out of affection to the Prophet, and partly because, being assured that the words of the Prophet denounced against the altar and the priests and false prophets, ver. 2, would punctually come to pass, he hoped that, when the officers came at that time to dig up the bones of such offenders, in order to burn them, his own might escape together with this true Prophet's, with whose they would lie mixed, and out of respect to whose character that sepulchre would escape from being rifled. Nor did his hopes deceive him, as appears from 2 Kings xxiii. 15, &c. Bp. Patrick, Pyle.

This aged seducer hath yet so much truth as to make a right comment upon what had happened: he shewed the danger of disobedience, and confirmed the certainty of that judgment which his late guest had denounced against Israel. Thus it pleases the wisdom of God sometimes to express His will, and justify His proceedings, by the tongues of evil men. We see also he had so much faith and courage, as to fetch the carcase from the lion; so much pity and compassion, as to weep for the man of God, and to inter him in his own sepulchre; so much love, as to wish himself joined in death to that body, whose death he had procured. Few men are so absolutely wicked, as not to shew some marks of grace; some tokens of humanity. But it is a cruel courtesy to betray a man to death, and then to bedew him with tears: and yet how common! Do not fond parents so destroy, and then bewail their children? Do not friends often kill with kindness, and then lament? "The (very) mercies of the wicked are cruel," Prov. xii. 10. Wogan.

32. — which are in the cities of Samaria,] The city of Samaria was not built at this time, nor had the separate kingdom of Jeroboam yet obtained that name; so that the author or compiler of this book, who lived later, writes of places and things by the names which they bore in his days, in order to make himself more intelligible to his readers. Calmet.

33. — Jeroboam returned not &c.] The foregoing instance, related at ver. 4, &c. of Divine severity, tempered with mercy, had no influence on the corrupt heart of this prince. He persisted in his evil ways, which brought down destruction on himself and his family. Dr. Hales.

We may observe in the character of Jeroboam, that men of proud hearts, although they smart under the visible tokens of God's displeasure, yet have not grace to repent, and to forsake the sin that has provoked him to punish them. Jeroboam felt both the wrath and the goodness of God, in the withering and subsequent restoring of his arm: he had gratitude enough to offer the Prophet a reward for the mercy received, yet still persisted in his sin; still remaining ungrateful to that God, whose favour had raised him to a throne, whose vengeance he had sensibly experienced, and whose mercy he had so undeservedly obtained. After so remarkable a vicissitude of judgment and mercy, who would not expect that Jeroboam should immediately turn peni-

34 And this thing became sin unto the house of Jeroboam, even to cut it off, and to destroy it from off the face of the earth.

Before
CHRIST
about 974.

CHAP. XIV.

1 Abijah being sick, Jeroboam sendeth his wife disguised with presents to the prophet Ahijah at Shiloh. 5 Ahijah, forewarned by God, denounceth God's judgment. 17 Abijah dieth, and is buried. 19 Nadab succeedeth Jeroboam. 21 Rehoboam's wicked reign. 25 Shishak spoileth Jerusalem. 29 Abijah succeedeth Rehoboam.

AT that time Abijah the son of Jeroboam fell sick.

956.

2 And Jeroboam said to his wife, Arise, I pray thee, and disguise thyself, that thou be not known to be the wife of Jeroboam; and get thee to Shiloh: behold, there is tent? And yet we find he goes on in his old course, as if nothing had happened, and lives and dies a rank idolater. Wogan. Jeroboam perseveres in his former courses, as if God had neither done him good nor evil. Though his hand was amended, his soul is not; that continues still dry and inflexible. No stone is more hard or insensate than a sinful heart. The changes of judgment and mercy do but harden it, instead of melting. Bp. Hall.

34. And this thing became sin unto the house of Jeroboam,] If we lay together all the particulars that have been enumerated in the latter part of the last and the beginning of this chapter concerning Jeroboam, and consider the parts, rise, and degrees of his sin, we shall find, that it was not for nothing that the Spirit of God so frequently and bitterly in Scripture stigmatizes this person: for it represents him first encroaching upon the civil government, thence changing the religion of his country, debasing the office that God had made sacred, introducing a false way of worship, and destroying the true. And in this we have a full and fair description of a foul king; that is, of an usurper and an impostor: or, to use one word more comprehensive than both, of "Jeroboam the son of Nebat, who made Israel to sin." Dr. South.

Chap. XIV. ver. 2. — Arise, I pray thee, and disguise thyself, &c.] The motive of Jeroboam in sending his wife to consult the Prophet probably was, that he wished the proceeding to be completely secret; for, had it been publicly known that he himself had no confidence in his own senseless idols, and that, in any matter of importance, he applied to the Prophet of the true God, the confidence of his subjects in his government would have been materially shaken, and they would have returned to the worship of that true God whom they had imprudently forsaken. His wife then was the only person, in whom he could confide; he knew that, as a mother, she would be diligent in her inquiry, and as a wife, faithful in her report. And he desired her to disguise herself, probably because he was aware that the Prophet was offended with him for his gross idolatries, and therefore thought that he would not admit his wife to consult him, knowing her to be such. But herein consisted his strange infatuation, that he should think the very person whom he deemed capable of resolving the fate of his son, unable to see through all this guile and disguise. Stackhouse.

O the gross folly mixed with the craft of wickedness! Could Jeroboam think that the Prophet could know the event of his son's disease, and did he think that he could not know the disguise of his wife? The one was present, the other future; this was but wrapt up in a cloak, that event was wrapt up in the counsel of God: yet this politick head presumes, that the greater shall be revealed while the lesser shall be hid. There was never wicked man that was not infatuate; and in nothing more than in those things wherein he hoped most to surpass the reach of others. Bp. Hall.

Before
CHRIST
956.

* Chap. 11.
31.
† Heb. in thine hand.
‖ Or, cakes.
‖ Or, bottle.

† Heb. stood for his houriness.

† Heb.
hand.

Ahijah the prophet, which told me that ^a I should be king over this people.

3 And take † with thee ten loaves, and ‖ cracknels, and a ‖ cruse of honey, and go to him: he shall tell thee what shall become of the child.

4 And Jeroboam's wife did so, and arose, and went to Shiloh, and came to the house of Ahijah. But Ahijah could not see; for his eyes † were set by reason of his age.

5 ¶ And the LORD said unto Ahijah, Behold, the wife of Jeroboam cometh to ask a thing of thee for her son; for he is sick: thus and thus shalt thou say unto her: for it shall be, when she cometh in, that she shall feign herself to be another woman.

6 And it was so, when Ahijah heard the sound of her feet, as she came in at the door, that he said, Come in, thou wife of Jeroboam; why feignest thou thyself to be another? for I am sent to thee with † heavy tidings.

7 Go, tell Jeroboam, Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, Forasmuch as I exalted thee from among the people, and made thee prince over my people Israel,

8 And rent the kingdom away from the house of David, and gave it thee: and yet thou hast not been as my servant David, who kept my commandments, and who followed me with all his heart, to do that only which was right in mine eyes;

3. — take with thee ten loaves, &c.] He seems to have desired her to carry with her these presents, that the Prophet might take her for some countrywoman, and not for the wife of the king. Bp. Patrick. The Eastern custom required her to bring some present on consulting the Prophet.

— cracknels,] The word in the original is thought to mean a description of cake marked with small holes, or else spotted with seeds, as of sesamum, coriander, &c. Parkhurst, Simonis. Cakes of the latter description, according to travellers, are now much in use in these countries of the East. Harmer.

— a cruse of honey,] See the note on chap. xvii. 12.

— he shall tell thee what shall become of the child,] Nature wrought in Jeroboam, not grace. He is troubled by his son's disease, but not bettered by it. I would have heard him say, "God follows me with afflictions; it is for mine impiety: what other measure can I expect from His justice?" These thoughts were too good for his obdurate heart. He is sorrowful for his sick son; but, as an amazed man seeks to go forth at the wrong door, his distraction sends him to a false help. He thinks not of God; he thinks of His Prophet: he thinks of the Prophet that had foretold him he should be a king; he thinks not of the God of that Prophet who had made him king. It is the property of a carnal heart, to confine both its obligations and its hopes to the means, not regarding the Author, of all good. Vain is the respect that is given to the servant, where the master is despised. Bp. Hall.

10. — will cut off from Jeroboam &c.] Bochart thus paraphrases; "I will cut off from him every male, whether he be a captive or free man, whether he live in the city or in the country." Bp. Patrick.

Before
CHRIST
956.

about 956.
b Chap. 15.
29.

c Chap. 21.
21.
2 Kings
9. 8.

9 But hast done evil above all that were before thee: for thou hast gone and made thee other gods, and molten images, to provoke me to anger, and hast cast me behind thy back:

10 Therefore, behold, ^b I will bring evil upon the house of Jeroboam, and will cut off from Jeroboam ^c him that pisseth against the wall, and him that is shut up and left in Israel, and will take away the remnant of the house of Jeroboam, as a man taketh away dung, till it be all gone.

11 Him that dieth of Jeroboam in the city shall the dogs eat; and him that dieth in the field shall the fowls of the air eat: for the LORD hath spoken it.

12 Arise thou therefore, get thee to thine own house: and when thy feet enter into the city, the child shall die.

13 And all Israel shall mourn for him, and bury him: for he only of Jeroboam shall come to the grave, because in him there is found some good thing toward the LORD God of Israel in the house of Jeroboam.

14 Moreover the LORD shall raise him up a king over Israel, who shall cut off the house of Jeroboam that day: but what? even now.

15 For the LORD shall smite Israel, as a reed is shaken in the water, and he shall root up Israel out of this good land, which he gave to their fathers, and shall scatter — him that is shut up &c.] As well him who for his more sure defence hath shut himself up within the strong walls of your cities, as him that is left at liberty in the fields and villages. Bp. Hall.

12. — the child shall die,] What a mixture is here of severity and favour in one act; favour to the son, severity to the father. Severity to the father, that he must lose such a son; favour to the son, that he shall be taken from such a father. Jeroboam is wicked; therefore he shall not enjoy an Abijah; Abijah has some good qualities, therefore he shall be removed from the danger of the depravation of Jeroboam. Sometimes God strikes in favour, but more often forbears out of severity. The best are fittest for heaven, the earth is fittest for the worst. This is the region of sin and misery, that of immortality. It is no argument of disfavoured to be taken early from a well-spent life; as it is no proof of approbation to be permitted to live to advanced years in sin. Bp. Hall.

13. — because in him there is found some good thing &c.] It hence appears, that Abijah was a young prince of promising hopes, and it is supposed that he had shewn himself averse to his father's idolatry. Though he is called "a child," ver. 12, it is probable that he was now somewhat advanced in years. Stackhouse, Pyle.

14. — the Lord shall raise him up a king] This king was Baasha, chap. xv. 27. He was to cut off Jeroboam on "that day," namely, as soon as he was made king, chap. xv. 29. "But what?" adds the Prophet, "even now." What did I say? On that day? It shall be even now; it is as sure as if it were already done. Bp. Patrick.

15. — he shall root up Israel &c.] This He began to do, first, by them beyond the river, because they have made their groves, provoking the LORD to anger.

Before
CHRIST
956.

16 And he shall give Israel up because of the sins of Jeroboam, who did sin, and who made Israel to sin.

17 ¶ And Jeroboam's wife arose, and departed, and came to Tirzah: and when she came to the threshold of the door, the child died;

18 And they buried him; and all Israel mourned for him, according to the word of the LORD, which he spake by the hand of his servant Ahijah the prophet.

19 And the rest of the acts of Jeroboam, how he warred, and how he reigned, behold, they are written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Israel.

20 And the days which Jeroboam reigned were two and twenty years: and he † slept with his fathers, and Nadab his son reigned in his stead.

† Heb.
lay down.
954.

2 Chron.
12, 13.
975.

21 ¶ And Rehoboam the son of Solomon reigned in Judah. "Rehoboam was forty and one years old when he began to reign, and he reigned seventeen years in Jerusalem, the city which the LORD did choose out of all the tribes of Israel, to put his name there. And his mother's name was Naamah an Ammonitess.

972.

22 And Judah did evil in the sight of the LORD, and they provoked him to jealousy with their sins which they had committed, above all that their fathers had done.

¶ Or, standing images, or,
statues.

23 For they also built them high places, and ¶ images, and groves, on every high hill, and under every green tree.

24 And there were also sodomites in the land: and they did according to all the abominations of the nations which the LORD cast out before the children of Israel.

Before
CHRIST
972.

25 ¶ And it came to pass in the fifth year of king Rehoboam, that Shishak king of Egypt came up against Jerusalem:

971.

26 And he took away the treasures of the house of the LORD, and the treasures of the king's house; he even took away all: and he took away all the shields of gold which Solomon had made.

* Chap. 10.
17.

27 And king Rehoboam made in their stead brassen shields, and committed them unto the hands of the chief of the † guard, which kept the door of the king's house.

† Heb.
runners.

28 And it was so, when the king went into the house of the LORD, that the guard bare them, and brought them back into the guard chamber.

29 ¶ Now the rest of the acts of Rehoboam, and all that he did, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Judah?

30 And there was war between Rehoboam and Jeroboam all their days.

31 And Rehoboam slept with his fathers, and was buried with his fathers in the city of David. And his mother's name was Naamah an Ammonitess. And Abijam his son reigned in his stead.

953.

CHAP. XV.

1 Abijam's wicked reign. 7 Asa succeedeth him. 9 Asa's good reign. 16 The war between Baasha and him causeth him to make a league with Ben-hadad. 23 Jehoshaphat succeedeth Asa. 25 Nadab's wicked reign. 27 Baasha conspiring against him executeth Ahijah's prophecy. 31 Nadab's acts and death. 33 Baasha's wicked reign.

Chronicles, which we now have in our Bibles, but some other records or public registers of the nation: and this the reader must take notice to be the meaning of the phrase in several other passages. Pyle.

20. — and he slept with his fathers,] This phrase seems merely to imply that he died, as all before him had done; for it is not probable that he was actually buried with his fathers, as he was a king, and they only private persons. Bp. Patrick.

27. — made in their stead brassen shields,] This shews to what a low condition, in point of wealth, the kingdom of Judah was now reduced; since, though these shields were immediately connected with their grandeur, as well as their religion, they were unable to replace them of gold, as before, though the charge would not have been very considerable. Bedford.

30. — there was war &c.] God commanded Rehoboam, at 1 Kings xii. 23, not to make war upon the Israelites: still, of course, he was permitted to defend his own people, in case they were attacked; and, as the two nations were now rivals, it was scarcely possible but that frequent acts of hostility should take place upon their borders. Bp. Patrick.

Chap. XV. This chapter is to be compared with 2 Chron. iii, xiv, xv, and xvi.

Tiglath-pileser, king of Assyria, 2 Kings xv. 29, and then finished it by Shalmaneser, 2 Kings xvii. 5, 6. "And shall scatter them beyond the river;" that is, the river Euphrates, for they were carried into the country of the Medes.

17. — came to Tirzah:] This city is frequently mentioned in Scripture, because it appears to have been for a long time the regal city of the kings of Israel. Jeroboam, the first king, though he dwelt for some time at Shechem, yet appears, from this passage, to have fixed in his latter days his royal residence at Tirzah. The succeeding kings kept their residence in the same city, till Omri, after reigning six years at Tirzah, removed the royal seat to Samaria, ch. xvi. 24, where it afterwards continued till a final period was put to the kingdom of Israel. It appears from Cant. vi. 4, that this was a very beautiful city, and pleasant to dwell in; on which account, probably, it was selected for the royal seat. Nothing is said about this place in Scripture from which we can determine its situation, nor is any light afforded us on the subject by any writer of authority. Thus we can rest only on conjectures; but, as Jeroboam was of the tribe of Ephraim, and might therefore be disposed to fix his residence there, it is inferred, with some probability, that Tirzah was situated somewhere within that tribe. Dr. Wells.

19. — in the book of the chronicles] Not the book or books of

Before
CHRIST
958.

NOW in the eighteenth year of king Jeroboam the son of Nebat reigned Abijam over Judah.

^a Three years reigned he in Jerusalem. ^a And his mother's name was Maachah, the daughter of Abishalom.

^a 2 Chron.
11. 22.

3 And he walked in all the sins of his father, which he had done before him: and his heart was not perfect with the LORD his God, as the heart of David his father.

¶ Or.
candle.

4 Nevertheless for David's sake did the LORD his God give him a lamp in Jerusalem, to set up his son after him, and to establish Jerusalem:

^b 2 Sam. 11.
4. & 12. 9.

5 Because David did that which was right in the eyes of the LORD, and turned not aside from any thing that he commanded him all the days of his life, ^b save only in the matter of Uriah the Hittite.

6 And there was war between Rehoboam and Jeroboam all the days of his life.

^c 2 Chron.
13. 3.

7 Now the rest of the acts of Abijam, and all that he did, are they not written in the ^c book of the chronicles of the kings of

Before
CHRIST
955.

Judah? And there was war between Abijam and Jeroboam.

8 And Abijam slept with his fathers; and they buried him in the city of David: and ^d Asa his son reigned in his stead.

^d 2 Chron.
14. 1.

9 ¶ And in the twentieth year of Jeroboam king of Israel reigned Asa over Judah.

10 And forty and one years reigned he in Jerusalem. And his mother's name was Maachah, the daughter of Abishalom.

¶ That is, grandmother's.

11 And Asa did that which was right in the eyes of the LORD, as did David his father.

12 And he took away the sodomites out of the land, and removed all the idols that his fathers had made. about 951.

13 And also ^e Maachah his mother, even her he removed from being queen, because she had made an idol in a grove; and Asa ^f destroyed her idol, and burnt it by the brook Kidron.

^e 2 Chron.
15. 16.

† Heb.
cut off.

14 But the high places were not removed: nevertheless Asa's heart was perfect with the LORD all his days.

Ver. 1. — in the eighteenth year of king Jeroboam] It is here stated, that Abijam began to reign in the eighteenth year of Jeroboam, and reigned three years; which may seem to disagree with the statement at ver. 9, that in the twentieth year of Jeroboam Asa reigned over Judah. But it is usual in Scripture, as in other writings, to take a part of the year for the whole. Thus Abijam began to reign in some part of Jeroboam's eighteenth year, and died in some part of the twentieth, and thus was reckoned to have reigned three years. Bp. Patrick.

2. — was Maachah, the daughter of Abishalom.] It is thought by some, that Abishalom here is another way of spelling Absalom, and that this Maachah was the granddaughter of Absalom by Tamar his daughter; for a granddaughter in Scripture is frequently called a daughter. Dr. Wall.

4. — give him a lamp in Jerusalem,] The meaning of this expression is, that He continued the kingdom in the posterity of David. Bp. Patrick. See note at chap. xi. 36, where is a similar expression.

5. — turned not aside &c.] He was not carried into any heinous and enormous crime, by which his profession was notoriously blemished, all the days of his life, excepting into that murder of Uriah the Hittite, and the sins which flowed from it. Bp. Hall.

David, without all doubt, was guilty of many other sins, besides the murder of Uriah, many of which are recorded in Scripture; as in the matter of Nabal and Mephibosheth, and the numbering of the people, for which God was so angry with him, that He punished him with a severe plague among the people he had numbered. But for these and other such sins, he had brought his trespass offerings, and so they were atoned and expiated, and therefore imputed to him no longer: as it is particularly recorded in that of his numbering the people; for he no sooner offered his burnt offerings and peace offerings, but "the Lord was intreated for the land," 2 Sam. xxiv. 25. And, therefore, notwithstanding his other sins, he was looked upon, in the eye of the law, as not having "turned aside," save only in the matter of Uriah. This latter sin, indeed, was so heinous, that the law had provided for it no propitiatory sacrifice, as he himself confesses in the exercise of his repentance for it, Psalm li. 16, "Thou delightest not in burnt offerings," that is, for such sins as these are; they being so great that nothing less than "a broken spirit and a contrite heart" will be accepted as a sacrifice for them, ver. 17. Bp. Beveridge.

Many sins and miscarriages are registered of David, as well as this matter of Uriah; yet, as if all these were nothing in comparison of this one, this one alone is put in by the Holy Ghost, by way of exception, and so inserted as an exception in the testimony which we find given of him in the passage before us. "He turned not aside from any thing, &c." that is, he turned not aside so foully and so contemptuously, so presumptuously and so provokingly, in any other thing, as he did in that business of Uriah. All his ignorances and negligences, and inconsiderations and infirmities, are passed over in silence; only this great presumptuous sin standeth up as a pillar, or monument, erected to his perpetual shame in that particular, by which all succeeding generations might take warning and example. Bp. Sanderson.

13. — Asa destroyed her idol, &c.] This was a strong proof of his pious disposition, that he would not suffer so near a relation to retain her idols, or to remain with any authority in the state; "he cut down her idol, and burnt it;" that is, treated it with the utmost contempt. Bp. Patrick.

14. — the high places were not removed:] What high places? There were some dedicated to the worship of false gods; these Asa took away; see 2 Chron. xiv. 3: there were others misdevoted to the worship of the true God; these he suffers to stand. There was gross idolatry in the former, there was weak will-worship in the latter. While he opposes impiety, he winks at error. Yet "nevertheless Asa's heart was perfect." God overlooks weaknesses where he sees truth. How pleasing a thing is sincerity, when, in favour of it, the mercy of our just God passes over many an error. O God, let our hearts be upright, though our feet slide. The fall cannot, through thy grace, be deadly, however it may shame or pain us. Bp. Hall.

— Asa's heart was perfect] See the notes on Gen. vi. 9; Deut. xviii. 13. A "perfect heart" in Scripture means, a heart not perfect in respect of degrees, for such a perfection is not attainable in this life, but perfect in respect of parts: an entire heart, a heart wherein no part is wholly wanting, howsoever weak and a great deal short of due proportion. Thus Joshua says, "Now therefore fear the Lord, and serve Him in sincerity and in truth:" (according to the Hebrew, in perfectness and truth:) "and put away the gods which your fathers served," Josh. xxiv. 14; which was as much as to say, Serve the Lord wholly, and quite renounce all service to others. So Hezekiah in his sickness, "Lord, I have

Before
CHRIST
about 951.

† Heb.
holy.

15 And he brought in the † things which his father had dedicated, and the things which himself had dedicated; into the house of the LORD, silver, and gold, and vessels.

16 ¶ And there was war between Asa and Baasha king of Israel all their days.

17 And Baasha king of Israel went up against Judah, and built Ramah, that he might not suffer any to go out or come in to Asa king of Judah.

18 Then Asa took all the silver and the gold that were left in the treasures of the house of the LORD, and the treasures of the king's house, and delivered them into the hand of his servants: and king Asa sent them to ² Ben-hadad, the son of Tabrimon, the son of Hezion, king of Syria, that dwelt at Damaseus, saying,

² 2 Chron.
16. 2.

19 There is a league between me and thee, and between my father and thy father: behold, I have sent unto thee a present of silver and gold; come and break thy league with Baasha king of Israel, that he may † depart from me.

† Heb.
go up.

20 So Ben-hadad hearkened unto king Asa, and sent the captains of the hosts which he had against the cities of Israel, and smote Ijon, and Dan, and Abel-beth-maachah, and all Cinneroth, with all the land of Naphtali.

21 And it came to pass, when Baasha heard thereof, that he left off building of Ramah, and dwelt in Tirzah.

† Heb.
free.

22 Then king Asa made a proclamation throughout all Judah; none was † exempt-walked before Thee in truth and with a perfect heart, and have done that which is good in Thy sight," 2 Kings xx. 3. He does not say he had done perfect actions, or performed perfect service, for who can do such? but yet that he walked with a perfect heart, that is, with a loyal heart, before God. So it is here said, that though Asa failed in his reformation, and "the high places were not removed, nevertheless his heart was perfect," that is, loyal "with the Lord all his days." Jos. Mede. See notes at 1 Kings xi. 4.

17. — and built Ramah,] It appears that, after Asa's great victory over the Ethiopians, (see 2 Chron. xiv. and xvi.) a considerable number of the Israelites fell off from Baasha, who thereupon resolved to make war upon Judah, and prevent a further defection of his subjects; accordingly he fortified Ramah, a city in the tribe of Benjamin, lying on the confines of the two kingdoms, that he might hinder all communication between his people and the people of Judah. Bp. Patrick.

18. Then Asa took all the silver &c.] In cases of extreme danger, it was always held lawful to employ sacred things in the defence of one's country; but in this case there was no such necessity; God had appeared wonderfully in Asa's defence against an enemy much more powerful than Baasha, (see 2 Chron. as above,) and had promised him protection under all circumstances, if he would but adhere to His service. Yet forgetting all this, and betraying a distrust of that God whose power and goodness he had lately experienced, he stript the temple of its treasures, and bribed ed: and they took away the stones of Ramah, and the timber thereof, wherewith Baasha had builded; and king Asa built with them Geba of Benjamin, and Mizpah.

23 The rest of all the acts of Asa, and all his might, and all that he did, and the cities which he built, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Judah? Nevertheless in the time of his old age he was diseased in his feet.

24 And Asa slept with his fathers, and was buried with his fathers in the city of David his father: and ^h Jehoshaphat his son reigned in his stead.

Before
CHRIST
about 951.

^h Matth. l.
8, called Josphat.
954.

25 ¶ And Nadab the son of Jeroboam † began to reign over Israel in the second year of Asa king of Judah, and reigned over Israel two years.

† Heb.
reigned.

26 And he did evil in the sight of the LORD, and walked in the way of his father, and in his sin wherewith he made Israel to sin.

27 ¶ And Baasha the son of Ahijah, of the house of Issachar, conspired against him; and Baasha smote him at Gibbethon, which belonged to the Philistines; for Nadab and all Israel laid siege to Gibbethon.

28 Even in the third year of Asa king of Judah did Baasha slay him, and reigned in his stead.

29 And it came to pass, when he reigned, that he smote all the house of Jeroboam; he left not to Jeroboam any that breathed, until he had destroyed him, according unto ⁱ the saying of the LORD, ⁱ Chap. 14.
10.

a heathen prince to come to his assistance, and break his league with another, to whom he stood engaged. He was reproached for his conduct by the Prophet Hanani, as is related at 2 Chron. xvi. 7, &c. Stackhouse.

29. — he left not to Jeroboam any that breathed,] This was the just judgment of God upon the family of Jeroboam, who, having set up an idolatrous worship in the kingdom of the ten tribes, was punished in the persons of his family; as Solomon, who had been guilty of a like sin, was punished in the person of his son Rehoboam: but with this difference, that God preserved the family of Solomon upon the throne, while that of Jeroboam was extinguished; Baasha having destroyed the whole house of that prince, without leaving one person alive, as the Prophet Ahijah had foretold. This curse, which so visibly fell upon the family of Jeroboam, was to the Israelites an evident proof that God greatly abhorred the idolatry which Jeroboam had introduced, and that the family of David should always subsist. God takes severe vengeance on those who cause iniquity to abound; their glory never lasts long; the wrath of God pursues them, and even often falls heavy upon their posterity. Ostervald.

— according unto the saying &c.] Providence hereby fulfilling the prediction concerning Jeroboam and his family, as a just retribution for his unparalleled wickedness, idolatry, and injustice. Pyle. But, as Baasha himself "walked in the way of Jeroboam," ver. 24, it is sufficiently evident that he had not cut off Jeroboam's family from any religious motive or hatred of

Before CHRIST 954. which he spake by his servant Ahijah the Shilonite :

30 Because of the sins of Jeroboam which he sinned, and which he made Israel sin, by his provocation wherewith he provoked the LORD God of Israel to anger.

31 ¶ Now the rest of the acts of Nadab, and all that he did, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Israel ?

32 And there was war between Asa and Baasha king of Israel all their days.

953. 33 In the third year of Asa king of Judah began Baasha the son of Ahijah to reign over all Israel in Tirzah, twenty and four years.

34 And he did evil in the sight of the LORD, and walked in the way of Jeroboam, and in his sin wherewith he made Israel to sin.

CHAP. XVI.

1, 7 Jehu's prophecy against Baasha. 5 Elah succeedeth him. 8 Zimri conspiring against Elah succeedeth him. 11 Zimri executeth Jehu's prophecy. 15 Omri, made king by the soldiers, forceth Zimri desperately to burn himself. 21 The kingdom being divided, Omri prevaieth against Tibni. 23 Omri buildeth Samaria. 25 His wicked reign. 27 Ahab succeedeth him. 29 Ahab's most wicked reign. 34 Joshua's curse upon Hiel the builder of Jericho.

about 930. THEN the word of the LORD came to Jehu the son of Hanani against Baasha, saying,

2 Forasmuch as I exalted thee out of the dust, and made thee prince over my people Israel ; and thou hast walked in the way of Jeroboam, and hast made my people Israel to sin, to provoke me to anger with their sins ;

3 Behold, I will take away the posterity of Baasha, and the posterity of his house ; idolatry, but merely out of worldly policy to secure himself in his usurped throne. Bp. Patrick.

Chap. XVI. ver. 2. Forasmuch as I — made thee prince over my people] It has been asked, how Baasha's exaltation to the kingdom can be ascribed to God, when he manifestly obtained it by cruelty and treachery. But it should be considered, not only that by the permission of God only can the wicked designs of men ever succeed, but also that, though the manner of invading the kingdom was from himself and his own wicked heart, yet the transferring of the kingdom from Nadab to him was from God, who by His providential decree disposed of all occasions, and of the hearts of the soldiers and people so, that Baasha might have the opportunity of executing His judgments on Nadab, and of obtaining a quiet succession to the kingdom. Stackhouse.

3. — make thy house like the house of Jeroboam] This threat was remarkably executed : for, as Nadab the son of Jeroboam reigned but two years, (chap. xv. 25,) so Elah the son of Baasha reigned no more, ver. 10 ; and, as Nadab was killed with the sword, so was Elah. Thus there was a wonderful resemblance between Jeroboam and Baasha, in their lives and in their deaths, in their sons and in their family. Bp. Patrick.

and will make thy house like ^a the house of Jeroboam the son of Nebat.

Before CHRIST about 950.

4 ^b Him that dieth of Baasha in the city shall the dogs eat ; and him that dieth of his in the fields shall the fowls of the air eat.

^a Chap. 15. 29. ^b Chap. 14. 11.

5 Now the rest of the acts of Baasha, and what he did, and his might, are they not written in the ^c book of the chronicles of the kings of Israel ?

^c 2 Chron. 16. 1.

6 So Baasha slept with his fathers, and was buried in Tirzah : and Elah his son reigned in his stead.

930.

7 And also by the hand of the prophet Jehu the son of Hanani came the word of the LORD against Baasha, and against his house, even for all the evil that he did in the sight of the LORD, in provoking him to anger with the work of his hands, in being like the house of Jeroboam ; and because he killed him.

8 ¶ In the twenty and sixth year of Asa king of Judah began Elah the son of Baasha to reign over Israel in Tirzah, two years.

930.

9 And his servant Zimri, captain of half his chariots, conspired against him, as he was in Tirzah, drinking himself drunk in the house of Arza [†] steward of his house in Tirzah.

[†] Heb. which was over.

10 And Zimri went in and smote him, and killed him, in the twenty and seventh year of Asa king of Judah, and reigned in his stead.

929.

11 ¶ And it came to pass, when he began to reign, as soon as he sat on his throne, that he slew all the house of Baasha : he left him not one that pisseth against a wall, || neither of his kinsfolks, nor of his friends.

|| Or, both his kinsmen and his friends.

12 Thus did Zimri destroy all the house

7. And also by the hand of the prophet Jehu &c.] The command having been given to Jehu, it is here related that he executed it, and delivered the message to Baasha, some time before he died : which is said to have been done “ by the hand of Jehu,” because he was the minister of God in this business. Bp. Patrick.

12. Thus did Zimri destroy all the house of Baasha.] We see clearly, in the series of all these kings of Israel, that Divine vengeance pursues the wicked, and particularly wicked princes. When God has made use of them to do justice, and to execute the decrees of His providence, He cuts them off and destroys them one by the other. But we must take notice, that all these kings, notwithstanding the warnings given them by God, and the examples they had before their eyes, continued to offend Him, by keeping up idolatry in their kingdom for reasons of state, and on principles of false policy. When men do only consult their passions and their interest, and worldly considerations prevail with them, nothing can overcome their obstinacy ; the most express warnings and the most remarkable instances of Divine justice are useless and unprofitable, and therefore the Lord is at length provoked to cast them off, and forsake them utterly. Osterwald.

Before
CHRIST
929.

† Heb. by
the hand of.

of Baasha, according to the word of the LORD, which he spake against Baasha † by Jehu the prophet, 13 For all the sins of Baasha, and the sins of Elah his son, by which they sinned, and by which they made Israel to sin, in provoking the LORD God of Israel to anger with their vanities.

14 Now the rest of the acts of Elah, and all that he did, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Israel?

929. 15 ¶ In the twenty and seventh year of Asa king of Judah did Zimri reign seven days in Tirzah. And the people were encamped against Gibbethon, which belonged to the Philistines.

16 And the people that were encamped heard say, Zimri hath conspired, and hath also slain the king: wherefore all Israel made Omri, the captain of the host, king over Israel that day in the camp.

17 And Omri went up from Gibbethon, and all Israel with him, and they besieged Tirzah.

929 18 And it came to pass, when Zimri saw that the city was taken, that he went into the palace of the king's house, and burnt the king's house over him with fire, and died, 19 For his sins which he sinned in doing evil in the sight of the LORD, in walking in the way of Jeroboam, and in his sin which he did, to make Israel to sin.

20 Now the rest of the acts of Zimri, and his treason that he wrought, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Israel?

21 ¶ Then were the people of Israel divided into two parts: half of the people followed Tibni the son of Ginath, to make him king; and half followed Omri.

22 But the people that followed Omri prevailed against the people that followed Tibni the son of Ginath: so Tibni died, and Omri reigned.

23 ¶ In the thirty and first year of Asa king of Judah began Omri to reign over Israel, twelve years: six years reigned he in Tirzah.

24 And he bought the hill Samaria of Shemer for two talents of silver, and built on the hill, and called the name of the city which he built, after the name of Shemer, owner of the hill, † Samaria.

† Heb.
Shomeron.

25 ¶ But Omri wrought evil in the eyes of the LORD, and did worse than all that were before him.

26 For he walked in all the way of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, and in his sin wherewith he made Israel to sin, to provoke the LORD God of Israel to anger with their vanities.

27 Now the rest of the acts of Omri which he did, and his might that he shewed, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Israel?

28 So Omri slept with his fathers, and was buried in Samaria: and Ahab his son reigned in his stead.

29 ¶ And in the thirty and eighth year of Asa king of Judah began Ahab the son of Omri to reign over Israel: and Ahab the son of Omri reigned over Israel in Samaria twenty and two years.

918

30 And Ahab the son of Omri did evil in the sight of the LORD above all that were before him.

31 And it came to pass, † as if it had been a light thing for him to walk in the sins of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, that he took to wife Jezebel the daughter of Ethbaal king of the Zidonians, and went and served Baal, and worshipped him.

† Heb. was it a light thing,
&c.

32 And he reared up an altar for Baal in the house of Baal, which he had built in Samaria.

24. — called the name — Samaria.] From this time, Samaria became the royal or capital city of the kingdom of Israel, till its final period; and the kingdom was in consequence frequently called the kingdom of Samaria. This city underwent two important sieges under Ben-hadad and Shalmaneser. In aftertimes, Herod the Great rebuilt and enlarged the city, so that it is conjectured to have exceeded Jerusalem in extent. There now remain of it only a few cottages, and convents inhabited by Greek monks. Dr. Wells.

29. — in the thirty and eighth year of Asa king of Judah] It should be observed, that Asa king of Judah had now seen no less than six kings of Israel dead, some by a natural death, but in great ignominy and reproach, by the courses of a vicious life; and others destroyed, with their whole families, by the hands of usurpers, as lewd and wicked as themselves, all suffering the just recompense of their ingratitude and disobedience against the laws of Heaven, while he had enjoyed, all the while, a reign of thirty-eight years, in such blessings of peace as are the usual consequences of equitable and religious government. Pyle.

30. And Ahab — did evil &c.] Jeroboam's crimes were little in comparison of those of this monster of iniquity. Jeroboam did not absolutely renounce the true God, but only worshipped Him with superstitious inventions of his own; but Ahab set Him in a manner at defiance, and even abolished His worship, marrying Jezebel, one of the young princesses of the Zidonians, who, as will appear in the history, was a woman of so impetuous and ungovernable a spirit, as to hurry him into the commission of the most tyrannical actions against his subjects, and to erect an idol-temple, with its altars and priests, in the royal city, and to establish the open and professed service of the worst degrees of idolatry, which he encouraged by his own example and that of his whole court. Pyle.

Before
CHRIST
918.

33 And Ahab made a grove; and Ahab did more to provoke the Lord God of Israel to anger than all the kings of Israel that were before him.

34 ¶ In his days did Hiel the Bethelite build Jericho: he laid the foundation thereof in Abiram his firstborn, and set up the gates thereof in his youngest son Segub,^d according to the word of the Lord, which he spake by Joshua the son of Nun.

^a Josh. 6.
26.

CHAP. XVII.

1 Elijah, having prophesied against Ahab, is sent to Cherith, where the ravens feed him. 8 He is sent to the widow of Zarephath. 17 He raiseth the widow's son. 21 The woman believeth him.

about 910.

† Heb.

Elijah.

Luke 4. 25.

he is called

Elias.

^a Eccl¹ 49.

James 5. 17.

AND † Elijah the Tishbite, who was of the inhabitants of Gilead, said unto Ahab, ^a As the Lord God of Israel liveth, before whom I stand, there shall not be dew nor rain these years, but according to my word.

34. In his days did Hiel — build Jericho:] See notes on Josh. vi. 26. Hiel, being an inhabitant of Beth-el, lived in the very seat of idolatry, and was probably deeply infected with it. He either did not know (because ignorant of the law, which was now little read) the judgments of God denounced against the rebuilder of Jericho, or he was so impious as not to regard them, believing no other God but Baal. He soon however found those judgments to be true. This is a most remarkable instance of the certainty of Divine threatenings, as the sentence, though pronounced 440 years before, was now fulfilled in all its circumstances: and assuredly it ought to have been an awful warning to the whole nation, not to despise the longsuffering and patience of God, who, though He had not yet carried them out of their good land, (according to the word of Abijah, chap. xiv. 15,) would certainly do it, if they continued in hardened impenitence. Bp. Patrick.

Chap. XVII. ver. 1. — Elijah the Tishbite,] This Prophet, called Elias in the New Testament, was probably denominated "the Tishbite," from Thesbe, a town on the other side of Jordan, in the tribe of Gad, and the land of Gilead, where he was born, or at least lived for a considerable time. Respecting the birth and parentage of Elijah, Scripture is silent; the Jews have many conjectures on the subject, which are fanciful and of no authority. He was one of the chief, if not the prince, of the Prophets of his age; was a man of a great and elevated soul, of a generous and undaunted spirit, a zealous defender of the laws of God, and a just avenger of the violations of His honour. Calmet. This illustrious Prophet was the greatest, "in words and in deeds," that had appeared since the days of Moses. Dr. Hales. These times were fit for an Elijah; an Elijah was fit for them. The most eminent Prophet is reserved for the corruptest age. Israel had never such a king as Ahab for impiety, never so miraculous a Prophet as Elijah; this Elijah is addressed to this Ahab. The God of spirits knows how to proportion men to the occasions. Bp. Hall.

— there shall not be dew nor rain &c.] Elijah here boldly predicted a long drought to Ahab, not to be removed "but according to his word," that is, by his intercession. He seems to have apprehended that the idolatries of the nation would draw down destruction from God, and therefore prayed for a lesser chastisement to work its reformation. And when that end was accomplished, he prayed again for its remission. So it is understood by the Son of Sirach, Ecclus. xlviii. 10; and also in the New Testament, "Elias prayed earnestly that it might not rain:—he prayed again, and the heaven gave rain, &c." James v. 17, 18. Dr.

2 And the word of the Lord came unto him, saying,

Before
CHRIST
about 910.

3 Get thee hence, and turn thee eastward, and hide thyself by the brook Cherith, that is before Jordan.

4 And it shall be, that thou shalt drink of the brook; and I have commanded the ravens to feed thee there.

5 So he went and did according unto the word of the Lord: for he went and dwelt by the brook Cherith, that is before Jordan.

6 And the ravens brought him bread and flesh in the morning, and bread and flesh in the evening; and he drank of the brook.

7 And it came to pass † after a while, that the brook dried up, because there had been no rain in the land. † Heb. at the end of days.

8 ¶ And the word of the Lord came unto him, saying,

^b Luke 4.
26, called Sarepta.

9 Arise, get thee to ^b Zarephath, which Hales. The Prophet acted no farther part in this matter than as he was the minister of God, and His messenger, to declare His purpose of bringing famine on the land: all judgments of this kind are the immediate work of God. Stackhouse.

Being grieved to see such a general apostasy from the true religion, he prayed earnestly to God that He would lay bare His arm, and shew some visible token of His displeasure against so wicked a people. Though this calamity is said to have been procured by Elijah's prayers, we must remember, that the prayers were uttered from a feeling of necessity, and of charity to the offenders; to the end that, by the sharp and long affliction which they produced, the honour of the Deity, and the truth of His word and threatenings, which were now universally contemned, might be vindicated; and that the Israelites, whose present impunity hardened them in their idolatry, might thereby be awakened to see their wickedness, their dependence on God, and the necessity of their returning to His religion and worship. Stackhouse.

3. — the brook Cherith,] Concerning this brook, nothing is known, but that it ran into the river Jordan; whether on the east or the west side, authors differ: but from the command here given to Elijah to turn "eastward" towards the brook Cherith, it is rather inferred that it ran into Jordan on the east side. Dr. Wells.

6. And the ravens brought — bread &c.] These creatures are voracious, and said to be unnatural to their young; yet, the more unfit instruments they seemed to be, the more they magnified the almighty power of Him, who controlled their natural appetites while He employed them. Stackhouse. God could have conveyed to him the food in any other way, but He chose to send it by these rapacious birds, for the greater illustration of His absolute command over all the creatures, and to give us a full evidence that He is able to succour and preserve, by the most improbable means, all those who put their trust in Him. We need go no further to inquire whence the ravens had this food; it is enough if we believe that they brought it to Elijah; for then we must allow, that they acted by the Divine direction, and that the food was of God's providing. Reading. Who can make question of the means which God possesses of providing for His creatures, when he sees the very ravens forget their own hunger, and bring food to Elijah! Let not our faith be wanting in God; His care will never be wanting to us. Bp. Hall.

9. — get thee to Zarephath,] Zarephath is a town called Sarepta in the New Testament, Luke iv. 26, "which belongeth to Zidon," or is within the jurisdiction of the Zidonians. Dr. Wells.

Before
CHRIST
about 910.

belongeth to Zidon, and dwell there: behold, I have commanded a widow woman there to sustain thee.

10 So he arose and went to Zarephath. And when he came to the gate of the city, behold, the widow woman was there gathering of sticks: and he called to her, and said, Fetch me, I pray thee, a little water in a vessel, that I may drink.

11 And as she was going to fetch it, he called to her, and said, Bring me, I pray thee, a morsel of bread in thine hand.

12 And she said, As the LORD thy God liveth, I have not a cake, but an handful of meal in a barrel, and a little oil in a cruse: and, behold, I am gathering two sticks, that I may go in and dress it for me and my son, that we may eat it, and die.

13 And Elijah said unto her, Fear not; go and do as thou hast said: but make me thereof a little cake first, and bring it unto me, and after make for thee and for thy son.

14 For thus saith the LORD God of Israel, The barrel of meal shall not waste, neither shall the cruse of oil fail, until the day that the LORD † sendeth rain upon the earth.

15 And she went and did according to the saying of Elijah: and she, and he, and her house, did eat || many days.

16 And the barrel of meal wasted not, neither did the cruse of oil fail, according to the word of the LORD, which he spake † by Elijah.

17 ¶ And it came to pass after these things, that the son of the woman, the mistress of the house, fell sick; and his sickness was so sore, that there was no breath left in him.

18 And she said unto Elijah, What have I to do with thee, O thou man of God? art thou come unto me to call my sin to remembrance, and to slay my son?

19 And he said unto her, Give me thy son. And he took him out of her bosom, and carried him up into a loft, where he abode, and laid him upon his own bed.

20 And he cried unto the LORD, and said, O LORD my God, hast thou also brought evil upon the widow with whom I sojourn, by slaying her son?

21 And he † stretched himself upon the

Before
CHRIST
about 910.

† Heb.
giveth.

|| Or,
a full year.

† Heb.
by the hand
of.

† Heb.
measured.

It is probably the same as a place now called Sarphan, distant about three hours' journey from Sidon towards Tyre: it at present consists only of a few houses on the tops of the mountains, about half a mile from the sea; but it is probable that the principal part of the city stood below, in the space between the hills and the sea, as ruins to a considerable extent are still seen there. Maundrell.

— behold, I have commanded a widow woman &c.] God gave the widow woman no express command to this effect, but appointed and disposed her to sustain Elijah, by the dispensations of His providence, as He had before disposed the ravens. That no express command was given to her, appears from ver. 12. Bp. Patrick.

12. — As the Lord thy God liveth,] It appears hence, that she knew the name of the Lord God of Israel, and that she also knew Elijah to be a Prophet, or at least one of His worshippers. Bp. Patrick. Though she lived without the bounds of Israel, she had gained so much by her neighbourhood to it, to know an Israelite and a Prophet by his habit; to know that the only living God was the God of that Prophet, the God of Israel. Bp. Hall.

— in a barrel,] It is related by Sandys, that the inhabitants of these countries now keep the corn they are using in pots or jars, long vessels of clay; a precaution which is necessary to prevent its being eaten by worms. Of this description, probably, was the "barrel" here spoken of. Harmer.

— a little oil in a cruse;] Our translators have rendered by the word "cruse" three different Hebrew words, which no doubt describe different utensils. The first occurs in 1 Sam. xxvi. 11, where we read of Saul's "cruse of water;" and in 1 Kings xix. 6, where "a cruse of water" stood at the head of Elijah. The same word is used in this place; so that the vessel here designed was used for either oil or water. In 1 Kings xiv. 3, we read of "a cruse of honey;" but the original word is different; honey not being nearly so fluid as water, a different vessel might contain it: this should perhaps be rendered jar, or pot of honey. In 2 Kings ii. 20, Elisha says, "Bring me a new cruse:" this vessel is described by a word different from either of the other; and one which, in 2 Chron. xxxv. 13, appears to denote a vessel wherein the sacrifices were boiled; but elsewhere a vessel, a dish, brought to table, containing food, 2 Kings xxi. 13; Prov. xix. 24; xxvi. 15. Script. illust.

15. — and did according to the saying of Elijah:] We cannot but observe how noble, how generous a faith this was of the poor widow! she had but one handful of meal in a barrel, and but a little oil in a cruse, and yet is hospitable to the stranger: nay, on his bare request, served the Prophet out of that small pittance, even before herself, yea, even before her own son; and that without money and without price. Such is the faith, and such the obedience, that most recommends us to God. If we so trust Him as she did, and even part with our all for His sake, we shall be no losers, but infinite gainers: we may not only be assured of more grace, but depend on His kind providence for the supply of all our necessary wants: our bread and our oil shall never fail. Our alms and liberalities shall not lessen but increase our store. Wogan. The consideration of this wonderful instance of God's care and concern for His distressed servants, should strongly influence and turn our hearts to regard Him as the fountain of all goodness, who sees our necessities, and is able to supply them in all extremities. And it should convince us, that it is our wisest and best policy to secure to ourselves the favour of such an omnipotent Benefactor, by rendering Him the homage of our prayers, the confession of our lips, the obedience of our whole lives, against all the temptations of worldly fear or favour which can be offered to pervert us. Reading.

16. And the barrel of meal wasted not,] Happy was it for this widow that she did not shut her hand to the man of God, that she was no niggard of her last handful. Never corn or olive did so increase in growing, as here in consuming. Who can fear want by a merciful liberality, when he sees how the widow of Sarepta must have famished if she had not given, and by giving abounded? With what thankful devotion must this woman have looked daily upon her barrel and cruse, wherein she saw the mercy of God renewed to her continually! Doubtless, her soul was no less fed by faith, than her body with this supernatural provision. Bp. Hall.

19. — into a loft,] An upper room of the house, where Elijah slept, and which probably he had to himself for study, meditation, and prayer. Bp. Patrick.

Before
CHRIST
about 910.

† Heb. into his inward parts.

child three times, and cried unto the LORD, and said, O LORD my God, I pray thee, let this child's soul come † into him again.

22 And the LORD heard the voice of Elijah; and the soul of the child came into him again, and he revived.

23 And Elijah took the child, and brought him down out of the chamber into the house, and delivered him unto his mother: and Elijah said, See, thy son liveth.

24 ¶ And the woman said to Elijah, Now by this I know that thou art a man of God, and that the word of the LORD in thy mouth is truth.

CHAP. XVIII.

1 In the extremity of famine Elijah, sent to Ahab, meeteth good Obadiah. 9 Obadiah bringeth Ahab to Elijah. 17 Elijah, reproving Ahab, by fire from heaven convinceth Baal's prophets. 41 Elijah, by prayer obtaining rain, followeth Ahab to Jezreel.

about 906.

AND it came to pass after many days, that the word of the LORD came to 24. — Now by this I know] The woman had sufficient reason to believe that Elijah was a Prophet, or person sent from God, when she saw the miraculous increase of the meal and oil: it seems, however, that, upon his not curing her sick son, so as to save his life, her faith began to droop; but, upon seeing him brought to life, her faith revived; and, through the joy of having him restored to her again, she accounted the latter miracle much greater than the former. Stackhouse. We are not to interpret these words so, as if the woman was now first apprized upon this occasion that Elijah was a Prophet of the true God. For he was made known to her long before by a special revelation; nor was it possible for them to live so long together upon the miraculous supply, which Elijah had foretold and promised in the name of the Lord, without the woman's being persuaded that his mission was from Heaven. But the raising her son from the dead, a thing which was never heard of before in all the world, made the strongest impression upon her mind, filled her with an excess of joy, and obliged her to make a more particular acknowledgment of that, which no doubt she had confessed in other words before, that Elijah's works proved him to be a servant of the most high and holy God. Reading. The end of miracles is a confirmation of the truth. It seems that, had this widow's son continued dead, her belief would have been buried in his grave. Notwithstanding her meal and oil, her soul would have languished. The mercy of God is fain to provide new helps for our infirmities, and graciously condescends to our own terms, that we may work out our faith and salvation. Bp. Hall.

Chap. XVIII. ver. 1. — in the third year,] Rather, "after the third year," as the Hebrew words may be translated; and so it is necessary to understand it, as both our Saviour and St. James (Luke iv. 25, and James v. 17,) say that the drought continued three years and six months. Pyle.

— Go, shew thyself unto Ahab;] The king and people must be witnesses that God will make good the word, the oath of His Prophet. If the rain had fallen in Elijah's absence, who would have known it was by his procurement? God holds the credit of His messengers precious, and neglects nothing that may grace them in the eyes of the world. Bp. Hall.

2. And Elijah went to shew himself unto Ahab.] Behold the courage of a true servant of God! No one was so odious to Ahab and his people, as Elijah. To him they ascribed all their misery. Still the Prophet was not slack, though at the peril of Elijah in the third year, saying, Go, shew thyself unto Ahab; and I will send rain upon the earth. Before

CHRIST
about 906.

2 And Elijah went to shew himself unto Ahab. And there was a sore famine in Samaria.

3 And Ahab called † Obadiah, which was † the governor of his house. (Now Obadiah feared the LORD greatly: † Heb.
Obadiah.
† Heb. over his house.
† Heb.
Jezbel.

4 For it was so, when † Jezebel cut off the prophets of the LORD, that Obadiah took an hundred prophets, and hid them by fifty in a cave, and fed them with bread and water.)

5 And Ahab said unto Obadiah, Go into the land, unto all fountains of water, and unto all brooks: peradventure we may find grass to save the horses and mules alive, † that we lose not all the beasts. † Heb.
that we cut not off ourselves from the beasts.

6 So they divided the land between them to pass throughout it: Ahab went one way by himself, and Obadiah went another way by himself.

his life, to carry a message of mercy to his bitterest enemies. Wogan.

— a sore famine in Samaria.] In the city of Samaria, and in the whole kingdom of Israel. Samaria is often put, generally, for all the country which was subject to the kings of Israel. It seems that this drought and dearth prevailed in the territories of Ahab only, or at the most, in the country immediately adjoining. Calmet.

3. — Obadiah, which was the governor of his house.] That is, chief steward of his household. Pyle. Some writers, both Jews and Christians, have thought that this was Obadiah the Prophet; but there are no sufficient grounds for this opinion. Bp. Patrick.

— Now Obadiah feared the Lord] From the instance of Obadiah, we perceive how possible it is to preserve our virtue in the worst of times, and amid the most corrupt company; yea, to maintain the truth of religion in the midst of a profane and idolatrous court. It is a great happiness to a nation when God is pleased to raise the virtuous, yea, one virtuous man, to honour and dignity in the state. Wogan.

4. — when Jezebel cut off the prophets] It is probable that there were schools of the Prophets still remaining in Israel till the time of Jezebel; which schools are meant not of persons endued with an extraordinary spirit of prophecy, but of persons bred up to instruct the people in true religion, or of disciples of the Prophets and candidates for that office. Jezebel certainly looked upon these "Prophets" as enemies to her idolatry, and possibly persuaded her husband that they were disaffected to his government, and favourers of the kings of Judah, because they worshipped the same God, and deemed Jerusalem to be the proper place of His worship. On this account, so much the greater was the piety and courage of Obadiah, in rescuing so many victims from the hands of this furious and enraged woman. Bp. Patrick, Stackhouse.

— with bread and water.] Used generally for meat and drink. Bp. Pococke.

5. — unto all fountains of water,] This direction of Ahab to Obadiah to search for grass by the brooks and fountains of water perfectly agrees with Dr. Russell's account of a common Syrian summer; at which time the country is all entirely parched up, except in the vicinity of springs of water. So Sir J. Chardin says, "In every place where there is water, there is always grass and verdure in the East, for water makes there every thing to grow." Harmer.

Before
CHRIST
about 906.

7 ¶ And as Obadiah was in the way, behold, Elijah met him : and he knew him, and fell on his face, and said, Art thou that my lord Elijah ?

8 And he answered him, I am : go, tell thy lord, Behold, Elijah is here.

9 And he said, What have I sinned, that thou wouldest deliver thy servant into the hand of Ahab, to slay me ?

10 As the LORD thy God liveth, there is no nation or kingdom, whither my lord hath not sent to seek thee : and when they said, He is not there ; he took an oath of the kingdom and nation, that they found thee not.

11 And now thou sayest, Go, tell thy lord, Behold, Elijah is here.

12 And it shall come to pass, as soon as I am gone from thee, that the Spirit of the LORD shall carry thee whither I know not ; and so when I come and tell Ahab, and he cannot find thee, he shall slay me : but I thy servant fear the LORD from my youth.

13 Was it not told my lord what I did when Jezebel slew the prophets of the LORD, how I hid an hundred men of the LORD's prophets by fifty in a cave, and fed them with bread and water ?

14 And now thou sayest, Go, tell thy lord, Behold, Elijah is here : and he shall slay me.

15 And Elijah said, As the LORD of hosts liveth, before whom I stand, I will surely shew myself unto him to day.

16 So Obadiah went to meet Ahab, and told him : and Ahab went to meet Elijah.

10. — took an oath, — that they found thee not.] Made them declare by oath that they knew not where to find thee. It is probable that by the terms "kingdom" and "nation," are merely meant the tribes and governments of his own dominions, since his power of binding by oath extended only to his own subjects. Bp. Patrick, Dr. Wells.

18. — I have not troubled Israel;] We see not here the Prophet throwing himself at the king's feet, suing for mercy or making mean submissions, but boldly and undauntedly delivering his message as the ambassador of a superiour power, a greater King, the Lord of hosts. He preserves the dignity of his office and character ; and, with as much freedom as truth, charges the king himself, and his idolatrous family, as the true authors of all the troubles the nation groaned under. He is not afraid to tax their crimes, as the real cause of all their sufferings : so far was the holy Prophet from judging vice to be a publick benefit, as some moderns have maintained, that he roundly pronounces the publick calamity to be owing to the violation of God's commandments. With him therefore we may assuredly conclude, that the only disturber of men, of families, cities, kingdoms, worlds, is sin : that there is no such troubler, no such traitor to any state, as the wilfully wicked man : no such enemy to the publick, as the enemy of God. Wogan.

19. — which eat at Jezebel's table.] This circumstance seems mentioned to shew how high esteem she had for these prophets, that she kept a table on purpose for them, in order to do them honour before the people. Bp. Patrick. It perhaps is not meant that they ate at the table where Jezebel herself dined, but that they were fed from her kitchen. Fragments to Calmet.

Before
CHRIST
about 906.

17 ¶ And it came to pass, when Ahab saw Elijah, that Ahab said unto him, Art thou he that troubleth Israel ?

18 And he answered, I have not troubled Israel ; but thou, and thy father's house, in that ye have forsaken the commandments of the LORD, and thou hast followed Baalim.

19 Now therefore send, and gather to me all Israel unto mount Carmel, and the prophets of Baal four hundred and fifty, and the prophets of the groves four hundred, which eat at Jezebel's table.

20 So Ahab sent unto all the children of Israel, and gathered the prophets together unto mount Carmel.

21 And Elijah came unto all the people, and said, How long halt ye between two || opinions ? if the LORD be God, follow || Or, thoughts. him : but if Baal, then follow him. And the people answered him not a word.

22 Then said Elijah unto the people, I, even I only, remain a prophet of the LORD ; but Baal's prophets are four hundred and fifty men.

23 Let them therefore give us two bullocks ; and let them choose one bullock for themselves, and cut it in pieces, and lay it on wood, and put no fire under : and I will dress the other bullock, and lay it on wood, and put no fire under :

24 And call ye on the name of your gods, and I will call on the name of the LORD : and the God that answereth by

21. — How long halt ye between two opinions ?] This was saying in effect, How long will ye act the base disingenuous part of attempting to serve two masters, to worship at once the Lord and Baal ? The Lord is a jealous God. He demands your whole affection ; He will not be served by halves ; He will not accept of a divided empire with Baal. Choose ye then whom ye will serve, and no longer halt between two directly opposite and inconsistent opinions. If you are persuaded (and never had any people more reason to be persuaded) that the Lord Jehovah, the great Creator of heaven and earth, is the only true God, act agreeably to such a persuasion ; follow Him and Him only ; serve Him sincerely, uniformly, and entirely, with all your heart, and soul, and mind, and strength, and live a life of virtue and holiness, in obedience to His commands. But if, on the contrary, you can, in opposition to the plainest and strongest evidence, bring yourselves seriously to believe that Baal is God, follow him ; follow him (if your nature recoil not at it) through all those impure and detestable practices, which his worship authorizes and requires. But come not thus reeking with idolatry to the altar of the Lord. He will accept of no sacrifices from such polluted hands. Baal is then your god, and you are his people. To him alone offer your vows ; from him alone expect the supply of your wants, and deliverance from all your calamities. One topick of serious instruction should be derived from this passage by Christians ; that, as God would not allow a partial worship under the Mosaick dispensation, so neither will He admit of partial faith and partial obedience under the Christian covenant. Bp. Porteus.

24. — the God that answereth by fire.] It was an ancient and well known token of God's acceptance of a sacrifice, if the wood

Before CHRIST about 906. fire, let him be God. And all the people answered and said, † It is well spoken.

† Heb. The word is good. 25 And Elijah said unto the prophets of Baal, Choose you one bullock for yourselves, and dress it first; for ye are many; and call on the name of your gods, but put no fire under.

† Or, answer. † Or, heard. Or, leaped up and down at the altar. † Heb. with a great voice. † Or, he meditated. † Heb. hath a pursuit. 26 And they took the bullock which was given them, and they dressed it, and called on the name of Baal from morning even until noon, saying, O Baal, ‖ hear us. But there was no voice, nor any that ‖ answered. And they ‖ leaped upon the altar which was made.

27 And it came to pass at noon, that Elijah mocked them, and said, Cry † aloud: for he is a god; either ‖ he is talking, or he † is pursuing, or he is in a journey, or peradventure he sleepeth, and must be awaked.

28 And they cried aloud, and cut themselves after their manner with knives and lancets, till † the blood gushed out upon them.

29 And it came to pass, when midday was past, and they prophesied until the time of the † offering of the evening sacrifice, that there was neither voice, nor any to answer, nor any † that regarded.

30 And Elijah said unto all the people, Come near unto me. And all the people came near unto him. And he repaired the altar of the Lord that was broken down.

31 And Elijah took twelve stones, according to the number of the tribes of the sons of Jacob, unto whom the word of the Lord came, saying, ^a Israel shall be thy name:

32 And with the stones he built an altar in the name of the Lord: and he made a trench about the altar, as great as would contain two measures of seed.

Before CHRIST about 906.

† Heb. poured out blood upon them.

† Heb. ascending.

† Heb. attention.

^a Gen. 32.

28.

2 Kings 17.

34.

on the altar that was to consume it, took fire in a miraculous manner, without any human application to kindle it. Thus God is supposed to have testified His acceptance of the sacrifices of Abel, Noah, and Abraham. Thus He certainly approved the sacrifices of Moses, Gideon, David, and Solomon; and thus, at the dedication of the tabernacle, Levit. ix. 24, "there came out fire from before the Lord, and consumed the burnt offering." Reading. If Elijah had not, by Divine instinct, been assured of the event, he durst not have put religion upon such hazard. Undoubtedly God commanded him this trial, intending confusion to the authors of idolatry, and victory to the truth. Bp. Hall.

26. — they leaped upon the altar. They ran and danced about the altar, as men in an ecstasy, and threw themselves into uncount and disorderly motions. It is thought that this leaping or dancing was a rite used in the idolatrous worship of the sun. Bp. Patrick. The words translated "they leaped upon the altar," will admit of being rendered, "they danced about the altar." Pyle.

27. — Elijah mocked them, and said, &c. He did not think it unseemly to mock them and their god, that he might better awaken them out of their stupidity, and expose them to all the by-standers as corrupters of religion and deceivers of the people. Bp. Patrick. We are not to blame this railery of the Prophet, but rather commend it, as justly due to that bold and impious competition into which these idolaters presumed to enter, on behalf of their Baal, against the Almighty God of Israel. Wogan. Irony is the keenest weapon of the orator. The moralists, those luminaries of the Gentile world, have made it the vehicle of their gravest lessons; and Christ, our great Teacher, upon just occasions, was not sparing in the use of it. A remarkable instance, but of the mildest kind, occurs in His conversation with Nicodemus. In the prophetic writings of the Old Testament, examples of a more austere irony abound. There is always more or less of severity in this ironical language, by which it stands remarkably distinguished from the levity of ridicule, and is particularly adapted to the purposes of invective and rebuke. It denotes conscious superiority, sometimes indignation, in the person who employs it; it excites shame, confusion, and remorse, in the person against whom it is employed; in a third person, contempt and abhorrence of him who is the object of it. These being the affections which it expresses and denotes, it can in no case have any tendency to move laughter: he who uses it is always serious himself, and makes his hearers serious, if he applies it with propriety and address. Bp. Horsley.

28. — cut themselves — with knives and lancets, However strange this method may appear of obtaining the favour of their gods, yet we find that this barbarous custom has been very common in the idolatrous rites of many nations. Among other instances, we are informed that the priests of Bellona used to smear their victims with their own blood; that the Persian magi pretended to appease tempests by making incisions in their flesh: and it is related by modern travellers, that in Turkey, Persia, and several parts of India, there are fanaticks who think they do a thing very acceptable to the Deity when they cut and mangle their own flesh. Stackhouse. See the note on Lev. xix. 28. This conduct of the priests of Baal appears to be an instance of earnest entreaty and conjuration by the most powerful marks of affection. As if they had said, Dost thou not see, O Baal, with what passion we adore thee? How we give thee most decisive marks of our affection? We shrink at no pain, we decline no disfigurement, to demonstrate our love to thee; and yet thou answerest not! by every token of our regard, answer us! by the freely-flowing blood we shed for thee, answer us! &c. They certainly demonstrated their attachment to Baal; but Baal did not testify his reciprocal attachment to them in proof of his divinity, which was the article in debate between them and Elijah. Fragments to Calmet.

29. — they prophesied until the time &c. They ran up and down in a furious, raving, and distracted manner, until the time that the evening sacrifice was, by God's appointment, wont to be offered. Bp. Hall.

30. — he repaired the altar of the Lord. That, which is here called "the altar of the Lord," was undoubtedly one of those which were built in the time of the judges, and the first kings of Israel, when, for want of a fixed place of worship, such structures were permitted. In subsequent times, we read of an altar on mount Carmel. Historians relate, that, when Vespasian was in Judea, he went to consult "the God of Carmel," at which time there was neither temple nor statue on the mountain, but one altar only, plain, and very venerable for its antiquity. Calmet.

31. — twelve stones, according to the number of the tribes. There were present in this assembly only the subjects of Ahab, and consequently not more than ten tribes: still Elijah takes twelve stones to build the altar, to shew that he was about to sacrifice in the name of all the race of Israel, and to mark out the conformity of religious worship which ought to prevail amongst them. The general laws forbidding the erection of altars did not apply on the present occasion, since Elijah was acting under special direction, for the purpose of bringing back all Israel to the true worship of God. Calmet.

Before
CHRIST
about 906.

33 And he put the wood in order, and cut the bullock in pieces, and laid him on the wood, and said, Fill four barrels with water, and pour it on the burnt sacrifice, and on the wood.

34 And he said, Do it the second time. And they did it the second time. And he said, Do it the third time. And they did it the third time.

† Heb.
went.

35 And the water ran † round about the altar; and he filled the trench also with water.

36 And it came to pass at the time of the offering of the evening sacrifice, that Elijah the prophet came near, and said, LORD God of Abraham, Isaac, and of Israel, let it be known this day that thou art God in Israel, and that I am thy servant, and that I have done all these things at thy word.

37 Hear me, O LORD, hear me, that this people may know that thou art the LORD God, and that thou hast turned their heart back again.

38 Then the fire of the LORD fell, and consumed the burnt sacrifice, and the wood, and the stones, and the dust, and licked up the water that was in the trench.

39 And when all the people saw it, they fell on their faces: and they said, The LORD, he is the God; the LORD, he is the God.

Before
CHRIST
about 906.

40 And Elijah said unto them, || Take the prophets of Baal; let not one of them escape. And they took them: and Elijah brought them down to the brook Kishon, and slew them there.

|| Or,
Apprehend.

41 ¶ And Elijah said unto Ahab, Get thee up, eat and drink; for there is || a sound of abundance of rain.

|| Or,
a sound of a noise of rain.

42 So Ahab went up to eat and to drink. And Elijah went up to the top of Carmel; and he cast himself down upon the earth, and put his face between his knees, 43 And said to his servant, Go up now, look toward the sea. And he went up, and looked, and said, There is nothing. And he said, Go again seven times.

44 And it came to pass at the seventh time, that he said, Behold, there ariseth a little cloud out of the sea, like a man's hand. And he said, Go up, say unto Ahab, † Prepare thy chariot, and get thee down, that the rain stop thee not.

† Heb.
Tie, or,
Bind.

45 And it came to pass in the mean while, that the heaven was black with clouds and wind, and there was a great rain. And Ahab rode, and went to Jezreel.

46 And the hand of the LORD was on

33. — Fill four barrels with water, &c.] He commanded the water to be poured three several times, in order to prevent all suspicion that the sacrifice could possibly be burnt by any common fire, and to make the miracle, now to be wrought, the more remarkable and convincing. Pyle.

38. Then the fire of the Lord fell.] The series of miracles here detailed was designed to recover the ten tribes from their idolatrous worship, and to preserve the knowledge of the true God in that kingdom, which would otherwise have been almost entirely extinguished under the reign of Ahab. The Apostle St. James, chap. v. 16, makes a particular reflection on the heavens being shut and opened by Elijah's prayers. Ostervald.

40. — Take the prophets of Baal;] Elijah, as an extraordinary minister of God's vengeance upon sinners, executed the sentence of death passed upon the false prophets by the Lord of life and death, as perverters of the law, and teachers of idolatry; as authors of cruelty, and inciters of Jezebel to murder the Prophets of the Lord, and as cheats and impostors, to whose execution the people concurred, their princes gave their consent, and their king (as astonished at the late stupendous miracle) could make no opposition. Stackhouse. It was the ancient and peremptory charge of God, that the authors of idolatry and seduction should die the death; no eye, no hand might spare them. It is a merciful and thankworthy severity to rid the world of the ringleaders of wickedness. Bp. Hall.

41. — Get thee up, eat and drink;] They had, it appears, been fasting and praying all the day, till the evening sacrifice was over, either for the purpose of procuring rain, or with the hope of obtaining success in their controversy. Bp. Patrick.

42. — and put his face between his knees,] He fell on his knees and bowed his head to the very ground, so that it touched his knees; in token of great humility, and of his earnest desire that God would remember His people, and send them rain. Bp. Patrick. God had said before, "I will send rain upon the earth;" yet Elijah must pray for what God did promise. The promises of the Almighty do not discharge our prayers, but suppose them. Bp. Hall.

43. — look toward the sea.] The Mediterranean sea, from which mount Carmel was not far distant. Stackhouse.

44. — like a man's hand.] Great storms in the East are wont to begin with a small cloud of this description, and it is particularly a sign of them at sea. Sir J. Chardin. In Abyssinia the morning is often clear, and the sun shines; about nine, a small cloud appears in the east, whirling violently round, as if upon an axis; when arrived near the zenith, it first abates its motion, then loses its form, and extends itself greatly, and seems to collect vapours from all opposite quarters. These clouds, having attained nearly the same height, rush against each other with great violence, and put me always in mind of Elijah's foretelling rain on mount Carmel; violent rain, attended with thunder, soon follows. Bruce.

45. — the heaven was black with clouds and wind,] This expression is illustrated by the circumstance, common in the East, of the wind taking up such quantities of sand as to darken the sky; and a squall of wind of this description usually precedes rain. Dr. Russell speaks of both as common at Aleppo, though this place is not in the immediate vicinity of any desert. Harmer.

— Ahab — went to Jezreel.] It appears from ch. xxi. 1, that he had a palace there; and he probably went there, rather than to Samaria, on account of its being nearer.

46. — the hand of the Lord was on Elijah;] Perhaps we ought to understand by this, that God stirred him up to compose and sing some hymns proper for the occasion; and, if this be the true sense, we must suppose that he ran before Ahab for the purpose of chanting such hymns, or of joining himself to other chanters. That Ahab may have had chanters of this description preceding him, is thus far rendered probable, that it is now sometimes the custom in the East for great chiefs to be preceded by a train of persons chanting moral sentences, and intermixing occasional encomiums. Harmer.

Before
CHRIST
about 906.
† Heb.
till thou come to Jezebel.

Elijah; and he girded up his loins, and ran before Ahab † to the entrance of Jezebel.

CHAP. XIX.

1 Elijah, threatened by Jezebel, fleeth to Beer-sheba. 4 In the wilderness, being weary of his life, he is comforted by an angel. 9 At Horeb God appeareth unto him, sending him to anoint Hazael, Jehu, and Elisha. 19 Elisha, taking leave of his friends, followeth Elijah.

AND Ahab told Jezebel all that Elijah had done, and withal how he had slain all the prophets with the sword.

2 Then Jezebel sent a messenger unto Elijah, saying, So let the gods do to me, and more also, if I make not thy life as the life of one of them by to morrow about this time.

3 And when he saw that, he arose, and went for his life, and came to Beer-sheba, which belongeth to Judah, and left his servant there.

4 ¶ But he himself went a day's jour-

— he girded up his loins, &c.] In this country it was the custom to wear loose and long garments; so that when they had occasion to run, they girded them up, that they might not be impeded by them. It would appear from the expression, "the hand of the Lord was on Elijah," that more than his natural strength was granted to him on this occasion. His reason for thus running before Ahab probably was, to shew that he was ready to do the king all possible honour, that he was far from being his enemy, and only desirous to make him become a worshipper of the true God. Bp. Patrick.

Chap. XIX. ver. 2. Then Jezebel sent] In this conduct of Jezebel, we see the sad condition of the wicked, who are sometimes the more hardened by those very means which should convince them of their sins. Bp. Wilson. This resolution of Jezebel's shews the extreme wickedness and hardness of her heart. Thus, when persons are once arrived at a certain degree of wickedness, they grow more and more obstinate; and that which ought to soften their hearts, and humble them, only serves to make them more insolent. Ostervald.

3. And when he saw that, he arose, &c.] If, in the last chapter, the character of Obadiah was a contrast to set off that of Elijah, in this, we may say, the Prophet's conduct is a kind of shade to his own example. How changed do we find him here! How different is the great Elijah from himself! then his faith feared not a king and all his guards; a king who had sworn his destruction: here he is frightened at the threats of a woman, and flies for his life. Here then we see the frailty of human nature in the best and greatest of men, when left to itself: and may learn, by the sense of our own weakness, to ascribe our strength wholly to God's grace and support; and at the same time not to faint or despair, when He suffers us to fall. Wogan.

— Beer-sheba, which belongeth to Judah.] As Beer-sheba was situated in the kingdom of Judah, the power of Jezebel did not extend to it, and the Prophet was safe there. Bp. Patrick.

4. — for I am not better than my fathers.] To whose age he had probably now lived. Bp. Patrick. His meaning seems to be, either that he could pretend to no virtues which should entail a longer life on him than his predecessors had enjoyed, or that he could do no more good upon the impenitent Israelites, than other Prophets before him had done. Pyle. On this occasion, Elijah's firmness and confidence in the Divine protection seem to have forsaken him; justifying the Apostle's observation, suggested proba-neily into the wilderness, and came and sat down under a juniper tree: and he requested † for himself that he might die; and said, It is enough; now, O Lord, take away my life; for I am not better than my fathers.

5 And as he lay and slept under a juniper tree, behold, then an angel touched him, and said unto him, Arise and eat.

6 And he looked, and, behold, there was a cake baken on the coals, and a cruse of water at his † head. And he did eat and drink, and laid him down again.

7 And the angel of the LORD came again the second time, and touched him, and said, Arise and eat; because the journey is too great for thee.

8 And he arose, and did eat and drink, and went in the strength of that meat forty days and forty nights unto Horeb the mount of God.

9 ¶ And he came thither unto a cave, and lodged there; and, behold, the word bly thereby, "Elias was a man subject to like passions as we are," James v. 17. Dr. Hales. What is this we hear? Elijah fainting and giving up; that heroical spirit dejected and prostrate? He who durst say to Ahab's face, "It is thou and thy father's house that troubleth Israel;" he that could raise the dead, open and shut the heavens, fetch down both fire and water, with his prayers; he that durst chide and contest with all Israel, that durst kill the four hundred and fifty Baalites with the sword—does he shrink at the frowns and threats of a woman? Does he wish to be rid of his life, because he feared to lose it? Who can expect an undaunted constancy from flesh and blood, when Elijah fails? The strongest and holiest saint upon earth is subject to some qualms of fear and infirmity. To be always and unchangeably good, belongs only to the glorious spirits in heaven. Bp. Hall.

5. — an angel touched him, &c.] To strengthen his faith and to reward his sufferings in the cause of the God of Israel, whose honour he had so zealously vindicated, Elijah was encouraged by the angel of the Lord to undertake "a great journey" to the mount of God, Horeb, where the Divine presence had been manifested to Moses, the great founder of the law, and was now, probably, promised to be manifested again to this great restorer of the law. Of the invigorating virtue communicated by the Divine touch, we have instances afterwards in the cases of the Prophet Daniel, ch. x. 10, and of the Apostle John, Rev. i. 17, to enable them to sustain the glory of the Divine presence. Moses, Elijah, and Jesus, all fasted forty days in the wilderness, perhaps to intimate the likeness of their commissions, to propose, to restore, and to perfect the law by God's last and best gift, the Gospel; of which they also were witnesses with Christ at His transfiguration, Matt. xvii. 4. Dr. Hales.

6. — baken on the coals,] The words should rather be translated, "baken upon hot stones." Bochart.

8. — unto Horeb the mount of God.] The direct distance from Beer-sheba to Horeb is not above 150 miles, which might be travelled by a person of ordinary strength in five or six days: as therefore he spent forty days on the journey, he must have travelled by a circuitous route. Dr. Hales. In the very same mount where Moses first saw God, does Elijah see Him. One and the same cave, as is very probable, was the receptacle to both. It could not but be a great confirmation of Elijah, to renew the sight of those sensible monuments of God's favour and protection to his faithful predecessor. Bp. Hall.

Before
CHRIST
about 906.
† Heb.
for his life.

† Heb.
bolster.

Before
CHRIST
about 906.

of the LORD came to him, and he said unto him, What doest thou here, Elijah?

10 And he said, I have been very jealous for the LORD God of hosts: for the children of Israel have forsaken thy covenant, thrown down thine altars, and slain thy prophets with the sword; and ^a I, even I only, am left; and they seek my life, to take it away.

^a Rom. 11. 3.

11 And he said, Go forth, and stand upon the mount before the LORD. And, behold, the LORD passed by, and a great and strong wind rent the mountains, and brake in pieces the rocks before the LORD; but the LORD was not in the wind: and after the wind an earthquake; but the LORD was not in the earthquake:

12 And after the earthquake a fire; but the LORD was not in the fire: and after the fire a still small voice.

13 And it was so, when Elijah heard it, that he wrapped his face in his mantle, and went out, and stood in the entering in of the cave. And, behold, there came a voice unto him, and said, What doest thou here, Elijah?

Before
CHRIST
about 906.

14 And he said, I have been very jealous for the LORD God of hosts: because the children of Israel have forsaken thy covenant, thrown down thine altars, and slain thy prophets with the sword; and I, even I only, am left; and they seek my life, to take it away.

15 And the LORD said unto him, Go, return on thy way to the wilderness of Damascus: and when thou comest, anoint Hazael to be king over Syria:

16 And Jehu the son of Nimshi shalt thou anoint to be king over Israel: and ^b Elisha the son of Shaphat of Abel-meholah shalt thou anoint to be prophet in thy room.

^b Luke 4. 27, called Elisha.

17 And ^c it shall come to pass, that him that escapeth the sword of Hazael shall ^c 2 Kings 9. 1, 3. Eccl¹⁰ 48. 2.

9. — What doest thou here, Elijah?] This question of God seems to carry in it a gentle reproof for his too hasty flight and fears. It was a weakness to be terrified at the threats of Jezebel, to place his safety in flight; and much more, to wish for death. Yet God indulges His servant's infirmity, and fortifies him with miraculous food for his journey: nevertheless He taxes him with a defect of faith, and with desertion of his proper station. We see herein the gentleness and mercy of the Divine nature, and the frailty and frowardness of our own. Wogan.

10. — I have been very jealous &c.] He professes that he had not wanted zeal for the service of the Lord, but had been moved with great indignation against idolatry. Bp. Patrick.

— thrown down thine altars,] When Elijah thus complains that the children of Israel had thrown down God's altars, and slain His Prophets, we must not imagine that the altar at Jerusalem, and the Prophets of Judah, were destroyed by them; for they were in a flourishing condition at that time, under Jehoshaphat, a very good king. The altars then, which Israel threw down, were such as they found in their own country, such as had been built by the patriarchs and holy men before the foundation of the temple at Jerusalem. Of these we read, that there was one at Ramah, another at Mizpeh, a third at Gilgal, a fourth at Beth-lehem, a fifth at Carmel; and there might be more in other places. On these the pious people of the ten tribes offered their sacrifices when they were not permitted to go up to Jerusalem to worship. Jeroboam had forbid them to go thither, and now Ahab deprived them of these last reserved comforts. Reading.

11. — And, behold, the Lord passed by, &c.] The first har-binger of the Divine presence, "who maketh the winds His messengers, and flaming fire His ministers," Psalm civ. 4, controlling all the elements of nature, was "a great and strong wind, which rent the mountains, and brake in pieces the rocks; but the Lord was not in the wind." This was succeeded by "an earthquake; but the Lord was not in the earthquake." And this again by "a fire; but the Lord was not in the fire." At the last came "a still small voice, (and the Lord was there;) and when Elijah heard it, (the same, probably, in which the oracle had before accosted him, and which therefore he knew,) he wrapped his face in his mantle, (in token of awe and reverence,) and went out, and stood in the entering in of the cave." Dr. Hales.

Elijah being now come to the same place where God had delivered the Law to His servant Moses, God was minded to communicate the like favour to His servant the Prophet; namely, to unvail His majesty to him, and give him some signal of His immediate presence. Various are the speculations which this appearance of the Divine Majesty has suggested to interpreters. The generality of them have looked upon this as a figure of the Gospel dispensation, which came, not in such a terrible manner, as the law did, with storms, thunders, lightnings, and earthquakes, Exod. xix. 16; but with great lenity and sweetness, wherein God speaks to us by His Son, who makes use of no other but gentle arguments and soft persuasions. But if we take this to be a symbolical admonition to Elijah, according to the circumstances he was then in, we may reasonably suppose, that herein God intended to shew him, that, though He had all the elements ready armed at His command to destroy idolaters, if He pleased to make use of them, yet He had rather attain His end by patience, and tenderness, and longsuffering, (signified by that "still small voice," wherein the Deity exhibited Himself,) and consequently, that the Prophet should hereby be incited to imitate Him, bridding that passionate zeal to which his natural complexion excited him. Stackhouse.

14. — I have been very jealous &c.] The Prophet does not give a direct answer to the demand of God: his guiltiness would not let him speak out all. He would rather say, "I have been very jealous for the Lord God," than "I was fearful of Jezebel." We are all willing to make the best of our own case. Bp. Hall.

15. — anoint Hazael to be king &c.] It may perhaps be doubted, whether Hazael was ever actually anointed king; for the word "anoint" may signify no more than "appoint" him king: the kings in Israel were appointed by the ceremony of anointing; and hence the word became applied to signify generally the preferment of great men to dignities. Neither did Elijah himself immediately anoint Jehu, but he ordered it to be done by his successor Elisha. Bp. Patrick.

Anointing in this passage perhaps signifies no more than designing or recording in the Prophet's own mind by the order of God: he is commanded in this manner to record him, in a prophetick view, as a person who, according to God's foreknowledge or decree, was to be king over Syria. Dr. Waterland.

17. — him that escapeth the sword &c.] This is not to be understood, as if the sword of Hazael should do execution before the sword of Jehu, and the sword of Jehu before that of Elisha; but only that God in His providence had appointed three persons to punish the Israelites according to their deserts. Bp. Patrick.

Before
CHRIST
about 906.
Rom. 11.
4.
Or,
I will leave.

Jehu slay: and him that escapeth from the sword of Jehu shall Elisha slay.

18 ^d Yet ^{||} I have left me seven thousand in Israel, all the knees which have not bowed unto Baal, and every mouth which hath not kissed him.

19 ¶ So he departed thence, and found Elisha the son of Shaphat, who was plowing with twelve yoke of oxen before him, and he with the twelfth: and Elijah passed by him, and cast his mantle upon him.

† Heb.
Go return.

20 And he left the oxen, and ran after Elijah, and said, Let me, I pray thee, kiss my father and my mother, and then I will follow thee. And he said unto him, † Go back again: for what have I done to thee?

21 And he returned back from him, and took a yoke of oxen, and slew them, and boiled their flesh with the instruments of the oxen, and gave unto the people, and they did eat. Then he arose, and went after Elijah, and ministered unto him.

CHAP. XX.

1 Ben-hadad, not content with Ahab's homage, besiegeth Samaria. 13 By the direction of a prophet, the Syrians are slain. 22 As the prophet forewarned Ahab, the Syrians, trusting in the valleys, come against him in Aphek. 28 By the word of the prophet, and God's judgment, the Syrians are smitten again. 31 The Syrians submitting themselves, Ahab sendeth Ben-hadad away with a covenant. 35 The prophet, under the parable of a prisoner, making Ahab to judge himself, denounceth God's judgment against him.

901.

AND Ben-hadad the king of Syria gathered all his host together: and there — shall Elisha slay.] We do not read in Scripture that Elisha actually slew any persons, except the children of Beth-el, 2 Kings ii. 24. Perhaps it is best to understand the expression in this manner: "If the vengeance which Hazael shall take of these wicked people shall not be sufficiently great, Jehu shall supply it; and if Jehu does not fulfil My purposes, Elisha shall complete them." In the event, Hazael and Jehu left nothing to be executed by the zeal of Elisha. Calmet.

18. Yet I have left me seven thousand &c.] This appears to be a correction of Elijah's mistake, in imagining that he himself was the only worshipper of the true God remaining in Israel, ver. 10: or perhaps it refers to what had just gone before, respecting the general destruction of the Israelites; for as God had a great number left (seven thousand being put indefinitely for many thousand) of pious people in Israel, who had never worshipped Baal, these would not be hurt by Hazael, or any one else. Bp. Patrick. Or it may have been the intention of God to correct, by a gentle rebuke, the assertion of Elijah, ver. 10, as shewing something of pride and censoriousness. The meaning then may be, "You imagine yourself to be the only good man, the only true servant I have in Israel; but you are mistaken; I have left to Me 7000, as faithful as yourself: you judge too rashly of others, too favourably of yourself." Wogan.

— every mouth which hath not kissed him.] It was usual with idolaters to kiss their idols among other acts of religious worship. See Hos. xiii. 2. Dr. Pococke.

19. — plowing with twelve yoke of oxen] This circumstance were thirty and two kings with him, and horses, and chariots: and he went up and besieged Samaria, and warred against it.

Before
CHRIST
901.

2 And he sent messengers to Ahab king of Israel into the city, and said unto him, Thus saith Ben-hadad,

3 Thy silver and thy gold is mine; thy wives also and thy children, even the goodliest, are mine.

4 And the king of Israel answered and said, My lord, O king, according to thy saying, I am thine, and all that I have.

5 And the messengers came again, and said, Thus speaketh Ben-hadad, saying, Although I have sent unto thee, saying, Thou shalt deliver me thy silver, and thy gold, and thy wives, and thy children;

6 Yet I will send my servants unto thee to morrow about this time, and they shall search thine house, and the houses of thy servants; and it shall be, that whatsoever is † pleasant in thine eyes, they shall put it † Heb. desirable. in their hand, and take it away.

7 Then the king of Israel called all the elders of the land, and said, Mark, I pray you, and see how this man seeketh mischief: for he sent unto me for my wives, and for my children, and for my silver, and for my gold; and † I denied him not. † Heb. I kept not back from him.

8 And all the elders and all the people said unto him, Hearken not unto him, nor consent.

9 Wherefore he said unto the messengers of Ben-hadad, Tell my lord the king, All that thou didst send for to thy servant at the first I will do: but this thing I may was so far from being any argument of Elisha's poverty, that in reality it was a token of his wealth; for it was the custom among the Hebrews, as well as among other nations of antiquity, for persons of condition in life to employ themselves in agricultural concerns; and he who could plough with twelve yoke of oxen was by no means an inconsiderable person. Stackhouse.

— cast his mantle upon him.] The mantle was a proper habit of Prophets, (2 Kings ii. 8,) and therefore Elijah's casting his mantle on Elisha seems to be the ceremony here used for his inauguration. Stackhouse. It appears by what follows that Elisha, by Divine suggestion, understood the sign.

20. — for what have I done to thee?] Have I obliged thee to follow me? It is for thee to consider what thou shouldst do, and what God requires of thee. Calmet.

Chap. XX. ver. 1. — Ben-hadad the king of Syria] Ben-hadad means, "the son of Hadad." He was probably descended from that Hadad, who escaped into Egypt when David slew all the males in Edom, chap. xi. 15, &c. The father of this king had taken several cities from the Israelites, (ver. 34; chap. xv. 20,) and perhaps had made them tributaries to the Syrians. Bp. Patrick.

7. — Mark, I pray you, and see] On this occasion, Ahab appears to have displayed some sparks of publick virtue; for when Ben-hadad required all that he had at his disposal, that is, all his private goods, he consented to it; but when all the people and the publick good were concerned, he would do nothing without their consent. Bp. Patrick.

^{Before CHRIST 901.} not do. And the messengers departed, and brought him word again.

10 And Ben-hadad sent unto him, and said, The gods do so unto me, and more also, if the dust of Samaria shall suffice for handfuls for all the people that † follow me.

† Heb. are at my feet.

11 And the king of Israel answered and said, Tell him, Let not him that girdeth on his harness boast himself as he that putteth it off.

† Heb. sword.
|| Or, tents.
|| Or, Place the engines:
And they placed engines.
† Heb. approached.

12 And it came to pass, when Ben-hadad heard this † message, as he was drinking, he and the kings in the || pavilions, that he said unto his servants, || Set yourselves in array. And they set themselves in array against the city.

13 ¶ And, behold, there † came a prophet unto Ahab king of Israel, saying, Thus saith the LORD, Hast thou seen all this great multitude? behold, I will deliver it into thine hand this day; and thou shalt know that I am the LORD.

|| Or, servants.
† Heb. bind, or, tie.

14 And Ahab said, By whom? And he said, Thus saith the LORD, Even by the || young men of the princes of the provinces. Then he said, Who shall † order the battle? And he answered, Thou.

15 Then he numbered the young men of the princes of the provinces, and they were two hundred and thirty two: and after them he numbered all the people, even all the children of Israel, being seven thousand.

16 And they went out at noon. But Ben-hadad was drinking himself drunk in the pavilions, he and the kings, the thirty and two kings that helped him.

17 And the young men of the princes of the provinces went out first; and Ben-hadad sent out, and they told him, saying, There are men come out of Samaria.

^{Before CHRIST 901.}

18 And he said, Whether they be come out for peace, take them alive; or whether they be come out for war, take them alive.

19 So these young men of the princes of the provinces came out of the city, and the army which followed them.

20 And they slew every one his man: and the Syrians fled; and Israel pursued them: and Ben-hadad the king of Syria escaped on an horse with the horsemen.

21 And the king of Israel went out, and smote the horses and chariots, and slew the Syrians with a great slaughter.

22 ¶ And the prophet came to the king of Israel, and said unto him, Go, strengthen thyself, and mark, and see what thou doest: for at the return of the year the king of Syria will come up against thee.

23 And the servants of the king of Syria said unto him, Their gods are gods of the hills; therefore they were stronger than we; but let us fight against them in the plain, and surely we shall be stronger than they.

24 And do this thing, Take the kings away, every man out of his place, and put captains in their rooms:

25 And number thee an army, like the army † that thou hast lost, horse for horse, and chariot for chariot: and we will fight against them in the plain, and surely we shall be stronger than they. And he hearkened unto their voice, and did so.

† Heb. that was fallen.

26 And it came to pass at the return of the year, that Ben-hadad numbered the

10. — if the dust of Samaria shall suffice &c.] He wishes he may perish if he did not bring such an army against the king of Israel, that, if every soldier were to take a handful of the dust of the land, the whole dust of the land would not be sufficient. Bp. Patrick.

11. — Let not him that girdeth &c.] The meaning is, Let not Ben-hadad boast of a victory before he has obtained it. Dr. Wells.

13. — there came a prophet unto Ahab] We are no where informed in Scripture who the Prophet was, that, upon this message, and another afterwards, was sent to Ahab. It is singular that, during this whole war with Ben-hadad, neither Elijah nor Elisha, the two principal Prophets of Israel, should appear, though other Prophets (of whom there appear to have been a considerable number) make no scruple of executing their office. It is possible that this war began before Jezebel's persecution of the Prophets; or that this impious queen abated her persecution, and let them have some respite, when she supposed she had exterminated Elijah. Calmet.

14. — the young men of the princes of the provinces.] These were to be the instruments in attaining this victory. The Hebrew word has some ambiguity in it, and may signify either the sons or the servants of the princes or governors of the provinces, either young noblemen or their fathers' servants, who had been brought up delicately, and quite unaccustomed to war. By these young men, unaccustomed to war, and not by old experienced officers, the battle was to be obtained, that it might appear how entirely the victory was owing to God's gracious and powerful providence, and not to the valour or fitness of the instruments. Stackhouse.

15. — all the children of Israel,] That is, all that were in that place, and fit for war; for it is impossible to suppose that the whole force of the Israelites amounted to no more than 7000 men. Pyle.

23. — Their gods are gods of the hills;] They vainly and superstitiously imagined, that the Hebrew country being mountainous, and their towns built generally upon hills, the Israelites might be under the special protection of such deities as were guardians of those places; especially considering that their places of worship were usually erected on such high grounds, and that, as they may have heard, their law was originally delivered from a mountain. Accordingly they determined to fight no more on the hills, but on the open plain, especially perhaps considering that the Syrian horse and chariots would thus have greater advantage. Pyle.

Before
CHRIST
900.

† Heb. to the war with Israel.
| Or, were victualled.

Syrians, and went up to Aphek, † to fight against Israel.

27 And the children of Israel were numbered, and ‖ were all present, and went against them: and the children of Israel pitched before them like two little flocks of kids; but the Syrians filled the country.

28 ¶ And there came a man of God, and spake unto the king of Israel, and said, Thus saith the Lord, Because the Syrians have said, The Lord is God of the hills, but he is not God of the valleys, therefore will I deliver all this great multitude into thine hand, and ye shall know that I am the Lord.

29 And they pitched one over against the other seven days. And so it was, that in the seventh day the battle was joined: and the children of Israel slew of the Syrians an hundred thousand footmen in one day.

‡ Or,
from chamber to chamber.
† Heb.
in a chamber within a chamber.

30 But the rest fled to Aphek, into the city; and there a wall fell upon twenty and seven thousand of the men that were left. And Ben-hadad fled, and came into the city, ‖ † into an inner chamber.

31 ¶ And his servants said unto him,

26. — to Aphek,] A city in the tribe of Asher, not far from the plains of Galilee, where Ben-hadad intended to fight. Bp. Patrick.

28. — The Lord is God of the hills, — not God of the valleys,] How strikingly is here displayed the vanity of idolatry! The Syrians believed in gods of the hills, not of the valleys; that is, in beings only of a limited power and presence, in reality of no power or dominion at all, mere fictions and imaginations of men; lies and lying vanities, as Scripture frequently styles them. But the true God, who made heaven and earth, and all things that are therein, does by His presence and power inspect and govern all things, in the whole heavens, and in the whole earth. Dr. S. Clarke.

29. — and the children of Israel slew of the Syrians] We are here to observe, that though Ahab was an idolatrous and wicked king, yet God granted to him twice the victory over the Syrians. This He probably did to punish the pride of Ben-hadad and the Syrians, because they had unjustly attacked him, and, above all, because they had blasphemed the God of Israel. He did it, likewise, to give Ahab proofs of His goodness and longsuffering, and to teach him and all the people how much they were to blame for continuing in idolatry, and for not worshipping the Lord alone, who thus displayed His power in their favour. This history shews that God confounds the proud, and punishes those who fall on others unjustly; and that He gives marks of His bounty even to the greatest sinners, to invite them to repentance. Oosterveld.

30. — a wall fell] The wall of the city, under which they probably lay, ready to defend it, fell down. Bp. Patrick. The expression means, not that the wall fell on every individual, but on the main body of the 27,000, killing some and maiming others. Stackhouse. It was probably a large and long wall, with towers in it, into which they fled. Dr. Wall.

31. — put sackcloth on our loins,] This was the habit and guise of suppliants in those countries when they petitioned for mercy. The sackcloth on their loins was a token of great sorrow for what they had done; and the halters about their necks, a token of their willingness to submit to any punishment Ahab might think fit to inflict upon them. Bp. Patrick.

— and ropes upon our heads,] The approaching persons with a

Behold now, we have heard that the kings of the house of Israel are merciful kings: let us, I pray thee, put sackcloth on our loins, and ropes upon our heads, and go out to the king of Israel: peradventure he will save thy life.

32 So they girded sackcloth on their loins, and put ropes on their heads, and came to the king of Israel, and said, Thy servant Ben-hadad saith, I pray thee, let me live. And he said, Is he yet alive? he is my brother.

33 Now the men did diligently observe whether any thing would come from him, and did hastily catch it: and they said, Thy brother Ben-hadad. Then he said, Go ye, bring him. Then Ben-hadad came forth to him; and he caused him to come up into the chariot.

34 And Ben-hadad said unto him, The cities, which my father took from thy father, I will restore; and thou shalt make streets for thee in Damascus, as my father made in Samaria. Then said Ahab, I will send thee away with this covenant. So he made a covenant with him, and sent him away.

Before
CHRIST
900.

sword hanging about the neck is still customary in the East, as a token of humility and submission. Among other instances, Thevenot mentions, that, when Bagdat was besieged by the Turks in 1638, the governour of the city went to the grand vizier with a scarf about his neck, and his sword wreathed in it, as a mark of submission, begging pardon and mercy. If this custom of later times may be brought in explanation of those in ancient times, we may suppose that the ropes, which Ben-hadad's servants put on their heads, were those from which they suspended their swords. Harmer.

34. — thou shalt make streets for thee in Damascus,] The learned are by no means agreed what we are to understand by "streets" in this passage. Some suppose that courts of judicature are meant, where Ahab was to maintain a jurisdiction over Ben-hadad's subjects. Others think that they were public market-places, where commodities were sold, and the toll of them paid to Ahab; but the most general opinion is, that they were citadels or fortifications, to be a bridle or restraint upon this chief city of the Syrians, that they might make no new irruptions into the land of Israel. This was a great privilege, and such that Ben-hadad, when he found himself set at liberty, refused to comply with it. Stackhouse. Or, by the expression of "making streets" in Damascus, we may understand, that Ben-hadad proposed to grant in that city a quarter for Ahab's subjects to live in, where he should enjoy the same jurisdiction as he did over the rest of the kingdom. Ahab's father, as is here expressed, had given to the Syrians such a jurisdiction in Samaria; and it was an expression of very abject adulation in Ben-hadad, to propose to give Ahab a like power in Damascus. It appears from the relation of William of Tyre, that it was, in the time of the Crusades, the custom to assign churches, and to give streets, in the towns and cities of the Holy Land, to foreign nations, together with great liberties and jurisdictions in those streets. Thus he tells us, that the Genoese had a street in Accon, or St. John d'Acre, together with a full jurisdiction in it; the Venetians also had a street in the same city, where, among other privileges, they had the power of judging causes for themselves, together with as complete a jurisdiction over all that dwelt in their street, as the king of Jerusalem had over the rest. Harmer.

Before
CHRIST
900.

35 ¶ And a certain man of the sons of the prophets said unto his neighbour in the word of the LORD, Smite me, I pray thee. And the man refused to smite him.

36 Then said he unto him, Because thou hast not obeyed the voice of the LORD, behold, as soon as thou art departed from me, a lion shall slay thee. And as soon as he was departed from him, a lion found him, and slew him.

† Heb.
smiting and wounding.

37 Then he found another man, and said, Smite me, I pray thee. And the man smote him, † so that in smiting he wounded him.

38 So the prophet departed, and waited for the king by the way, and disguised himself with ashes upon his face.

† Heb.
weigh.

39 And as the king passed by, he cried unto the king: and he said, Thy servant went out into the midst of the battle; and, behold, a man turned aside, and brought a man unto me, and said, Keep this man: if by any means he be missing, then shall thy life be for his life, or else thou shalt † pay a talent of silver.

40 And as thy servant was busy here

35. — said unto his neighbour] Unto his fellow, that is, to one of his fellow Prophets; for indeed it is improbable that he should transact this with a common man, and not rather with one who was acquainted with the manner and usage of Prophets in convincing people that he had a commission from God. Pyle.

— Smite me, I pray thee.] His intention was, that, from the circumstance of being wounded, he might obtain the freer access to Ahab, as a soldier well deserving, and that he might the better feign his story; for, in such a matter, Ahab was not to be dealt with in plain and direct words. Bp. Patrick. The Prophet, knowing the evil and desperate temper of the king against any that brought evil tidings, would not do it in a downright manner, but by such a method as would gain the greater attention from him, so as to make a deeper impression. Pyle.

36. — a lion — slew him.] If this punishment should seem too severe, it should be recollected, that the Prophet had addressed himself, not to an ordinary man, but to a Prophet bred in the same school with himself, and that he required him to smite "by the word of the Lord," that is, not by his own private motion, but because God enjoined it. Bp. Patrick.

38. — disguised himself with ashes] Besprinkled himself with ashes in the manner of a criminal and suppliant. Pyle. The Hebrews understand that he covered his face with a handkerchief or fillet, to shew that he was wounded. Bp. Patrick.

39. — he cried unto the king: and he said, &c.] The story which he feigns is, that, being a soldier in the late battle, a certain officer had delivered into his custody a prisoner of note taken from the enemy, with a strict charge to hold him safe, upon pain of death, and a severe fine. But 1 being eager, says he, in the glorious pursuit of the vanquished foe, my prisoner made his escape, and I am likely to undergo the last extremity for my misfortune. The king told him, in answer, it was no more than he deserved, from his breach of orders. Pyle.

42. — therefore thy life shall go for his &c.] If it should be asked, wherein lay Ahab's great offence, for which God threatens to punish him so severely? the answer is, That it consisted in suffering so horrid a blasphemer, as Ben-hadad was, to go unpunished, which was contrary to an express law, Lev. xxiv. 16. If it should be urged, that this was nothing to Ben-hadad, since the law and there, † he was gone. And the king of Israel said unto him, So shall thy judgment be; thyself hast decided it.

Before
CHRIST
900.

† Heb.
he was not.

41 And he hasted, and took the ashes away from his face; and the king of Israel discerned him that he was of the prophets.

42 And he said unto him, Thus saith the LORD, ¹ Because thou hast let go out of thy hand a man whom I appointed to utter destruction, therefore thy life shall go for his life, and thy people for his people.

² Chap. 22.
38.

43 And the king of Israel went to his house heavy and displeased, and came to Samaria.

CHAP. XXI.

1 Ahab being denied Naboth's vineyard is grieved. 5 Jezabel writing letters against Naboth, he is condemned of blasphemy. 15 Ahab taketh possession of the vineyard. 17 Elijah denounceth judgments against Ahab and Jezabel. 25 Wicked Ahab repenting, God deferreth the judgment.

AND it came to pass after these things, that Naboth the Jezreelite had a vineyard, which was in Jezreel, hard by the palace of Ahab king of Samaria.

concerned the Israelites only; the reply is, That the law extended not to those only that were born in the land, but (as is there expressed) to strangers likewise, that were amongst them and in their power, as Ben-hadad certainly was. God had delivered him into Ahab's hands for his blasphemy, as He had promised, 1 Kings xx. 28, and therefore this act of Providence, compared with the law, did plainly intimate, that he was appointed by God for destruction: but so far was Ahab from punishing him as he deserved, that he treats him like a friend and a brother, dismisses him upon easy terms, and takes his bare word for the performance, without the least care for the reparation of God's honour. Stackhouse.

Chap. XXI. ver. 1. And it came to pass after these things,] After the signal and repeated instances of God's goodness to Ahab, so far was he from true contentment; so far from enjoying the abundance he possessed; that here we find this mighty monarch turn slave to his impotent desires, and fall a victim to the most abject vice of covetousness. He could not be satisfied with all the plenty that royal wealth could bestow, or conquest acquire, while one poor spot of ground, his neighbour's vineyard, was looked upon with a longing eye, as a necessary addition and improvement to his estate. What avails it then to increase our store, if concupiscence also increase? This insatiable passion, we see, will make the greatest princes poor; so that, not he who has much, but he who covets little, is the true rich man. A competency therefore is the only wealth; and the best way to obtain it, is rather to contract our desires, than to enlarge our estates. Wogan.

— hard by the palace of Ahab] We must suppose, that, besides the palace in Samaria, Ahab had another palace at Jezreel; or rather, as may be collected from 2 Kings ix. 21, that the palace here spoken of was the residence of queen Jezebel, and that it was for her pleasure, and at her instigation, that Ahab was so concerned to procure this vineyard. Pyle. The account of Ahab's coveting Naboth's vineyard is immediately set after his treatment of Ben-hadad, to shew his extremely great wickedness in sparing him, (as Saul did Agag, king of the Amalekites,) and killing Naboth, that he might get possession of his vineyard: for this was an high aggravation of his crime, that he basely murdered a just Israelite, and let an impious enemy escape. Bp. Patrick.

Before
CHRIST
899.

† Heb. be good in thine eyes.

2 And Ahab spake unto Naboth, saying, Give me thy vineyard, that I may have it for a garden of herbs, because it is near unto my house: and I will give thee for it a better vineyard than it; or, if it † seem good to thee, I will give thee the worth of it in money.

3 And Naboth said to Ahab, The Lord forbid it me, that I should give the inheritance of my fathers unto thee.

4 And Ahab came into his house heavy and displeased because of the word which Naboth the Jezreelite had spoken to him: for he had said, I will not give thee the inheritance of my fathers. And he laid him down upon his bed, and turned away his face, and would eat no bread.

5 ¶ But Jezebel his wife came to him, and said unto him, Why is thy spirit so sad, that thou eatest no bread?

3. — The Lord forbid it me,] As it is natural to all men to value the ancient possessions that have been in their family, so the law of Moses prohibited the alienation of lands from one tribe or family to another, unless a man was reduced to poverty; in which case he might sell it till the jubilee; but then it was to return to him. See Levit. xxv. 15, 25, 28. Now as Naboth was in no need, so he considered that if he should, out of respect to the king, and merely to do him a pleasure, part with his vineyard, he should never get it out of his hands at the jubilee, being made part of the ground belonging to the royal palace. Thus, by such an act, he would both offend against the law, and injure his posterity, which, being an upright and religious man, he was most unwilling to do. Bp. Patrick.

This consideration throws light on the conduct of Ahab in the first instance. As king of Israel, especially obliged and solemnly pledged to observe and maintain the laws, it was his duty to secure the possession of property in its legitimate course, instead of endeavouring to divert it into improper channels by alienating it from one family into another. In obedience to the law, Naboth refused to sell the inheritance of his fathers. If he was praiseworthy for his refusal, Ahab was culpable for his request: for that which the subject could not conscientiously concede, the sovereign could not conscientiously require. Mant.

4. — came into his house heavy and displeased] How precarious and fleeting is the happiness of the greatest and wealthiest of men, if founded only on this world's enjoyments! And yet how real and sincere is the pain which a disappointment brings! Here a mighty king counts himself miserable, because he cannot have his garden enlarged: this one cross blasts all his blessings. Wogan.

The conduct of Ahab upon this occasion may warn us against the danger of brooding over our disappointment, when we fail of attaining the object of our wishes; and may prompt us to turn our eyes aside to those instances of mercy, which a bountiful Providence has been pleased to exert in our behalf. It was but a short time after a wonderful and special display of power, which God had manifested in delivering Ahab and his people from an invading enemy, and crowning them with a complete victory, that the Israelitish monarch conceived the wish of possessing the vineyard of Naboth. On the disappointment of his hope, instead of engaging in the active concerns of his kingdom, or enjoying the great and manifold blessings with which it had pleased the Almighty to visit him, he “came into his house heavy and displeased, and he laid him down upon his bed, and turned away his face, and would eat no bread.” The tempter profited by the occasion, and soon scattered his tares into a heart so well prepared to receive them, and to make them grow. Let us beware not to 899.

Before
CHRIST

6 And he said unto her, Because I spake unto Naboth the Jezreelite, and said unto him, Give me thy vineyard for money; or else, if it please thee, I will give thee another vineyard for it: and he answered, I will not give thee my vineyard.

7 And Jezebel his wife said unto him, Dost thou now govern the kingdom of Israel? arise, and eat bread, and let thine heart be merry: I will give thee the vineyard of Naboth the Jezreelite.

8 So she wrote letters in Ahab's name, and sealed them with his seal, and sent the letters unto the elders and to the nobles that were in his city, dwelling with Naboth.

9 And she wrote in the letters, saying, Proclaim a fast, and set Naboth † on high among the people:

† Heb.
in the top of the people.

10 And set two men, sons of Belial, be-brood in disappointment over a desire which we find a difficulty in gratifying, or which we know ought not to be gratified. Let our thoughts be occupied on useful, or at least harmless, subjects; let them be turned to the business of our calling; let them be lifted up in thankfulness to the Giver of all good for the blessings which He permits us innocently to enjoy, and in devout prayer for the aid of His grace, to enable us to resist temptation, and to deliver us from evil. Let us “draw nigh to God, and He will draw nigh to us:” let us “resist the devil, and he will flee from us,” James iv. 7, 8. Mant.

6. And he said unto her, Because I spake &c.] How tenacious is the heart of a purpose which it has once formed for its gratification! How totally will it suffer the disappointment of its wishes, even in a case comparatively insignificant, to prison all the enjoyment it might derive from other sources, however ample and numerous they may be! What was the vineyard of Naboth the Jezreelite, to Ahab king of Samaria? What was it in comparison of the ten tribes of Israel, over which he bore sway? What was it in comparison of the hosts of Syria, over whom he had recently triumphed? Established in his dominion at home, triumphing over his enemies abroad, encircled with every enjoyment which empire and victory can bestow, Ahab languishes for “a garden of herbs!” Mant.

7. — Dost thou now govern — Israel?] Is it for thee, that art the king of Israel, to take a denial of so mean a suit, and to be so affected with the rejection? Bp. Hall.

9. — Proclaim a fast,] She commands them to proclaim a fast, as if some great crime had been committed, or some grievous calamity had befallen them. By this means she intimated to the Jezreelites that they had some accursed thing among them, which was ready to draw down the Divine vengeance, and that therefore it was their business to purge themselves effectually from those sins, which provoked the anger of God. As therefore these days of fasting were employed in punishing offences, administering justice, and imploring God's pardon, there was afforded to the elders of the city an occasion of convening an assembly, and to the false witnesses an opportunity of accusing Naboth before it. Bp. Patrick, Le Clerc.

— set Naboth on high] The meaning of this expression is, either that Naboth should have one of the most honourable places in this assembly, being a person of an illustrious house, that so it might be thought they condemned him impartially, and without any disrespect to his person and character; or else, that he should be set in a remarkable place, to prevent his escape, if he should get intelligence of the design; or, lastly, that he should stand in the place peculiar to criminal or accused persons, where all might see him, and hear the evidence given against him. Pyle.

Before
CHRIST
899.

fore him, to bear witness against him, saying, Thou didst blaspheme God and the king. And then carry him out, and stone him, that he may die.

11 And the men of his city, even the elders and the nobles who were the inhabitants in his city, did as Jezebel had sent unto them, and as it was written in the letters which she had sent unto them.

12 They proclaimed a fast, and set Naboth on high among the people.

13 And there came in two men, children of Belial, and sat before him: and the men of Belial witnessed against him, even against Naboth, in the presence of the people, saying, Naboth did blaspheme God and the king. Then they carried him forth out of the city, and stoned him with stones, that he died.

899.

14 Then they sent to Jezebel, saying, Naboth is stoned, and is dead.

15 ¶ And it came to pass, when Jezebel heard that Naboth was stoned, and was dead, that Jezebel said to Ahab, Arise, take possession of the vineyard of Naboth the Jezreelite, which he refused to give thee for money: for Naboth is not alive, but dead.

10. — Thou didst blaspheme God and the king.] By the law of Moses it was death to blaspheme God, Levit. xxiv. 16; and by custom it was death to revile the king, Exod. xxii. 28. Thus, in order to make the matter sure, the witnesses were instructed to accuse Naboth of both these crimes, that the people might be the better satisfied to see him stoned. There was this difference, also, between the two crimes—that, when a man was convicted of blasphemy, his goods came to his heirs; but, when a man was executed for treason, his estate was forfeited. Thus the latter accusation greatly facilitated the plan of enabling Ahab to get possession of the vineyard. Bp. Patrick.

— then carry him out,] Not merely out of the assembly, but out of the gate of the city; by so doing, they meant to testify that they took away the evil from the midst of them. Bp. Patrick.

11. And the men of his city — did as Jezebel had sent unto them,] It seems not a little strange that Jezebel could have the assurance to propose to a whole body of magistrates so flagrant an iniquity, so barbarous a design. But it appears much more surprising, that a grave senate, even all the elders and nobles of a city, should so implicitly comply with her bloody commands, and execute a commission so notoriously cruel and unjust. But Jezebel knew her men, and whom she wrote to. Evil princes never want wicked instruments to execute their will. As their example spreads a general degeneracy of manners among the people, so it is their policy to fill all places of trust and power with none but men of profligate and corrupt principles, whose conscience can bend to their interest, and whose obedience will conform to the most enormous crimes. Wogan.

The manner of compassing Naboth's destruction was detestable. It was by the corruption of a whole court of judicature, and by subornation of witnesses. And so all the magistrates of Jezreel, at the instigation of Ahab's wife, and to serve her wicked purposes, were drawn into the horrible guilt of wilful perjury and deliberate murder. It was one dismal circumstance in this tragedy, that it was acted under the mask of religion, and with high pretences to vindicate the honour of God. It was introduced 899.

Before
CHRIST

16 And it came to pass, when Ahab heard that Naboth was dead, that Ahab rose up to go down to the vineyard of Naboth the Jezreelite, to take possession of it.

17 ¶ And the word of the LORD came to Elijah the Tishbite, saying,

18 Arise, go down to meet Ahab king of Israel, which is in Samaria: behold, he is in the vineyard of Naboth, whither he is gone down to possess it.

19 And thou shalt speak unto him, saying, Thus saith the LORD, Hast thou killed, and also taken possession? And thou shalt speak unto him, saying, Thus saith the LORD, In the place where dogs licked the blood of Naboth shall dogs lick thy blood, even thine.

20 And Ahab said to Elijah, Hast thou found me, O mine enemy? And he answered, I have found thee: because thou hast sold thyself to work evil in the sight of the LORD.

21 Behold, ^a I will bring evil upon thee, and will take away thy posterity, and will cut off from Ahab ^b him that pisseth against the wall, and ^c him that is shut up and left in Israel,

^a Chap. 14. 10.
^b 2 Kings 9. 8.
^c 1 Sam. 25. 22.
^c Chap. 14. 10.

with a fast, to implore the Divine assistance and direction in the great cause they were entering upon; and the first article in Naboth's accusation was, that he had blasphemed the great Majesty of Heaven. What a mystery of iniquity is the heart of man, where such black villainies are hatched and wrapt up, and transacted under the specious colours of zeal and devotion! Hypocrisy is odious in the lowest of the human race, but much more in a king, who punishes with death the counterfeiting of his seal, and abusing of his image and superscription to any fraudulent purpose, as being highly dishonourable to him; and yet is not ashamed to counterfeit the great seal of Heaven, and profane the most sacred things of God, to give authority to his infernal machinations. Reading.

19. — In the place where dogs licked &c.] The words should rather be translated, "As the dogs licked," or, "In like manner as the dogs licked." He declares the cause of the judgment upon Ahab, but does not assign the place; for it was in Samaria that the dogs licked the blood of Ahab, chap. xxii. 38. Bp. Patrick. Or, if the sense in our translation be retained, by Ahab's blood must be understood the blood of his wife, children, and kindred, for Jezebel and her son Jehoram, 2 Kings ix. 25, were both slain in Jezreel. Pyle.

20. — Hast thou found me, O mine enemy?] While Ahab is rejoicing in the success of his plot, Elijah comes, sent from God, with an errand of vengeance. Methinks I see how the king's countenance changed, with what aghast eyes and pale cheeks he looked upon that unwelcome Prophet. Little pleasure took he in his prospect, while it was clogged with such a guest; yet his tongue begins first, "Hast thou found me, O mine enemy?" Great is the power of conscience. Ahab's continuing idolatry, now seconded by blood, bids him look for nothing but frowns from Heaven. A guilty heart can never be at peace. If Ahab had not known how ill he had deserved of God, he would never have saluted God's Prophet by the name of an enemy. He would never have been troubled at being found by Elijah, if his own breast had not found him out for an enemy to God. Bp. Hall.

Before
CHRIST
K. 19.

* Chap. 15.

20

* Chap. 16.

3

1 2 Kings

9. 36.

Or, duch.

|| wall of Jezreel.

24

Him that dieth of Ahab in the city the dogs shall eat; and him that dieth in the field shall the fowls of the air eat.

25 ¶

But there was none like unto Ahab, which did sell himself to work wickedness in the sight of the Lord, whom Jezebel his wife || stirred up.

26

And he did very abominably in following idols, according to all things as did the Amorites, whom the Lord cast out before the children of Israel.

27

And it came to pass, when Ahab heard those words, that he rent his clothes, and put sackcloth upon his flesh, and fasted, and lay in sackcloth, and went softly.

28

And the word of the Lord came to Elijah the Tishbite, saying,

29

Seest thou how Ahab humbleth himself before me? because he humbleth himself before me, I will not bring the evil in his days: but in his son's days will I bring the evil upon his house.

30

And the word of the Lord came to Elijah the Tishbite, saying,

31

Seest thou how Ahab humbleth himself before me? because he humbleth himself before me, I will not bring the evil in his days: but in his son's days will I bring the evil upon his house.

32

And the word of the Lord came to Elijah the Tishbite, saying,

33

Seest thou how Ahab humbleth himself before me? because he humbleth himself before me, I will not bring the evil in his days: but in his son's days will I bring the evil upon his house.

34

And the word of the Lord came to Elijah the Tishbite, saying,

35

Seest thou how Ahab humbleth himself before me? because he humbleth himself before me, I will not bring the evil in his days: but in his son's days will I bring the evil upon his house.

36

And the word of the Lord came to Elijah the Tishbite, saying,

37

Seest thou how Ahab humbleth himself before me? because he humbleth himself before me, I will not bring the evil in his days: but in his son's days will I bring the evil upon his house.

22 And will make thine house like the house of ^a Jeroboam the son of Nebat, and like the house of ^c Baasha the son of Ahijah, for the provocation wherewith thou hast provoked me to anger, and made Israel to sin.

23 And ^d of Jezebel also spake the Lord, saying, The dogs shall eat Jezebel by the || wall of Jezreel.

24 Him that dieth of Ahab in the city the dogs shall eat; and him that dieth in the field shall the fowls of the air eat.

25 ¶ But there was none like unto Ahab, which did sell himself to work wickedness in the sight of the Lord, whom Jezebel his wife || stirred up.

26 And he did very abominably in following idols, according to all things as did the Amorites, whom the Lord cast out before the children of Israel.

27 And it came to pass, when Ahab heard those words, that he rent his clothes,

25. But there was none like unto Ahab.] The particle here rendered "but," should be rendered perhaps "indeed," or "because;" and instead of "there was," it may be best translated, "there is none like unto Ahab;" so that these two verses may give a statement of the cause of the judgments denounced against Ahab. Pyle.

— whom Jezebel his wife stirred up.] The example of Ahab may be a caution to us whom we admit to be our companions, especially whom we take to be the partner of our counsels, the friend of our inmost heart. It is recorded as a signal instance of depravity in his nefarious career, that he united himself by the closest and tenderest bond to an idolatrous and unprincipled woman, chap. xvi. 31. The consequence was deplorable, but natural. His own inclination to evil received a fresh impulse from hers: corrupt himself, he became more and more hardened by the accession of her corrupt passions: instigated by her, in the particular example that has now been passing before our eyes, as well as in the general tenour of his life, he proved himself an apostate from God, and, by natural consequence, (for religion is the only sure foundation of morality,) the enemy of man; and he has left behind him a fatal memorial of the powerful influence of vice on social intercourse, in the testimony of the sacred historian, that "there was none like unto Ahab, which did sell himself to work wickedness in the sight of the Lord, whom Jezebel his wife stirred up." Mant.

27. — and went softly.] All the expressions in this verse are expressions of great sorrow and heaviness. These last words are commonly understood to mean, that he went about with a slow pace, which shewed that he was reduced to great weakness and feebleness of body by fasting and grief; and that his heart sunk within him. Ep. Patrick.

29. — because he humbleth himself &c.] Though this repentance of Ahab was far from being sincere, yet God was pleased so far to regard it, as to respite the worst degrees of threatening pronounced, and not to execute it fully, till the reign of his son Joram, as will appear, 2 Kings ix. and x. Pyle. Or perhaps Ahab's repentance at this time was true though imperfect, and his sorrow sincere, though of no long continuance; and that, had he persisted in the good resolutions he had then taken up, God would have remitted to him, not only the temporal, but the eternal punishment likewise, that was due to his sin. In the mean time, this instance of the Divine lenity is left upon record to encourage the first essays of our repentance, and to give us the assurance, that our good and gracious God, who keepeth mercy for thousands, and put sackcloth upon his flesh, and fasted, and lay in sackcloth, and went softly. Before

CHRIST
899.

28 And the word of the Lord came to Elijah the Tishbite, saying,

29 Seest thou how Ahab humbleth himself before me? because he humbleth himself before me, I will not bring the evil in his days: but in his son's days will I bring the evil upon his house.

CHAP. XXII.

1 Ahab, seduced by false prophets, according to the word of Micaiah, is slain at Ramoth-gilcad. 37 The dogs lick up his blood, and Ahaziah succeedeth him. 41 Jehoshaphat's good reign. 45 His acts. 50 Jehoram succeedeth him. 51 Ahaziah's evil reign.

AND they continued three years without war between Syria and Israel.

2 And it came to pass in the third year, that ^a Jehoshaphat the king of Judah came down to the king of Israel. 897.
* 2 Chron.
18. 1, &c.

and forgiveth iniquity, transgression, and sin, will not break the bruised reed, nor quench the smoking flax, but bring forth judgment unto truth. Sackhouse.

In the person of Ahab we see a most enormous criminal; yet a pardon is obtained on a shew of repentance. In God's dealings with him, we have therefore an instance of the wise measures wherewith His mercy and His justice are dispensed. Notwithstanding the heinousness of Ahab's faults, he finds mercy, upon his humiliation and repentance. Now as the sole motive of his penitence and humiliation was the dread of those judgments he had been threatened with, rather than any sorrow for, or hatred of, his sins; his pardon for that reason is only temporal, and merely a reprieve for the term of his own life. "I will not bring the evil in his days: but in his son's days will I bring the evil upon his house." Had his repentance been perfect and sincere, it would have prevailed to reverse the whole sentence, as well as to respite his doom. The very reprieve is, indeed, an encouragement to the greatest sinners to repent. But, at the same time, such a mercy ought to appear terrible to those who stop short in their course of penitence, and suffer it not to have a perfect work. Wogan.

God, seeing the humiliation of Ahab, told him, he would not bring the evil upon his house in his days. This is a very remarkable circumstance, an example of the infinite goodness of God towards the greatest sinners, when they humble themselves before Him. Here let us take notice, that, if the repentance of Ahab appeased the Lord for a time, because there was something of sincerity in it, though it was not of long continuance; much more, may we imagine, will those who repent with all their heart, and persevere in their repentance, infallibly obtain from the Divine mercy the pardon of their sins. Ostervald.

Although Ahab, by the wicked counsels of Jezebel his wife, had committed shameful murder, and against all right disinherited and dispossessed for ever Naboth's family of their vineyard; yet, upon his humble submission in heart unto God, which he declared outwardly by putting on of sackcloth and by fasting, God changed his sentence, so that the punishment which He had determined fell not on Ahab's house in his time, but was deferred unto the days of Joram his son. Here we may see of what force our outward fast is, when it is accompanied with the inward fast of the mind, that is, a sorrowfulness of heart, detesting and bewailing our sinful doings. Church Homilies.

Chap. XXII. ver. 2. — came down to the king of Israel.] There

Before
CHRIST
897.

† Heb. silent from taking it.

3 And the king of Israel said unto his servants, Know ye that Ramoth in Gilead is our's, and we be † still, and take it not out of the hand of the king of Syria?

4 And he said unto Jehoshaphat, Wilt thou go with me to battle to Ramoth-gilead? And Jehoshaphat said to the king of Israel, ^b I am as thou art, my people as thy people, my horses as thy horses.

5 And Jehoshaphat said unto the king of Israel, Enquire, I pray thee, at the word of the LORD to day.

6 Then the king of Israel gathered the prophets together, about four hundred men, and said unto them, Shall I go against Ramoth-gilead to battle, or shall I forbear? And they said, Go up; for the LORD shall deliver it into the hand of the king.

7 And Jehoshaphat said, Is there not here a prophet of the LORD besides, that we might enquire of him?

8 And the king of Israel said unto Jehoshaphat, There is yet one man, Micaiah the son of Imlah, by whom we may enquire of the LORD: but I hate him; for he doth not prophesy good concerning me, but evil. And Jehoshaphat said, Let not the king say so.

9 Then the king of Israel called an || officer, and said, Hasten hither Micaiah the son of Imlah.

|| Or,
eunuch.

was an affinity between Jehoshaphat and Ahab, 2 Chron. xviii. 1, Jehoshaphat's son having married Ahab's daughter, 2 Kings viii. 18. This affinity with the idolatrous Ahab was the capital error of Jehoshaphat's reign, proving mischievous to himself and ruinous to his family. It took place about the thirteenth year of his reign. Dr. Hales.

3. — Ramoth in Gilead] Or Ramoth-gilead. It is probably the same as "Ramath-mizpeh," mentioned at Josh. xiii. 26; the names Gilead and Mizpeh being added to the name "Ramoth," to distinguish this Ramoth, as being in the land of Gilead or Mizpeh, from other places of the same name. Dr. Wells.

6. — the prophets, — about four hundred men.] These were either prophets of the groves, who were not slain with the prophets of Baal, ch. xviii. 19; or perhaps there were schools of the prophets kept up still in Israel, in imitation of those of Judah, wherein men were bred up who pretended to have this gift. It is plain they were false prophets, for Micaiah calls them, ver. 23, "Ahab's prophets." Bp. Patrick.

These were probably pretended prophets, whom Ahab had set up by rewards and promises, and who accordingly knew how to suit his humour and flatter his vanity, all agreeing in the same fawning compliances, and the same treacherous counsels, which pleased for the present, but proved fatal in the end; they are emphatically called the prophets of Ahab, not of the Lord, ver. 22, by Micaiah, although they professed to be the Lord's prophets, prophesying in His name. That such false prophets should have existed at that time, is what might be expected. Prophet is a title of honour, and carries dignity with it; therefore where there are true Prophets, there will be pretenders also, raised up perhaps by their own vanity or avarice, or other corrupt motives. Where there are Prophets and pastors to guide and instruct honest and faithful men, there will be pretending prophets and pastors, to 10 And the king of Israel and Jehoshaphat the king of Judah sat each on his throne, having put on their robes, in a † void place in the entrance of the gate of Samaria; and all the prophets prophesied before them.

Before
CHRIST
897.

† Heb.
floor.

11 And Zedekiah the son of Chenaanah made him horns of iron: and he said, Thus saith the LORD, With these shalt thou push the Syrians, until thou have consumed them.

12 And all the prophets prophesied so, saying, Go up to Ramoth-gilead, and prosper: for the LORD shall deliver it into the king's hand.

13 And the messenger that was gone to call Micaiah spake unto him, saying, Behold now, the words of the prophets declare good unto the king with one mouth: let thy word, I pray thee, be like the word of one of them, and speak that which is good.

14 And Micaiah said, As the LORD liveth, what the LORD saith unto me, that will I speak.

15 ¶ So he came to the king. And the king said unto him, Micaiah, shall we go against Ramoth-gilead to battle, or shall we forbear? And he answered him, Go, and prosper: for the LORD shall deliver it into the hand of the king.

misguide and seduce those that will be misled by them. As long as the world loves flattery and deceit, there will be flatterers and deceivers. Besides, from the time that king Jeroboam had drawn the ten tribes into a revolt, and, to prevent their return, had set up altars at Dan and Beth-el, in opposition to the temple at Jerusalem, there was altar erected against altar, and priests against priests, to emulate the service and worship of the house of Judah: and, as the true Prophets of the Lord were all against the idolatry of the golden calves, therefore the ten tribes, with their kings, were under the stronger temptation to set up and encourage false prophets, as rivals of the true ones, thereby to carry an appearance at least of outvying the other two tribes. Dr. Waterland.

10. — in a void place] Or "floor," as in the margin. The Eastern threshing-floor was a level smooth area, inclosed by mud-brick walls, having a proper opening for entrance, and on one side of it the barn or garner. A place of this description was very proper for such an attendance as is noticed in the text; and very convenient, not merely to accommodate the two kings and their courtiers, but also to separate them from the populace, the mass of the army, &c. Fragments to Calmel.

11. — made him horns of iron:] This seems to have been the manner of Prophets in ancient times, to represent, by outward signs, the future events which they foretold: as Isaiah and Jeremiah continued to do in afterages, Isai. xx. 2; Jerem. xxvii. 2. Bp. Patrick.

15. — Go, and prosper:] His meaning is, What needest thou to ask me this question? Thy prophets have assured thee sufficiently already: go up as they have bidden thee; no doubt thou shalt prosper, thou hast their word for thy security. Bp. Hall.

These words were spoken ironically, and in mockery of the promises which the other prophets made to Ahab. It evidently

Before
CHRIST
897.

16 And the king said unto him, How many times shall I adjure thee that thou tell me nothing but that which is true in the name of the LORD?

17 And he said, I saw all Israel scattered upon the hills, as sheep that have not a shepherd: and the LORD said, These have no master: let them return every man to his house in peace.

18 And the king of Israel said unto Jehoshaphat, Did I not tell thee that he would prophesy no good concerning me, but evil?

19 And he said, Hear thou therefore the word of the LORD: I saw the LORD sitting on his throne, and all the host of heaven standing by him on his right hand and on his left.

1 Or, deceive.

20 And the LORD said, Who shall || persuade Ahab, that he may go up and fall at Ramoth-gilead? And one said on this manner, and another said on that manner.

Before
CHRIST
897.

21 And there came forth a spirit, and stood before the LORD, and said, I will persuade him.

22 And the LORD said unto him, Wherewith? And he said, I will go forth, and I will be a lying spirit in the mouth of all his prophets. And he said, Thou shalt persuade him, and prevail also: go forth, and do so.

23 Now therefore, behold, the LORD hath put a lying spirit in the mouth of all these thy prophets, and the LORD hath spoken evil concerning thee.

24 But Zedekiah the son of Chenaanah went near, and smote Micaiah on the cheek, and said, 'Which way went the Spirit of' * 2 Chron. 18. 23.

25 And Micaiah said, Behold, thou shalt appears, from Ahab's reply, that he suspected Micaiah's sincerity, and collected from his manner of speaking, that he intended to ridicule the answers of the false prophets. Stackhouse. He probably spake to them with such a look and gesture, and tone of voice, as shewed that he intended nothing more than to ridicule and mimic the pretended prophets. Reading.

19. — I saw the Lord sitting &c.] Micaiah, like an honest man and a faithful counsellor, discovered the whole secret, that those four hundred pretended prophets were all deceivers, and all actuated by the same spirit of lying. Only, instead of bluntly telling the king that they were all liars, he takes up his parable, as the Prophets were used to do, declaring what he had seen in a prophetick vision, which was the method that God had chosen for opening the matter to him. Micaiah had before said, ver. 17, "I saw all Israel scattered &c." which can only be understood of what he saw in prophetick vision, presignifying the real fact that should follow after; for the thing that he then saw was not yet come to pass. Micaiah saw what he there relates, just as St. Peter, Acts x. 11, "saw heaven opened, &c.;" not that any thing which St. Peter saw was real, excepting that such ideas or appearances were really formed on his mind as he lay in a trance. The like representation was made to Micaiah in a vision, signifying what was doing in the matter of Ahab, and what the event would be. The moral or meaning of all was, that as Ahab loved to be cajoled and flattered, so God permitted those four hundred men, pretending to be prophets, to abuse and impose upon him, which, in conclusion, would prove fatal to him. Dr. Waterland. This is a parabolical speech, signifying that there was a greater King than Ahab, who would judge him according to his works. In that which follows, ver. 20, it is not to be thought that there was any consultation before the Divine Majesty; but these representations are made to bring invisible things down to the level of men's capacities. "And one said on this manner, &c." This is intended to signify, that God has many various ways of bringing men to ruin, when He decrees it. "And there came forth a spirit, &c." ver. 21. This again is not to be understood literally, but as signifying generally that there are evil spirits ever forward to entice men to their destruction, and having power so to do if the Lord do not hinder them. "And the Lord said unto him, Wherewith?" ver. 22. God was not ignorant of what he could, and intended to do; but this is said to represent more familiarly to common understandings, by what means Ahab was led into destruction. "And he said, Go forth, and do so." God permitted this lying spirit to follow his own inclinations, which He knew would have success, and prevail with Ahab to believe he should prosper in the war, wherein it was the intention of God to visit him with destruction. It was in this sense that "the Lord put a lying spirit" in the mouth of the prophets, ver. 23; that is, permitted them to mislead Ahab, concerning whom "the Lord had spoken evil;" that is, had decreed that he should perish in this war. Bp. Patrick. We cannot but infer, that Micaiah's speech is nothing more than a parabolical representation of a certain event, which not long after came to pass; that several of the circumstances which are thrown into it are in a great measure ornamental, and designed only to illustrate the narrative, and that therefore they are not to be taken in a literal sense, but in such a manner as other parables are, where the end and design of the speaker is chiefly to be considered; which in Micaiah's case was, to shew the reason why so many of the prophets declared what was false upon this occasion, even because they were moved, not by the spirit of truth, but by that of adulation. Stackhouse. This whole representation is highly figurative, and by no means to be understood literally. The meaning is, that God justly punishes wicked men when they obstinately refuse to hear Him, permitting them to be deceived by the evil one to their own destruction. Dr. S. Clarke. The substance of what the Prophet says is this; It is certainly revealed to me by an infallible vision from God, that He in His just judgment hath decreed to give power to an evil spirit to delude these thy four hundred prophets with lies, and to give thee over to be misled by their delusions, to thine own destruction; and this I do as surely know, as if I had seen the Lord sitting on His throne, and consulting upon the way and the means of exposing thee to these seducements, and giving permission to an evil spirit to work this mischief unto thee. Bp. Hall.

22. — go forth, and do so.] It is a known Hebraism to express things in an imperative and active form, which are to be understood only permissively. Thus the expression here implies only a permission, not a command. Abp. Tillotson.

23. Now therefore, — the Lord hath put a lying spirit &c.] We must always bear in mind, that it is frequent in Holy Scripture to call that the Lord's doing, which He only permits to be done, because He has the supreme direction of all things, and governs the event. Wicked devices proceed from wicked men; but that they prevail and take effect, is owing to the hand of God directing and ordering what shall be the issue of them. In the present instance the words of the original will admit of being translated, "the Lord hath permitted a lying spirit in the mouth &c." Dr. Waterland.

25. — Behold, thou shalt see in that day, &c.] In answer to the false prophet's question, uttered by way of scorn and reproach, Micaiah answers, he shall know when the battle is over, when he shall be forced to conceal himself for fear of being executed for a false prophet, and a betrayer of his king and country. Pyle.

Before
CHRIST
897.

¶ Or,
from chamber to chamber.
† Heb. a chamber in a chamber.

see in that day, when thou shalt go || into † an inner chamber to hide thyself.

26 And the king of Israel said, Take Micaiah, and carry him back unto Amon the governor of the city, and to Joash the king's son ;

27 And say, Thus saith the king, Put this fellow in the prison, and feed him with bread of affliction and with water of afflic-tion, until I come in peace.

28 And Micaiah said, If thou return at all in peace, the LORD hath not spoken by me. And he said, Hearken, O people, every one of you.

29 So the king of Israel and Jehoshaphat the king of Judah went up to Ramoth-gilead.

¶ Or, when he was to disguise himself, and enter into the battle.

30 And the king of Israel said unto Jehoshaphat, || I will disguise myself, and enter into the battle ; but put thou on thy robes. And the king of Israel disguised himself, and went into the battle.

31 But the king of Syria commanded his thirty and two captains that had rule over his chariots, saying, Fight neither with small nor great, save only with the king of Israel.

32 And it came to pass, when the cap-

34. — drew a bow at a venture,] Thus what men do at a venture, that is, without any certain design, God directs to certain ends, to serve His own glory. Bp. Wilson.

— between the joints of the harness :] Between the joints of "the armour ;" in which sense the word "harness" was formerly used.

Ahab had concealed himself from the knowledge of men, but not from the eyes of God : He directed a random shot to find out a passage through the joints of his armour into his body, where it gave him his death's wound. Reading.

O the just and mighty hand of that Divine Providence, which directs all His actions to His own ends ; which orders where every shaft shall light, and guides the arrow of the strong archer into the joints of Ahab's harness ! It was shot at a venture ; it falls by a destiny, and there falls where it may carry death to a hidden debtor. In all actions, both voluntary and casual, Thy will, O God, shall be done by us, with whatever intentions. Little did the Syrian know whom he had stricken, no more than the arrow with which he struck. An invisible hand disposed of both, to the punishment of Ahab, to the vindication of Micaiah. How worthily art Thou, O God, to be adored in Thy justice and wisdom ; to be feared in Thy judgments ! Bp. Hall.

37. So the king died,] Thus ended the life and reign of king Ahab ; but this was only the beginning of those sufferings which were afterwards accomplished in his wife and children, and the more remote branches of his family. To die, as he did, in the field of battle would scarce have deserved the name of a Divine judgment, if he had not gone to the war in contempt of God's warnings by the mouth of His Prophet. It certainly was a punishment which bore no manner of proportion to the black guilt of his sins : for he sinned more than all the kings of Israel that went before him. He so filled the land with idolatries, that the sin of Jeroboam was but a small one in comparison with his. By trampling on the law of God, demolishing His altars, and killing or banishing His Prophets continually, he seemed to make it the full purpose of his heart, and business of his life, to root out the tains of the chariots saw Jehoshaphat, that they said, Surely it is the king of Israel. And they turned aside to fight against him : and Jehoshaphat cried out.

33 And it came to pass, when the captains of the chariots perceived that it was not the king of Israel, that they turned back from pursuing him.

34 And a certain man drew a bow † at a venture, and smote the king of Israel between the † joints of the harness : wherefore he said unto the driver of his chariot, Turn thine hand, and carry me out of the host ; for I am † wounded.

35 And the battle † increased that day : and the king was stayed up in his chariot against the Syrians, and died at even : and the blood ran out of the wound into the † midst of the chariot.

36 And there went a proclamation throughout the host about the going down of the sun, saying, Every man to his city, and every man to his own country.

37 ¶ So the king died, and † was brought to Samaria ; and they buried the king in Samaria.

38 And one washed the chariot in the pool of Samaria ; and the dogs licked up

Before
CHRIST
897.

† Heb.
in his simplicity.
† Heb. joints and the breast-plate.

† Heb. made sick.
† Heb.
ascended.

† Heb.
bosom.

† Heb.
came.

religion which he found established, and introduce paganism in the room of it. Let us carry in our minds as just an estimate as we can of Ahab's guilt, while we read the history of himself and his family, and then we shall not wonder at the sanguinary executions, which were done upon him, root and branch, until a full end was made of him ; for it was fit that his punishment should be as notorious, as his enmity to God had been extreme. Reading.

38. — and the dogs licked up his blood ;] From the narrative of the guilt and punishment of Ahab let us learn the awakening doctrine of retributive justice, which the Scriptures uniformly inculcate, and be persuaded, that, whatever be the circumstances of the sinner, sooner or later "the wickedness of the wicked shall be upon him." In elder times, when the providence of God was specially manifested in the government of His peculiar people, an immediate temporal punishment was often inflicted in proportion and suitable to the offence. "In the portion of Jezreel," where the murder of Naboth was committed, "did dogs eat the flesh of Jezebel : " "as dogs had licked the blood of Naboth, so dogs licked the blood of Ahab," who was the occasion of Naboth's being shed. In these latter days, when the Almighty has ceased to interpose so conspicuously in the moral government of the world, the temporal punishment does not often appear so well adapted to the offence. But let not the sinner presume to flatter himself that he shall eventually escape the judgment of God. Whether he has been "drawn away by his own lusts and enticed," or been tempted by the allurements of others, whom he has permitted to "stir him up" to wickedness, "the provocation, wherewith he hath provoked God to anger," shall not be forgotten. In the punishments of a temporal kind, which befell the sinful Israelites, he may perceive an emblem of the miseries, with which his sins will hereafter be visited. And as surely as dogs did lick the blood of Ahab, and eat the flesh of Jezebel in the portion of Jezreel, so surely shall "indignation and wrath, tribulation and anguish," be poured out upon the impenitent sinner, "according to his deeds." Mant.

Before CHRIST 897.
his blood; and they washed his armour; according ^a unto the word of the LORD which he spake.

19. 39 Now the rest of the acts of Ahab, and all that he did, and the ivory house which he made, and all the cities that he built, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Israel?

897. 40 So Ahab slept with his fathers; and Ahaziah his son reigned in his stead.

914.
2 Chron. 20. 31. 41 ¶ And ^c Jehoshaphat the son of Asa began to reign over Judah in the fourth year of Ahab king of Israel.

42 Jehoshaphat was thirty and five years old when he began to reign; and he reigned twenty and five years in Jerusalem. And his mother's name was Azubah the daughter of Shilhi.

43 And he walked in all the ways of Asa his father; he turned not aside from it, doing that which was right in the eyes of the LORD: nevertheless the high places were not taken away; for the people offered and burnt incense yet in the high places.

44 And Jehoshaphat made peace with the king of Israel.

45 Now the rest of the acts of Jehoshaphat, and his might that he shewed, and how he warred, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Judah?

47. There was then no king in Edom:] The Edomites continued subject to the kingdom of Judah from the days of David, who began this dominion, 2 Sam. viii. 14, till the authority was lost by Jehoshaphat's son, 2 Kings viii. 21. It appears that at this time the king of Judah appointed a deputy, who was king in his stead. Bp. Patrick.

48. — ships of Tharshish] Probably so called from their form; being made after the model of those that used to trade to that place. Bp. Patrick.

46 And the remnant of the sodomites, which remained in the days of his father Asa, he took out of the land. Before CHRIST 914.

47 There was then no king in Edom: a deputy was king. 913.

48 Jehoshaphat ¶ made ships of Tharshish to go to Ophir for gold: but they went not; for the ships were broken at Ezion-geber. ¶ Or, had ten ships.

49 Then said Ahaziah the son of Ahab unto Jehoshaphat, Let my servants go with thy servants in the ships. But Jehoshaphat would not.

50 ¶ And Jehoshaphat slept with his fathers, and was buried with his fathers in the city of David his father: and Jehoram his son reigned in his stead. 889.

51 ¶ Ahaziah the son of Ahab began to reign over Israel in Samaria the seventeenth year of Jehoshaphat king of Judah, and reigned two years over Israel. 895.

52 And he did evil in the sight of the LORD, and walked in the way of his father, and in the way of his mother, and in the way of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, who made Israel to sin:

53 For he served Baal, and worshipped him, and provoked to anger the LORD God of Israel, according to all that his father had done.

49. — But Jehoshaphat would not.] Jehoshaphat had before contracted alliance with this king, 2 Chron. xx. 35, but, being now better instructed by his ill success, and by the reproof of a Prophet, he would not continue this league with him.

51. — two years] Not two years complete; for Ahaziah died, 2 Kings iii. 1, before the second year was ended. Bp. Patrick.

The following Chapters from the first book of Kings are appointed for Proper Lessons on Sundays and Holydays.

CHAP. XIII.	-	-	-	-	8th Sunday after Trinity,	-	-	-	-	Morning.
— XVII.	-	-	-	-	Ditto,	-	-	-	-	Evening.
— XVIII.	-	-	-	-	9th Sunday after Trinity,	-	-	-	-	Morning.
— XIX.	-	-	-	-	Ditto,	-	-	-	-	Evening.
— XXI.	-	-	-	-	10th Sunday after Trinity,	-	-	-	-	Morning.
— XXII.	-	-	-	-	Ditto,	-	-	-	-	Evening.

THE SECOND BOOK OF THE K I N G S,

COMMONLY CALLED,

THE FOURTH BOOK OF THE KINGS.

INTRODUCTION.

THE history contained in this book records the government and actions of many successive kings of Judah and Israel, for the space of about 300 years: from the death of Jehoshaphat, in the year of the world 3115, to the destruction of Jerusalem and the temple, 3416. The connexion and occasional quarrels which subsisted between the two nations during part of this time, till the conquest of Samaria by Shalmaneser, seem to have induced the sacred writers to blend the two histories, as in some measure treating of the same people. Both nations appear to have departed with almost equal steps from the service of the true God; and in the history of each we are presented with a succession of wicked and idolatrous kings till each had completed the measure of its iniquity.

Both Israel and Judah, though they invariably experienced prosperity and affliction in proportion to their obedience and disobedience, were infatuated by their perverse inclinations: and in a long series of their respective sovereigns we find a few only who were awakened by God's judgments to a sense of their true interest and duty. The whole period seems to have been dark and guilty; the glory of the kingdom being eclipsed by the calamities of the division, and by the increased miseries of idolatry and ambition. Successive tyrannies, treasons, seditions, and usurpations, and the instant punishment which they produced, serve at once to illustrate the evil character of the times, and the vigilant equity of the Divine government. The events are described with great simplicity; though in themselves highly interesting and important. The account of Elijah's assumption into heaven, of Elisha's succession to his ministry, and of the series of illustrious miracles performed by Elisha; the story of Naaman, and of the panick fright of the Syrians; the history of Ben-hadad and Hazael; of the predicted death of Jezebel, and Ahab's children; and of the destruction of Baal's prophets, are all pregnant with instruction, and have furnished theme for frequent dissertation. We perceive, in these impressive histories, the characters and qualities of men painted with great fidelity; and the attributes of God displayed with great effect. The particulars and circumstances are sketched out with a brief and lively description, and the imagination lingers with pleasure in filling up those striking outlines that are presented to our view. The sacred author, regardless of minute order, and of the succession of events, seems sometimes desirous only of furnishing us with a view of the state of religion among the people, and of illustrating the genealogy of Christ. In particular, we observe how the revolt of the ten tribes, and their subsequent captivity, contributed to keep up the distinction of the tribe of Judah; and to make the prophecies, which foretold that the Messiah should descend from this branch, more conspicuously accomplished.

The predictions described as delivered and fulfilled in this book, are those which foretold the death of Ahaziah, chap. i. 16; the birth of a son to the Shunammite, chap. iv. 16; the recovery of Naaman, chap. v. 10; plenty in Samaria, chap. vii. 1; the crimes and cruelty of Hazael, chap. viii. 10, 12; the success of Joash, chap. xiii. 19; the defeat of Sennacherib, chap. xix. 6, 7, 28, 29, 33; the prolongation of Hezekiah's life, chap. xx. 6; the Babylonish captivity, chap. xx. 17, 18; and the peaceful reign of Josiah, chap. xxii. 20.

After the captivity of the ten tribes, the colony brought up from Babylon and other places adopted the Hebrew religion, and blended it with their own idolatries; and henceforward, in point of time, we hear little of the inhabitants of Samaria. The kingdom of Judah still continued for above a century to provoke God's anger by its disobedience and idolatry, notwithstanding Isaiah and many other Prophets conspired, during all this period, to exhort the people to repentance, by every motive of interest and fear. The good reign of Hezekiah, though lengthened by Divine Providence, was too soon succeeded by the "evil days of Manassch," in whose time the temple, and even the volume of the law, seem to have been almost entirely neglected. In the reign of Josiah, religion for a short time revived; the publick copy of the law was discovered, and read, chap. xxii. 8; xxiii. 2; and idolatry for a few months suppressed: but the tide of iniquity having rolled back with accumulated force, Jerusalem is besieged and taken, the city and temple spoiled, and the noblest of the nation led captive to Babylon.

The book concludes with the account of the second siege by Nebuchadnezzar, which happened about eighteen years after the first; then the city and temple were burnt; and, soon after, the whole destruction was completed by the massacre or flight of the remnant which had been left amidst the ruined cities of Judea. Dr. Gray.

The beginning and end of these Jewish kingdoms are eminent demonstrations of the wisdom and justice of Providence, and of the truth of the many promises and threats made to the people of Israel; they are a great confirmation of the Mosaical history, and of our whole religion, as completed by Jesus Christ. Pyle.

Before
CHRIST
about 836.

CHAP. I.

1 Moab rebelleth. 2 Ahaziah, sending to Baal-zebub, hath his judgment by Elijah. 5 Elijah twice bringeth fire from heaven upon them whom Ahaziah sent to apprehend him. 13 He pitieth the third captain, and, encouraged by an angel, telleth the king of his death. 17 Jehoram succeedeth Ahaziah.

• Chap. 3. 5. THEN Moab rebelled against Israel after the death of Ahab.

2 And Ahaziah fell down through a lattice in his upper chamber that was in Samaria, and was sick: and he sent messengers, and said unto them, Go, enquire of Baal-zebub the god of Ekron whether I shall recover of this disease.

3 But the angel of the LORD said to Elijah the Tishbite, Arise, go up to meet the messengers of the king of Samaria, and say unto them, Is it not because there is not a God in Israel, that ye go to enquire of Baal-zebub the god of Ekron?

† Now therefore thus saith the LORD,

† Thou shalt not come down from that bed on which thou art gone up, but shalt surely die. And Elijah departed.

5 ¶ And when the messengers turned back unto him, he said unto them, Why are ye now turned back?

6 And they said unto him, There came a man up to meet us, and said unto us, Go, turn again unto the king that sent you, and say unto him, Thus saith the LORD, Is it not because there is not a God in Israel, that thou sendest to enquire of Baal-zebub the god of Ekron? therefore thou shalt not come down from that bed on which thou art gone up, but shalt surely die.

7 And he said unto them, † What manner of man was he which came up to meet you, and told you these words?

8 And they answered him, He was an hairy man, and girt with a girdle of leather about his loins. And he said, It is Elijah the Tishbite.

Before
CHRIST
about 836.

† Heb.
The bed, whither thou art gone up, thou shalt not come down from it.

† Heb.
What was the manner of the man?

Chap. I. ver. 1. Then Moab rebelled] The Moabites had owned the dominion of Israel ever since the days of David, 2 Sam. viii. 2.

2. — through a lattice in his upper chamber] As it was the custom in the East to walk on the flat roofs of the houses, it is probable that Ahaziah either fell from the parapet wall with which the roof was surrounded, or else through an opening in the roof which was designed to give light to the apartments in the house below. Stackhouse.

— of Baal-zebub the god of Ekron] The word Baal-zebub signifies the “god of flies;” but, how this idol came to obtain that name, it is not so easy a matter to discover. Several are of opinion that this god was called Baal-semin, the Lord of Heaven, but that the Jews, by way of contempt, gave it the name of Baal-zebub, or the lord of a fly, a god that was nothing worth, or (as others say) whose temple was filled with flies; whereas the temple of Jerusalem (notwithstanding all the sacrifices that were daily offered) never once had a fly in it, as their doctors relate. The sacred writings indeed, when they speak of the gods of the heathens, very frequently call them in general, idols, vanity, abominations, &c. but they never change their proper names into such as are of an opprobrious import; neither can we think it likely, that the king of Israel would have called the god of Ekron, for whom he had so high a veneration, as to consult him in his sickness, by any appellation of contempt. Whoever considers what troublesome and destructive creatures (especially in some hot countries) flies are known to be; in what vast swarms they sometimes settle, and not only devour all the fruits of the earth, but in many places occasion a noisome pestilence; may reasonably suppose, that the heathens had a proper deity, to whom they made their addresses, either for the prevention or removal of this sore plague. The Jews, under the New Testament, called “the prince of the devils” by this same name of Baal-zebub. Stackhouse.

It may appear surprising that the preservation from flies should be deemed by the inhabitants of Ekron of so great importance, that a name should be given to the idol they worshipped, expressive of this property; but there are accounts of the effect of flies in that country, which may tend to lessen that surprise. In particular, Vinisaut, speaking of the army of our Richard I. and describing them as marching on the plain not far from the seacoast towards a place called Ybelin, not far from Hebron, says, “The army stopping there awhile, rejoicing in the hope of speedily setting out for Jerusalem, were assailed by a most minute kind of fly, flying about like sparks, which they called Cincinellæ. With these the whole neighbouring country around was filled. These most wretchedly infested the pilgrims, piercing with great smartness the hands, necks, throats, faces, and every part that was uncovered; a most violent burning tumour following the punctures made by them, so that all whom they stung looked like lepers.” He adds, that they could with difficulty guard themselves from this most troublesome vexation, by covering their heads and necks with veils. This description refers to a country not very far from Ekron, and much resembling it in its general character, being a plain not far from the seacoast. It cannot be wondered that the inhabitants of these countries should have attached great importance to an idol, who possessed the supposed power of preserving them from such a grievous visitation. Harmer. See the notes on Exod. viii. 24.

The department of several of the heathen deities was to ward off those natural evils, to which their votaries were liable. The province allotted to several deities was particularly to drive away flies. We read of Jupiter under several titles, all conferred upon him from a supposition of his clearing his temples from these insects. He was worshipped under this character at Elis, as Hercules was at Rome. Bryant.

— Ekron] This place being situated in the country of the Philistines, near the Mediterranean sea, in a moist and hot soil, was liable to be very much infested with flies. Calmet.

3. — Is it not because &c.] He thus upbraids them with their stupid unthoughtfulness of the great Jehovah, and their impious irrational regard to a mere imaginary deity. Pyle.

4. — Thou shalt not come down from that bed] This expression of coming down from the bed is illustrated by some modern customs. In the chambers of the Moorish houses in Barbary, there is generally at one end a little gallery, raised three, four, or five feet above the floor, with a few steps leading up to it, and in this they place their beds. Dr. Shaw.

8. — an hairy man,] Meaning probably, either that he wore a long beard and hair about his head, or that he was covered with a hairy garment, which Prophets were wont to use, as appears from Isai. xx. 2; Zech. xiii. 4; Matth. iii. 4. The leathern girdle makes the last explanation the most probable. Bp. Patrick. He was a man roughly clad, as one that professed to be a messenger of penitence and humiliation to the world. Bp. Hall.

Before
CHRIST
about 896.

9 Then the king sent unto him a captain of fifty with his fifty. And he went up to him: and, behold, he sat on the top of an hill. And he spake unto him, Thou man of God, the king hath said, Come down.

10 And Elijah answered and said to the captain of fifty, If I be a man of God, then let fire come down from heaven, and consume thee and thy fifty. And there came down fire from heaven, and consumed him and his fifty.

11 Again also he sent unto him another captain of fifty with his fifty. And he answered and said unto him, O man of God, thus hath the king said, Come down quickly.

12 And Elijah answered and said unto them, If I be a man of God, let fire come down from heaven, and consume thee and thy fifty. And the fire of God came down from heaven, and consumed him and his fifty.

13 ¶ And he sent again a captain of the third fifty with his fifty. And the third captain of fifty went up, and came and † fell on his knees before Elijah, and besought him, and said unto him, O man of God, I pray thee, let my life, and the life of these fifty thy servants, be precious in thy sight.

14 Behold, there came fire down from heaven, and burnt up the two captains of the former fifties with their fifties: therefore let my life now be precious in thy sight.

15 And the angel of the LORD said unto Elijah, Go down with him: be not afraid of him. And he arose, and went down with him unto the king.

† Heb. bowed.

It is remarkable that the dervises in this country, in modern times, go clothed as Elijah did, wearing a hairy garment, and girded with a leathern girdle. Sir J. Chardin.

9. — Thou man of God,] Thou that pretendest to be a man of God. Bp. Hall.

10. — let fire come down from heaven,] This was not done from a revengeful feeling, but to convince a wicked prince and an idolatrous people, that Jehovah was the true God, and that He alone ought to be applied to in the time of trouble. Bp. Wilson.

— and consumed him and his fifty.] What is man in the hands of his Maker! One flash of lightning has consumed this one and fifty. And if all the hosts of Israel, yea, of the world, had been in their place, there had needed no other force. What madness is it for him, whose breath is in his nostrils, to contend with the Almighty! Bp. Hall.

Though Elijah consumed by fire from heaven the captains and soldiers whom the king sent to take him, he did it not out of a spirit of revenge, or of his own accord, but by a Divine impulse and command. God wrought the miracle to secure the Prophet, and to punish the idolaters, to put a stop to the fury of Ahaziah, and to teach that prince and his subjects to fear the true God. Ostervald.

God destroyed the two captains and their companies, by fire from heaven, because they came to take His Prophet rudely and by force. God will have His Prophets revered, and not af-

Before
CHRIST
about 896.

16 And he said unto him, Thus saith the LORD, Forasmuch as thou hast sent messengers to enquire of Baal-zebub the god of Ekron, is it not because there is no God in Israel to enquire of his word? therefore thou shalt not come down off that bed on which thou art gone up, but shalt surely die.

17 ¶ So he died according to the word of the LORD which Elijah had spoken. And Jehoram reigned in his stead in the second year of Jehoram the son of Jehoshaphat king of Judah; because he had no son.

18 Now the rest of the acts of Ahaziah which he did, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Israel?

896.

CHAP. II.

1 Elijah, taking his leave of Elisha, with his mantle divideth Jordan, 9 and, granting Elisha his request, is taken up by a fiery chariot into heaven. 12 Elisha, dividing Jordan with Elijah's mantle, is acknowledged his successor. 16 The young prophets, hardly obtaining leave to seek Elijah, could not find him. 19 Elisha with salt healeth the unwholesome waters. 23 Bears destroy the children that mocked Elisha.

AND it came to pass, when the LORD would take up Elijah into heaven by a whirlwind, that Elijah went with Elisha from Gilgal.

2 And Elijah said unto Elisha, Tarry here, I pray thee; for the LORD hath sent me to Beth-el. And Elisha said unto him, As the LORD liveth, and as thy soul liveth, I will not leave thee. So they went down to Beth-el.

3 And the sons of the prophets that were at Beth-el came forth to Elisha, and said fronted, because they are allied to Him; and every affront offered to them is justly resented as an indignity to Himself. But He made a distinction, even in this case, between rude and reverent behaviour; therefore the third captain and his company, ver. 13, since they had been taught some modesty and good manners towards so eminent a Prophet of God most High, were used with tenderness, and came off unhurt. Dr. Waterland.

15. — and went down with him unto the king.] Here is a striking instance of the Prophet's faith and obedience to God. He had the greatest reason to be afraid of the king and Jezebel, having, besides other unwelcome things, so lately executed a terrible judgment on two of his captains and their companies. But now, having an express command from God, he boldly goes to the king, and confirms with his own mouth that ungrateful truth, which he had already delivered to him by his messengers. Bp. Patrick.

17. — because he had no son.] He was succeeded by his brother Jehoram, "because he had no son."

Chap. II. ver. 2. — Tarry here, I pray thee;] Elijah seems to have said this to try Elisha; for he did not intend to conceal his assumption into heaven, and to have no witnesses of it. His humility indeed was great; but it was not fit to conceal the glory of God, which herein miraculously appeared. Bp. Patrick.

3. And the sons of the prophets] By "the sons of the Prophets," we are to understand the scholars of the Prophets, such as they unto him, Knowest thou that the LORD will take away thy master from thy head to day? And he said, Yea, I know it; hold ye your peace.

Before
CHRIST
896.

4 And Elijah said unto him, Elisha, tarry here, I pray thee; for the LORD hath sent me to Jericho. And he said, As the LORD liveth, and as thy soul liveth, I will not leave thee. So they came to Jericho.

5 And the sons of the prophets that were at Jericho came to Elisha, and said unto him, Knowest thou that the LORD will take away thy master from thy head to day? And he answered, Yea, I know it; hold ye your peace.

6 And Elijah said unto him, Tarry, I pray thee, here; for the LORD hath sent me to Jordan. And he said, As the LORD liveth, and as thy soul liveth, I will not leave thee. And they two went on.

† Heb.
in sight, or, over against.

7 And fifty men of the sons of the prophets went, and stood † to view afar off: and they two stood by Jordan.

educated and trained up in religion and virtue, upon whom God by degrees bestowed the spirit of prophecy, and whom the superior Prophets employed in the same capacity as the Apostles did the Evangelists, namely, to publish their prophecies and instructions to the people, in the places where themselves could not go. Nor is it any small testimony of God's love to an apostate people, that, in these corrupt times, and in that very place where the golden calves were worshipped, He still continued the schools of the Prophets, in order to recover them from idolatry. Nay, (what is very remarkable,) there were Prophets of greater excellency for their miracles in Israel than in Judah, because they needed them more, both to turn their hardened hearts from the worship of idols, and to preserve the pious persons that remained among them from deserting their religion. Bp. Patrick.

It appears that the Jews, though they enjoyed the advantages of immediate inspiration, yet had their schools of the Prophets, (appointed, as is most probable, by the immediate direction of God Himself,) where the youth were instructed in the principles of religion, and, by a virtuous and liberal education, both qualified to discharge the ordinary functions of the ministry, and also better disposed to receive the extraordinary gifts of prophecy and miracles. The sons of the Prophets here mentioned are such persons as received their education in these publick schools. From the short and scattered accounts which we find in Scripture respecting them, we collect, that the sons of the Prophets were here educated, under the superintendence of the most eminent Prophets, in the study of true religion and useful learning, and employed in composing hymns, singing forth the praises of God, and other religious exercises; that they lived together in societies, and were subject to stated rules of government. Dr. Randolph.

— take away thy master from thy head] This is an allusion to the manner of teaching in the prophetick schools, where the scholars sat at the feet of the master, and he just over their heads. Thus, to take away a master from the head of a person, signifies, to deprive him of his instructions. Pyle. See the note on Deut. xxxiii. 3.

5. And the sons of the prophets] At Jericho, it appears, there was another school of the Prophets, to whom the same Holy Spirit revealed the mind of God.

8. — his mantle.] The Hebrew word, by which the mantle of Elijah is always expressed, signifies a royal as well as a prophetic robe, Jonah iii. 6. The Greek translators render it by a

Before
CHRIST
896.

8 And Elijah took his mantle, and wrapped it together, and smote the waters, and they were divided hither and thither, so that they two went over on dry ground.

9 ¶ And it came to pass, when they were gone over, that Elijah said unto Elisha, Ask what I shall do for thee, before I be taken away from thee. And Elisha said, I pray thee, let a double portion of thy spirit be upon me.

10 And he said, † Thou hast asked a † Heb. Thou hast done hard hard thing: nevertheless, if thou see me when I am taken from thee, it shall be so unto thee; but if not, it shall not be so.

11 And it came to pass, as they still went on, and talked, that, behold, there appeared a chariot of fire, and horses of fire, and parted them both asunder; and

² Elijah went up by a whirlwind into heaven. ^{² Eccl^l 43. 9.}

12 ¶ And Elisha saw it, and he cried,

³ My father, my father, the chariot of Is- ^{³ 1 Mac. 2. 58. 4 Chap. 13. 14.}

word which signifies a robe made of lambskins. It is supposed to have been an upper garment thrown over the shoulders, and reaching down to the heels. Bp. Patrick.

9. — Ask what I shall do for thee, before I be taken away] We are here supplied with a strong and conclusive argument against the practice in the Romish church of praying to deceased saints and martyrs. Elijah, in uttering these words, clearly intimates to Elisha that then was the last opportunity of asking any thing from him. But if Elijah had understood the matter as the church of Rome does now, he would rather have directed him to pray to him while he was in heaven, where he might then have a more powerful interest, and be more able to render him service. It is true the church of Rome gives as a reason why prayer was not addressed to saints in the Old Testament, that they were not then admitted into heaven; but this will not hold with respect to Elijah, who was taken up into heaven, and therefore as much in circumstances to admit of being prayed to, as any saints and martyrs who have died in subsequent times. Abp. Tillotson.

— let a double portion of thy spirit be upon me.] Elisha prays that a larger portion of the prophetic spirit might be communicated to him than to the other Prophets. There would be an appearance of arrogance in his request, if it were supposed to be intended for a double portion of the spirit, which Elijah himself had. Stackhouse. The request may be, to have a double share, compared with that which was given to the rest of the Prophets. "When thy spirit is divided among the sons of the Prophets, let me have two shares." Bp. Wilson. His request may be thus paraphrased: "As thou hast chosen me to stand in a nearer relation to thee than the rest of the sons of the Prophets, so give me this prerogative, that I may have a double portion to theirs of that spirit and those powers which are in thee." Bp. Hall.

12. — My father, my father, the chariot of Israel, &c.] They used to call by the name of father their masters and instructors. This expression of Elisha, alluding to the appearance of the chariot and horses, which he had just beheld, seems to imply that Elijah, by his example, and prayers, and power with God, did more for the defence and preservation of Israel, than all their chariots and horses, and other warlike provisions. We must suppose that this was an abrupt speech, which Elisha, from the consternation he was in, left unfinished, and so the sacred history has recorded it. Poole, Le Clerc. Of all the events recorded in the Old Testament, we meet with none more remarkable than the translation of 896.

Before
CHRIST

rael, and the horsemen thereof. And he saw him no more: and he took hold of his own clothes, and rent them in two pieces.

13 He took up also the mantle of Elijah that fell from him, and went back, and stood by the † bank of Jordan;

14 And he took the mantle of Elijah that fell from him, and smote the waters, and said, Where is the LORD God of Elijah? and when he also had smitten the waters, they parted hither and thither: and Elisha went over.

15 And when the sons of the prophets which were to view at Jericho saw him, they said, The spirit of Elijah doth rest on Elisha. And they came to meet him, and bowed themselves to the ground before him.

16 ¶ And they said unto him, Behold now, there be with thy servants fifty † strong men; let them go, we pray thee, and seek thy master: lest peradventure the Spirit of the LORD hath taken him up, and cast him upon † some mountain, or into some valley. And he said, Ye shall not send.

17 And when they urged him till he was

Enoch in the times before the flood, and of the Prophet Elijah under the dispensation of the law. In regard to Elijah, as he had been a zealous advocate for God, and a strenuous opposer of idolatry, an implacable enemy to Baal's priests, an undaunted reprover of the wickedness of princes, and a severe inflicter of the Divine vengeance on the children of disobedience; we may presume that God designed his exaltation, not only as a recompense for his past services, which were great, but as an encouragement also to other remaining Prophets to be strong in the Lord, to bear witness boldly against the corruption of the age in which they lived, and, in the execution of their office, to fear the face of no man. Stackhouse.

The author of the book of Ecclesiasticus, chap. xlviii. 1—12, has described the life and character of Elijah, and written an encomium to his memory.

The taking up of the Prophet Elijah into heaven is a miraculous event, in which we see how God was pleased to reward the extraordinary zeal of this great Prophet, and to teach men at the same time that He reserves in heaven a blessed state for those that shall have served Him faithfully. Besides this, we have in the ascension of Elijah a type of that of Jesus Christ, which is yet a stronger proof to us that there is a better life after this prepared for the righteous. Ostervald. See the note on Gen. v. 24.

There are three bodily inhabitants of heaven, Enoch, Elijah, our Saviour Christ: the first, before the law; the second, under the law; the third, under the gospel: all three in a several form of translation. Our blessed Saviour raised Himself to and above the heavens by His own immediate power: He ascended as the Son; they, as servants: He, as God; they, as creatures. Elijah ascended by the visible ministry of angels; Enoch, insensibly. Wherefore, O God, hast Thou done this, but to give us a taste of what we shall be; to let us see that heaven was never shut to the faithful; to give us an assurance of the future glorification of this mortal and corruptible part? Even thus, O Saviour, when Thou shalt descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God, we that are alive and remain shall be caught up, together with the raised bodies of Thy ashamed, he said, Send. They sent therefore fifty men; and they sought three days, but found him not.

Before
CHRIST
896.

18 And when they came again to him, (for he tarried at Jericho,) he said unto them, Did I not say unto you, Go not?

19 ¶ And the men of the city said unto Elisha, Behold, I pray thee, the situation of this city is pleasant, as my lord seeth: but the water is naught, and the ground † barren.

† Heb. causing to miscarry.

20 And he said, Bring me a new cruse, and put salt therein. And they brought it to him.

21 And he went forth unto the spring of the waters, and cast the salt in there, and said, Thus saith the LORD, I have healed these waters; there shall not be from thence any more death or barren land.

22 So the waters were healed unto this day, according to the saying of Elisha which he spake.

23 ¶ And he went up from thence unto Beth-el: and as he was going up by the way, there came forth little children out of the city, and mocked him, and said unto saints, into the clouds, to meet Thee in the air, to dwell with Thee in glory. Bp. Hall.

— rent them in two pieces.] In token of the heavy loss he had sustained, and of the sorrow which he felt for it. Bp. Wilson.

13. He took up also the mantle of Elijah.] Along with his falling mantle, Elisha received that double portion of the spirit and of the power of Elijah, which God granted to the pious request of this most faithful servant, whom nothing could separate from his master, to reward his tried affection and persevering patience with the choicest gifts of the Spirit. Dr. Hales.

14. — Where is the — God of Elijah?] The more complete translation of the Hebrew is this, “Where is the God of Elijah? Surely, He is,” or “is still the same.” It is an earnest prayer that God would assist him with His power, as He had formerly assisted Elijah, and an expression of his religious confidence that He would do so. Pyle.

16. — let them go, — and seek thy master:] Having but an imperfect notion of Elijah's translation, they imagined, it appears, that he might be taken away only for a time; or that, though his soul was taken up into heaven, his body might be left upon some neighbouring mountain, or in some valley. They importuned Elisha so long, that he was forced to comply with their foolish humour, for fear, perhaps, lest they might represent him as too forward to enter on his master's place, and as wanting in regard and love to him. Pyle.

17. And — he said, Send.] “Since your importunity will take no denial, please yourselves, try the event, send your messengers.” Bp. Hall. Compare Numb. xxii. 20.

21. — and cast the salt in there,] The manner in which Elisha sweetened the fountain, and made the soil fruitful, was by casting salt into the water, to make the miracle more conspicuous; for salt is a thing which of all others makes water less fit to drink, and the ground more barren. Stackhouse.

23. — came forth little children] The children probably acted by the instigation of their parents. This town of Beth-el was one of the principal nurseries of Ahab's idolatry, and the people so degenerate, as to have a perfect contempt of all such Prophets as him, Go up, thou bald head; go up, thou bald head.

Before
CHRIST
896.

24 And he turned back, and looked on them, and cursed them in the name of the LORD. And there came forth two she bears out of the wood, and tare forty and two children of them.

25 And he went from thence to mount Carmel, and from thence he returned to Samaria.

CHAP. III.

1 Jehoram's reign. 4 Mesha rebelleth. 6 Jehoram, with Jehoshaphat, and the king of Edom, being distressed for want of water, by Elisha obtaineth water, and promise of victory. 21 The Moabites, deceived by the colour of the water, coming to spoil, are overcome. 26 The king of Moab, by sacrificing the king of Edom's son, raiseth the siege.

196. NOW Jehoram the son of Ahab began to reign over Israel in Samaria the eighteenth year of Jehoshaphat king of Judah, and reigned twelve years.

2 And he wrought evil in the sight of the LORD; but not like his father, and like his mother: for he put away the † image of Baal that his father had made.

† Heb.
statue.

3 Nevertheless he cleaved unto the sins of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, which made Israel to sin; he departed not therefrom.

4 ¶ And Mesha king of Moab was a reproved them for their flagrant vices. Pyle. We should not understand them to be literally children, but grown up youths; the term "child" being applied in the Hebrew language to grown up persons. The provocation Elisha received was an insult offered to him, not as a man, but as a Prophet; and it was in his character of a Prophet that he cursed them, which was followed by the Divine infliction of destruction on the offenders. What effect this signal judgment had on the idolatrous inhabitants of the land, is no where stated; but it is probable that it was not without a good effect. Bp. Watson.

The infliction of immediate punishment on these "children" was a proper rebuke to the people of Beth-el for their irreverence and insult upon a Prophet of God, and therein upon God Himself. They might derive from it instruction to train up their children in future to good manners, and to the fear of God: and for the present they might see how God detests scoffers and mockers, and what reverence He expects to be paid to His holy Prophets. Dr. Waterland. O fearful example of Divine justice! This was not the revenge of an angry Prophet; it was the punishment of a righteous Judge. God and His seer looked through these children at the parents, at all Israel. He would punish the parents' bad education of their children to the contemptuous usage of a Prophet, with the death of those children whom they mistaught. He would teach Israel what it is to misuse a Prophet; and, if He would not endure such conduct unrevengeed in the young, what vengeance was enough for aged persecutors! Bp. Hall.

— thou bald head. Perhaps it was usual for a Prophet to go with his head bare. The Eastern dervises do so at this day. Sir J. Chardin.

Chap. III. ver. 2. — he put away the image of Baal It is probable that his mother Jezebel, as well as himself, was alarmed at the judgments which God had sent upon the family, and was sheepmaster, and rendered unto the king of Israel an hundred thousand lambs, and an hundred thousand rams, with the wool. Before

CHRIST
896.

5 But it came to pass, when ^a Ahab was ^a Chap. i. 1. dead, that the king of Moab rebelled against the king of Israel.

6 ¶ And king Jehoram went out of Samaria the same time, and numbered all Israel.

7 And he went and sent to Jehoshaphat the king of Judah, saying, The king of Moab hath rebelled against me: wilt thou go with me against Moab to battle? And he said, I will go up: ^b I am as thou art, ^b 1 Kings 22. 4. my people as thy people, and my horses as thy horses.

8 And he said, Which way shall we go up? And he answered, The way through the wilderness of Edom.

9 So the king of Israel went, and the king of Judah, and the king of Edom: and they fetched a compass of seven days' journey: and there was no water for the host, and for the cattle † that followed them.

† Heb.
at their feet.

10 And the king of Israel said, Alas! that the LORD hath called these three kings together, to deliver them into the hand of Moab!

11 But Jehoshaphat said, Is there not here a prophet of the LORD, that we may therefore now content to worship Baal in private. Perhaps, too, Jehoshaphat refused to assist him in his war with the Moabites, till he had renounced the publick profession of idolatry. Bp. Patrick.

4. — was a sheepmaster. In ancient times, as has been before observed, the riches not only of private persons, but also of kings, consisted very much in sheep and cattle: and such is the meaning of the expression here, that Mesha was "a sheepmaster," that is, a great possessor of sheep. The number of sheep which, as is stated in this verse, he "rendered" to the king of Israel, appears to be prodigious; but then it should be considered, that sheep in those countries were far more abundant than is consistent with our experience. Also, this does not appear to be stated as an annual tribute, but a satisfaction for the damage the Israelites had sustained in the war with them, and by the revolt from them. Bp. Patrick.

8. — The way through the wilderness of Edom. Their nearest and most direct way to invade Moab, which lay over Jordan, was through the tribe of Reuben, or the south part of the country beyond Jordan; but they fetched a compass through the wilderness of Edom, which probably lay on the southwest of the Salt sea, and so invaded Moab on those parts, which were most distant from Israel, and on which, in consequence, they least expected to be invaded. Dr. Wells.

9. — the king of Edom. That is, the viceroy appointed by the king of Judah: it appears from 1 Kings xxii. 47, that there was no king of Edom.

10. — Alas! that the Lord hath called &c. Jehoram has so much grace as to confess the impotency of those he trusted, and the power of that God whom he had neglected. Every sinner cannot see and acknowledge the hand of God in his sufferings. Already has the distressed prince gained something by his misery. Bp. Hall.

Before
CHRIST
895.

enquire of the LORD by him? And one of the king of Israel's servants answered and said, Here is Elisha the son of Shaphat, which poured water on the hands of Elijah.

12 And Jehoshaphat said, The word of the LORD is with him. So the king of Israel and Jehoshaphat and the king of Edom went down to him.

13 And Elisha said unto the king of Israel, What have I to do with thee? get thee to the prophets of thy father, and to the prophets of thy mother. And the king of Israel said unto him, Nay: for the LORD hath called these three kings together, to deliver them into the hand of Moab.

14 And Elisha said, As the LORD of hosts liveth, before whom I stand, surely, were it not that I regard the presence of Jehoshaphat the king of Judah, I would not look toward thee, nor see thee.

15 But now bring me a minstrel. And it came to pass, when the minstrel played, that the hand of the LORD came upon him.

16 And he said, Thus saith the LORD, Make this valley full of ditches.

17 For thus saith the LORD, Ye shall not see wind, neither shall ye see rain; yet that valley shall be filled with water, that ye may drink, both ye, and your cattle, and your beasts.

18 And this is but a light thing in the sight of the LORD: he will deliver the Moabites also into your hand. Before CHRIST

895.

19 And ye shall smite every fenced city, and every choice city, and shall fell every good tree, and stop all wells of water, and *†*mar every good piece of land with stones. † Heb.
grieve.

20 And it came to pass in the morning, when the meat offering was offered, that, behold, there came water by the way of Edom, and the country was filled with water.

21 ¶ And when all the Moabites heard that the kings were come up to fight against them, they *†*gathered all that were able to *†*put on armour, and upward, and stood in the border. † Heb.
were cried together.
† Heb. gird himself with a girdle.

22 And they rose up early in the morning, and the sun shone upon the water, and the Moabites saw the water on the other side as red as blood:

23 And they said, This is blood: the kings are surely *†*slain, and they have smitten one another: now therefore, Moab, to the spoil. † Heb.
destroyed.

24 And when they came to the camp of Israel, the Israelites rose up and smote the Moabites, so that they fled before them: but || they went forward smiting the Moabites, even in their country. || Or, they smote in it even smiting.

25 And they beat down the cities, and on every good piece of land cast every man his stone, and filled it; and they stopped all the wells of water, and felled all the good trees: *†*only in Kir-haraseth. † Heb.
until he left the stones thereof in Kir-haraseth.

11. — which poured water on the hands of Elijah.] Which was his servant, and ministered unto him. Bp. Patrick. The expression, "to pour water on the hands of a person," signifies, in allusion to a Jewish custom, "to minister unto," or "to serve." As this phrase is not understood in English, perhaps it were better to translate, "who attended upon," or "ministered unto" Elijah. Pilkington.

13. — Nay: for the Lord hath called these three kings] The king of Israel means to say, "However I may have deserved to be disregarded in this suit, yet have pity on these other princes, who are joined with me; let us not, for the mere want of water, be delivered into the hand of Moab." Bp. Hall.

15. But now bring me a minstrel.] He sent for a minstrel to compose his spirits by musick, so much was his indignation roused at Jehoram's behaviour, and particularly at the irreligious expressions which he used, ver. 10. Pyle. Who wonders not to hear a Prophet call for a minstrel, in the midst of that mournful distress of Israel and Judah? It was not for their ears, it was for his own bosom, that Elisha called for musick, that his spirits, after their zealous agitation, might be sweetly composed, and put into a meet temper for receiving the calm visions of God. Perhaps it was some holy Levite, following the camp of Jehoshaphat, whose minstrelsy was required for so sacred a purpose. None but a quiet breast is capable of Divine revelation; and nothing is more powerful to settle a troubled heart, than a melodious harmony. Bp. Hall.

Much the same effect appears to have been produced in this instance of Elisha by the soothing, the tranquillizing power of musick, as in the instance of the hypochondriack Saul. The Prophet's mind was agitated, vexed, and mortified at what he saw around him: thus uneasy and bewildered, he felt himself unfit for supplication to God, or for receiving communication from Him. To acquire that self-collection, that self-possession, which is of the essence of devotion, the Prophet has recourse to musick. A sacred song by its sentiments, a sacred air by its association of ideas, recalls the wandering thought, the roving mind, and fixes them on that object which is the most interesting to devout contemplation. Script. illust. Expos. Ind.

— the hand of the Lord] The power of the Lord, a Divine inspiration. Bp. Wilson.

17. — Ye shall not see wind,] It is very common in these Eastern countries for a squall of wind to precede rain; on which account he says, "Ye shall not see wind." Harmer. The circumstances here mentioned deserve attention, and furnish a certain proof of a miracle. It commonly happens in these countries, after a long drought, that the rains are accompanied with violent winds, which break the clouds against each other; and without rain the rivers do not overflow. But, on this occasion, without wind or rain, "there came water by the way of Edom," (that is, down the rocks and mountains of Edom.) Thus it issued by the express command of God from the bowels of the earth, and flowed into the camp of the allied princes. Scheuchzer.

19. — shall fell every good tree,] This is a mode of distressing an enemy still practised in this country. The Arabs of the Holy Land, in the present times, make war on each other by burning the corn, cutting down the olive trees, carrying off the sheep, and doing all possible damage of this description. Harmer.

— stop all wells of water,] See the note on Gen. xxvi. 15.

25. — only in Kir-haraseth] They left no walls standing, ex-

Before
CHRIST
895.

left they the stones thereof; howbeit the slingers went about it, and smote it.

26 ¶ And when the king of Moab saw that the battle was too sore for him, he took with him seven hundred men that drew swords, to break through even unto the king of Edom: but they could not.

27 Then he took his eldest son that should have reigned in his stead, and offered him for a burnt offering upon the wall. And there was great indignation against Israel: and they departed from him, and returned to their own land.

CHAP. IV.

1 Elisha multiplieth the widow's oil. 8 He giveth a son to the good Shunammite. 18 He raiseth again her dead son. 38 At Gilgal he healeth the deadly pottage. 42 He satisfieth an hundred men with twenty loaves.

NOW there cried a certain woman of the wives of the sons of the prophets unto Elisha, saying, Thy servant my husband is dead; and thou knowest that thy servant did fear the LORD: and the creditor is come to take unto him my two sons to be bondmen.

2 And Elisha said unto her, What shall I do for thee? tell me, what hast thou in the house? And she said, Thine handmaid hath not any thing in the house, save a pot of oil.

3 Then he said, Go, borrow thee vessels cepting in the royal city, where they were exceedingly strong, Isai. xvi. 7, 11. Bp. Patrick.

27. Then he took his eldest son &c.] He sacrificed his son as a last desperate act. We find, not only from the Scriptures, but from several heathen writers, that it was customary among the heathens, on some occasions, to sacrifice to their gods whatsoever was most dear to them. Cesar tells us, among others, that when the Gauls were afflicted with grievous diseases, or in time of war and great danger, they offered men for sacrifices, or made vows to that effect. It has been supposed by some writers, that the king of Moab, in this instance, sacrificed his son to the God of Israel, hoping to appease His wrath, and to move the compassion of the kings who were besieging him: but it is more probable that he offered the sacrifice to some false deity, perhaps to Chemosh the national god. Stackhouse. Or the meaning may be, that he sacrificed the king of Edom's eldest son, whom perhaps he had taken prisoner in his late desperate sally. Bps. Wilson and Hall.

— there was great indignation against Israel:] These words should be translated, “there was great remorse in Israel,” or “there was great indignation in Israel;” for the Hebrew words will bear either sense. The sight of this sacrifice was so shocking, and so moved the hearts of the kings of Israel and Judah, that they raised the siege by common consent, and returned home. Pyle.

Chap. IV. ver. 1. — the creditor is come to take — my two sons] The Jewish law looked upon children as the proper goods of their parents, who had power to sell them for seven years, as their creditors had to compel them to do it, in order to pay their debts; and from the Jews this custom was propagated to the Athenians, and from them to the Romans. It seemed a little hard that the children of a poor man, who have no manner of inheritance left abroad of all thy neighbours, even empty vessels; || borrow not a few. Before

CHRIST
895.

4 And when thou art come in, thou shalt shut the door upon thee and upon thy sons, and shalt pour out into all those vessels, and thou shalt set aside that which is full. || Or,
scant not.

5 So she went from him, and shut the door upon her and upon her sons, who brought the vessels to her; and she poured out.

6 And it came to pass, when the vessels were full, that she said unto her son, Bring me yet a vessel. And he said unto her, There is not a vessel more. And the oil stayed.

7 Then she came and told the man of God. And he said, Go, sell the oil, and pay thy || debt, and live thou and thy children of the rest. || Or, creditor.

8 ¶ And † it fell on a day, that Elisha passed to Shunem, where was a great woman; and she † constrained him to eat bread. And so it was, that as oft as he passed by, he turned in thither to eat bread. † Heb.
there was a day.
† Heb. laid hold on him.

9 And she said unto her husband, Behold now, I perceive that this is an holy man of God, which passeth by us continually.

10 Let us make a little chamber, I pray thee, on the wall; and let us set for him there a bed, and a table, and a stool, and a them, should be compelled into slavery, in order to pay their deceased father's debts; and yet this was the custom, as appears from this passage, wherein the Prophet does not pretend to reprove the creditors, but only puts the woman in a method to pay the debts. Cabnet.

How thick did the miseries of this poor afflicted woman light upon her; her husband lost, her estate clogged with debts, her children ready to be taken for slaves! Her creditors are cruel, and rake in the half-closed wounds of her sorrow, passing an arrest worse than death upon her sons. Widowhood, poverty, servitude, have conspired to make her perfectly miserable. Bp. Hall.

7. Then she came and told the man of God.] While she is justly affected by the sight, she is not transported from her duty. We do not see her running forth into the street to proclaim her store, nor calling in her neighbours, either to admire or to bargain. We see her running immediately to the Prophet's door, gratefully acknowledging the favour, and depending on his directions; as not daring to dispose of that which was so wondrously given her, without the advice of him by whose powerful means she had received it. Bp. Hall.

8. — Shunem, where was a great woman;] Shunem was a city in the tribe of Issachar, “where was a great woman,” one who had a great estate, and probably kept a great house. Bp. Patrick.

— she constrained him] Meaning, she prevailed upon him by importunity and earnestness. Dr. S. Clarke.

10. — a little chamber — on the wall;] A private room, remote from the house; where he might retire, and without noise or disturbance give himself to prayer and meditation, and follow his sacred studies. Bp. Patrick.

To most of the houses in the East there is usually a small back house annexed, in which strangers are generally lodged and enter-

Before
CHRIST
895.

candlestick: and it shall be, when he cometh to us, that he shall turn in thither.

11 And it fell on a day, that he came thither, and he turned into the chamber, and lay there.

12 And he said to Gehazi his servant, Call this Shunammite. And when he had called her, she stood before him.

13 And he said unto him, Say now unto her, Behold, thou hast been careful for us with all this care; what is to be done for thee? wouldest thou be spoken for to the king, or to the captain of the host? And she answered, I dwell among mine own people.

14 And he said, What then is to be done for her? And Gehazi answered, Verily she hath no child, and her husband is old.

15 And he said, Call her. And when he had called her, she stood in the door.

^a Gen. 18. 10. [†] Heb. set time. 16 And he said, ^a About this [†] season, according to the time of life, thou shalt embrace a son. And she said, Nay, my lord, thou man of God, do not lie unto thine handmaid.

17 And the woman conceived, and bare a son at that season that Elisha had said unto her, according to the time of life.

18 ¶ And when the child was grown, it fell on a day, that he went out to his father to the reapers.

19 And he said unto his father, My head, my head. And he said to a lad, Carry him to his mother.

20 And when he had taken him, and

Before
CHRIST
895.

brought him to his mother, he sat on her knees till noon, and then died.

21 And she went up, and laid him on the bed of the man of God, and shut the door upon him, and went out.

22 And she called unto her husband, and said, Send me, I pray thee, one of the young men, and one of the asses, that I may run to the man of God, and come again.

23 And he said, Wherefore wilt thou go to him to day? it is neither new moon, nor sabbath. And she said, It shall be [†] well.

[†] Heb. peace.

24 Then she saddled an ass, and said to her servant, Drive, and go forward; [†] slack not thy riding for me, except I bid thee.

[†] Heb. restrain not for me to ride.

25 So she went and came unto the man of God to mount Carmel. And it came to pass, when the man of God saw her afar off, that he said to Gehazi his servant, Behold, yonder is that Shunammite:

26 Run now, I pray thee, to meet her, and say unto her, Is it well with thee? is it well with thy husband? is it well with the child? And she answered, It is well.

27 And when she came to the man of God to the hill, she caught [†] him by the feet: but Gehazi came near to thrust her away. And the man of God said, Let her alone; for her soul is [†] vexed within her:

[†] Heb. by his feet.

and the Lord hath hid it from me, and hath not told me.

[†] Heb. bitter.

28 Then she said, Did I desire a son of my lord? did I not say, Do not deceive me?

29 Then he said to Gehazi, Gird up thy loins, and take my staff in thine hand, and go thy way: if thou meet any man, salute tained, and whither men retire from the hurry and noise of their families, to be more at leisure for meditation or diversion. "The little chamber" built by the Shunammite for Elisha may have probably been of this description. Dr. Shaw, Harmer.

— a bed,] The beds of the Hebrews were nothing more than couches without curtains; except indeed they had light coverings, which the Greeks called canopies, because they served to keep off the gnats. Fleury.

— and a stool,] The ancient inhabitants of the East did not universally sit on the floor on some mat or carpet, as do the moderns; they sometimes sat on a sort of throne, or seat more or less resembling our chairs, often raised so high as to require a footstool. But it was considered as a piece of splendour, and offered as a mark of particular respect. The seat prepared by the Shunammite for the Prophet was probably designed as a mark of respect, and therefore is less properly called "a stool" in our translation. Harmer.

13. — I dwell among mine own people.] She answers, that she lived very quietly and contentedly on her own means of subsistence, and had no favours to beg of any body. Pyle. I have no occasion to complain, or to seek redress, nor do I want any thing. Bp. Wilson.

16. — About this season, according to the time of life,] About the set time, according to the ordinary time of conception and birth. Bp. Hall.

22. — that I may run to the man of God,] The good Shunammite had lost her son; she had not lost her faith. Sorrow had not robbed her of her wisdom. Her strong faith could not be discouraged by the seizure and continuance of death: raising up her heart still to an expectation of that life, which to the eyes of nature had been impossible, irrevocable. O infinite goodness of the Almighty, that would not suffer such faith to be frustrate, that would rather reverse the laws of nature, in returning a guest from heaven, and raising a corpse from death, than disappoint the confidence of a believing heart! Bp. Hall.

23. — it is neither new moon, nor sabbath.] It appears by this that the Prophets were the publick instructors of the people: and their houses were a kind of school or synagogue, unto which the people resorted, upon the days here mentioned, to be taught their duty out of the law of God, and to be resolved in their doubts. And the Prophets accordingly were constantly in some certain place upon these days, to give the people their instruction. Bp. Patrick.

24. — Drive, and go forward;] It is the modern custom in these countries of the East, when a female rides, for a servant to follow on foot, and to drive, (as the expression here is,) and not lead, the animal. Harmer.

26. — she answered, It is well.] It appears she did not think fit to tell Gehazi all the truth, but chose rather to deliver it to the Prophet himself. Bp. Patrick. It is well; trouble not thyself with this question, I will give an account of it to thy master; in the mean time rest thou contented. Bp. Hall.

29. — if thou meet any man, salute him not;] The salutations

Before
CHRIST
895.

him not; and if any salute thee, answer him not again: and lay my staff upon the face of the child.

30 And the mother of the child said, As the Lord liveth, and as thy soul liveth, I will not leave thee. And he arose, and followed her.

† Heb.
attentim.

31 And Gehazi passed on before them, and laid the staff upon the face of the child; but there was neither voice, nor † hearing. Wherefore he went again to meet him, and told him, saying, The child is not awaked.

32 And when Elisha was come into the house, behold, the child was dead, and laid upon his bed.

33 He went in therefore, and shut the door upon them twain, and prayed unto the Lord.

34 And he went up, and lay upon the child, and put his mouth upon his mouth, and his eyes upon his eyes, and his hands upon his hands: and he stretched himself upon the child; and the flesh of the child waxed warm.

† Heb.
once higher,
and once thither.

35 Then he returned, and walked in the house † to and fro; and went up, and stretched himself upon him: and the child sneezed seven times, and the child opened his eyes.

36 And he called Gehazi, and said, Call this Shunammite. So he called her. And when she was come in unto him, he said, Take up thy son.

37 Then she went in, and fell at his feet, and bowed herself to the ground, and took up her son, and went out.

about 891.

38 ¶ And Elisha came again to Gilgal: and there was a dearth in the land; and the sons of the prophets were sitting before him: and he said unto his servant, Set on the great pot, and seethe pottage for the sons of the prophets. Before

CHRIST
about 891.

39 And one went out into the field to gather herbs, and found a wild vine, and gathered thereof wild gourds his lap full, and came and shred them into the pot of pottage: for they knew them not.

40 So they poured out for the men to eat. And it came to pass, as they were eating of the pottage, that they cried out, and said, O thou man of God, there is death in the pot. And they could not eat thereof.

41 But he said, Then bring meal. And he cast it into the pot; and he said, Pour out for the people, that they may eat. And there was no † harm in the pot.

† Heb.
evil thing.

42 ¶ And there came a man from Baalshalisha, and brought the man of God bread of the firstfruits, twenty loaves of barley, and full ears of corn || in the husk thereof. And he said, Give unto the people, that they may eat. || Or,
in his scrip, or, garment.

43 And his servitor said, What, should I set this before an hundred men? He said again, Give the people, that they may eat: for thus saith the Lord, ^b They shall eat, and shall leave thereof. ^b John 6.
11.

44 So he set it before them, and they did eat, and left thereof, according to the word of the Lord.

CHAP. V.

1 Naaman, by the report of a captive maid, is sent to Samaria to be cured of his leprosy. 8 Elisha, sending him to Jordan, cureth him. 15 He refusing Naaman's of the East consist of a great number of formalities, and often take up a considerable time. Thus Elisha's enjoining Gehazi not to salute any that he met, is strongly expressive of the haste he was in to recover the child. Harmer.

31. — but there was neither voice, nor hearing.] Respecting the cause of this failure, learned men are divided in opinion. Some attribute the fault to Gehazi, who did not accurately follow Elisha's commands; others think that it was owing to a want of faith in the woman, which was shewn in her determination not to quit the Prophet, ver. 30. Others again suppose, that the Prophet sent his staff to recover the child, entirely from the suggestion of his own mind, and that he was not moved to it by the Spirit of God. Culmei.

37. Then she went in, — and took up her son.] God, after He had given a son to the Shunammite, was pleased that this son should die, that He might restore him to her by a miracle. The proceeding of this woman, who, as soon as her son was dead, went immediately to seek for Elisha, shews her surprising faith, and her hope that the same Prophet, who had promised the birth of the child, would restore him to life; and she was not disappointed of her hope. God often afflicts His children in the most sensible manner, that He may afterwards give them stronger tokens of His love, by delivering them, and giving them a happy issue out of their afflictions, and making those afflictions confirm them in the faith and fear of the Lord. Ostervald.

39. — gathered thereof wild gourds] The “wild gourd” here is thought to have been a herb called coloquintida, which has a leaf much resembling that of the vine, and which therefore might easily be mistaken for it. This herb is a strong purgative, and is a poison, if not qualified and taken in a moderate quantity. As it is bitter and distasteful, they concluded immediately, ver. 40, that there was some venomous herb in the pot. When the Prophet took away the poisonous quality by putting meal into the pot, ver. 41, we are not to suppose that there was any virtue in the meal itself, but the whole event was miraculous, brought about by the immediate power of God. Bp. Patrick.

The Hebrew word which we render “vine,” may be taken as extensively as our word “bine,” (bind,) for a creeping plant: thus it may include melons, pumpkins, gourds, &c.; and it might be, that a person, designing to gather melons or cucumbers, should mistake a wild gourd, or the bitter cucumber, or coloquintida, for a plant of that kind, though it has no resemblance to the fruit of the vine. When it is said, that “they knew them not,” it is probably meant, that they distinguished them not: there being many wild herbs gathered on this occasion, and shred together, this passed without being observed or detected. Script. illust. Expos. Ind.

Engraved by Alfred Dill.

ELISHA RAISING THE SHUNAMMITE'S SON.

Published by the Society for promoting Christian Knowledge, No. 7, Abchurch Lane.

2 Kings ch. iv. v. 37.

Engraved by Alfred Dill.

Before
CHRIST
about 894.

gifts granteth him some of the earth. 20 Gehazi, abusing his master's name unto Naaman, is smitten with leprosy.

Before
CHRIST
about 894.

NOW Naaman, captain of the host of the king of Syria, was a great man with his master, and ||† honourable, because by him the LORD had given || deliverance unto Syria: he was also a mighty man in valour, but he was a leper.

2 And the Syrians had gone out by companies, and had brought away captive out of the land of Israel a little maid; and she † waited on Naaman's wife.

3 And she said unto her mistress, Would God my lord were † with the prophet that is in Samaria! for he would † recover him of his leprosy.

4 And one went in, and told his lord, saying, Thus and thus said the maid that is of the land of Israel.

5 And the king of Syria said, Go to, go, and I will send a letter unto the king of Israel. And he departed, and took † with him ten talents of silver, and six thousand pieces of gold, and ten changes of raiment.

6 And he brought the letter to the king of Israel, saying, Now when this letter is come unto thee, behold, I have therewith sent Naaman my servant to thee, that thou mayest recover him of his leprosy.

7 And it came to pass, when the king of Israel had read the letter, that he rent his clothes, and said, Am I God, to kill and to make alive, that this man doth send unto me to recover a man of his leprosy? wherefore consider, I pray you, and see how he seeketh a quarrel against me.

8 ¶ And it was so, when Elisha the man of God had heard that the king of Israel had rent his clothes, that he sent to the king, saying, Wherefore hast thou rent thy clothes? let him come now to me, and he shall know that there is a prophet in Israel.

9 So Naaman came with his horses and with his chariot, and stood at the door of the house of Elisha.

10 And Elisha sent a messenger unto him, saying, Go and wash in Jordan seven times, and thy flesh shall come again to thee, and thou shalt be clean.

11 But Naaman was wroth, and went away, and said, Behold, † || I thought, He will surely come out to me, and stand, and call on the name of the LORD his God, and † strike his hand over the place, and recover the leper.

12 Are not || Abana and Pharpar, rivers

† Heb.
I said.
|| Or, I said
with myself;
He will surely come out, &c.
† Heb. move up and down.
|| Or,
Amama.

Chap. V. ver. 1. — but he was a leper.] The leprosy did not, it is probable, exclude him from the society of men in that country, where the Jewish law was not in force; but the disease was a great calamity to him, and likely to prove fatal, as no cure for it was known. Bp. Patrick.

3. — Would God my lord were with the prophet] It is probable from hence that Elisha had before cured others, not set down in this history, of such disorders; otherwise this maid would scarcely have thought of making this suggestion to her mistress. Bp. Wilson.

7. — Am I God, &c.] The king of Israel had forsaken the true God, and therefore never thought of His almighty power, nor of His Prophet. For this reason, he cannot read the letter without amazement of heart, without rending his clothes, and crying out in the manner here described. Wogan. It is a trouble to a well-affected heart to receive impossible commands. To require that of an inferior which is proper to the Most High, is a derogation from that Supreme Power whose property it is. Still, had Jehoram been truly religious, the injury done to his Maker in this request, as he took it, would have more afflicted him than the danger of his own quarrel. Bp. Hall.

10. And Elisha sent a messenger unto him, &c.] It is observable, that he does not speak to Naaman himself, but sends to him by a messenger. It did not misbecome him upon this occasion to take some state upon him, and to support the character and dignity of a Prophet of the most High God, especially as this might be a means of raising the honour of his religion and ministry, and of giving Naaman a more just idea of his miraculous cure, when he found that it was neither by the prayer nor presence of the Prophet, but by the Divine power and goodness, that it was effected. Stackhouse.

— wash in Jordan seven times.] Thus, according to the law of Moses, lepers were sprinkled seven times, Levit. xiv. 7, &c. Bp. Patrick.

11. But Naaman was wroth,] It is not always in man to perceive the fitness of those means which God uses to obtain His ends; though there can be no doubt they are the fittest that can be imagined. How indignant was this mighty Syrian, when he was told that, in order to be cured of his leprosy, he must wash himself seven times in Jordan! He expected something very different from this—"Behold, I thought, &c."—So reasoned this man, wise in his own conceit, and so would many wise men of modern times have reasoned on the occasion. But it proved in this, as it will prove in every instance, that "the foolishness of God was wiser than men." He washed in Jordan and was clean. Bp. Porteus.

12. Are not Abana and Pharpar, &c.] Naaman could not apprehend what virtue there was in the waters of Jordan, more than in other rivers, and was therefore unwilling to incur the trouble of going to wash in them. His mistake lay in this; he thought the cure must be performed by natural means, which was to be effected in a miraculous manner. Dr. Ibbot.

He understood not that the Prophet designed to restore him, not by any healing virtue in the waters of Jordan, but by the power of God; that the form or manner in which the cure was wrought, was perfectly indifferent, whether by message, or by personal attendance; whether with one ceremony or another. He considered not that the Prophet knew best the extent of his own commission, and the designs of his heavenly Master. He proudly refused to accept the blessing which he desired, because it was offered to him in a manner, which his own imagination had not suggested, or did not approve. Dr. Napleton.

We should apply the example of Naaman to ourselves; we should be cautious how we despise the ordinances enjoined upon us because they are common, easy, and plain; and should rather persuade ourselves, that the plainness and easiness of these ordinances, should be a great inducement to us to join in them, and to try what benefit we can derive from them. How can these waters of Jordan cleanse my leprosy? said Naaman. How can the water of baptism, and the bread and wine in the other sacra-

Before
CHRIST
about 894.

of Damascus, better than all the waters of Israel? may I not wash in them, and be clean? So he turned and went away in a rage.

13 And his servants came near, and spake unto him, and said, My father, if the prophet had bid thee do some great thing, wouldest thou not have done it? how much rather then, when he saith to thee, Wash, and be clean?

^a Luke 4.
27.

14 Then went he down, and dipped himself seven times in Jordan, according to the saying of the man of God: and his flesh came again like unto the flesh of a little child, and ^a he was clean.

15 ¶ And he returned to the man of God, he and all his company, and came, and stood before him: and he said, Behold, now I know that there is no God in all the earth, but in Israel: now therefore, I pray thee, take a blessing of thy servant.

ment, the Christian is too apt to ask, produce those great effects for which they are instituted? The answer is, by virtue of this very institution; because our great Prophet, the Divine Author of our religion, has blessed them, and appointed them to be the means of salvation. If He had enjoined us to perform much harder services for the attainment of His promises, common prudence would have told us, it was our best way to obey Him. But now, that He has made these small and easy observances the conditions of our happiness, how much more readily should we hearken to Him, how much more punctually perform what is commanded! Reading.

— Abana and Pharpar,] The valley of Damascus, which lay between Libanus and Antilibanus, was washed by five rivers, the two principal of which descended from mount Hermon, namely, Abana and Pharpar; the last of which flowed by the walls of Damascus, and the other flowed through the city and divided it into two parts. Bp. Patrick. These rivers are not now to be distinguished. Maundrell supposes they were branches of the Bar-rady, which waters Damascus. Script. illust. Expos. Ind.

13. — My father, if the prophet had bid thee &c.] Here was the language of reason and kindness. The language of reason, unaccompanied by kindness, will often fail of making an impression; it has no effect on the understanding, because it touches not the heart. The language of kindness, unassociated with reason, will frequently be unable to persuade; because, though it may gain upon the affections, it wants that which is necessary to convince the judgment. But let reason and kindness be united in a discourse, and seldom will even pride or prejudice find it easy to resist. Thus it was with Naaman. Gisborne.

15. — I know that there is no God in all the earth, &c.] O happy Syrian, that was cured at once of his leprosy, and of his want of faith in God! Naaman was too wise to think that either the water had cured him, or the man; he saw a Divine power working in both, such as he had vainly sought from his heathen deities; with the heart therefore he believes, with the mouth he confesses. Bp. Hall.

— take a blessing] A token of my gratitude to thee, and to God. Bp. Wilson.

Gratitude is a most natural virtue, a most rational duty, and ought to bear proportion to the favour received. Yet nothing is more rare to be found, especially towards God, and that, too often, among those who are of the household of faith. In this instance, a Syrian stranger is thankful for his double cure of his leprosy and idolatry; but we hear not of one Israelite who promoted by the miracle, or by the example. Wogan.

Before
CHRIST
about 894.

16 But he said, As the LORD liveth, before whom I stand, I will receive none. And he urged him to take it; but he refused.

17 And Naaman said, Shall there not then, I pray thee, be given to thy servant two mules' burden of earth? for thy servant will henceforth offer neither burnt offering nor sacrifice unto other gods, but unto the LORD.

18 In this thing the LORD pardon thy servant, that when my master goeth into the house of Rimmon to worship there, and he leaneth on my hand, and I bow myself in the house of Rimmon: when I bow down myself in the house of Rimmon, the LORD pardon thy servant in this thing.

19 And he said unto him, Go in peace. So he departed from him † a little way. † Heb. a little piece of ground.

16. But he said, As the Lord liveth, — I will receive none.] Naaman, in the fervour of gratitude and piety, was eager to load Elisha with costly gifts. But Elisha sought not, by healing Naaman, to enrich himself. His object was to promote the glory of God. Urged again and again therefore with the most importunate earnestness, he steadily refused to receive a reward. Gisborne.

17. — Shall there not — be given — two mules' burden of earth?] He intended to employ this in erecting an altar, on which he would sacrifice to no other but the God of Israel. He judged it reasonable to have an altar out of the land of Israel, because he saw that God peculiarly dwelt there; and he appears to have desired to have it a gift from the Prophet, under the idea that it would derive greater virtue from his blessing. Bp. Patrick.

The Mahometans in later times are accustomed to take "sacred earth" from places which they esteem sacred, of which they make their beads, and before a small portion of which they bow themselves when they pray. Sir J. Chardin.

18 — when my master goeth] Naaman pleads for permission to attend his master only in a civil capacity, to the house of Rimmon, which he thinks might well be allowed, while he publicly professed himself a worshipper of the God of Israel, and offered sacrifices and burnt offerings only to Him. Houbigant. Had not Naaman thought this a fault, he would not have craved a pardon. His heart told him that a perfect convert should not have abided the roof, the sight, the air of Rimmon; that his observance of an earthly master should not draw him to the semblance of an outward observance towards the rival of his Master in heaven; that a sincere detestation of idolatry could not stand with so unseasonable a courtesy. Bp. Hall.

— in the house of Rimmon:] It is thought by the generality of interpreters, that as the Syrians were great worshippers of the sun, this god is the same; and that the name Rimmon, or high, is given him, by reason of his elevation. According to others, the word Rimmon is the name that the Syrians give to pomegranates; and therefore, as their country was full of pomegranate trees, whose fruit is not only of a delicious taste, but of great use likewise on account of the excellent liquor which it produces, they gave perhaps the name of Pomegranate to their god, in the same manner that the Greeks and Latins gave that of Ceres to the goddess of corn. Stackhouse.

19. — Go in peace.] God speed thee well; go and do that which may best suit with the peace of a good conscience. I give thee no warrant or dispensation for it. Bp. Hall.

In this answer, the Prophet thinks fit to make no objection to Naaman's request. Pyle. An Israelite was forbidden to bow be-

Before
CHRIST
about 894.

20 ¶ But Gehazi, the servant of Elisha the man of God, said, Behold, my master hath spared Naaman this Syrian, in not receiving at his hands that which he brought: but, as the Lord liveth, I will run after him, and take somewhat of him.

21 So Gehazi followed after Naaman. And when Naaman saw him running after him, he lighted down from the chariot to meet him, and said, † Is all well?

22 And he said, All is well. My master hath sent me, saying, Behold, even now there be come to me from mount Ephraim two young men of the sons of the prophets: give them, I pray thee, a talent of silver, and two changes of garments.

23 And Naaman said, Be content, take two talents. And he urged him, and bound two talents of silver in two bags, with two changes of garments, and laid them upon two of his servants; and they bare them before him.

24 And when he came to the || tower, he took them from their hand, and bestowed them in the house: and he let the men go, and they departed.

† Heb.
Is there
peace?

§ Or, secret
place.

fore an idol, whatsoever his mind or intention might be; but a stranger was not bound by this law: therefore, because Naaman wished to go into the temple of Rimmon, not to pay adoration, but merely to perform his duty in waiting on his master, himself being a worshipper of the most high God alone, his request seems to have been made without offence to the Divine Majesty. Bp. Patrick. It was not out of condescension to any sinful infirmity that Elisha dismissed Naaman with the blessing of peace. It would have been a contradiction to his general character, if he had neglected to assert any part of the honour of God, when a case was proposed that affected it, and he had so fair an opportunity to declare his judgment upon it. His answer implied that all would succeed well: the Prophet desired him in it to set his heart at rest, and not to trouble himself with imaginary hardships. Reading.

22. — there be come to me — two young men] What a sound tale has the crafty Gehazi devised; of the number, the place, the quality, the age of his master's guests, that he might set a fair colour on that pretended request, so proportioning the value of his demand, that he might both enrich himself, and yet well stand with the moderation of his master. Bp. Hall.

24. — came to the tower] To the place where Elisha lodged; or, some understand, to a secret place, where Gehazi laid up what he had obtained. Bp. Patrick.

25. — Thy servant went no whither] He that began a lie to Naaman, ends it to his master. He, who once lets his tongue loose to a wilful untruth, soon grows impudent in multiplying falsehoods. Bp. Hall.

26. — Went not mine heart with thee] Couldst thou vainly hope to elude a Prophet of the Most High? Had I not notice from God of all the way that thou wentest, and of all thy behaviour towards Naaman? &c. Bp. Hall.

— Is it a time to receive money, &c.] Is this a time to think of purchasing and getting riches, &c. when this nation for its sins is about to be carried away captive? of which, it is probable, Elisha had often informed Gehazi. Bp. Wilson.

Miserable Gehazi! how didst thou now stand pale and trembling before the dreadful tribunal of thy severe master; looking for the woful sentence of some grievous judgment for so heinous an of-25 But he went in, and stood before his master. And Elisha said unto him, Whence comest thou, Gehazi? And he said, Thy servant went † no whither.

26 And he said unto him, Went not mine heart with thee, when the man turned again from his chariot to meet thee? Is it a time to receive money, and to receive garments, and oliveyards, and vineyards, and sheep, and oxen, and menservants, and maidservants?

27 The leprosy therefore of Naaman shall cleave unto thee, and unto thy seed for ever. And he went out from his presence a leper as white as snow.

Before
CHRIST
about 894.

† Heb. not hither,
or thither.

CHAP. VI.

1 Elisha, giving leave to the young prophets to enlarge their dwellings, causeth iron to swim. 8 He discloseth the king of Syria's counsel. 13 The army, which was sent to Dothan to apprehend Elisha, is smitten with blindness. 19 Being brought into Samaria, they are dismissed in peace. 24 The famine in Samaria causeth women to eat their own children. 30 The king sendeth to slay Elisha.

AND the sons of the prophets said unto Elisha, Behold now, the place where we dwell with thee is too strait for us.

fence! "Is this a time to receive money, and (which thou hadst purchased in thy own conceit) oliveyards, and vineyards? &c." Did I refuse, that thy hands should take? Was I so careful to win honour to my God, and credit to my profession, by denying these Syrian presents, that thou mightest destroy both in receiving them? Was there no way to enrich thyself, but by belying thy master, and disparaging his holy function, in the sight of a new convert? Bp. Hall.

27. — unto thy seed for ever] "Unto many generations," as the expression "for ever" frequently signifies in Scripture. Bp. Patrick. He justly deserved the punishment here inflicted, for he was guilty of a complication of crimes; a greedy covetousness, a profanation of God's name, with a contempt of His omniscience and justice, deliberate falsehood and theft, and a reproach wrongfully cast on the Prophet and his religion. Stackhouse.

In this action of Gehazi, and the punishment which followed, we may learn in general the nature and effect of covetousness. The Prophet had looked with contempt and indifference on the Syrian's wealth; Gehazi, with admiration and a greedy eye. The Prophet refused a present that he might do the greater honour to God and His religion; Gehazi thought of nothing but himself, and his own interest, of "oliveyards and vineyards, &c." And, as the miser thinks not of God, he forgets that God sees and observes him. He can lie, and swear too, "as the Lord liveth," to gain his knavish ends, without the least thought that the God, by whom he swears, hears his false oath, and will avenge the fraud. Avarice never lodges alone in any heart: Gehazi first breaks the tenth commandment, and immediately we find him breaking all the rest. The judgment which fell upon Gehazi for his wickedness, ought to warn us, not only of the curse which cleaves to ill-gotten wealth; but, above all, of the Divine vengeance which pursues all those who, for purposes of worldly gain, bring a scandal and a reproach on their religion. Wogan.

Chap. VI. ver. 1. And the sons of the prophets said &c.] The end of the miracles here recorded, as wrought by Elisha, was to preserve among the Israelites the knowledge of the God of their fathers, and to keep up the fear of Him in the hearts of those good men who still remained in the kingdom. Ostervald.

Before
CHRIST
about 893.

2 Let us go, we pray thee, unto Jordan, and take thence every man a beam, and let us make us a place there, where we may dwell. And he answered, Go ye.

3 And one said, Be content, I pray thee, and go with thy servants. And he answered, I will go.

4 So he went with them. And when they came to Jordan, they cut down wood.

5 But as one was felling a beam, the ^{† Heb. iron.} tax head fell into the water: and he cried, and said, Alas, master! for it was borrowed.

6 And the man of God said, Where fell it? And he shewed him the place. And he cut down a stick, and cast it in thither; and the iron did swim.

7 Therefore said he, Take it up to thee. And he put out his hand, and took it.

8 ¶ Then the king of Syria warred against Israel, and took counsel with his servants, saying, In such and such a place ^{¶ Or, encamping.} shall be my camp.

9 And the man of God sent unto the king of Israel, saying, Beware that thou pass not such a place; for thither the Syrians are come down.

10 And the king of Israel sent to the place which the man of God told him and warned him of, and saved himself there, not once nor twice.

11 Therefore the heart of the king of Syria was sore troubled for this thing; and he called his servants, and said unto them, Will ye not shew me which of us is for the king of Israel?

12 And one of his servants said, ^{† Heb. No.} None, my lord, O king: but Elisha, the prophet that is in Israel, telleth the king of Israel the words that thou speakest in thy bed-chamber.

13 ¶ And he said, Go and spy where he is, that I may send and fetch him. And it was told him, saying, Behold, he is in ^{Before CHRIST about 893.} Dothan.

14 Therefore sent he thither horses, and chariots, and a ^{† Heb. heavy.} great host: and they came by night, and compassed the city about.

15 And when the ^{¶ Or, minister.} servant of the man of God was risen early, and gone forth, behold, an host compassed the city both with horses and chariots. And his servant said unto him, Alas, my master! how shall we do?

16 And he answered, Fear not: for ^{2 Chron. 32. 7.} they that be with us are more than they that be with them.

17 And Elisha prayed, and said, LORD, I pray thee, open his eyes, that he may see. And the LORD opened the eyes of the young man; and he saw: and, behold, the mountain was full of horses and chariots of fire round about Elisha.

18 And when they came down to him, Elisha prayed unto the LORD, and said, Smite this people, I pray thee, with blindness. And he smote them with blindness according to the word of Elisha.

19 ¶ And Elisha said unto them, This is not the way, neither is this the city: ^{† Heb. come ye after me.} follow me, and I will bring you to the man whom ye seek. But he led them to Samaria.

20 And it came to pass, when they were come into Samaria, that Elisha said, LORD, open the eyes of these men, that they may see. And the LORD opened their eyes, and they saw; and, behold, they were in the midst of Samaria.

21 And the king of Israel said unto Elisha, when he saw them, My father, shall I smite them? shall I smite them?

22 And he answered, Thou shalt not smite them: wouldest thou smite those

12. — but Elisha, the prophet] It is probable that Naaman, on his return to Samaria, spread the fame of Elisha so much in the court of Syria, that some of the great men might have the curiosity to make further inquiries respecting him; and, hearing of several of his miraculous works, they might thence conclude, that he could tell the greatest secrets, as well as perform such wonders as were related of him; and that therefore, in all probability, he was the person who gave the king of Israel intelligence of all the schemes which had been contrived to entrap him. Bp. Patrick.

13. — in Dothan.] A city in the tribe of Manasseh, not far from Samaria.

16. And he answered, Fear not:] How undaunted is the courage of faith! Elisha sees all this, and yet sits in his chamber so secure, as if the hosts which surrounded him had been only the guard of Israel for his safe protection. Bp. Hall.

17. — Lord, I pray thee, open his eyes.] O Lord, do Thou so give light and strength to the eyes of this my servant, that he may discern this spiritual aid, which Thou hast provided for our succour and rescue. Bp. Hall.

Elisha prayed to God to give his servant a sight of the heavenly powers that were placed in his defence; when immediately the man saw his master and himself surrounded with a vast angelick host, like a train of fiery chariots and horses, to destroy his enemies. Pyle.

18. — smote them with blindness] Such a blindness that they could only see to a short distance before them. Bp. Wilson.

22. — Thou shalt not smite them:] As if he had said, These are God's captives, not thine; and, if they were thine own, their blood could not have been shed without cruelty. Though in the hot chases of war, executions may be justifiable, yet, in the coolness of deliberation, it can be no other than inhuman to take those lives which have been yielded to mercy. Bp. Hall.

Besides the humanity and charity of the advice here given by Elisha, there was this prudence and policy in the kind treatment of the Syrians, that, by this means, their hearts might be softened towards the Israelites, so that upon their return they might proclaim the power and goodness of the God of Israel; and not only

Before
CHRIST
about 893.

whom thou hast taken captive with thy sword and with thy bow? set bread and water before them, that they may eat and drink, and go to their master.

23 And he prepared great provision for them: and when they had eaten and drunk, he sent them away, and they went to their master. So the bands of Syria came no more into the land of Israel.

about 892.

24 ¶ And it came to pass after this, that Ben-hadad king of Syria gathered all his host, and went up, and besieged Samaria.

25 And there was a great famine in Samaria: and, behold, they besieged it, until an ass's head was sold for fourscore pieces of silver, and the fourth part of a cab of dove's dung for five pieces of silver.

Or,
Let not the LORD save
thee.

26 And as the king of Israel was passing by upon the wall, there cried a woman unto him, saying, Help, my lord, O king.

27 And he said, ¶ If the LORD do not

Before
CHRIST
about 892.

help thee, whence shall I help thee? out of the barnfloor, or out of the winepress?

28 And the king said unto her, What aileth thee? And she answered, This woman said unto me, Give thy son, that we may eat him to day, and we will eat my son to morrow.

29 So ^b we boiled my son, and did eat him: and I said unto her on the [†] next day, Give thy son, that we may eat him: and she hath hid her son. ^{* Deut. 28. 53. † Heb. other.}

30 ¶ And it came to pass, when the king heard the words of the woman, that he rent his clothes; and he passed by upon the wall, and the people looked, and, behold, he had sackcloth within upon his flesh.

31 Then he said, God do so and more also to me, if the head of Elisha the son of Shaphat shall stand on him this day.

32 But Elisha sat in his house, and the elders sat with him; and the king sent a be afraid themselves, but dissuade others from opposing a people who had so invincible a Protector. Stackhouse.

— set bread and water before them,] O noble revenge of Elisha, to feast his persecutors, to provide a table for those who had provided a grave for him! These Syrians had come full of bloody purposes against Elisha. He sends them back full of good cheer and jollity. Thus should a Prophet punish his pursuers. No vengeance but this is fit for Christian imitation. Bp. Hall.

23. — the bands of Syria came no more] It appears from the next verse, that the king of Syria soon afterwards brought his hosts to besiege Samaria: so that the meaning of this expression must be, either that for the present they quite retreated and laid aside the thoughts of war, though afterwards they broke out again into hostilities; or (which is the plainest sense) that their bands made no more incursions and inroads, but resolved to come and fall upon them, not in small parties, and by ambushes, but with a formed and regular army, with which they laid siege to Samaria. Bp. Patrick.

25. — an ass's head — for fourscore pieces of silver,] If we reckon these pieces of silver, or shekels, at fifteen pence a piece, they amount to five pounds sterling; a vast price for so small a quantity of meat, and that unclean, according to the law, Levit. xi. 26. However, in times of famine and extreme necessity, the Jews themselves were absolved from the observation of the law. There do not want instances in history, where other people, on similar occasions, have been reduced to the like distress, if that be true which Plutarch relates, that, in Artaxerxes's war with the Cadusii, an ass's head could scarcely have been purchased for sixty drachms, or two pounds five shillings of our money. Stackhouse, Calmet.

— the fourth part of a cab of dove's dung] The cab is one of the smallest measures among the Hebrews. The Hebrew word, translated "dove's dung," is so rendered by a great number of the old versions; but it is hard to believe that such can be the true sense; and Bochart has rendered it extremely probable, that fitches or lentils are here meant, which, although a very common food, were yet sold at this dear price. Bp. Patrick.

Or, allowing the received translation, it may be supposed that the dove's dung was used as a manure, which was useful in producing vegetables. Sir J. Chardin tells us, that in Persia they have a multitude of dove-houses, which they keep up, more for the manure which they produce, than for any thing else. Harmer.

The general opinion of writers, since Bochart, has been, that a kind of chickpea or tare is here meant, which has very much the appearance of dove's dung, and may thence have received its name.

In Arabick writers, the words Kali and Ugnen signify both the dung of pigeons, and chickpeas. Great quantities of chickpeas are sold in Cairo to the pilgrims going to Mecca. Fragments to Calmet.

Otherwise, by the term translated "dove's dung," may be meant a plant, called by botanists Ornithogalum, (ornithogalum umbellatum,) and by us Beth-lehem's Star. This plant bears a flower which resembles in colour the dung of doves and other birds, and it thence has its botanical name Ornithogalum, which signifies bird's milk. It is very abundant in Palestine, and it thence obtains its English name of Beth-lehem's Star. And the root of this plant is a common article of food in those countries, among the poorer people especially, to this day. These circumstances united, give a considerable degree of probability to this conjecture. Linnaeus.

In the relation of the dreadful famine in Samaria, we see the judgments of God on that city, and the accomplishment of the curses that Moses had denounced against the Israelites, particularly where he says, that mothers should eat their own children in the time of the siege and straitness with which their enemies should distress them. Ostervald.

29. So we boiled &c.] The circumstances here related were a terrible effect of the Divine vengeance, which Moses had long before told the Israelites was to fall upon them, Deut. xxviii. 53, &c. if they rebelled against God. Stackhouse.

30. — he rent his clothes; &c.] He did this, out of excessive grief and horror at the woman's recital. Bp. Patrick.

31. — if the head of Elisha] He thus vents his anger against Elisha, probably because he supposed he had not made use of his interest and prayers to God, to free them from this sad calamity. Bp. Wilson. Instead of being penitent, Jehoram is furious, and turns his rage from his own sins against the holy Prophet. But what had the righteous Elisha done? Perhaps, that we may imagine some colour for this displeasure, he had forethreatened this judgment; but the Israelites justly deserved it. Perhaps he might have averted it by his prayers, but their want of repentance disabled him. Perhaps he persuaded Jehoram to hold out the siege, though through severe suffering, but he himself foresaw the deliverance. In all this, how had Elisha forfeited his head? But such is the fashion of the world: the wicked blame the innocent, and will revenge their own sins on others' uprightness. Bp. Hall.

— Elisha the son of Shaphat] He calls him thus by way of contempt, as meaning to say, This worthless fellow of a mean family. Bp. Wilson.

32. — Elisha sat in his house,] By "his house," some interpreters understand the school where the sons of the Prophets met

Before
CHRIST
about 892.

man from before him: but ere the messenger came to him, he said to the elders, See ye how this son of a murderer hath sent to take away mine head? look, when the messenger cometh, shut the door, and hold him fast at the door: is not the sound of his master's feet behind him?

33 And while he yet talked with them, behold, the messenger came down unto him: and he said, Behold, this evil is of the LORD; what should I wait for the LORD any longer?

CHAP. VII.

1 Elisha prophesieth incredible plenty in Samaria. 3 Four lepers, venturing on the host of the Syrians, bring tidings of their flight. 12 The king, finding by spies the news to be true, spoileth the tents of the Syrians. 17 The lord, who would not believe the prophecy of plenty, having the charge of the gate, is trodden to death in the press.

about 892.

THEN Elisha said, Hear ye the word of the LORD; Thus saith the LORD, To morrow about this time shall a measure of fine flour be sold for a shekel, and two measures of barley for a shekel, in the gate of Samaria.

† Heb.
a lord which belonged to the king, leaning upon his
hand.

2 Then † a lord on whose hand the king leaned answered the man of God, and said, Behold, if the LORD would make windows in heaven, might this thing be? And he said, Behold, thou shalt see it with thine eyes, but shalt not eat thereof.

to be instructed; and by "the elders," his chief scholars, who under his instructions applied themselves to the study of Divine things. But by "the elders," it seems more reasonable to understand some principal persons of the city, who were sitting with him, either to receive comfort and counsel from him in this distressed time, or to solicit him to use his power with God for their relief. Stackhouse.

33. — and he said, Behold, this evil &c.] Either the messenger spake in the name of the king, or the king himself may have come and spoken for himself. He said, he could not but acknowledge that the Lord had brought them into this distress: but impatiently added, he had waited so long in vain, that he had no hope left, since they were driven to such extremities. Bp. Patrick. He answered in a despairing manner, Do you not see to what height of misery we are come? it is the hand of God which has brought us to this extremity; worse we cannot be: to what purpose is it to expect any favour from Him, who has thus plagued us, and suffered us, without relief, to fall into so hopeless a condition? Bp. Hall.

Chap. VII. ver. 1. — To morrow about this time &c.] God was pleased that Elisha should foretell this deliverance and this plenty, that all might know they proceeded from God, and that the inhabitants of Samaria might give to God the glory. This was also a very extraordinary instance of the Divine goodness and long suffering towards the people engaged in idolatry, and a cruel and impious prince. Ostervald.

2. — a lord on whose hand the king leaned] A lord, who was a principal favourite with the king, answered with a sneer of derision.

Before
CHRIST
about 892.

3 ¶ And there were four leprous men at the entering in of the gate: and they said one to another, Why sit we here until we die?

4 If we say, we will enter into the city, then the famine is in the city, and we shall die there: and if we sit still here, we die also. Now therefore come, and let us fall unto the host of the Syrians: if they save us alive, we shall live; and if they kill us, we shall but die.

5 And they rose up in the twilight, to go unto the camp of the Syrians: and when they were come to the uttermost part of the camp of Syria, behold, there was no man there.

6 For the LORD had made the host of the Syrians to hear a noise of chariots, and a noise of horses, even the noise of a great host: and they said one to another, Lo, the king of Israel hath hired against us the kings of the Hittites, and the kings of the Egyptians, to come upon us.

7 Wherefore they arose and fled in the twilight, and left their tents, and their horses, and their asses, even the camp as it was, and fled for their life.

8 And when these lepers came to the uttermost part of the camp, they went into one tent, and did eat and drink, and carried thence silver, and gold, and raiment, and went and hid it; and came again, and en-

— if the Lord would make windows in heaven,] It is a foolish and injurious infidelity, to question a possibility, when we know the message is from God. How easy is it for that Almighty hand to effect those things which surpass all the reach of human conceit! Bp. Hall.

— thou shalt see it, — but shalt not eat] The Almighty hates to be distrusted. This lord of Israel will rue his unbelief: the sight will be yielded to him for conviction, the enjoyment will be denied to him for punishment. Bp. Hall.

3. — there were four leprous men] Lepers were thrust out of the city, as anciently out of the camp, Levit. xiii. 46; xiv. 3; but they placed themselves as near to the gate of the city as they could, for fear of the enemy. It hence appears, that, although these Israelites were gross idolaters, they yet observed the ceremonial law. In cases of extreme necessity, lepers might enter into the city, as appears from ver. 4. Bp. Patrick.

6. For the Lord had made &c.] This is a striking proof, that God has always in readiness the means of executing His purposes, however difficult in all human appearance.

How easily can the Almighty confound the power of the strong, the policy of the wise! God strikes a panick terror into the hearts of these Syrians. He will not vouchsafe to use any substantial stratagem against them. Nothing but an empty sound scatters them, and sends them home, deprived of their property, laden with shame, half dead with fear. Bp. Hall.

— kings of the Hittites,] Though the greatest number of these people had been destroyed by the Israelites under Joshua, yet many had fled to remote parts, and some to the countries bordering on Canaan, where in process of time they grew numerous and powerful.

Before
CHRIST
about 892.

tered into another tent, and carried thence also, and went and hid it.

† Heb.
we shall find punishment.

9 Then they said one to another, We do not well: this day is a day of good tidings, and we hold our peace: if we tarry till the morning light, † some mischief will come upon us: now therefore come, that we may go and tell the king's household.

10 So they came and called unto the porter of the city: and they told them, saying, We came to the camp of the Syrians, and, behold, there was no man there, neither voice of man, but horses tied, and asses tied, and the tents as they were.

11 And he called the porters; and they told it to the king's house within.

12 ¶ And the king arose in the night, and said unto his servants, I will now shew you what the Syrians have done to us. They know that we be hungry; therefore are they gone out of the camp to hide themselves in the field, saying, When they come out of the city, we shall catch them alive, and get into the city.

† Heb.
in it.

13 And one of his servants answered and said, Let some take, I pray thee, five of the horses that remain, which are left † in the city, (behold, they are as all the multitude of Israel that are left in it: behold, I say, they are even as all the multitude of the Israelites that are consumed:) and let us send and see.

14 They took therefore two chariot horses; and the king sent after the host of the Syrians, saying, Go and see.

15 And they went after them unto Jordan: and, lo, all the way was full of garments and vessels, which the Syrians had cast away in their haste. And the messengers returned, and told the king.

16 And the people went out, and spoiled the tents of the Syrians. So a measure of fine flour was sold for a shekel, and two measures of barley for a shekel, according to the word of the LORD.

17 ¶ And the king appointed the lord on whose hand he leaned to have the charge of the gate: and the people trode upon him in the gate, and he died, as the man of God had said, who spake when the king came down to him.

18 And it came to pass as the man of

13. — behold, they are as all the multitude &c.] He means to say, that the remaining horses were almost consumed with hunger, and must shortly die; as had already happened to the greater part of them: therefore, if these horses (and men) were taken by the Syrians, there would be no great loss of them, for they would soon be lost if they remained in Samaria. Bp. Patrick.

Before
CHRIST
about 892.

God had spoken to the king, saying, Two measures of barley for a shekel, and a measure of fine flour for a shekel, shall be to morrow about this time in the gate of Samaria:

19 And that lord answered the man of God, and said, Now, behold, if the LORD should make windows in heaven, might such a thing be? And he said, Behold, thou shalt see it with thine eyes; but shalt not eat thereof.

20 And so it fell out unto him: for the people trode upon him in the gate, and he died.

CHAP. VIII.

1 The Shunammite, having left her country seven years, to avoid the forewarned famine, for Elisha's miracle sake hath her land restored by the king. 7 Hazael, being sent with a present by Ben-hadad to Elisha at Damascus, after he had heard the prophecy, killeth his master, and succeedeth him. 16 Jehoram's wicked reign in Judah. 20 Edom and Libnah revolt. 23 Ahaziah succeedeth Jehoram. 25 Ahaziah's wicked reign. 28 He visiteth Jehoram wounded, at Jezreel.

THEN spake Elisha unto the woman, ^{about 691.} whose son he had restored to life, ^{a Chap. 4. 35.} saying, Arise, and go thou and thine household, and sojourn wheresoever thou canst sojourn: for the LORD hath called for a famine; and it shall also come upon the land seven years.

2 And the woman arose, and did after the saying of the man of God: and she went with her household, and sojourned in the land of the Philistines seven years.

3 And it came to pass at the seven ^{about 885.} years' end, that the woman returned out of the land of the Philistines: and she went forth to cry unto the king for her house and for her land.

4 And the king talked with Gehazi the servant of the man of God, saying, Tell me, I pray thee, all the great things that Elisha hath done.

5 And it came to pass, as he was telling the king how he had restored a dead body to life, that, behold, the woman, whose son he had restored to life, cried to the king for her house and for her land. And Gehazi said, My lord, O king, this is the woman, and this is her son, whom Elisha restored to life.

Chap. VIII. ver. 1. — it shall also come upon the land seven years.] As the iniquities of the Jews increased, so did their punishments. The famine in the days of Ahab continued three years and a half; and this was to continue twice as long. Bp. Patrick.

Before
CHRIST
about 885.
|| Or,
cunct.

6 And when the king asked the woman, she told him. So the king appointed unto her a certain || officer, saying, Restore all that ~~was~~ her's, and all the fruits of the field since the day that she left the land, even until now.

885.

7 ¶ And Elisha came to Damascus; and Ben-hadad the king of Syria was sick; and it was told him, saying, The man of God is come hither.

8 And the king said unto Hazael, Take a present in thine hand, and go, meet the man of God, and enquire of the Lord by him, saying, Shall I recover of this disease?

† Heb.
in his hand.

9 So Hazael went to meet him, and took a present † with him, even of every good thing of Damascus, forty camels' burden, and came and stood before him, and said, Thy son Ben-hadad king of Syria hath sent me to thee, saying, Shall I recover of this disease?

10 And Elisha said unto him, Go, say unto him, Thou mayest certainly recover: howbeit the Lord hath shewed me that he shall surely die.

9. — forty camels' burden.] There is great pomp in the manner of offering presents in the East; see Judg. iii. 18. Perhaps it is here meant, not that "the good things of Damascus" were sent to an amount which fully loaded forty camels, but that they were distributed on forty camels for the purpose of making a magnificent appearance. Harmer.

10. — Thou mayest certainly recover.] This disease, he intimates, was not of such a nature as would endanger his life, if he did not lose it by other means, as the Prophet foresaw that he certainly would. Josephus says, his disease was only a deep melancholy, into which he fell, on the shameful flight of his army, which affected his body, and took away his appetite. Bp. Patrick. It must not be supposed that the Prophet deceived Hazael in this answer; for his meaning was, that Ben-hadad would recover of his disease, or that his sickness was not mortal, which was perfectly true. Dr. Waterland.

It ought to be mentioned, that the Hebrew text here has another reading, of which the translation is, "Go, say, Thou shalt surely not live; for the Lord hath shewed me, &c." According then to this reading, the Prophet foretold Ben-hadad's death: but Hazael, being a wicked man, went and told him quite the contrary, (ver. 14,) and then murdered him. Interpreters have been very much divided between these two readings. Drs. Waterland and Kennicott.

11. And he settled his countenance &c.] Elisha looked earnestly on Hazael, till he (Hazael) was ashamed, or put out of countenance; and Elisha fell a weeping. Dr. Wells.

13. — But what, is thy servant a dog,] Hazael strongly disclaims such barbarity, which he abhorred as only becoming a brute animal. Bp. Patrick.

We are here supplied with a striking instance of the deceitfulness of the human heart. Hazael, not knowing himself, as Elisha knew him by a light darted into his mind from Heaven, was startled and amazed at what was predicted concerning him, and could not believe it possible that a man of his disposition could ever run into such enormous instances of cruelty and inhumanity. Yet, at that very time, he actually was the very man that he could not imagine himself to be; for we find him, on the very next day after his return, murdering his royal master in a treacherous 11 And he settled his countenance † stedfastly, until he was ashamed: and the man of God wept.

Before
CHRIST
885.

† Heb.
and set it.

12 And Hazael said, Why weepeth my lord? And he answered, Because I know the evil that thou wilt do unto the children of Israel: their strong holds wilt thou set on fire, and their young men wilt thou slay with the sword, and wilt dash their children, and rip up their women with child.

13 And Hazael said, But what, is thy servant a dog, that he should do this great thing? And Elisha answered, The Lord hath shewed me that thou shalt be king over Syria.

14 So he departed from Elisha, and came to his master; who said to him, What said Elisha to thee? And he answered, He told me that thou shouldest surely recover.

15 And it came to pass on the morrow, that he took a thick cloth, and dipped it in water, and spread it on his face, so that he died: and Hazael reigned in his stead.

16 ¶ And in the fifth year of Joram the son of Ahab king of Israel, Jehoshaphat being then king of Judah, ^b Jehoram the 892.

^b 2 Chron.
21. 4.

manner, and usurping his kingdom: which was but a prelude to the sad tragedy, which he afterwards acted upon the people of Israel. The case of Hazael is the case of too many amongst mankind. Of the many proud, ambitious, revengeful, envious, and ill-natured persons in the world, few indeed look into themselves with an impartial eye; and few indeed, if they were told by some person of a discerning spirit, of all the evil and absurd actions into which their vicious hearts would at one time or other betray them, would not believe as little, and be astonished as much, as Hazael was in the instance before us. Dean Swift. Wicked men are carried into those heights of impiety which they could not, in their better mood, have possibly believed. How many, from honest beginnings, have risen to incredible licentiousness; whose lives are now such, that it were as hard to believe they had ever been good, as it would have been once to persuade them they could prove so desperately bad! Bp. Hall.

15. — and spread it on his face,] So as to stifle his breath. He adopted this method of putting him to death, to prevent all appearance of marks of violence: for, had the people in the least suspected that Ben-hadad was murdered, we may conclude that Hazael would not so easily have succeeded to the throne. Cabnet.

O Hazael, thou shalt not thus easily stop the mouth of thy own conscience: that shall call thee traitor, even in thy chair of state; and shall check all thy royal triumphs with "Thou hast founded thy throne in blood!" Sovereignty is painful upon the fairest terms; but, upon treachery and murder, tormenting. Woful is the case of that man, whose publick cares are aggravated with private guiltiness; and happy is he that can enjoy a little with the peace of an honest heart! Bp. Hall.

16. And in the fifth year &c.] All the seeming contradictions between this verse and chap. i. 17, and chap. iii. 1, are thus briefly reconciled by Huetius. Jehoram beginning to reign with his father Jehoshaphat in his seventeenth year, and Joram king of Israel in his eighteenth; the first year of Joram king of Israel will fall out in the second year of Jehoram king of Judah, whose father dying in the twenty-second year of his reign, Jehoram king of Judah began to reign alone in the fifth year of Joram king of Israel. Bp. Patrick.

Before CHRIST 892. son of Jehoshaphat king of Judah † began to reign.

† Heb. reigned. 17 Thirty and two years old was he when he began to reign; and he reigned eight years in Jerusalem.

18 And he walked in the way of the kings of Israel, as did the house of Ahab: for the daughter of Ahab was his wife: and he did evil in the sight of the LORD.

2 2 Sam. 7. 13. † Heb. candle, or, lamp. 19 Yet the LORD would not destroy Judah for David his servant's sake, as he promised him to give him alway a † light, and to his children.

20 ¶ In his days Edom revolted from under the hand of Judah, and made a king over themselves.

21 So Joram went over to Zair, and all the chariots with him: and he rose by night, and smote the Edomites which compassed him about, and the captains of the chariots: and the people fled into their tents.

22 Yet Edom revolted from under the hand of Judah unto this day. Then Libnah revolted at the same time.

23 And the rest of the acts of Joram, and all that he did, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Judah?

24 And Joram slept with his fathers, and was buried with his fathers in the city of David: and Ahaziah his son reigned in his stead. 4 2 Chron. 22. 1. 885.

25 ¶ In the twelfth year of Joram the son of Ahab king of Israel did Ahaziah the son of Jehoram king of Judah begin to reign.

26 Two and twenty years old was Ahaziah when he began to reign; and he reigned one year in Jerusalem. And his mother's name was Athaliah, the daughter of Omri king of Israel. Before CHRIST 825.

27 And he walked in the way of the house of Ahab, and did evil in the sight of the LORD, as did the house of Ahab: for he was the son in law of the house of Ahab.

28 ¶ And he went with Joram the son of Ahab to the war against Hazael king of Syria in Ramoth-gilead; and the Syrians wounded Joram. 884.

29 And king Joram went back to be healed in Jezreel of the wounds † which the Syrians had given him at Ramah, when he fought against Hazael king of Syria. And Ahaziah the son of Jehoram king of Judah went down to see Joram the son of Ahab in Jezreel, because he was † sick. † Heb. wounded.

CHAP. IX.

1 Elisha sendeth a young prophet with instructions to anoint Jehu at Ramoth-gilead. 4 The prophet having done his message fleeth. 11 Jehu, being made king by the soldiers, killeth Joram in the field of Naboth. 27 Ahaziah is slain at Gur, and buried at Jerusalem. 30 Proud Jezebel is thrown down out of a window, and eaten by dogs.

AND Elisha the prophet called one of the children of the prophets, and said unto him, Gird up thy loins, and take this box of oil in thine hand, and go to Ramoth-gilead: 881.

2 And when thou comest thither, look out there Jehu the son of Jehoshaphat the son of Nimshi, and go in, and make him arise up from among his brethren, and carry him to an † inner chamber;

3 Then † take the box of oil, and pour it on his head, and say, Thus saith the † Heb. chamber in a chamber. 2 1 Kings 19. 16.

21. — to Zair,] This place seems, from the circumstances of this story, to be in or near the land of Edom. Dr. Wells.

22. — unto this day.] Unto the time when this book was written, which was not long after this revolt.

— Then Libnah revolted] Which was the reason perhaps of Joram not pursuing the victory over the Edomites, and regaining their country. It is probable that the neighbouring cities followed the example of Libnah; and the reason why they revolted was, that he attempted to set up his idolatrous worship among them, contrary to the law of God and of the kingdom. See 2 Chron. xxi. 10, 11. Bp. Patrick.

26. Two and twenty years old was Ahaziah] At 2 Chron. xxii. 2, his age is stated at forty and two years; but several ancient versions read there twenty-two years, the same as here. Dr. Hales.

28. And he went with Joram &c.] As is related more particularly in the next chapter; also at 2 Chron. xxii. 5.

Chap. IX. ver. 1. And Elisha the prophet &c.] The Prophet Elijah was commanded to do this which Elisha was now about to do; but Ahab's humiliation had moved God to defer the judgment pronounced upon him and his family; and so the execution of it was left to Elisha, who did not go himself because he was better known, and this business required secrecy; or being old, he was unfit for such a journey: for the last time we read of him he was at Damascus. Bp. Patrick.

— take this box of oil] The Jews think that none of the kings of Israel were anointed, excepting at the first promotion of a family to the throne, or when there was a question about the succession. The reason why Jehu was anointed at this time was, because the succession was to be transferred out of the right line of the house of Ahab into his family, which had no right to the kingdom, but merely by the Divine appointment. Reading.

It should be well observed, that Jehu, in all that follows, acted under an express Divine commission. Without this, all his acts against the house of Ahab would have incurred the guilt of treason and murder; and, notwithstanding the demerits of the sufferers, we should have viewed the executioner with abhorrence. Reading.

Before
CHRIST
34.

LORD, I have anointed thee king over Israel. Then open the door, and flee, and tarry not.

4 ¶ So the young man, even the young man the prophet, went to Ramoth-gilead.

5 And when he came, behold, the captains of the host were sitting; and he said, I have an errand to thee, O captain. And Jehu said, Unto which of all us? And he said, To thee, O captain.

6 And he arose, and went into the house; and he poured the oil on his head, and said unto him, Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, I have anointed thee king over the people of the LORD, even over Israel.

7 And thou shalt smite the house of Ahab thy master, that I may avenge the blood of my servants the prophets, and the blood of all the servants of the LORD, ^b at the hand of Jezebel.

^b 1 Kings
21. 15.

8 For the whole house of Ahab shall perish: and ^a I will cut off from Ahab him that pisseth against the wall, and him that is shut up and left in Israel:

^a 1 Kings
11. 10. &
21. 21.

9 And I will make the house of Ahab like the house of ^d Jeroboam the son of Nebat, and like the house of ^e Baasha the son of Ahijah:

^d 1 Kings
14. 10. &
21. 22.
^e 1 Kings
16. 3.

10 And the dogs shall eat Jezebel in the portion of Jezreel, and there shall be none

8. — the whole house of Ahab shall perish:] The severe judgment here pronounced against Ahab and his house had been denounced before by Elijah, 1 Kings xxi. 21, and is now to be executed in full measure, because that family did not take warning and repent. Thus God suffereth long and is kind; in forbearing He waits to be gracious. But, if the wicked will not turn from his evil way when he has been warned, repeatedly warned, Divine justice will not be mocked; God will whet His sword, He hath bent His bow, and made it ready. By His sparing Ahab on his outward, though not genuine, humiliation, and suspending the punishment so long, we are taught how ready and desirous God is to pardon and forgive the greatest of sinners, if they repent. But if they do not, the judgment which has been deferred will fall so much the heavier. Wogan.

— him that is shut up and left] See note at 1 Kings xiv. 10. In explanation of the term "shut up," it may be added, that, according to Eastern histories, when a successful prince has endeavoured to extirpate a preceding royal family, some who have escaped have generally secured themselves in some impregnable fortress or place of great secrecy; and to this circumstance the term "shut up" may allude. Harmer.

11. — wherefore came this mad fellow] They call him so, either from the abruptness of his arrival and departure, and from appearances of disturbance in his mind; or else, as being profane idolaters, they spake these words in scorn and derision. Jehu thinks to satisfy their inquiry by a general answer, which not being sufficient, he discloses to them the truth. Bp. Patrick. The officers who were in company with Jehu might easily perceive by the habit, and air, and manner of speech of the person who accosted Jehu so boldly, and when he had done his business vanished so suddenly, that he was a Prophet; but then there might be seveto bury her. And he opened the door, and fled.

Before
CHRIST
384.

11 ¶ Then Jehu came forth to the servants of his lord: and one said unto him, Is all well? wherefore came this mad fellow to thee? And he said unto them, Ye know the man, and his communication.

12 And they said, It is false; tell us now. And he said, Thus and thus spake he to me, saying, Thus saith the LORD, I have anointed thee king over Israel.

13 Then they hasted, and took every man his garment, and put it under him on the top of the stairs, and blew with trumpets, saying, Jehu [†] is king.

[†] Heb.
reigneth.

14 So Jehu the son of Jehoshaphat the son of Nimshi conspired against Joram. (Now Joram had kept Ramoth-gilead, he and all Israel, because of Hazael king of Syria.

15 But ^f king [†] Joram was returned to be healed in Jezreel of the wounds which the Syrians [†] had given him, when he fought with Hazael king of Syria.) And Jehu said, If it be your minds, then [†] let none go forth nor escape out of the city to go to tell it in Jezreel.

^f Chap. 8.
29.
[†] Heb.
Jehoram.
[†] Heb. smote.
[†] Heb.
let no escaper go,
&c.

16 So Jehu rode in a chariot, and went to Jezreel; for Joram lay there. And Ahaziah king of Judah was come down to see Joram.

17 And there stood a watchman on the ral reasons which might induce men of their profession to have a contemptible opinion of men of that order. The rigid and obscure course of life which the Prophets led, their neglect of themselves and of the things of this world, might pass with them for a kind of infatuation; and the holy exercises to which they devoted themselves, for no more than a religious frenzy. Besides this, the false prophets which they had seen in the court of Ahab had given just offence, and by their affected gestures and studied contortions (whereby they thought to recommend their crude enthusiasm) made them justly ridiculous and contemptible. Stackhouse.

13. — took every man his garment,] They spread their garments under his feet in the council-room, or else raised with them a kind of throne, on which he might sit. Pyle.

— on the top of the stairs,] They did not stay till they came down into the street, but forthwith, upon the very top of the stairs of the place where they were sitting, acknowledged him for their sovereign: or the meaning has been conjectured, that these were winding stairs in a turret, on the top of which they placed Jehu, that all the people might see him and hear him proclaimed their king. Bp. Patrick.

15. — let none go forth nor escape out of the city] This seems to shew that Ramoth-gilead was in the possession of the Israelites. Bp. Patrick. Or the words may be translated, "from before the city;" that is, out of the camp or army which was besieging it. Perhaps too the Israelites may, at this time, have had the suburbs, or outbuildings belonging to the city, in their possession, from whence orders may have been given, that none should be permitted to move. Stackhouse.

17. — there stood a watchman] These watchmen seem to have been set on high places, in time of peace as well as war, wherever ^{Before CHRIST 884.} tower in Jezreel, and he spied the company of Jehu as he came, and said, I see a company. And Joram said, Take an horseman, and send to meet them, and let him say, Is it peace?

18 So there went one on horseback to meet him, and said, Thus saith the king, Is it peace? And Jehu said, What hast thou to do with peace? turn thee behind me. And the watchman told, saying, The messenger came to them, but he cometh not again.

19 Then he sent out a second on horseback, which came to them, and said, Thus saith the king, Is it peace? And Jehu answered, What hast thou to do with peace? turn thee behind me.

20 And the watchman told, saying, He came even unto them, and cometh not again: and, the || driving is like the driving of Jehu the son of Nimsli; for he driveth || furiously.

|| Or, marching.

† Heb. in madness.
† Heb. Dind.

21 And Joram said, † Make ready. And his chariot was made ready. And Joram king of Israel and Ahaziah king of Judah went out, each in his chariot, and they went out against Jehu, and † met him in the portion of Naboth the Jezreelite. ^{Before CHRIST 884.}

22 And it came to pass, when Joram saw Jehu, that he said, Is it peace, Jehu? And he answered, What peace, so long as the whoredoms of thy mother Jezebel and her witchcrafts are so many?

23 And Joram turned his hands, and fled, and said to Ahaziah, There is treachery, O Ahaziah.

24 And Jehu † drew a bow with his full strength, and smote Jehoram between his arms, and the arrow went out at his heart, and he † sunk down in his chariot.

† Heb. filled his hand with a bow.

† Heb. bowed.

25 Then said Jehu to Bidkar his captain, Take up, and cast him in the portion of the field of Naboth the Jezreelite: for remember how that, when I and thou rode together after Ahab his father, † the LORD laid this burden upon him;

† 1 Kings 21. 29.

26 Surely I have seen yesterday the † blood of Naboth, and the blood of his sons, saith the LORD; and I will requite thee in this || plat, saith the LORD. Now || therefore take and cast him into the plat of ground, according to the word of the LORD.

† Heb. bloods.

|| Or, portion.

the king was, that he might not be surprised. For David at Jerusalem was admonished by the watchmen that his sons were safe, when he feared they had been lost, 2 Sam. xiii. 34; as afterward, that news was coming from the army that fought against Absalom, 2 Sam. xviii. 24, 25.

18. — What hast thou to do with peace? As if he had said, Trouble not thyself to ask any questions, for thou shalt carry no answer back; but turn thee behind, and follow me. Dr. Wells.

21. — in the portion of Naboth This was by the special providence of God that brought them together in that place.

22. — What peace, so long as the whoredoms &c. What possibility is there of holding good terms with thee, so long as the abominable idolatries and superstition of thy mother Jezebel both remain, and are maintained and countenanced by thee? Bp. Hall. He upbraids Jehoram with his mother's sins, not with his own, because hers were the most notorious and infamous, and which, by his connivance, he had made his own; and because they were the principal reason of God's inflicting, and Jehu's being commissioned to execute, these judgments. Stackhouse.

23. — There is treachery, Too late now does wretched Jehoram turn his chariot and cry, Treason, O Ahaziah. There was treason before, O Jehoram: thy treason against the majesty of God is now revenged by the treason of Jehu against thee. That fatal shaft, notwithstanding the swift pace of both the chariots, is directed to the heart of Jehoram. There is no erring of those arrows which are guided by the hand of God. Bp. Hall.

25. — cast him in the portion of the field of Naboth How just are the judgments of God! It was in the field of Naboth that Jehoram met with Jehu; that very ground called to him for blood. And now this new avenger remembers that prophecy which he heard from the mouth of Elijah, in that very place, following the heels of Ahab, and is careful to perform it. Little did Jehu think, when he heard that message from Elijah, that his hands should act it: now, as if zealous of accomplishing the word of a Prophet, he gives charge to Bidkar his captain, that the bleeding carcase of Jehoram should be cast upon that very plat of Naboth. O Naboth's blood well paid for! Ahab's blood is licked up by dogs in the very place where dogs licked Naboth's. Jehoram's blood shall manure that ground which was wrung from Naboth, and Jezebel shall add to its manuring. O garden of herbs dearly bought! Bp. Hall.

— when I and thou rode together When we rode with the rest of Ahab's guard, when he went to take possession of Naboth's vineyard. In the Hebrew the words are exactly thus: "Remember, thou and I were amongst those who rode two and two together with Ahab;" that is, Ahab was attended by his guard, who were wont to ride in pairs, two and two; and Jehu and Bidkar, riding together at that time, heard Elijah's words, in which "the Lord laid this burden upon him." By "burden" is here meant the punishment denounced against him, and which by the Prophets is frequently called "a burden," Isa. xiii. 1. These very words of Elijah, mentioned in the next verse, are not recorded at 1 Kings xxi. 19; but probably he said more than is there set down, which Jehu remembered. Bp. Patrick.

26. — and the blood of his sons, It is to be observed, that, in the history of Naboth, (recorded at 1 Kings xxi,) we find no mention made of the death of his sons; but it is no unusual thing for the Scriptures to supply in one place that which has been omitted in another. It is therefore not improbable, that, as Naboth was accused of high treason, all his family was involved in his ruin, and all his estate confiscated to the king's treasury. And this opinion seems to be confirmed by the fact, that we do not once find Elijah putting Ahab in mind to restore the vineyard to Naboth's children, nor the king, in the time of his repentance, ever once thinking to do so. Stackhouse.

— Now therefore take and cast him into the plat of ground, We here observe, in the story of Joram's rash conduct and unhappy fate, the unerring superintendence of Divine Providence, the truth of God's word, the exact measures of His justice, and most punctual accomplishment of His will in every the minutest circumstance of time and place. It was not chance, but the overruling power of Heaven, which directed this whole transaction; which sent Jehu, and which conducted Joram, to that very plat which had been decreed to be the place of his execution. The purchase of Ahab's covetousness and murder was the theatre of his punishment, and of his son's death. This Jehu called to mind, and remembered, as the burden laid upon Ahab, "I will requite thee in this plat, saith the Lord." Had Joram remembered or 884.

Before
CHRIST

27 ¶ But when Ahaziah the king of Judah saw this, he fled by the way of the garden house. And Jehu followed after him, and said, Smite him also in the chariot. And they did so at the going up to Gur, which is by Ibleam. And he fled to Megiddo, and died there.

28 And his servants carried him in a chariot to Jerusalem, and buried him in his sepulchre with his fathers in the city of David.

about 886.

29 And in the eleventh year of Joram the son of Ahab began Ahaziah to reign over Judah.

about 884.

† Heb. put her eyes
in painting.

30 ¶ And when Jehu was come to Jezreel, Jezebel heard of it; and she † painted her face, and tired her head, and looked out at a window.

31 And as Jehu entered in at the gate, she said, Had Zimri peace, who slew his master?

32 And he lifted up his face to the window, and said, Who is on my side? who? And there looked out to him two or three eunuchs.

¶ Or, chamberlains.

33 And he said, Throw her down. So they threw her down: and some of her blood was sprinkled on the wall, and on the horses: and he trode her under foot.

minded that prophecy, he might have escaped. There is no way to prevent the stroke of Divine justice, but by taking heed to the word of God, and a timely repentance. Wogan.

27. — and died there.] Not at Megiddo; for it appears from 2 Chron. xxii. 9, that, being searched for and taken in Samaria, he was brought to Jehu, (at Jezreel probably,) who commanded him to be slain. Bp. Patrick.

30. — she painted her face, &c.] The words in the original import, "She put her eyes in paint;" that is, she used stibium, or antimony made into powder, to make her eyes and eyebrows look black and large, which in several countries was esteemed a great beauty. See Ezek. xxiii. 40; Jer. iv. 30. Stackhouse. She had no intention of tempting Jehu by her beauty, but was merely actuated by motives of pride and vanity to keep up her state and dignity to the last. Bp. Patrick. How finely is the haughty and inflexible spirit of Jezebel here marked! with the utmost composure she adorns her person, as on an occasion of state; instead of seeking concealment, she places herself at a window, and proudly encounters with reproaches (ver. 31) the successful rebel.

31. — Had Zimri peace, &c.] Zimri slew his master Elah, and was himself destroyed by Omri. See 1 Kings xvi. Calmel.

34. — and bury her:] Death puts an end commonly to the highest displeasure. He that was severe in the execution of the living, is merciful in the sepulture of the dead. She that upbraided Jehu with the name of Zimri, is interred by Jehu, as the daughter-in-law of Omri, as a Sidonian princess. Somewhat must be yielded to humanity, somewhat to state. Bp. Hall.

35. — they found no more of her than the skull, &c.] The dogs have prevented Jehu in his purpose, and have given to Jezebel a living tomb, more ignoble than the worst of the earth. Only the skull, hands, and feet of that vanished carcase yet remain: the skull, which was the roof of all her wicked devices; the hands and feet, which were the executioners. Thus Jezebel is become food for dogs; Elijah is verified; Naboth is revenged; Jezreel is purged; Jehu is zealous; and, in all, God is just. Bp. Hall.

34 And when he was come in, he did eat and drink, and said, Go, see now this cursed woman, and bury her: for she is a king's daughter.

Before
CHRIST
about 884.

35 And they went to bury her: but they found no more of her than the skull, and the feet, and the palms of her hands.

36 Wherefore they came again, and told him. And he said, This is the word of the Lord, which he spake † by his servant Elijah the Tishbite, saying, ^h In the portion of Jezreel shall dogs eat the flesh of Jezebel:

† Heb. by
the hand of.
^h 1 Kings
21. 23.

37 And the carcase of Jezebel shall be as dung upon the face of the field in the portion of Jezreel; so that they shall not say, This is Jezebel.

CHAP. X.

1 Jehu, by his letters, causeth seventy of Ahab's children to be beheaded. 8 He excuseth the fact by the prophecy of Elijah. 12 At the shearing house he slayeth two and forty of Ahaziah's brethren. 15 He taketh Jehonadab into his company. 18 By subtilty he destroyeth all the worshippers of Baal. 29 Jehu followeth Jeroboam's sins. 32 Hazeel oppresseth Israel. 34 Jehozabab succeedeth Jehu.

AND Ahab had seventy sons in Samaria. And Jehu wrote letters, and sent 884.

Thus must pride fall! Insolent, idolatrous, cruel Jezebel besprinkles the walls and pavement with her blood: she who devised mischief against the servants of God, is dashed upon the stones; and she that insulted upon the Prophets, is trampled upon by horses' heels. Bp. Hall. We should reflect properly on the end of Jezebel. It was no protection to her that she was the daughter, the wife, the mother of kings. She probably reckoned on her advantages of birth and wealth, thought that she was above the control of laws, and that she might, whenever she pleased, bring the idols of her own country into the land of Israel. Perhaps too she despised the Divine threatenings denounced against herself and her family, and deemed the execution of them to be impossible. And she triumphed for some years in doing her own pleasure. But how bitter was all this in the end! The severe threatenings were brought to full execution at the last, with as much shame and ignominy as could have fallen on the meanest family; and a sore aggravation of the calamity was, that it was executed by the hands of her own subjects. Reading.

Chap. X. ver. 1. — Ahab had seventy sons] It is probable that grandsons are comprehended under the name of sons, as is usual in Scripture. Bp. Patrick. The time was now come that the sentence of God's judgment should be executed on the posterity of the wicked Ahab. It had been respited during his own life, in regard to that humiliation he had shewn on hearing it denounced, 1 Kings xxi. 27; but was now inflicted, in full weight, by the hand of Jehu, who slew all that remained of the house of Ahab, until he left him none remaining. How terrible, and yet how forbearing, are Thy judgments, O God! the slenderest motions of godly sorrow, and most imperfect symptoms of repentance, are not rejected of Thee: the bruised reed and smoking flax shall stay Thy hand awhile; for Thou waitest to be gracious. But justice will not always be mocked; whom mercy by sparing does not reform, judgment, without mercy, shall finally destroy. Wogan.

Before
CHRIST
884.

† Heb.
nourishers.

to Samaria, unto the rulers of Jezreel, to the elders, and to † them that brought up Ahab's children, saying,

2 Now as soon as this letter cometh to you, seeing your master's sons are with you, and there are with you chariots and horses, a fenced city also, and armour;

3 Look even out the best and meetest of your master's sons, and set him on his father's throne, and fight for your master's house.

4 But they were exceedingly afraid, and said, Behold, two kings stood not before him: how then shall we stand?

5 And he that was over the house, and he that was over the city, the elders also, and the bringers up of the children, sent to Jehu, saying, We are thy servants, and will do all that thou shalt bid us; we will not make any king: do thou that which is good in thine eyes.

† Heb.
for me.

6 Then he wrote a letter the second time to them, saying, If ye be † mine, and if ye will hearken unto my voice, take ye the heads of the men your master's sons, and come to me to Jezreel by to morrow this time. Now the king's sons, being seventy persons, were with the great men of the city, which brought them up.

7 And it came to pass, when the letter came to them, that they took the king's sons, and slew seventy persons, and put their heads in baskets, and sent him them to Jezreel.

— wrote letters — to Samaria, unto the rulers of Jezreel,] The expression is remarkable, that he wrote to Samaria, to the rulers of Jezreel. It seems probable that the great men of the court at Jezreel, on hearing that Jehu had slain Jehoram, took the children for fear they might fall into his hands, and fled with them to Samaria, as the capital, and the strongest place in the kingdom. Stackhouse.

5. — We are thy servants, &c.] How worthy were Ahab and Jezebel of such friends! They had ever been false to God; how should men be true to them? They had sold themselves to work wickedness, and now they are requited with a mercenary fidelity. On the first application from Jehu, these persons sell all the heads of Ahab's posterity. Bp. Hall.

6. — take ye the heads of the men] Besides the accomplishment of the Divine decree, Jehu had this further design in requesting this cruel service of the rulers and elders, and great men of the nation, namely, that thereby he might engage them in the same crime and conspiracy with himself. For by prevailing with them to murder Ahab's kinsmen in this manner, he tied them to his interest so closely, that if any of the inferiour people had wished to oppose his designs, they were by this means deprived of any man of figure and distinction to head them; and not only so, but by this expedient Jehu thought likewise that he might in a great measure justify, at least lessen, the odium of his own cruel and perfidious conduct. Calmet.

7. — and slew seventy persons,] In these rulers, and their putting to death the children of Ahab, whom they had under their charge, we cannot but see the hand of Divine retributive justice: these were the men who through fear of wicked Jezebel

Before
CHRIST
884.

8 ¶ And there came a messenger, and told him, saying, They have brought the heads of the king's sons. And he said, Lay ye them in two heaps at the entering in of the gate until the morning.

9 And it came to pass in the morning, that he went out, and stood, and said to all the people, Ye be righteous: behold, I conspired against my master, and slew him: but who slew all these?

10 Know now that there shall fall unto the earth nothing of the word of the LORD, which the LORD spake concerning the house of Ahab: for the LORD hath done that which he spake ^a † by his servant Elijah.

11 So Jehu slew all that remained of the house of Ahab in Jezreel, and all his great men, and his † kinsfolks, and his priests, until he left him none remaining.

12 ¶ And he arose and departed, and came to Samaria. And as he was at the † shearing house in the way, 13 Jehu † met with the brethren of Ahaziah king of Judah, and said, Who are ye? And they answered, We are the brethren of Ahaziah; and we go down † to salute the children of the king and the children of the queen.

14 And he said, Take them alive. And they took them alive, and slew them at the pit of the shearing house, even two and forty men; neither left he any of them.

had condemned and stoned the innocent Naboth; these are now the executioners of God's vengeance for that barbarous murder on the devoted family of Ahab. But in neither of these actions were they governed by conscience, or the fear of God: they were moved only by the fear of man. Wogan.

8. — Lay ye them in two heaps &c.] This he did to the end that, being so exposed to publick view, every one might know there was none of Ahab's sons remaining to reign over them; and also to remind the people how completely God had hereby fulfilled what He had foretold. Dr. Wells.

9. — Ye be righteous: &c.] His meaning is, You ought not to impute the destruction of Ahab's family to me, as if it proceeded from my own private revenge or ambition, since you see the chief heads of the nation are unanimous in it along with me; and therefore you should esteem it the special work of Divine Providence, pursuant to the severe threats you have all heard to have been pronounced by the Prophet Elijah against that wicked house. Pyle.

10. — there shall fall unto the earth] That is, there shall remain unfulfilled. Bp. Wilson.

12. — at the shearing house] In the Hebrew the words are, "in the house of the shepherds' binding;" that is, in the place where the shepherds of Samaria were wont to bind their sheep when they sheared them. Bp. Patrick.

14. — neither left he any of them.] That the brethren of Ahaziah should, at so critical a juncture, fall in Jehu's way, and be ignorant of the fate of Ahaziah, and of those they were going to salute, was another remarkable act of Divine Providence, which gathered, as it were, together all that bore any relation to Ahab;

Before
CHRIST
881.

† Heb.
† Heb.
† Heb.

15 ¶ And when he was departed thence, he † lighted on Jehonadab the son of Rechab coming to meet him: and he † saluted him, and said to him, Is thine heart right, as my heart is with thy heart? And Jehonadab answered, It is. If it be, give me thine hand. And he gave him his hand; and he took him up to him into the chariot.

16 And he said, Come with me, and see my zeal for the LORD. So they made him ride in his chariot.

17 And when he came to Samaria, he slew all that remained unto Ahab in Samaria, till he had destroyed him, according to the saying of the LORD, which he spake to Elijah.

18 ¶ And Jehu gathered all the people together, and said unto them, Ahab served Baal a little; but Jehu shall serve him much.

19 Now therefore call unto me all the prophets of Baal, all his servants, and all his priests; let none be wanting: for I have a great sacrifice to do to Baal; whosoever shall be wanting, he shall not live. But Jehu did it in subtilty, to the intent that he might destroy the worshippers of Baal.

Before
CHRIST
881.

20 And Jehu said, † Proclaim a solemn assembly for Baal. And they proclaimed it.

† Heb.
Sanctify.

21 And Jehu sent through all Israel: and all the worshippers of Baal came, so that there was not a man left that came not. And they came into the house of Baal; and the house of Baal was † full from one end to another.

† Or, so full, that they stood mouth to mouth.

22 And he said unto him that was over the vestry, Bring forth vestments for all the worshippers of Baal. And he brought them forth vestments.

23 And Jehu went, and Jehonadab the son of Rechab, into the house of Baal, and said unto the worshippers of Baal, Search, and look that there be here with you none of the servants of the LORD, but the worshippers of Baal only.

24 And when they went in to offer sacrifices and burnt offerings, Jehu appointed that they also might meet the doom pronounced against that whole family. These young princes were not strictly brethren, but kinsmen of Ahaziah, and related to the house of Ahab by that unhappy alliance made with his family, by the marriage of his sister Athaliah to the king of Judah, chap. viii. 26. So fatal is it to match into wicked and ungodly families. Ruin, destruction, and a curse, are the usual dowries which such wives as Jezebel and Athaliah bring with them, and entail on their posterity. Wogan. This is the third family of the kings of Israel which was utterly extinct. The family of Jeroboam was first destroyed, then that of Baasha, and afterwards that of impious Ahab; and all of them by the just judgment of God for their idolatry. Ostervald.

15. — Jehonadab the son of Rechab] He was a most pious and prudent person, as appears by his precepts to his sons in Jer. xxxv. Hearing what Jehu had done, he came, it is probable, to congratulate him on his happiness in fulfilling the commands of God, and to encourage him in his proceedings for the destruction of idolatry. Bp. Patrick. Rechab was descended from Jethro the father-in-law of Moses; and being a person eminent for his piety and great strictness of life, gave name to the Rechabites, of whom the Prophet Jeremiah makes mention, chap. xxxv. His son Jehonadab, here spoken of, was he that prescribed that ascetick and severe life to his children and descendants, "to drink no wine, nor to build houses, &c." The constant and strict observance of this their ancestor's command, is highly commended of God by the Prophet, as a worthy pattern of filial duty and obedience. The respect wherewith Jehu treated Jehonadab, and the particular regard he paid to his approbation of the measures he was taking to extirpate idolatry, not only shews the established character of that good man, but sets before us an amiable view of the intrinsick excellence and real worth of true virtue, in attracting veneration and esteem, even from superiours. Wogan.

— If it be, give me thine hand.] To give the hand signifies "to promise." Thus when Jehu asks Jehonadab to give him his hand, we are not to suppose that it was merely that he might assist him in getting into the chariot, but that Jehonadab might give him an assurance that he would assist him in the prosecution of his designs. Pilkington. This giving him the hand appears not to have been the expression of private friendship, but the solemn acknowledgment of him as king over Israel: for it seems probable that Jehonadab came to compliment Jehu on being acknowledged king of the country. In modern times, the taking an Eastern prince by the hand is done in acknowledgment of his princely character. D'Herbelot, in explaining an Eastern term, which he tells us signifies the election of a caliph, the supreme head of the Mahometans, both in civil and ecclesiastical matters, tells us, that this ceremony consisted in stretching forth a person's hand, and taking that of him whom they acknowledged for caliph. This was a sort of doing homage, or swearing fealty to him. Harmer.

19. — But Jehu did it in subtilty,] Jehu ought not to have taken this indirect course to fulfil the will of God: he made bold to use deep dissimulation for the service of God, in which he cannot be excused. God does not stand in need of any man's sin to compass His ends. Bp. Patrick. The worshippers of Baal were judiciously condemned to death by the Mosaic law, and comprehended within the commission with which Jehu, the minister of Divine vengeance, was invested. But how does he proceed to execute his purpose? Not in the plain track of sincerity, not by proclaiming his own detestation of idolatry, the sentence denounced against idolaters, and his special obligation to carry the sentence into effect; but by having recourse to the most ignominious deceit. "Thus Jehu destroyed Baal out of Israel," ver. 28: he inflicted the merited punishment on these criminals, not by a fearless application of the law, or a pious discharge of the regal office, but by perfidious subtilty and idolatrous hypocrisy. Gisborne. We may commend the zeal of Jehu, we cannot commend his fraud. Men may come to good ends by too crooked ways. He who bade Jehu smite for Him, did not bid him lie for Him. Falsehood is never approved by the God of truth. If policy allows officious untruths, religion never does. Bp. Hall.

22. — Bring forth vestments] It was the custom of almost all idolaters to be extremely curious about the external pomp of their ceremonies, wherein indeed the chief part of their worship consisted. All the priests of Baal were clothed in fine linen; and their chief priests, no doubt, had some particular ornaments to distinguish them. Stackhouse.

^{Before CHRIST 884.} fourscore men without, and said, If any of the men whom I have brought into your hands escape, he that letteth him go, his life shall be for the life of him.

25 And it came to pass, as soon as he had made an end of offering the burnt offering, that Jehu said to the guard and to the captains, Go in, and slay them; let none come forth. And they smote them with † the edge of the sword; and the guard and the captains cast them out, and went to the city of the house of Baal.

† Heb.
the mouth.

26 And they brought forth the † images out of the house of Baal, and burned them.

† Heb.
statues.

27 And they brake down the image of Baal, and brake down the house of Baal, and made it a draught house unto this day.

28 Thus Jehu destroyed Baal out of Israel.

29 ¶ Howbeit from the sins of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, who made Israel to sin, Jehu departed not from after them, to wit, the golden calves that were in Beth-el, and that were in Dan.

30 And the LORD said unto Jehu, Because thou hast done well in executing that which is right in mine eyes, and hast done unto the house of Ahab according to all that was in mine heart, thy children of the fourth generation shall sit on the throne of Israel. ^{Before CHRIST 884.}

31 But Jehu † took no heed to walk in the law of the LORD God of Israel with all his heart: for he departed not from the sins of Jeroboam, which made Israel to sin.

† Heb. observed
not.

32 ¶ In those days the LORD began † to cut Israel short: and Hazael smote them in all the coasts of Israel; ^{about 860.}

† Heb. to cut off
the ends.

33 From Jordan † eastward, all the land of Gilead, the Gadites, and the Reubenites, and the Manassites, from Aroer, which is by the river Arnon, ‖ even Gilead and Bashan. ^{† Heb. toward the rising of the sun.}

† Heb. toward the rising of the sun.

34 Now the rest of the acts of Jehu, and all that he did, and all his might, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Israel?

‖ Or, even to Gilead and Bashan.

35 And Jehu slept with his fathers: and they buried him in Samaria. And Jehoahaz his son reigned in his stead. ^{866.}

36 And † the time that Jehu reigned over Israel in Samaria was twenty and eight years. ^{† Heb. the days were.}

CHAP. XI.

1 Jehoash, being saved by Jehosheba his aunt from Athaliah's massacre of the seed royal, is hid six years in the house of God. 4 Jehoiada, giving order to the cap-

29. Howbeit from the sins &c.] Nevertheless, that part of idolatry which consisted in the false worship of the true God, (brought in by Jeroboam in those golden calves of Dan and Beth-el,) Jehu did not at all oppose, but rather countenanced and practised it. Bp. Hall. Jehu had done well in cutting off the house and posterity of Ahab, and destroying the worship of Baal; yet he continued the same schism and idolatry which Jeroboam had set up, and for the same political reasons. Whence it plainly appears, that the zeal of which he boasted proceeded not from the love of God, but was the effect of his own private views and worldly interests. Wogan. Here the motives which influenced Jehu stand displayed. Though raised to the throne by the hand of God, he now looked for the security of it to his own policy. Destitute of faith in Him to whom he was indebted for all, he trusted not to the King of kings for the permanence of the gifts which He bestowed. Destitute of gratitude to his gracious Benefactor, he returned for unmerited kindness habitual and presumptuous disobedience. While regard to the commandments of God conducted him in the path of advancement, he was eager to obey: but now, to his worldly apprehension, obedience and interest ceased to coincide. He who had been exalted to sovereign power for the express purpose of annihilating idolaters, converted his authority and example into instruments of upholding and perpetuating idolatry among his subjects. Nor was his dereliction of God the crime of a moment, or the error of sudden surprise. During a reign of twenty-eight years, unmoved by the judicial calamities with which the Lord "cut Israel short," this obdurate monarch bowed down, together with his people, before the images erected in violation of God's commands, before altars reared in express opposition to His holy temple. Gisborne. A loyal heart, as it hates all sins, so it hates them at all times. Sometimes the unsound heart will hate sin, when there is no benefit by it; but if it chance to be once beneficial to ourselves, then we love it. Here is the trial of a loyal heart to God, to prefer virtue before vice then, when in human reason virtue shall be the loser, vice the gainer. This mark discovered Jehu, who destroyed the worship of Baal with a great show of zeal; but at the same time allowed the worship of Jeroboam's calves, lest it might prove dangerous to his kingdom, if the Israelites should go and worship at Jerusalem. Jos. Mede. How many Jehus have we known and heard of amongst ourselves, violent for some things in religion, which have promoted their interests, and mere libertines in all the rest! What reward can such men hope for, who use religion for a cloak of hypocrisy; and, while with Jehu they make ostentation of zeal for God, sit down in the avowed and known breach of His most sacred laws? They may be as successful as he was in gaining some temporal advantages by such conduct, but from his example they have no encouragement to hope for God's blessing along with them. Reading.

30. — thy children of the fourth generation shall sit on the throne] So great is the bounty of God, that a partial obedience may be rewarded with a temporal blessing: as Jehu's severity to Ahab will carry the crown to his seed for four generations. But we can never have any comfortable assurance of an eternal retribution, if our hearts and ways be not perfect with God. We shall everlastingly depart from Thee, O God, if we depart not from every sin. Thou hast purged our hearts from the Baal of our gross idolatries. O clear us from our other corruptions also; that Thou mayest take pleasure in our uprightness, and we may reap the sweet comforts of Thy glorious remuneration! Bp. Hall.

32. — to cut Israel short:] This expression is fully explained in the next verse, where it is said, that Hazael took from them all their country that was beyond Jordan. Thus those countries, which were the first that the Israelites conquered, were the first which they lost. Bp. Patrick.

Chap. XI. This chapter is to be compared with 2 Chron. xxiii.

Before
CHRIST
884.

tains, in the seventh year anointeth him king. 13 Athaliah is slain. 17 Jehoiada restoreth the worship of God.

* 2 Chron.
22. 10.

† Heb. seed of the kingdom.

AND when ^a Athaliah the mother of Ahaziah saw that her son was dead, she arose and destroyed all the [†] seed royal.

2 But Jehosheba, the daughter of king Joram, sister of Ahaziah, took Joash the son of Ahaziah, and stole him from among the king's sons which were slain; and they hid him, even him and his nurse, in the bedchamber from Athaliah, so that he was not slain.

3 And he was with her hid in the house of the Lord six years. And Athaliah did reign over the land.

879.
* 2 Chron.
23. 1.

4 ¶ And ^b the seventh year Jehoiada sent and fetched the rulers over hundreds, with the captains and the guard, and brought them to him into the house of the Lord, and made a covenant with them, and took an oath of them in the house of the Lord, and shewed them the king's son.

5 And he commanded them, saying, This is the thing that ye shall do; A third part of you that enter in on the sabbath shall even be keepers of the watch of the king's house;

¶ Or,
from breaking up.
¶ Or, companies.
† Heb.
hands.

6 And a third part shall be at the gate of Sur; and a third part at the gate behind the guard: so shall ye keep the watch of the house, ¶ that it be not broken down.

7 And two ¶ [†] parts of all you that go forth on the sabbath, even they shall keep the watch of the house of the Lord about the king.

Before
CHRIST
878.

8 And ye shall compass the king round about, every man with his weapons in his hand: and he that cometh within the ranges, let him be slain: and be ye with the king as he goeth out and as he cometh in.

9 And the captains over the hundreds did according to all things that Jehoiada the priest commanded: and they took every man his men that were to come in on the sabbath, with them that should go out on the sabbath, and came to Jehoiada the priest.

10 And to the captains over hundreds did the priest give king David's spears and shields, that were in the temple of the Lord.

11 And the guard stood, every man with his weapons in his hand, round about the king, from the right [†] corner of the temple to the left corner of the temple, along by the altar and the temple.

† Heb.
shoulder.

12 And he brought forth the king's son, and put the crown upon him, and gave him the testimony; and they made him king, and anointed him; and they clapped their hands, and said, [†] God save the king.

† Heb.
Let the king
live.

13 ¶ And when Athaliah heard the noise of the guard and of the people, she came to the people into the temple of the Lord.

14 And when she looked, behold, the king stood by a pillar, as the manner was,

Ver. 2. — Jehosheba, the daughter of king Joram,] Not by Athaliah, but by another wife.

— in the bedchamber] It appears from the next verse, that this bedchamber was "in the house of the Lord," that is, in the temple; the word being used in its larger sense to comprehend all the courts and buildings belonging to the temple. Jehosheba had the opportunity of doing this, as she was married to Jehoiada the high priest. Bp. Patrick.

5. — A third part — that enter in &c.] The priests and Levites took their turns in their attendance at the temple, and their course was finished in the space of a week. In every week, one course went out and another came in. On this occasion those, who now entered on their week of attendance, which was on the eve of the sabbath, were divided by Jehoiada into three parts: one of them he here orders to guard the king's house, or that part of the temple on the north, where he was educated; another, "the gate of Sur," ver. 6, that is, the east gate of the temple towards the city, which was the principal entrance, called at 2 Chron. xxiii. 5, "the gate of the foundation;" and the third division, "at the gate behind the guard," or the south gate, which looked towards the royal palace, and through which Athaliah was wont to come, and where in consequence she had a guard. These were "to keep the watch of the house that it be not broken down," ver. 6; that is, were to take special care that the house of the Lord was not in any way profaned, suffering none to come nearer to it than they ought, and particularly watching those out of the palace that they did not defile it. Bp. Patrick.

6. — that it be not broken down.] That none may enter by force, or for purposes of mischief. Bp. Wilson.

8. — that cometh within the ranges,] That is, within the ranks of men set on the outside of the temple. Dr. Wells.

10. — king David's spears and shields,] David had erected a kind of sacred armoury in one of the apartments of the temple, in which were deposited the weapons and other trophies which he and several other generals had gained from their enemies, and dedicated to the Lord, as monuments of their victory. It appears that the captains and other officers came into the temple unarmed, from the fear of exciting suspicion, and were supplied from this armoury. Stackhouse.

12. — and gave him the testimony;] Having put the crown on the head of Joash, "he gave him the testimony," or put the book of the law into his hand, according to Deut. xvii. 18, 19, which is called the testimony, because God therein testified what was His will, and what the duties of men. There has existed a doubt, however, respecting the meaning of the Hebrew word translated "testimony:" some have supposed it to mean a royal ornament; perhaps a bracelet, which Jehoiada put on the young king, together with the crown. Bp. Patrick.

14. — the king stood by a pillar,] Probably by one of the pillars mentioned at 1 Kings vii. 21. Stackhouse.

Before
CHRIST
878.

and the princes and the trumpeters by the king, and all the people of the land rejoiced, and blew with trumpets: and Athaliah rent her clothes, and cried, Treason, Treason.

15 But Jehoiada the priest commanded the captains of the hundreds, the officers of the host, and said unto them, Have her forth without the ranges: and him that followeth her kill with the sword. For the priest had said, Let her not be slain in the house of the LORD.

16 And they laid hands on her; and she went by the way by the which the horses came into the king's house: and there was she slain.

17 ¶ And Jehoiada made a covenant between the LORD and the king and the people, that they should be the LORD's people; between the king also and the people.

18 And all the people of the land went into the house of Baal, and brake it down; his altars and his images brake they in pieces thoroughly, and slew Mattan the priest of Baal before the altars. And the priest appointed † officers over the house of the LORD.

19 And he took the rulers over hundreds, and the captains, and the guard, and all the people of the land; and they brought down the king from the house of the LORD, and came by the way of the officers.

† Heb.

— and Athaliah rent her clothes.] She now rends her clothes, and cries, Treason, treason, as if that voice of hers could still command all hearts and hands, as if one breath of hers were powerful enough to blow away all these new designs. O Athaliah, to whom dost thou complain thyself? They are thy just executioners with whom thou art encompassed. The treason has been thine, the justice is theirs. The time of thy reckonings for all the royal blood of Judah, which thine ambition shed, is now come. Wonder rather at the patience of this long forbearance, than at the rigour of this execution. Bp. Hall.

15. — him that followeth her] For the purpose of assisting or saving her.

16. — and there was she slain.] They took her out of the sacred ground of the temple before she was slain. Stackhouse. How like is Athaliah to her mother Jezebel! as in conditions and behaviour, so even in death; both violently killed, both killed under their own walls; both slain with treason in their mouths; both slain in a revolution of the government; one trodden on by the horses, the other slain in the horse-gate. Both paid with their own blood for the innocent blood of others. Bp. Hall. We learn from the history of the reign of Athaliah, who by her cruelties procured the crown, that God sometimes permits the enterprises of the wicked to succeed, and usurpers to take possession of states and kingdoms: but in the same history we remark, that He sets bounds to their wickedness, and delivers the oppressed. Ostervald.

17. — Jehoiada made a covenant &c.] Jehoiada made it his first business to cause the people to enter into a fresh and solemn engagement to stand by their ancient laws, and revive the true re-gate of the guard to the king's house. And he sat on the throne of the kings.

20 And all the people of the land rejoiced, and the city was in quiet: and they slew Athaliah with the sword beside the king's house.

21 Seven years old was Jehoash when he began to reign.

Before
CHRIST
878.

CHAP. XII.

1 Jehoash reigneth well all the days of Jehoiada. 4 He giveth order for the repair of the temple. 17 Hazael is diverted from Jerusalem by a present of the hallowed treasures. 19 Jehoash being slain by his servants, Amaziah succeedeth him.

IN the seventh year of Jehu Jehoash began to reign; and forty years reigned he in Jerusalem. And his mother's name was Zibiah of Beer-sheba.

2 And Jehoash did that which was right in the sight of the LORD all his days where-in Jehoiada the priest instructed him.

3 But the high places were not taken away: the people still sacrificed and burnt incense in the high places.

4 ¶ And Jehoash said to the priests, All the money of the † dedicated things that is brought into the house of the LORD, even the money of every one that passeth the account, † the money that every man is set at, and all the money that † cometh into any man's heart to bring into the house of the LORD, 878.

2 Chron.
24. 1.

|| Or,
holy things.
† Heb.
holinesses.
† Heb.
the money of the souls of his estimation.
† Heb. ascendeth upon the heart of a man.

ligion and worship: at the same time he fully covenanted with them, on the king's behalf, that he should govern them with justice, equity, and law. Pyle.

Chap. XII. This chapter is to be compared with 2 Chron. xxiv.

Ver. 2. — all his days wherein Jehoiada — instructed him.] Jehoiada, who was the tutor of his infancy, was the counsellor of his riper age, and was equally happy in both. Bp. Hall. This history shews of what advantage it is to have good instructors and counsellors about a king. Jehoiada preserved Joash in virtuous courses while he lived; but, when he was dead, Joash entirely changed his manners, and was persuaded, by the flatteries of some of his courtiers, to fall into idolatry; and, as is related at 2 Chron. xxiv. 17, 21, he killed the son of this pious Jehoiada, who reproved him for it. Still “the high places (ver. 3) were not taken away;” meaning the private altars on which they worshipped the true God, which were not removed by the best of their kings till the reign of Hezekiah. Bp. Patrick.

4. — All the money of the dedicated things &c.] The first good thing he did was to repair the temple, which had been suffered to run to decay under the wicked reigns of Athaliah and her son. In order whereunto, he appointed all the priests to make exact and speedy collection of the several monies due from the people by way of tax, redemption, vow, or free gift, for the repairs of the temple, agreeably to the law in those cases, some of which payments having been greatly neglected in the late times of idolatry, the collectors were not to stay till the people brought them in, but to go about and gather them, in the several towns where they lived, and bring them into the treasury. Pyle.

Before
CHRIST
879.

5 Let the priests take it to them, every man of his acquaintance: and let them repair the breaches of the house, where-soever any breach shall be found.

856.
† Heb.
in the twen-tish year and third year.

6 But it was so, that † in the three and twentieth year of king Jehoash the priests had not repaired the breaches of the house.

7 Then king Jehoash called for Jehoiada the priest, and the other priests, and said unto them, Why repair ye not the breaches of the house? now therefore receive no more money of your acquaintance, but deliver it for the breaches of the house.

8 And the priests consented to receive no more money of the people, neither to repair the breaches of the house.

† Heb.
threshold.

9 But Jehoiada the priest took a chest, and bored a hole in the lid of it, and set it beside the altar, on the right side as one cometh into the house of the LORD: and the priests that kept the † door put therein all the money that was brought into the house of the LORD.

§ Or, secretary.
† Heb.
bound up.

10 And it was so, when they saw that there was much money in the chest, that the king's § scribe and the high priest came up, and they † put up in bags, and told the money that was found in the house of the LORD.

† Heb. brought it forth.

11 And they gave the money, being told, into the hands of them that did the work, that had the oversight of the house of the LORD: and they † laid it out to the carpenters and builders, that wrought upon the house of the LORD,

12 And to masons, and hewers of stone, and to buy timber and hewed stone to repair the breaches of the house of the LORD, and for all that † was laid out for the house to repair it.

Before
CHRIST
856.
† Heb.
went forth.

13 Howbeit there were not made for the house of the LORD bowls of silver, snuffers, basons, trumpets, any vessels of gold, or vessels of silver, of the money that was brought into the house of the LORD:

14 But they gave that to the workmen, and repaired therewith the house of the LORD.

15 Moreover they reckoned not with the men, into whose hand they delivered the money to be bestowed on workmen: for they dealt faithfully.

16 The trespass money and sin money was not brought into the house of the LORD: it was the priests'.

17 ¶ Then Hazael king of Syria went up, and fought against Gath, and took it: and Hazael set his face to go up to Jerusalem. about 840

18 And Jehoash king of Judah took all the hallowed things that Jehoshaphat, and Jehoram, and Ahaziah, his fathers, kings of Judah, had dedicated, and his own hallowed things, and all the gold that was found in the treasures of the house of the LORD, and in the king's house, and sent it to Hazael king of Syria: and he † went away from Jerusalem. † Heb.
went up.

19 ¶ And the rest of the acts of Joash, and all that he did, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Judah?

20 And his servants arose, and made a 839.

5. — let them repair the breaches of the house,] It is probable that the temple had been entirely neglected in the time of the idolatrous kings, his predecessors: he therefore, in gratitude to God, and from reverence to the sacred place where his life was saved, set about the work of repairing it. Bp. Wilson.

6. — the priests had not repaired the breaches] They were dilatory and careless in collecting the money, 2 Chron. xxiv. 5, and did not bring in what they had gathered, to begin the work. Bp. Patrick.

9. — put therein all the money — brought &c.] A more full description is given at 2 Chron. xxiv. 9, where it is stated, that proclamation was made for all the people to bring in their half shekel, which Moses commanded every one of a certain age to pay. This they brought to the priests, who stood at the door that led into their court, and saw them put into the chest.

10. — they put up in bags,] It appears to have been usual in the East for money to be put in bags; which being ascertained as to the exact sum deposited in each, were sealed, and labelled probably, and thus passed currently. We are informed by Major Rennell, that in the East, in the present times, a bag of money passes (for some time at least) currently from hand to hand, under the authority of a banker's seal, without any examination of its contents. Burder.

15. — they reckoned not with the men,] These overseers were persons of such known fidelity, and the workmen did their parts so honestly, that the high priest had no difficulty in their accounts with them, but, in great measure, trusted to their integrity. As to the trespass money, ver. 16, spoken of at Levit. v. 15, 16, it was given to the priests to buy sacrifices with, for the offerers, and none of it applied to the temple-building. Pyle.

18. — Jehoash — took all the hallowed things] He was forced to buy his peace at the expense of all the treasures dedicated to the temple by his forefathers and himself, and stript even the royal palace to make up the sum demanded by his imperious enemy. Pyle. It is probable that, besides the present of gold which Joash sent to Hazael, in order to bribe him to withdraw his army, he made him also a promise of an annual tribute, and that, upon his refusal to pay this, the Syrian army took the field the next year; and, as the expression is at 2 Chron. xxiv. 24, "executed judgment against Joash." Calmet.

20. And his servants arose, &c.] See 2 Chron. xxiv, where further particulars are given, of his having been struck with a lingering and uncommon disease, and after some time murdered by his own subjects, in revenge for his barbarous treatment of the son of that very high priest, who had been his best friend and preserver. Joash, in the conclusion of his life, affords a sad example of the effects of wilful impiety, followed in spite of the advantages of good counsel and a pious education. Pyle.

Before CHRIST 839. conspiracy, and slew Joash in || the house of Millo, which goeth down to Silla.

|| Or, Beth-millo. 21 For Jozachar the son of Shimeath, and Jehozabad the son of Shomer, his servants, smote him, and he died; and they buried him with his fathers in the city of David: and Amaziah his son reigned in his stead.

CHAP. XIII.

1 Jehoahaz's wicked reign. 3 Jehoahaz, oppressed by Hazael, is relieved by prayer. 8 Joash succeedeth him. 10 His wicked reign. 12 Jeroboam succeedeth him. 14 Elisha dying prophesieth to Joash three victories over the Syrians. 20 The Moabites invading the land, Elisha's bones raise up a dead man. 22 Hazael dying, Joash getteth three victories over Ben-hadad.

856. † Heb. the twentieth year and third year. IN † the three and twentieth year of Joash the son of Ahaziah king of Judah Jehoahaz the son of Jehu began to reign over Israel in Samaria, and reigned seventeen years.

† Heb. walked after. 2 And he did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD, and † followed the sins of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, which made Israel to sin; he departed not therefrom.

about 849. 3 ¶ And the anger of the LORD was kindled against Israel, and he delivered them into the hand of Hazael king of Syria, and into the hand of Ben-hadad the son of Hazael, all their days.

about 842. 4 And Jehoahaz besought the LORD, and the LORD hearkened unto him: for he saw the oppression of Israel, because the king of Syria oppressed them.

5 (And the LORD gave Israel a saviour, so that they went out from under the hand of the Syrians: and the children of Israel dwelt in their tents, † as beforetime. Before CHRIST 842.

6 Nevertheless they departed not from the sins of the house of Jeroboam, who made Israel sin, but † walked therein: and there † remained the grove also in Samaria.) † Heb. as yesterday, and third day. † Heb. he walked. † Heb. stood.

7 Neither did he leave of the people to Jehoahaz but fifty horsemen, and ten chariots, and ten thousand footmen; for the king of Syria had destroyed them, and had made them like the dust by threshing.

8 ¶ Now the rest of the acts of Jehoahaz, and all that he did, and his might, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Israel?

9 And Jehoahaz slept with his fathers; and they buried him in Samaria: and Joash his son reigned in his stead. 839.

10 ¶ In the thirty and seventh year of Joash king of Judah began Jehoash the son of Jehoahaz to reign over Israel in Samaria, and reigned sixteen years. 841.

11 And he did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD; he departed not from all the sins of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, who made Israel sin: but he walked therein.

12 And the rest of the acts of Joash, and all that he did, and his might wherewith he fought against Amaziah king of Judah, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Israel?

13 And Joash slept with his fathers; and Jeroboam sat upon his throne: and Joash was buried in Samaria with the kings of Israel. 825.

14 ¶ Now Elisha was fallen sick of his sickness whereof he died. And Joash the about 839

Chap. XIII. ver. 4. And Jehoahaz besought the Lord,] These miserable calamities brought the king to have recourse to God by prayers and fastings; and God was pleased, in the next reign, to grant them a deliverance, not out of respect to him, but in regard to the piety of the famous ancestors of this people, to grant them a deliverance from this ruinous war; for, notwithstanding all these prayers and tears, no reformation was begun, but all manner of superstitions and irregularities, first introduced by Jeroboam, were continued and encouraged. Pyle.

— and the Lord hearkened unto him:] Not for his own sake, but for the sake of the pious ancestors of that people, and of His promise to them. Wicked men have recourse to God in their afflictions; but, as soon as they are over, they forget Him, and return to their sins, as this prince did. Bp. Wilson.

5. — a saviour,] Either some extraordinary captain, whom God raised up to fight their battles with success; or else, as it is said ver. 22, that while Hazael lived he oppressed them, it seems more reasonable to understand by this saviour, the son of Jehoahaz, who, when Hazael was dead, delivered them from their bondage. Bp. Patrick.

7. — had made them like the dust] Had, as it were, beaten the nation to dust, killing many, carrying away many captive, and thus mightily dispeopling the kingdom of Israel. Dr. Wells.

14. Now Elisha was fallen sick] Good Elisha, who had now lived some ninety years, a wonder of Prophets, and had outworn many successions in the thrones of Israel and Judah, is now cast upon the bed of his sickness; yea, of his death. His very age might seem a disease, which yet is seconded by a languishing distemper. It is not in the power of any holiness to privilege us from infirmity of body, from final dissolution. He that stretched himself upon his bed over the dead body of the Shunammite's son, and revived it, must now stretch out his own limbs on his sick bed and die. He, who had seen his master Elijah rapt up suddenly from the earth, and fetched by a fiery chariot from this vale of mortality, himself must leisurely wait for his last pangs, in a lingering passage to the same glory.

There are several ways appointed to us by the Divine Providence unto one common blessedness. One has more pain; another passes off with more speed: violence snatches away one; another, by an insensible pace, draws every day nearer to his term. Happy is he, that, after due preparation, is passed through the gates of death, ere he be aware! Happy too is he, who, by the holy use of long sickness, is taught to see the gates of death afar off, and is prepared for a resolute passage! The one dies like Elijah, the other like Elisha; both blessedly. Bp. Hall.

Before
CHRIST
about 839.

king of Israel came down unto him, and wept over his face, and said, O my father, my father, the chariot of Israel, and the horsemen thereof.

15 And Elisha said unto him, Take bow and arrows. And he took unto him bow and arrows.

† Heb.
Make thine hand to ride.

16 And he said to the king of Israel, † Put thine hand upon the bow. And he put his hand upon it: and Elisha put his hands upon the king's hands.

17 And he said, Open the window eastward. And he opened it. Then Elisha said, Shoot. And he shot. And he said, The arrow of the Lord's deliverance, and the arrow of deliverance from Syria: for thou shalt smite the Syrians in Aphek, till thou have consumed them.

18 And he said, Take the arrows. And he took them. And he said unto the king of Israel, Smite upon the ground. And he smote thrice, and stayed.

19 And the man of God was wroth with him, and said, Thou shouldest have smitten five or six times; then hadst thou smitten Syria till thou hadst consumed it: whereas now thou shalt smite Syria but thrice.

— wept over his face.] He lamented at the idea of losing a person, who had been the hope and support of the nation, by his prayers and miracles, and after whose death nothing was to be expected but helpless ruin and calamity. Pyle. How sensible should we be of the loss of holy men, when a Joash spends his tears upon Elisha! Bp. Hall.

— the chariot of Israel, and the horsemen thereof.] These are the same words which Elisha uttered concerning Elijah, when he was taken up to heaven, (2 Kings ii. 12,) signifying the great authority he had maintained among them, included in the word "father," and the many glorious victories he had obtained for them by the efficacy of his counsels and prayers, signified by the words "the chariot of Israel and the horsemen." Bp. Patrick.

15. — Take bow and arrows.] This was a symbolical action, by which the Prophet intended to represent the victory, which he had promised the king of Israel against the Syrians, more fully and plainly to him. His shooting the first arrow eastward, or to that part of the country which the Syrians had taken from his ancestors, was a declaration of war against them for so doing; and his striking the other arrows against the ground was an indication how many victories he was to obtain; but his stopping his hand too soon, denoted the imperfection of his conquests. Stackhouse.

19. And the man of God was wroth with him.] The king, not giving due attention, or perhaps not much credit, to this emblematic sort of reasoning, struck three times only, and left off: on which the Prophet blamed him for his neglect, telling him that, had he done it with more earnestness and vigour, his conquests should have been complete, but that now he must be contented with only three victories. Pyle. It is probable the Prophet had spoken so to him as to give him to understand that he intended he should smite several times. And he was angry at his sloth and unbelief, which made him stop at the third stroke. Bp. Patrick. It is not difficult to apprehend, that when the Prophet, by God's command, directed the king to perform a significant action, whose meaning God had beforehand explained to His servant; he had himself been informed of this among other particulars, that 20 ¶ And Elisha died, and they buried him. And the bands of the Moabites invaded the land at the coming in of the year.

Before
CHRIST
about 838.

21 And it came to pass, as they were burying a man, that, behold, they spied a band of men; and they cast the man into the sepulchre of Elisha: and when the † man was let down, and touched the bones of Elisha, † he revived, and stood up on his feet.

† Heb. went down
† Eccl^{vi}
48. 14.

22 ¶ But Hazael king of Syria oppressed Israel all the days of Jehoahaz.

23 And the Lord was gracious unto them, and had compassion on them, and had respect unto them, because of his covenant with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and would not destroy them, neither cast he them from his † presence as yet.

† Heb. face.
about 839.

24 So Hazael king of Syria died; and Ben-hadad his son reigned in his stead.

25 And Jehoash the son of Jehoahaz † took again out of the hand of Ben-hadad the son of Hazael the cities, which he had taken out of the hand of Jehoahaz his father by war. Three times did Joash beat him, and recovered the cities of Israel.

† Heb. returned
and took.
about 836.

the Syrians would be smitten as often as the king smote upon the ground, when the Prophet should order him (only in general words) to smite it. Hence the Prophet's anger, occasioned by his love to his country, on the king's stopping after he had smitten thrice. Bp. Warburton. The slack hand of the king smites but thrice: so apt are we to be wanting to ourselves; so coldly do we execute the commands of God. The sick Prophet is not more grieved than angry at this dull negligence. Bp. Hall.

20. — at the coming in of the year.] Whether this was the next year after his death, or some years after, has been doubted. The words seem plainly to import the next spring. From the expression in the next verse of "the bones of Elijah," many persons have inferred that the miracle at his sepulchre took place some years after. Bp. Patrick.

21. — he revived, and stood up on his feet.] By this miracle, God did the highest honour to the Prophet, and confirmed both the truth of what he had promised to the king of Israel, and the belief of a future state: for the miracle was greater than Elisha had done in his lifetime, when he could not raise the child to life again, without many prayers, and stretching himself with much application on his body; whereas now, upon the mere touch of his dead body, God restored the man to life in an instant, so that he stood upon his feet. Bp. Patrick. This miracle is a symbol and prophecy of the resurrection of Jesus Christ; there being this important difference, that Elisha raised a dead body without raising himself, while Jesus Christ not only raised Himself, but gives life to all those that believe in Him. Calnet. This miracle was the immediate work of God, and concurred with the translation of Elijah, to keep alive and confirm, in a degenerate and infidel age, the grand truth of a bodily resurrection, which the translation of Enoch was calculated to produce in the antediluvian world, and which the resurrection of Christ, in a glorified body, fully illustrated. Dr. Hales.

The memory of the holy Prophet Elisha ought to be esteemed blessed in the church: his zeal and other virtues ought to be our example, and to animate all Christians, especially those who are in any office in the church, to serve God faithfully in their several stations. Ostervald.

Before
CHRIST
839.

CHAP. XIV.

Before
CHRIST
about 826.

1 Amaziah's good reign. 5 His justice on the murderers of his father. 7 His victory over Edom. 8 Amaziah, provoking Jehoash, is overcome and spoiled. 15 Jeroboam succeedeth Jehoash. 17 Amaziah slain by a conspiracy. 21 Azariah succeedeth him. 23 Jeroboam's wicked reign. 28 Zachariah succeedeth him.

* 2 Chron.
25. 1.

IN the second year of Joash son of Jehoahaz king of Israel reigned ^a Amaziah the son of Joash king of Judah.

2 He was twenty and five years old when he began to reign, and reigned twenty and nine years in Jerusalem. And his mother's name was Jehoaddan of Jerusalem.

3 And he did that which was right in the sight of the LORD, yet not like David his father: he did according to all things as Joash his father did.

4 Howbeit the high places were not taken away: as yet the people did sacrifice and burnt incense on the high places.

* Chap. 12.
20.

5 ¶ And it came to pass, as soon as the kingdom was confirmed in his hand, that he slew his servants ^b which had slain the king his father.

* Deut. 24.
16.
Ezek. 18.
20.

6 But the children of the murderers he slew not: according unto that which is written in the book of the law of Moses, wherein the LORD commanded, saying, ^c The fathers shall not be put to death for the children, nor the children be put to death for the fathers; but every man shall be put to death for his own sin.

about 827.

¶ Or,
the rock.

7 He slew of Edom in the valley of salt ten thousand, and took ¶ Selah by war, and called the name of it Joktheel unto this day.

8 ¶ Then Amaziah sent messengers to Jehoash, the son of Jehoahaz son of Jehu, king of Israel, saying, Come, let us look one another in the face.

9 And Jehoash the king of Israel sent to Amaziah king of Judah, saying, The thistle that was in Lebanon sent to the cedar that was in Lebanon, saying, Give thy daughter to my son to wife: and there passed by a wild beast that was in Lebanon, and trode down the thistle.

10 Thou hast indeed smitten Edom, and thine heart hath lifted thee up: glory of this, and tarry † at home: for why shouldst thou meddle to thy hurt, that thou shouldst fall, even thou, and Judah with thee?

† Heb.
at thy house.

11 But Amaziah would not hear. Therefore Jehoash king of Israel went up; and he and Amaziah king of Judah looked one another in the face at Beth-shemesh, which belongeth to Judah.

12 And Judah † was put to the worse before Israel; and they fled every man to their tents.

† Heb.
was smitten.

13 And Jehoash king of Israel took Amaziah king of Judah, the son of Jehoash the son of Ahaziah, at Beth-shemesh, and came to Jerusalem, and brake down the wall of Jerusalem from the gate of Ephraim unto the corner gate, four hundred cubits.

14 And he took all the gold and silver, and all the vessels that were found in the house of the LORD, and in the treasures of the king's house, and hostages, and returned to Samaria.

about 825.

15 ¶ Now the rest of the acts of Jehoash which he did, and his might, and how he fought with Amaziah king of Judah, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Israel?

16 And Jehoash slept with his fathers,

Chap. XIV. This chapter is to be compared with 2 Chron. xxv.

Ver. 5. — he slew his servants] While Amaziah began his reign by executing justice on those servants who had been concerned in assassinating his father, (chap. xii. 20,) he spared their children out of regard to the law, that forbids (Deut. xxiv. 16) in such cases to punish children for their father's transgressions. Pyle.

7. — and took Selah by war,] A more particular account of these transactions is given at 2 Chron. xxv. For the valley of salt, see note at 2 Sam. viii. 13. The name of the city Selah signifies in Hebrew "a rock," and thus exactly answers to the Greek word Petra, which also signifies "a rock." On this account, it is agreed by commentators, not without reason, that this Selah was the same city as that called Petra by the Greeks and Latins, lying in Arabia Petrea. Some have supposed that the country was called Petrea from this its chief city; but it is more probable, that, as the city had its name from its situation on a rock, so the adjacent tract of country was called Arabia Petrea, from its being overspread with such rocks or rocky hills. Dr. Wells.

— called the name of it Joktheel] This name imports "obedience of God," or "to God." He so called it, as some imagine, because, when he had taken the place, he settled in it the laws and statutes of Moses; or rather, he acknowledged, by giving it this name, that the possession of the place was a reward of his obedience to the man of God, who required him to dismiss all the forces he had hired of the Israelites. See 2 Chron. xxv. 10. Bp. Patrick.

6. — let us look one another in the face,] Being flushed with his great success against the Edomites, and incensed by the damages the Israelites had done him, (2 Chron. xxv. 13,) he sent this challenge to the king of Israel, meaning, Let us set our armies in array against each other, and try our strength. Bp. Patrick.

9. — The thistle that was in Lebanon sent to the cedar] Fables or apologies of this description were suited to the taste of Eastern people. There was an instance of them before at Judges ix. 7. Joash king of Israel could not have availed himself of a more ingenious device, or one more proper for humbling Amaziah, than comparing him to a thistle, which made pretensions to rival the cedar: at the same time he raised himself above him, and made him feel the vanity of his pretensions. Calmet. This transaction shews the great superiority of the kingdom of Israel over that of Judah at that time.

Before CHRIST about 825. and was buried in Samaria with the kings of Israel; and Jeroboam his son reigned in his stead.

17 ¶ And Amaziah the son of Joash king of Judah lived after the death of Jehoash son of Jehoahaz king of Israel fifteen years.

18 And the rest of the acts of Amaziah, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Judah?

2 Chron. 25. 27. 19 Now they made a conspiracy against him in Jerusalem: and he fled to Lachish; but they sent after him to Lachish, and slew him there.

810. 20 And they brought him on horses: and he was buried at Jerusalem with his fathers in the city of David.

2 Chron. 26. 1. he is called Azariah. 21 ¶ And all the people of Judah took Azariah, which was sixteen years old, and made him king instead of his father Amaziah.

22 He built Elath, and restored it to Judah, after that the king slept with his fathers.

825. 23 ¶ In the fifteenth year of Amaziah the son of Joash king of Judah Jeroboam the son of Joash king of Israel began to reign in Samaria, and reigned forty and one years.

24 And he did that which was evil in the sight of the Lord: he departed not from all the sins of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, who made Israel to sin.

1 Matth. 12. 39, 40. called Jonas. 822. 25 He restored the coast of Israel from the entering of Hamath unto the sea of the plain, according to the word of the Lord God of Israel, which he spake by the hand of his servant ^fJonah, the son of Amittai, the prophet, which was of Gath-hepher.

26 For the Lord saw the affliction of Israel, that it was very bitter: for there was not any shut up, nor any left, nor any helper for Israel. Before CHRIST 822.

27 And the Lord said not that he would blot out the name of Israel from under heaven: but he saved them by the hand of Jeroboam the son of Joash.

28 ¶ Now the rest of the acts of Jeroboam, and all that he did, and his might, how he warred, and how he recovered Damascus, and Hamath, which belonged to Judah, for Israel, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Israel?

29 And Jeroboam slept with his fathers, even with the kings of Israel; and Zachariah his son reigned in his stead. 784

CHAP. XV.

1 Azariah's good reign. 5 He dying a leper, Jotham succeedeth. 8 Zachariah, the last of Jehu's generation, reigning ill, is slain by Shallum. 13 Shallum, reigning a month, is slain by Menahem. 16 Menahem strengtheneth himself by Pul. 21 Pekahiah succeedeth him. 23 Pekahiah is slain by Pekah. 27 Pekah is oppressed by Tiglath-pileser, and slain by Hoshea. 32 Jotham's good reign. 36 Ahaz succeedeth him.

IN the twenty and seventh year of Jeroboam king of Israel began Azariah son of Amaziah king of Judah to reign. about 810.

2 Sixteen years old was he when he began to reign, and he reigned two and fifty years in Jerusalem. And his mother's name was Jecholiah of Jerusalem.

3 And he did that which was right in the sight of the Lord, according to all that his father Amaziah had done;

4 Save that the high places were not removed: the people sacrificed and burnt incense still on the high places.

5 ¶ And the Lord smote the king, so about 765.

he encouraged Jeroboam to proclaim war against the king of Syria, we find no where recorded: but not only do we not possess all which the several Prophets wrote; but, in many instances, they did not commit their predictions to writing. From this instance, however, we may learn, that God was very merciful to the underserving Israelites, in continuing a race of Prophets to them, even after Elisha was dead. Stackhouse.

— of Gath-hepher.] It is expressly said by Eusebius and St. Jerome, that this place was situate in the tribe of Zebulun: the latter says, that it was no considerable place, and that the sepulchre of Jonah was shewn there in his time. It may have been the same with Gittah-hepher, mentioned as lying in the eastern coast of Zebulun, Josh. xix. 13. Dr. Wells.

Chap. XV. The seven first verses of this chapter are to be compared with 2 Chron. xxvi, as are the seven last with 2 Chron. xxvii.

Ver. 5. And the Lord smote the king.] The cause of this stroke of leprosy is related at 2 Chron. xxvi. 16, &c. By the word which we translate "a several house," the Jews understand a house in the country, where he might have liberty to take his pleasure, but not to meddle in publick affairs. Bp. Patrick.

19. — they made a conspiracy against him.] He was probably hated by the people for the great calamities and shame brought upon them through his folly. Bp. Wilson.

21. — Azariah,] Called Uziah in the next chapter, ver. 30, and at 2 Chron. xxvi. 1.

22. He built Elath,] Respecting Elath, see note at 1 Kings ix. 26. He appears to have found Elath in a ruined state, and to have rebuilt it. At 2 Kings xvi. 6, we read that "Rezin king of Syria recovered Elath to Syria." The particular mention of these circumstances shews of what importance it was deemed in those times to possess a place near the Red sea, for the purposes of traffick. Harmer.

25. He restored the coast of Israel &c.] As Joash his father had restored many cities which Ben-hadad had taken, so Jeroboam restored a large territory which other kings had taken from them; namely, all the country from Libanus on the north, to the "sea of the plain," or the Dead sea, on the south. Bp. Patrick. For Hamath, see note on 2 Sam. viii. 9.

— his servant Jonah,] The only mention which we have of this Prophet, is in the present passage, and in the account of his famous message to Nineveh. What the prophecies were by which

Before
CHRIST
about 765.

that he was a leper unto the day of his death, and dwelt in a several house. And Jotham the king's son was over the house, judging the people of the land.

6 And the rest of the acts of Azariah, and all that he did, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Judah?

about 758.

7 So Azariah slept with his fathers; and they buried him with his fathers in the city of David: and Jotham his son reigned in his stead.

about 773.

8 ¶ In the thirty and eighth year of Azariah king of Judah did Zachariah the son of Jeroboam reign over Israel in Samaria six months.

9 And he did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD, as his fathers had done: he departed not from the sins of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, who made Israel to sin.

about 772.

10 And Shallum the son of Jabesh conspired against him, and smote him before the people, and slew him, and reigned in his stead.

11 And the rest of the acts of Zachariah, behold, they are written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Israel.

^a Chap. 10.
20.

12 This was ^a the word of the LORD which he spake unto Jehu, saying, Thy sons shall sit on the throne of Israel unto the fourth generation. And so it came to pass.

about 772.

13 ¶ Shallum the son of Jabesh began to reign in the nine and thirtieth year of ^b Uzziah king of Judah; and he reigned [†] a full month in Samaria.

^b Matt. 1. 9.
called Ozias.
[†] Heb.
^a month of days.

14 For Menahem the son of Gadi went up from Tirzah, and came to Samaria, and smote Shallum the son of Jabesh in Samaria, and slew him, and reigned in his stead.

Before
CHRIST
772.

15 And the rest of the acts of Shallum, and his conspiracy which he made, behold, they are written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Israel.

16 ¶ Then Menahem smote Tiphseh, and all that were therein, and the coasts thereof from Tirzah: because they opened not to him, therefore he smote it; and all the women therein that were with child he ripped up.

17 In the nine and thirtieth year of Azariah king of Judah began Menahem the son of Gadi to reign over Israel, and reigned ten years in Samaria.

772.

18 And he did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD: he departed not all his days from the sins of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, who made Israel to sin.

19 And ^c Pul the king of Assyria came against the land: and Menahem gave Pul a thousand talents of silver, that his hand might be with him to confirm the kingdom in his hand.

^c 1 Chron.
5. 26.
771.

20 And Menahem [†] exacted the money of Israel, even of all the mighty men of wealth, of each man fifty shekels of silver, to give to the king of Assyria. So the king of Assyria turned back, and stayed not there in the land.

[†] Heb. caused to come forth.

21 ¶ And the rest of the acts of Menahem, and all that he did, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Israel?

22 And Menahem slept with his fathers; and Pekahiah his son reigned in his stead.

12. This was the word of the Lord &c.] How unfaithful soever the Israelites proved to God, He faithfully kept His promise which He made to Jehu: whose sons Jehoahaz, Jehoash, Jeroboam, and Zachariah, succeeded him in the throne of Israel. But Shallum, who is mentioned in the next verse, put an end to his family. Bp. Patrick.

16. — Tiphseh.] This Tiphseh must be different from that mentioned at 1 Kings iv. 24. According to the circumstances of the story, it must have been situate not far from Tirzah, and so on the west side of Jordan in the land of Israel. Dr. Wells.

— and all the women &c.] By this barbarity, no doubt, he thought to terrify the whole kingdom, so that none might dare to withstand him. Bp. Patrick.

19. — Pul the king of Assyria.] This is the first mention that we find in Scripture of the kingdom of Assyria, since the days of Nimrod, who erected a small kingdom here, Gen. x. 11; and Pul is the first monarch of that nation who invaded Israel, and began the transportation of the inhabitants out of it. Bp. Patrick.

The ancient empire of the Assyrians, which had governed Asia for above 1300 years, being dissolved on the death of Sardanapalus, there arose up two empires in its stead; the one founded by Arbaces governour of Media, and the other by Belesis governour of Babylon, who were the two principal commanders that headed the conspiracy, whereby the former empire was brought to an end; they having on their success parted the kingdom among themselves, Belesis had Babylon, Chaldea, and Arabia; and Arbaces had all the rest. Arbaces is in Scripture called Tiglath-pileser, ver. 29; also 2 Kings xvi. 7, 10. He fixed his royal seat at Nineveh, the same place where the former Assyrian kings had their residence, and there he governed his new-created empire nineteen years. Belesis is the same with Nabonassar, from the beginning of whose reign at Babylon commences the famous astronomical era, called from him the Era of Nabonassar. He is called in Holy Scripture Baladan, Isai. xxxix. 1, being the father of Merodach, who sent an embassy to king Hezekiah to congratulate him on his recovery from sickness. And these two empires God was pleased to raise up to be His instruments in their turns to punish the iniquities of His own people; the first for the overthrowing of the kingdom of Israel, and the other for the overthrowing of the kingdom of Judah, as will hereafter appear. Dean Prideaux.

It has been supposed by some that Pul, mentioned in this verse, was the same as Belesis; but it is more probable that he was the father of Sardanapalus, and that he was the same king of Assyria who, when Jonah preached against Nineveh, gave such great tokens of humiliation and repentance. Stackhouse.

Before
CHRIST
761.

23 ¶ In the fiftieth year of Azariah king of Judah Pekahiah the son of Menahem began to reign over Israel in Samaria, and reigned two years.

24 And he did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD: he departed not from the sins of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, who made Israel to sin.

25 But Pekah the son of Remaliah, a captain of his, conspired against him, and smote him in Samaria, in the palace of the king's house, with Argob and Arieah, and with him fifty men of the Gileadites: and he killed him, and reigned in his room.

26 And the rest of the acts of Pekahiah, and all that he did, behold, they are written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Israel.

27 ¶ In the two and fiftieth year of Azariah king of Judah Pekah the son of Remaliah began to reign over Israel in Samaria, and reigned twenty years.

28 And he did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD: he departed not from the sins of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, who made Israel to sin.

29 In the days of Pekah king of Israel came Tiglath-pileser king of Assyria, and took Ijon, and Abel-beth-maachah, and Janoah, and Kedesh, and Hazor, and Gilead, and Galilee, all the land of Naphtali, and carried them captive to Assyria.

30 And Hoshea the son of Elah made a conspiracy against Pekah the son of Remaliah, and smote him, and slew him, and reigned in his stead, in the twentieth year of Jotham the son of Uzziah.

31 And the rest of the acts of Pekah, and all that he did, behold, they are written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Israel.

32 ¶ In the second year of Pekah the son of Remaliah king of Israel began ^a Jotham the son of Uzziah king of Judah to reign.

29. — came Tiglath-pileser] This was the second invasion of the Assyrians on this sinful people. Tiglath-pileser sent a numerous army, which swept all the country of the two tribes and a half east of the river Jordan, and some of the northern parts of the western Canaan, and carried off the inhabitants into Assyria. Pyle. Tiglath-pileser was the same as Arbaces; see note on ver. 19. Dean Prideaux.

30. — in the twentieth year of Jotham] These words have created a difficulty; for it is said at ver. 33, that Jotham reigned but sixteen years. The plain way of solving it is, by supposing that Jotham reigned four or more years with his father Azariah. Bp. Patrick.

It is useful to remind the reader, that, though there are several difficulties respecting the chronology given in Scripture of the kings of Israel and Judah; yet the whole or the greater part of 33 Five and twenty years old was he when he began to reign, and he reigned sixteen years in Jerusalem. And his mother's name was Jerusha, the daughter of Zadok.

34 And he did that which was right in the sight of the LORD: he did according to all that his father Uzziah had done.

35 ¶ Howbeit the high places were not removed: the people sacrificed and burnt incense still in the high places. He built the higher gate of the house of the LORD.

36 ¶ Now the rest of the acts of Jotham, and all that he did, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Judah?

37 In those days the LORD began to send against Judah Rezin the king of Syria, and Pekah the son of Remaliah.

38 And Jotham slept with his fathers, and was buried with his fathers in the city of David his father: and Ahaz his son reigned in his stead.

CHAP. XVI.

1 Ahaz's wicked reign. 5 Ahaz, assailed by Rezin and Pekah, hireth Tiglath-pileser against them. 10 Ahaz, sending a pattern of an altar from Damascus to Urijah, diverteth the brassen altar to his own devotion. 17 He spoileth the temple. 19 Hezekiah succeedeth him.

IN the seventeenth year of Pekah the son of Remaliah ^a Ahaz the son of Jotham king of Judah began to reign.

2 Twenty years old was Ahaz when he began to reign, and reigned sixteen years in Jerusalem, and did not that which was right in the sight of the LORD his God, like David his father.

3 But he walked in the way of the kings of Israel, yea, and made his son to pass through the fire, according to the abominations of the heathen, whom the LORD cast out from before the children of Israel.

these difficulties may be explained by the circumstance, which frequently took place in those times, of the father and son reigning together for some years. Stackhouse.

Chap. XVI. This chapter is to be compared with 2 Chron. xxviii.

Ver. 3. — made his son to pass through the fire,] Ahaz was far more wicked than any of the preceding kings of Israel, for he imitated those abominable idolaters whom God rooted out of the land of Canaan, who sometimes burnt their children in the fire, as sacrifices to their gods, Deut. xii. 31, &c. Whether Ahaz really did this, or only made his son pass through the fire by way of lustration, cannot be determined. Bp. Patrick. Concerning these impieties, see notes at Levit. xviii. 21, and Deut. xviii. 10.

Before
CHRIST
758.

about 742.

742.

about 742.

^a 2 Chron.
28. 1.

Before
CHRIST
742. 4 And he sacrificed and burnt incense in the high places, and on the hills, and under every green tree.

742.
Isai. 7. 1. 5 ¶ Then Rezin king of Syria and Pekah son of Remaliah king of Israel came up to Jerusalem to war: and they besieged Ahaz, but could not overcome him.

6 At that time Rezin king of Syria recovered Elath to Syria, and drove the Jews from Elath: and the Syrians came to Elath, and dwelt there unto this day.

7 So Ahaz sent messengers to Tiglath-pileser king of Assyria, saying, I am thy servant and thy son: come up, and save me out of the hand of the king of Syria, and out of the hand of the king of Israel, which rise up against me.

740. 8 And Ahaz took the silver and gold that was found in the house of the LORD, and in the treasures of the king's house, and sent it for a present to the king of Assyria.

† Heb.
Dammeseck. 9 And the king of Assyria hearkened unto him: for the king of Assyria went up against † Damascus, and took it, and carried the people of it captive to Kir, and slew Rezin.

10 ¶ And king Ahaz went to Damascus to meet Tiglath-pileser king of Assyria, and saw an altar that was at Damascus: and king Ahaz sent to Urijah the priest the fashion of the altar, and the pattern of it, according to all the workmanship thereof.

4. — burnt incense in the high places, &c.] We read that, even in the reigns of good kings, (see chap. xii. 3; xiv. 4; xv. 4,) the people sacrificed in high places; but we do not find in any former instance that the kings themselves did so. Ahaz however gave countenance to the practice by his own example, and thereby strengthened this licence of private sacrifice, contrary to the law of God; and, what was worst of all, of sacrificing to other gods; for it is highly probable that they fancied some deity to reside in these high places, and "under every green tree." Bp. Patrick.

6. — recovered Elath to Syria,] As Elath was situate on the Red sea, and was the port for trading to the East, this loss was of the greatest importance to the Jews: for it included the whole trade of India, Persia, Africa, and Arabia. This trade they had not indeed carried on always with the same success, as in the days of Solomon; but still they derived from it very considerable advantage. After that Rezin thus dispossessed them of Elath, the merchandise which used to be carried to Jerusalem was conveyed to other parts, and the Jews never afterwards recovered the trade. Dean Prideaux.

— the Jews] The Hebrews are here for the first time called Jews, being so named from the tribe of Judah, from which tribe the Messiah was to spring. This tribe returned from the Babylonish captivity in the most flourishing condition; the other ten tribes never returning again. Bp. Wilson.

7. — I am thy servant and thy son:] He means, that he put himself under his protection, and made himself his subject to hold all that he had by his favour. Bp. Patrick.

9. — to Kir,] A place in Media. We read of a city called Cyrene, and Cyropolis, mentioned by writers as lying in those parts, which, it is thought, with some probability, was the place to which the Syrians were carried captive. Dr. Wells.

Before
CHRIST
740. 11 And Urijah the priest built an altar according to all that king Ahaz had sent from Damascus: so Urijah the priest made it against king Ahaz came from Damascus.

12 And when the king was come from Damascus, the king saw the altar: and the king approached to the altar, and offered thereon.

13 And he burnt his burnt offering and his meat offering, and poured his drink offering, and sprinkled the blood of † his † Heb.
which were
his. peace offerings, upon the altar.

14 And he brought also the brasen altar, which was before the LORD, from the forefront of the house, from between the altar and the house of the LORD, and put it on the north side of the altar.

15 And king Ahaz commanded Urijah the priest, saying, Upon the great altar burn the morning burnt offering, and the evening meat offering, and the king's burnt sacrifice, and his meat offering, with the burnt offering of all the people of the land, and their meat offering, and their drink offerings; and sprinkle upon it all the blood of the burnt offering, and all the blood of the sacrifice: and the brasen altar shall be for me to enquire by.

16 Thus did Urijah the priest, according to all that king Ahaz commanded.

17 ¶ And king Ahaz cut off the borders 739.

10. — saw an altar that was at Damascus:] Ahaz on this occasion shewed himself lost to all sense of honour, reason, and true religion: for the mortal enmity which subsisted between him and the Syrians, did not hinder him from worshipping their idols, after they were a beaten and miserable people. His corrupted fancy being struck with great admiration of the beauty and form of a certain altar he saw there, he ordered a pattern of it to be made by the high priest of Jerusalem, on which he offered his own sacrifices, not to the true God, but to the idols of Syria, even though they had been found unable to defend their own worshippers from destruction. Pyle.

15. — the great altar] The new altar he had erected, which was probably larger than the altar of God.

— the brasen altar shall be for me to enquire by.] He would not have it thought, that he intended wholly to lay aside the altar made by Solomon, but rather to do it great honour by reserving it for his own private use, when he pleased to inquire of God by it. Bp. Patrick.

16. Thus did Urijah the priest,] This compliance of a priest of God with an idolatrous king, in setting up an altar of a false god against the altar of the Most High, was most base, and deservedly to be held in detestation. Bp. Wilson.

Impiety is still more odious in ministers of religion than in princes: and they become exceeding guilty, when either fear, or complaisance for the great men of the world, or any other consideration whatever, engages them to do what is contrary to the law of God. Ostervald.

17. And king Ahaz cut off &c.] To ingratiate himself still more with the Assyrian king, by contemning the religion of his own country, Ahaz, desperate in wickedness, defaced the very vessels of the temple of God. Pyle.

Before
CHRIST
739.

of the bases, and removed the laver from off them; and took down the sea from off the brasen oxen that were under it, and put it upon a pavement of stones.

18 And the covert for the sabbath that they had built in the house, and the king's entry without, turned he from the house of the Lord for the king of Assyria.

19 ¶ Now the rest of the acts of Ahaz which he did, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Judah?

726.

20 And Ahaz slept with his fathers, and was buried with his fathers in the city of David: and Hezekiah his son reigned in his stead.

CHAP. XVII.

1 Hoshea's wicked reign. 3 Being subdued by Shalmaneser, he conspireth against him with So king of Egypt. 5 Samaria for their sins is captivated. 24 The strange nations, which were transplanted in Samaria, being plagued with lions, make a mixture of religions.

730.

IN the twelfth year of Ahaz king of Judah began Hoshea the son of Elah to reign in Samaria over Israel nine years. Before CHRIST

about 730.

2 And he did that which was evil in the sight of the Lord, but not as the kings of Israel that were before him.

3 ¶ Against him came up Shalmaneser king of Assyria; and Hoshea became his servant, and † gave him ‖ presents. † Heb rendered.
‖ Or, tribute.

4 And the king of Assyria found conspiracy in Hoshea: for he had sent messengers to So king of Egypt, and brought no present to the king of Assyria, as he had done year by year: therefore the king of Assyria shut him up, and bound him in prison. 725.

5 ¶ Then the king of Assyria came up throughout all the land, and went up to Samaria, and besieged it three years. 723.

6 ^a ¶ In the ninth year of Hoshea the king of Assyria took Samaria, and carried Israel away into Assyria, and placed them in Halah and in Habor by the river of Gozan, and in the cities of the Medes. 721.
^a Chap. 18.
10.

7 For so it was, that the children of Is-

18. And the covert for the sabbath] This was probably a building or covering made for the purpose, that, when on the sabbath days the crowd of people was too great to be contained in the porch, they might remain under shelter from the injuries of the weather. Locke. There is great difference of opinion about the meaning of the word, which we translate "the covert for the sabbath." The most probable notion is, that this was a covered place, where the king sat, in the porch of the temple, or at the entrance of it, upon the sabbath, or other great solemnities. Ahaz took this away, intending probably not to trouble himself any more with coming to the temple, but to sacrifice elsewhere. It is also a probable conjecture, that Ahaz did this with a further view of expressing his hatred and contempt of the sabbath; for the worship of idols and the violation of the sabbath are frequently joined together in Scripture, especially in Ezek. xx. 16; xxii. 8, 9; xxiii. 37, 38. Bp. Patrick.

19. Now the rest of the acts of Ahaz] See more concerning him at 2 Chron. xxviii.

Chap. XVII. ver. 2. — but not as the kings of Israel] For, whereas the kings of Israel had hitherto maintained guards upon their frontiers, to hinder their subjects from going up to worship at Jerusalem, Hoshea gave them all free liberty to worship there, and probably encouraged them in demolishing the high places, 2 Chron. xxx, xxxi. On this account he has, as to religion, the best character given him in Scripture of all that reigned before him over Israel after the division of the kingdom; for, although he was by no means perfect in the true worship of God, yet his ways were less offensive than the ways of any who had preceded him in that kingdom. Dean Prideaux.

3. — Shalmaneser] This prince, called Enemessar in Tobit i. 2, was the son and successor of Arbaces or Tiglath-pileser. Stackhouse.

4. — to So king of Egypt,] This So is the same with Sabaeon the Ethiopian, mentioned by heathen authors, who, having invaded Egypt, and taken prisoner Boccharis king of the country, caused him to be put to death with great cruelty, and then seized on the kingdom. Dean Prideaux.

6. — and carried Israel away] Shalmaneser, thus fulfilling the prophecies of Amos and other Prophets, transported the people of the seven western tribes beyond Assyria, and planted them in Media, whither his father had before transplanted the tribes east of Jordan, 2 Kings xv. 29. Dr. Hales. Thus in the course of nineteen years was completed the captivity of the ten revolted tribes.

— in Halah and in Habor by the river of Gozan,] Halah, otherwise written Chalach, is thought with great probability to denote the country in the north of Assyria, called by Ptolemy Calachene. Habor, otherwise Chabor, is thought to be a mountainous country between Media and Assyria, called by Ptolemy Chaboras. The river Gozan is thought by most writers to be that which is also called Gauzanitis. Dr. Wells.

— in the cities of the Medes.] It is probable that this colony was placed in the mountainous part of Media, because it was less peopled than the lower country. Strabo says, that it was chiefly peopled by strangers and by colonies from abroad. Stackhouse.

7. For so it was, that &c.] Thus did the just providence of Heaven withdraw its wonted protection from a nation which, from the very first instances of its special and miraculous favours, and amidst a long succession of mercies and blessings, frustrated the designs of what was done for them, by forsaking the laws of true religion, and wandering into all the superstitious and idolatrous rites of those very heathens, whom they saw destroyed for similar practices, and whose country was given to the Israelites, expressly for the punishment of their crimes. Pyle. Thus an end was put to the kingdom of Israel. The ten tribes now carried into captivity never returned. It is true that some of them took advantage of the liberty given to the Jews under Ezra, to return to their land, and so returned together with the two tribes of Judah and Benjamin; but this never amounted to a full restoration of the ten tribes, the main bulk of them continued in the land of their captivity, where they are still to be found in great numbers. Stackhouse.

This entire destruction of the kingdom of Israel is one of the most remarkable events recorded in the Old Testament. Scripture takes particular notice of the cause of this destruction, which was owing not only to Hoshea's conspiracy against the king of Assyria, but chiefly to the ingratitude and idolatry of the Israelites, and their other sins; especially their incorrigible hardness of heart, and repeated contempt of the patience and long-suffering

Before
CHRIST
721.

rael had sinned against the LORD their God, which had brought them up out of the land of Egypt, from under the hand of Pharaoh king of Egypt, and had feared other gods,

8 And walked in the statutes of the heathen, whom the LORD cast out from before the children of Israel, and of the kings of Israel, which they had made.

9 And the children of Israel did secretly those things that were not right against the LORD their God, and they built them high places in all their cities, from the tower of the watchmen to the fenced city.

10 And they set them up † images and groves in every high hill, and under every green tree :

11 And there they burnt incense in all the high places, as did the heathen whom the LORD carried away before them ; and wrought wicked things to provoke the LORD to anger :

12 For they served idols, whereof the LORD had said unto them, ^b Ye shall not do this thing.

13 Yet the LORD testified against Israel, and against Judah, † by all the prophets, and by all the seers, saying, ^c Turn ye from your evil ways, and keep my commandments and my statutes, according to all the law which I commanded your fathers, and which I sent to you by my servants the prophets.

14 Notwithstanding they would not hear, but hardened their necks, like to the neck of their fathers, that did not believe in the LORD their God.

15 And they rejected his statutes, and his covenant that he made with their fathers, and his testimonies which he testified against them ; and they followed vanity, and became vain, and went after the heathen that were round about them, concerning whom the LORD had charged them, that they should not do like them.

16 And they left all the commandments of the LORD their God, and ^d made them molten images, even two calves, and made a grove, and worshipped all the host of heaven, and served Baal.

17 And they caused their sons and their daughters to pass through the fire, and used divination and enchantments, and sold themselves to do evil in the sight of the LORD, to provoke him to anger.

18 Therefore the LORD was very angry with Israel, and removed them out of his sight : there was none left but the tribe of Judah only.

19 Also Judah kept not the commandments of the LORD their God, but walked in the statutes of Israel which they made.

20 And the LORD rejected all the seed of Israel, and afflicted them, and delivered them into the hand of spoilers, until he had cast them out of his sight.

21 For he rent Israel from the house of David ; and they made Jeroboam the son

Before
CHRIST
721.

^d Exodus
32. 8.
¹ Kings 12.
29.

† Heb. statues.

^b Deut. 4.
19.

† Heb.
by the hand
of all.
^c Jer. 18.
11. & 25. 5.
^e 35. 15.

of God, and of the threats and remonstrances of His Prophets. This example should teach all men, that obstinacy in sin, and contempt of God's word, force Him, as it were, at last to execute His threatenings ; and that the covenant which He makes with any people, does not hinder Him from rejecting them, and punishing them with the greatest severity, if they continue to offend Him. Ostervald.

How terrible was the example of vengeance upon that peculiar people, which God had chosen for Himself, out of all the world ! All the world had been witnesses of the favours of their miraculous deliverances and protections. All the world have been witnesses of their just confusion. What was it that caused God to cast off His own inheritance ? What, but the same cause which made Him cast the angels out of heaven, even their rebellious sins. Those sins dared to emulate in their enormity the greatness of His mercies, no less than they forced the severity of His judgments. What could the just hand of the Almighty do less, than consume a nation so incorrigibly flagitious : a nation so unthankful for mercies ; so impatient of remedies ; so incapable of repentance ; so shamelessly, so lawlessly wicked ! Bp. Hall.

9. — from the tower of the watchmen &c.] By “ the tower of the watchmen ” is thought here to be meant small houses, built by the country people, in which they might watch their flocks and produce, and preserve them from wild beasts or robbers : thus the expression of the text signifies that they built high places in all parts, both in the country and in the cities. Bp. Patrick. Or the meaning of the expression, “ from the tower of the watchmen to the fenced city,” is “ from one side of the borders of the kingdom to the other ;” no part of it, whether more solitary or more frequented, being left free. Bp. Hall.

10. — and groves] The Hebrew word, which we translate “ groves,” ought to be rendered “ idols of the groves :” for it signifies, not the grove itself, but the object of worship placed therein. Selden. Procopius observes, that though the word is translated “ groves ” by the Greek translators, yet in other ancient versions it is rendered Ashtarothe. Bp. Patrick.

13. Yet the Lord testified against Israel, &c.] What aggravated the guilt of this people was, that they never were left without continual warnings, persuasions, and threatenings from Heaven, by the mouth of inspired Prophets, during the whole course of their impieties, to shew them their errors, convince them of their danger, and lead them back to their true interest. But all was in vain with men, who, by the allurements of the pomp and pageantry of heathen worship, by the power of last and secular views, suffered themselves to be at last abandoned to the worst of those abominations that were most destructive of the honour of God, and the happy constitution of their own religion and government. Pyle.

18. Therefore the Lord &c.] This course of wicked behaviour at last induced God to abandon them, and deliver up so corrupted a branch of this once favourite nation into the hands of a foreign power, while no part of it was left but the united tribes of Judah and Benjamin, who had yet some further space given them for repentance. Pyle.

— removed them out of his sight :] That is, from the Holy Land where His temple was, in which He dwelt among them. Bp. Patrick.

Before
CHRIST
721.

of Nebat king: and Jeroboam drave Israel from following the LORD, and made them sin a great sin.

22 For the children of Israel walked in all the sins of Jeroboam which he did; they departed not from them;

23 Until the LORD removed Israel out of his sight, as he had said by all his servants the prophets. So was Israel carried away out of their own land to Assyria unto this day.

about 678.

24 ¶ And the king of Assyria brought men from Babylon, and from Cuthah, and from Ava, and from Hamath, and from Sepharvaim, and placed them in the cities of Samaria instead of the children of Israel: and they possessed Samaria, and dwelt in the cities thereof.

25 And so it was at the beginning of their dwelling there, that they feared not the LORD: therefore the LORD sent lions among them, and slew some of them.

26 Wherefore they spake to the king of Assyria, saying, The nations which thou hast removed, and placed in the cities of Samaria, know not the manner of the God of the land: therefore he hath sent lions among them, and, behold, they slay them, because they know not the manner of the God of the land.

Before
CHRIST
about 678.

27 Then the king of Assyria commanded, saying, Carry thither one of the priests whom ye brought from thence; and let them go and dwell there, and let him teach them the manner of the God of the land.

28 Then one of the priests whom they had carried away from Samaria came and dwelt in Beth-el, and taught them how they should fear the LORD.

29 Howbeit every nation made gods of their own, and put them in the houses of the high places which the Samaritans had made, every nation in their cities wherein they dwelt.

30 And the men of Babylon made Succoth-benoth, and the men of Cuth made Nergal, and the men of Hamath made Ashima, 31 And the Avites made Nibhaz and Tartak, and the Sepharvites burnt their children in fire to Adrammelech and Anammelech, the gods of Sepharvaim.

32 So they feared the LORD, and made

24. — from Cuthah, and from Ava, &c.] The Cuthah here mentioned is supposed by many to be the same with Cush, which is said by Moses to be encompassed by the river Gihon; accordingly it is much the same with the country called by the Greeks Susiana, and which is said to this very day to bear the name of Chusestan. It is difficult to give an account of the city or country called Ava: perhaps it was the same as Ivali, mentioned at chap. xviii. 34: the learned Grotius supposes it was in Bactriana; observing, that Ptolemy mentions a people there under the name of Avadia. Sepharvaim is thought to be a city called Sipphara by Ptolemy: the word Sepharvaim has a plural termination in the Hebrew, which belongs to it probably for this reason, that as the river Euphrates ran through the place, it divided it, as it were, into two cities. Dr. Wells.

25. — therefore the Lord sent lions among them,] If it should be asked, why these new inhabitants were thus punished for not fearing the Lord, while the Israelites, whose guilt was the same, were not so punished: it may be answered, that the Israelites were indeed addicted to idolatry; but still they believed in the one almighty eternal God, and were far from denying His power and providence; while these new inhabitants had no notions of any objects of religious adoration beyond the empty idols which they worshipped. Stackhouse.

26. — know not the manner of the God of the land:] They deemed the God of Israel to be of the same kind with their idols, who presided over a particular country and people, and would be honoured with particular rites which were acceptable to Him, and no other. Bp. Patrick.

27. — saying, Carry thither one of the priests] Accordingly, the king ordered one of the principal Israelite priests, and probably several more under him, to be sent back to teach these new inhabitants the religion and worship of the Israelites, which might be improved as a fair opportunity of embracing the true religion by such of them as were of sincere and more uncorrupt dispositions. Pyle. One of the priests of Israel is appointed to be carried back to Samaria, to teach the Assyrian colony the fashions of the God of the land; not for devotion, but for impunity. Vain politicians think to satisfy God by patching up religions. Thus the Assyrian priests teach and practise the worship of their own gods: the Israelitish priest prescribes the worship of the true God; the people will follow both, the one out of liking, the other out of fear. Bp. Hall. Here began a new kind of religion, not unlike that of the Israelites, consisting in the worship of the true God, and of a number of false deities. Hence sprang that mutual hatred between the Jews and Samaritans, the former abominating even the name of the latter, and the latter always disowning any kindred with the former in time of adversity, though forward enough to claim it in time of prosperity. Universal History.

30. — the men of Babylon made Succoth-benoth,] The words "Succoth-benoth" literally mean, "the tabernacles or tents of the young women:" and it is supposed, with considerable probability, that these were the places where the young women exposed themselves to prostitution in honour of a Babylonish goddess, called Mylitta. Herodotus gives a particular account of these abominable and detestable practices, which, there is reason to conclude from this passage, the Babylonians introduced into Judea. Parkhurst, Calmet.

As to the names of the idols which follow, Nergal, Ashima, &c. various conjectures have been formed; but no information can be given respecting them with any tolerable certainty.

— the men of Hamath] There were several cities and countries of this name; probably that which is here meant was a province of Syria, lying on the river Orontes. Stackhouse.

32. So they feared the Lord,] So they worshipped the Lord God of Israel, together with their idols, making as strange a medley and confusion of religions as the Israelites themselves had before practised in this very country. Pyle. Making a formal profession of serving the Lord, they continued the worship of their own false gods. Bp. Hall.

Soon after the settlement of these people in Samaria, they were taught the worship of the true God; but, retaining also the worship of their false deities, their religion was for some years a mixture of heathenish and Jewish. In process of time, however, having many of the Israelites incorporated among them, and

Before CHRIST about 678. unto themselves of the lowest of them priests of the high places, which sacrificed for them in the houses of the high places.

° Zeph. 1. 5. 33 ^c They feared the LORD, and served their own gods, after the manner of the nations || whom they carried away from thence.

|| Or, who carried them away from thence.

34 Unto this day they do after the former manners: they fear not the LORD, neither do they after their statutes, or after their ordinances, or after the law and commandment which the LORD commanded the children of Jacob, ^f whom he named Israel;

° Gen. 32. 28.
1 Kings 18. 31.
Judges 6. 10.

35 With whom the LORD had made a covenant, and charged them, saying, ^g Ye shall not fear other gods, nor bow yourselves to them, nor serve them, nor sacrifice to them:

36 But the LORD, who brought you up out of the land of Egypt with great power and a stretched out arm, him shall ye fear, and him shall ye worship, and to him shall ye do sacrifice.

37 And the statutes, and the ordinances, and the law, and the commandment, which he wrote for you, ye shall observe to do for evermore; and ye shall not fear other gods.

38 And the covenant that I have made with you ye shall not forget; neither shall ye fear other gods.

having built a temple on mount Gerizim, like to that at Jerusalem, they appear to have abandoned all idolatry, and to have worshipped only the God of Israel. Bp. Tomline.

34. Unto this day they do &c.] These and the following words relate to the children of Israel, who, though carried away in captivity, were not at all amended by their calamities, but still neglected the laws of God, and in this sense "feared not the Lord—until this day," that is, until the day when this book was written. Bp. Patrick.

41. So these nations feared the Lord, and served their graven images,] In the foregoing account of the colony planted in Samaria by the king of Babylon, to supply the place of the ten tribes, we have an instance of heathens, placed probably in the most advantageous circumstances in which it was possible for heathens to be placed, in order to reclaim them from idolatry; introduced to supply the place of one part of God's chosen people who had been expelled for their idolatries, thus brought into immediate contact with the remaining part from whom they could not but learn much of the wonders of Jehovah's power; convinced by their own experience of the necessity of conciliating Him as the supreme guardian God of the country in which they were newly settled, and compelled by their fears to solicit instruction in His law: they received that instruction; the books were placed in their hands, and were from that time uniformly acknowledged by them as of Divine authority. Yet so deeply rooted were their idolatrous propensities, that, although thus favourably circumstanced, with examples of Divine punishment immediately under their observance, instructed in the tenour, and acknowledging the authority of the Divine law, they could not be taught to discern the folly and impiety, or forsake the practice, of associating the worship of the basest idols with that of the great Jehovah. Dr. Graves. See note on Ezra iv. 3.

39 But the LORD your God ye shall fear; and he shall deliver you out of the hand of all your enemies. Before CHRIST about 678.

40 Howbeit they did not hearken, but they did after their former manner.

41 So these nations feared the LORD, and served their graven images, both their children, and their children's children: as did their fathers, so do they unto this day.

CHAP. XVIII.

1 Hezekiah's good reign. 4 He destroyeth idolatry, and prospereth. 9 Samaria is carried captive for their sins. 13 Sennacherib invading Judah is pacified by a tribute. 17 Rab-shakeh, sent by Sennacherib again, revileth Hezekiah, and by blasphemous persuasions soliciteh the people to revolt.

NOW it came to pass in the third year of Hoshea son of Elah king of Israel, that ^a Hezekiah the son of Ahaz king of Judah began to reign. about 726.

2 Twenty and five years old was he when he began to reign; and he reigned twenty and nine years in Jerusalem. His mother's name also was Abi, the daughter of Zachariah. ° 2 Chron. 29. 27. & 29. 1. He is called Ezekias, Matth. 1. 9.

3 And he did that which was right in the sight of the LORD, according to all that David his father did.

4 ¶ He removed the high places, and brake the [†] images, and cut down the [†] groves, and brake in pieces the ^b brasen serpent that Moses had made: for unto † Heb. statues. b Numbers 21. 9.

Chap. XVIII. This chapter is to be compared with Isaiah xxxvi. and xxxvii. to ver. 21; also with 2 Chron. xxix, xxx, xxxi, xxxii, where is a fuller account of the reign of Hezekiah.

Ver. 1. — Hezekiah — began to reign.] After a race of kings, the best of whom were but careless observers of God's law, and the worst extremely flagitious, it must needs have affected every pious heart with joy and wonder to see such a king as Hezekiah rise up, like a glorious sun after a long season of clouds and darkness, who, though descended from such idolatrous ancestors, had zeal and courage to reform the church and state of Judah, to remove the high places, break down the images, and cut down the groves, and bring the religion to the condition in which it was in the time of David. Reading. How seasonably hath the providence of God kept the best man for the worst times! When God has a great work to do, He always knows how to supply Himself with instruments. Bp. Hall.

4. — brake in pieces the brasen serpent.] The reason assigned for Hezekiah's destroying this serpent is, that "the children of Israel burnt incense unto it." We are not to suppose, however, that all along from the days of Moses this had been an object of religious worship, since probably such princes as David and Solomon would not have allowed it: the commencement of the superstition must have been of much later date. One inducement to the false worship of this image may probably have been, a mistake of the words of Moses. For whereas it was said at Numb. xxi. 8, that whosoever looked upon it should live; some may have imagined that they could obtain a blessing by means of it, and so may have made it an object of superstitious worship. However, we may imagine that their burning of incense unto it was at first designed only in honour of the true God, by whose direction Moses made it; but that, in the process of superstition, they worshipped the God of Israel under that image; or, what was worse,

Before
CHRIST
about 726.

those days the children of Israel did burn incense to it: and he called it Nehushtan.

5 He trusted in the LORD God of Israel; so that after him was none like him among all the kings of Judah, nor any that were before him.

† Heb.
from after
him.

6 For he clave to the LORD, and departed not † from following him, but kept his commandments, which the LORD commanded Moses.

about 725.

7 And the LORD was with him; and he prospered whithersoever he went forth: and he rebelled against the king of Assyria, and served him not.

† Heb.
Azazah.

8 He smote the Philistines, even unto † Gaza, and the borders thereof, from the tower of the watchmen to the fenced city.

Chap. 17.
3.

about 723.

9 ¶ And it came to pass in the fourth year of king Hezekiah, which was the seventh year of Hoshea son of Elah king of Israel, that Shalmaneser king of Assyria came up against Samaria, and besieged it.

about 721.

10 And at the end of three years they took it: even in the sixth year of Hezekiah, that is the ninth year of Hoshea king of Israel, Samaria was taken.

Chap. 17.
6.

11 And the king of Assyria did carry away Israel unto Assyria, and put them in Halah and in Habor by the river of Gozan, and in the cities of the Medes:

12 Because they obeyed not the voice of the LORD their God, but transgressed his covenant, and all that Moses the servant of the LORD commanded, and would not hear them, nor do them.

Before
CHRIST
about 721.

13 ¶ Now in the fourteenth year of king Hezekiah did † Sennacherib king of Assyria come up against all the fenced cities of Judah, and took them.

713.
2 Chron.
32. 1.
Isai. 36. 1.
Ecl^{us} 48.
18.

14 And Hezekiah king of Judah sent to the king of Assyria to Lachish, saying, I have offended; return from me: that which thou puttest on me will I bear. And the king of Assyria appointed unto Hezekiah king of Judah three hundred talents of silver and thirty talents of gold.

† Heb.
Sannherib.

15 And Hezekiah gave him all the silver that was found in the house of the LORD, and in the treasures of the king's house.

16 At that time did Hezekiah cut off the gold from the doors of the temple of the LORD, and from the pillars which Hezekiah king of Judah had overlaid, and gave † it to the king of Assyria.

† Heb.
them.
about 710.

17 ¶ And the king of Assyria sent Tartan and Rabsaris and Rab-shakeh from Lachish to king Hezekiah with a † great host against Jerusalem. And they went up and came to Jerusalem. And when they were come up, they came and stood by the conduit of the upper pool, which is in the highway of the fuller's field.

† Heb.
heavy.

substituted a heathen god in His room, which they might the more easily be induced to do, because it was the practice of some neighbouring nations to worship their gods under the form of a serpent. On this account Hezekiah wisely chose rather to lose this memorial of God's mercy to His people in the wilderness, than to suffer it any longer to be abused to idolatrous purposes. Stackhouse.

— called it Nehushtan.] Called it by way of contempt, as it were, “a piece of brass.” Bp. Hall. “A brassen bauble.” Dr. Hales.

Hezekiah laboured under great discouragements to set about the reformation of religion. He had many idols and altars to demolish, which he found established by long prescription under the reigns of most of his predecessors. But herein he acted like a king indeed: not like a servant of men, but a minister of God, whose will he readily performed, as soon as he was invested with power and authority to do it. How sweet is a zeal for the glory of God in the spirit of princes! How greatly does it add to their lustre and dignity, giving us the brightest idea of the Divine image! Reading.

5. — after him was none like him &c.] This character of Hezekiah relates perhaps to some particular virtue in which he stood distinguished from the rest of the kings of Judah; and that may have been his trusting in the Lord God, (as is here stated,) and not in the help of any foreign forces, as all the other kings are known in some measure to have done. Calmet.

7. — and he rebelled against the king of Assyria.] The meaning is, that he owned not the authority of the Assyrian king over him, to which Ahaz had basely submitted, chap. xvi. 7; but looked upon himself as a free sovereign in his own kingdom, independent upon him. Still it is plain from ver. 14, that he was not able to maintain himself free from all subjection to the king of Assyria. Bp. Patrick.

— he rebelled] Though the word “rebellion” be now generally taken in an evil sense, for a seditious insurrection against lawful governors, yet our translators did not design it should be so taken in this place, but only to denote that this good king would no longer acknowledge himself to be a tributary and dependent of the king of Assyria, which is all the rebellion that is here intended. Reading.

10. — at the end of three years] Meaning rather “in the third year.” It cannot be meant literally at the expiration of three years; for it is related that the siege began in the fourth year of Hezekiah and ended in the sixth. Bp. Kidder.

13. — Sennacherib king of Assyria] Sennacherib succeeded his father Shalmaneser in the kingdom, after he had reigned about eight years. He is the same whom the Prophet Isaiah (chap. xx. 1) calls Sargon. Dean Prideaux.

— and took them.] This God permitted, that Hezekiah might be thereby led to have recourse to God, and that God might exalt more signally His own power and glory. Bp. Wilson.

15. — all the silver that was found in the house of the Lord,] How hard was good Hezekiah driven ere he would be thus bold with his God! Only necessity excuses that from being sacrilege in the son, which was sacrilege in the father. Bp. Hall.

17. And the king of Assyria sent &c.] Having received the tribute from Hezekiah, Sennacherib turned his arms against Egypt; and after a series of different successes, returned and invested Lachish; and thence, contrary to all faith, and to the agreement subsisting between him and the kings of Judah, sent, as is here related, to demand the surrender of Jerusalem. Stackhouse.

— by the conduit of the upper pool,] By the conduit or canal into which water was conveyed from the upper pool, which was in the highway to the field, where the fullers used to spread their clothes for drying. Bp. Patrick.

Before
CHRIST
about 710.

¶ Or,
secretary.

18 And when they had called to the king, there came out to them Eliakim the son of Hilkiah, which was over the household, and Shebna the scribe, and Joah the son of Asaph the recorder.

19 And Rab-shakeh said unto them, Speak ye now to Hezekiah, Thus saith the great king, the king of Assyria, What confidence is this wherein thou trustest?

¶ Or, talkest.
† Heb. word of the lips.

¶ Or, but counsel and strength are for the war.
† Heb. trustest thee.

20 Thou sayest, (but they are but vain words,) I have counsel and strength for the war. Now on whom dost thou trust, that thou rebellest against me?

21 Now, behold, thou trustest upon the staff of this bruised reed, even upon Egypt, on which if a man lean, it will go into his hand, and pierce it: so is Pharaoh king of Egypt unto all that trust on him.

22 But if ye say unto me, We trust in the LORD our God: is not that he, whose high places and whose altars Hezekiah hath taken away, and hath said to Judah and Jerusalem, Ye shall worship before this altar in Jerusalem?

23 Now therefore, I pray thee, give ¶ pledges to my lord the king of Assyria, and I will deliver thee two thousand horses, if thou be able on thy part to set riders upon them.

Before
CHRIST
about 710.
¶ Or, hostages.

24 How then wilt thou turn away the face of one captain of the least of my master's servants, and put thy trust on Egypt for chariots and for horsemen?

25 Am I now come up without the LORD against this place to destroy it? The LORD said to me, Go up against this land, and destroy it.

26 Then said Eliakim the son of Hilkiah, and Shebna, and Joah, unto Rab-shakeh, Speak, I pray thee, to thy servants in the Syrian language; for we understand it: and talk not with us in the Jews' language in the ears of the people that are on the wall.

27 But Rab-shakeh said unto them, Hath my master sent me to thy master, and to thee, to speak these words? hath he not sent me to the men which sit on the wall, that they may eat their own dung, and drink their own piss with you?

† Heb.
the water of their feet?

19. And Rab-shakeh said unto them,] The name of Rab-shakeh imports that he was by office the king's euphearer: by his ready speaking of the Hebrew tongue, it seems probable that he was an apostate Jew, or else one of those who were made captive from Israel. Dean Prideaux. See the note on Jer. xxxix. 3.

21. — even upon Egypt,] He thought it probable that Hezekiah would seek succour from Egypt, being a neighbouring country, and willing to give assistance, for the purpose of being revenged on the king of Assyria for his late invasion: but he represents Egypt as weak, and unable to succour him. Bp. Patrick. The comparison of the broken reed is excellent to denote an ally that is not only weak and unable to help, but dangerous also to those who rely upon him for succour. It has been supposed that the Assyrian orator alludes to the canes or reeds which grow on the banks of the Nile, which, if it be a just idea, gives great beauty to the similitude. Stuckhouse.

22. But if ye say unto me, &c.] He asks how they can place any confidence in the God of their country, or expect any thing but destruction from above, since Hezekiah had pulled down sacred groves and altars, and committed all manner of sacrilege, in order to introduce a worship of his own. So ignorant was this man, or else so audacious, that he called that a crime which was the greatest virtue in Hezekiah. Pyle.

23. Now therefore, — give pledges to my lord] These seem to be words of high contempt, and undervaluing of Hezekiah's power. He appears to challenge him to come out and fight with his master, saying, that if he would "give pledges," or security so to use them, he would give him two thousand horses, provided he was able to find the same number of men for them. Bp. Patrick.

The interposition of Providence in the government of the Israelites is at all times remarkable. During the period which elapsed between the division of the kingdom, and the captivity of Judah, we find that God had not utterly forsaken His people, but oftentimes gave them very signal deliverances. But it is to be observed, that these deliverances were not effected by their great forces, but by the interposition of God, when their condition was such, that they lost all hope in their own strength, and were willing to rely on God. Thus was Hezekiah delivered at a time when he was so weak, that the Assyrians insolently offered him

"two thousand horses, if he on his part were able to set riders upon them." The case will generally be found the same in other instances. Bp. Sherlock.

25. Am I now come up without the Lord] Rab-shakeh, whether a Jew or not, had learnt the name of their God, and pretended his master had come up with a commission from Him. Bp. Patrick. He affirms that "the Lord" was clearly on the side of the Assyrians, from His having already delivered the kingdom of Israel into their power, and subjected so many nations around to the victorious hand of Sennacherib. Pyle. How fearful a word was this to Hezekiah! If Rab-shakeh could have been believed, Jerusalem must soon have fallen: for how could it stand out, no less against God than men? Even thus does the great enemy of mankind: if he can but dishearten the soul from a dependence on the God of mercies, the victory is his. Lewd miscreants care not how they belie God for their own purposes. Bp. Hall.

He seems to speak of "the Lord," or Jehovah, as an inferior god, or the god of a particular country. He had before said, ver. 22, that He would not assist them if He could, because Hezekiah had provoked Him; and he afterwards insinuates, ver. 33, &c. that He could not preserve them if He would, for that none of the gods of the nations had been able to deliver their votaries out of his master's hand. Again, Hezekiah accuses him of speaking blasphemy, which charge would have been ill-founded, if he had merely asserted that he was not come up against the land, without "the God of the Jews;" but was sufficiently justified, on his implying that He whom Hezekiah called "the Lord," was not the Supreme Deity, but only a god of a nation, such a god as the gods of Hamath, Arpad, &c. which were no gods. Shuckford.

26. Then said Eliakim &c.] Hezekiah's commissioners, perceiving, or at least suspecting, that these ranting expressions might frighten the people that stood within hearing, desired Rab-shakeh to speak in his own language, since he was not sent to treat with the populace, but with the king and the court, who understood well the Syrian tongue. Pyle. The Syrian tongue was that which we now call the Chaldee. Lenth.

27. — that they may eat &c.] To make them know, that he would reduce them to the greatest extremities, if they did not submit to him. Bp. Patrick.

Before
CHRIST
about 710.

28 Then Rab-shakeh stood and cried with a loud voice in the Jews' language, and spake, saying, Hear the word of the great king, the king of Assyria:

29 Thus saith the king, Let not Hezekiah deceive you: for he shall not be able to deliver you out of his hand:

30 Neither let Hezekiah make you trust in the LORD, saying, The LORD will surely deliver us, and this city shall not be delivered into the hand of the king of Assyria.

§ Or, Seek my favour.
† Heb. Make with me a blessing.

31 Harken not to Hezekiah: for thus saith the king of Assyria, || † Make an agreement with me by a present, and come out to me, and then eat ye every man of his own vine, and every one of his fig tree, and drink ye every one the waters of his || cistern:

§ Or, pit.

32 Until I come and take you away to a land like your own land, a land of corn and wine, a land of bread and vineyards, a land of oil olive and of honey, that ye may live, and not die: and hearken not unto Hezekiah, when he || persuadeth you, saying, The LORD will deliver us.

§ Or, deceiveth.

33 Hath any of the gods of the nations delivered at all his land out of the hand of the king of Assyria?

34 Where are the gods of Hamath, and of Arpad? where are the gods of Sepharvaim, Hena, and Ivah? have they delivered Samaria out of mine hand?

35 Who are they among all the gods of the countries, that have delivered their country out of mine hand, that the LORD should deliver Jerusalem out of mine hand?

36 But the people held their peace, and answered him not a word: for the king's

32. Until I come and take you away &c.] He promises, that, if they would seek the favour of the king of Assyria, by making him a present, and delivering themselves up to his mercy, they should be transported to a better country than that to which the Israelites had been transported; and that, in the mean time, every one should enjoy his own possessions. Bp. Patrick.

33. Hath any of the gods of the nations &c.] He argues very popularly on the supposition that the God of Israel, the great God of heaven and earth, was like the idols of other nations, who were supposed to preside over some one country or city. Bp. Patrick.

37. — with their clothes rent,] To express their abhorrence at these audacious insults on their God and their religion. Pyle. The insolent blasphemies of Sennacherib hastened his ruin, and induced God to destroy him. God is jealous of His glory, and revenges the insults offered to Him. When therefore we meet, even among Christians, with impious wretches who openly insult the Deity, we may be assured He will not fail to rebuke their boldness, and to inflict severe punishment upon them. Ostervald.

Chap. XIX. This chapter is to be compared with 2 Chron. xxxii. and with Isai. xxxvii. 21, to the end.

commandment was, saying, Answer him not.

Before
CHRIST
about 710.

37 Then came Eliakim the son of Hilkiah, which was over the household, and Shebna the scribe, and Joah the son of Asaph the recorder, to Hezekiah with their clothes rent, and told him the words of Rab-shakeh.

CHAP. XIX.

1 Hezekiah mourning sendeth to Isaiah to pray for them. 6 Isaiah comforteth them. 8 Sennacherib, going to encounter Tirhakah, sendeth a blasphemous letter to Hezekiah. 14 Hezekiah's prayer. 20 Isaiah's prophecy of the pride and destruction of Sennacherib, and the good of Zion. 35 An angel slayeth the Assyrians. 36 Sennacherib is slain at Nineveh by his own sons.

AND ^a it came to pass, when king Hezekiah heard it, that he rent his clothes, and covered himself with sackcloth, and went into the house of the LORD.

2 And he sent Eliakim, which was over the household, and Shebna the scribe, and the elders of the priests, covered with sackcloth, to Isaiah the prophet the son of Amoz.

3 And they said unto him, Thus saith Hezekiah, This day is a day of trouble, and of rebuke, and || blasphemy: for the children are come to the birth, and there is not strength to bring forth. ^{§ Or, provocation.}

4 It may be the LORD thy God will hear all the words of Rab-shakeh, whom the king of Assyria his master hath sent to reproach the living God; and will reprove the words which the LORD thy God hath heard: wherefore lift up thy prayer for the remnant that are † left.

† Heb. found.

5 So the servants of king Hezekiah came to Isaiah.

Ver. 3. — for the children are come to the birth, &c.] He thus represents the present danger of perishing in which they were, unless speedily relieved, to be like that of a woman who, when her child was come to the birth, was so spent that she had not strength to bring forth. Bp. Patrick. The meaning is, It is with us as with a woman in travail, who hath not strength to bring forth her birth; extreme calamity hath seized upon us, from which we have no power to deliver ourselves. Bp. Hall. It is a proverbial expression probably, denoting present death, or the extremity of danger. Louth.

4. It may be the Lord thy God will hear &c.] As if they had said, We have no confidence in ourselves; our arms or our walls are too weak to secure us, and our fears are increased by the consciousness of our guilt; but, though our strength be small, and our sins cry aloud for vengeance, why should the honour of God be vilified and blasphemed? If, therefore, not for our sakes, yet for His own, it may be the Lord will avenge the insolent and profane message of the Assyrian king, which God hath surely heard, but which we tremble to repeat. Wogan.

— lift up thy prayer for the remnant] That Judah might not be carried into captivity, as Israel had been.

Before
CHRIST
about 710.

^b Luke 3.
4, called Esnias.

6 ¶ And ^b Isaiah said unto them, Thus shall ye say to your master, Thus saith the LORD, Be not afraid of the words which thou hast heard, with which the servants of the king of Assyria have blasphemed me.

7 Behold, I will send a blast upon him, and he shall hear a rumour, and shall return to his own land; and I will cause him to fall by the sword in his own land.

8 ¶ So Rab-shakeh returned, and found the king of Assyria warring against Libnah: for he had heard that he was departed from Lachish.

710. 9 And when he heard say of Tirhakah king of Ethiopia, Behold, he is come out to fight against thee: he sent messengers again unto Hezekiah, saying,

10 Thus shall ye speak to Hezekiah king of Judah, saying, Let not thy God in whom thou trustest deceive thee, saying, Jerusalem shall not be delivered into the hand of the king of Assyria.

11 Behold, thou hast heard what the kings of Assyria have done to all lands, by destroying them utterly: and shalt thou be delivered?

12 Have the gods of the nations delivered them which my fathers have destroyed; as Gozan, and Haran, and Rezeph, and the children of Eden which were in Thelasar?

13 Where is the king of Hamath, and

6. — Be not afraid &c.] How ready is the Lord to shew mercy! He had furnished His Prophet with an immediate reply to the king's humble and pious address. He calms their fears, He assures their hopes, He animates their courage, and takes the cause into His own hands; "I will send a blast &c." Wogan.

7. Behold, I will send a blast] A pestilential blast, which destroyed his army in one night, ver. 35. "And he shall hear a rumour." Perhaps, after that stroke, the report was renewed, that Tirhakah (who is mentioned at ver. 9) was coming against him; which made him hasten away with the small remains of his army to his own country. Bp. Patrick. "He shall hear a rumour." A panick fear shall fall upon him, and he shall be alarmed with an uncertain report that some enemy designs to fall upon him, having heard that his army is weakened with so great a loss as that of 185,000 men. Lowth.

9. — king of Ethiopia,] Rather, king of the Cushites, in Arabia. Stackhouse. See the notes on Numbers xii. 1.

14. — and Hezekiah went up into the house of the Lord, &c.] Nothing composes the mind under all its trials like that great expedient of opening our grief to Him, who is able to help us, and hath promised never to leave or forsake us. Great, and instructive in the issue of it, is the example of the good king Hezekiah, who, when he had received that letter of defiance and blasphemy from the king of Assyria, went into the temple, and "spread it before the Lord;" and by his prayer obtained a signal deliverance to himself and his people. We cannot even present ourselves before God, without this good effect, that we are thereby instantly detached from the world which troubles us. We dare not, we the king of Arpad, and the king of the city of Sepharvaim, of Hena, and Ivah?

Before
CHRIST
710.

14 ¶ And Hezekiah received the letter of the hand of the messengers, and read it: and Hezekiah went up into the house of the LORD, and spread it before the LORD.

15 And Hezekiah prayed before the LORD, and said, O LORD God of Israel, which dwellest between the cherubims, thou art the God, even thou alone, of all the kingdoms of the earth; thou hast made heaven and earth.

16 Lord, bow down thine ear, and hear: open, LORD, thine eyes, and see: and hear the words of Sennacherib, which hath sent him to reproach the living God.

17 Of a truth, LORD, the kings of Assyria have destroyed the nations and their lands, 18 And have † cast their gods into the † Hab. given. fire: for they were no gods, but the work of men's hands, wood and stone: therefore they have destroyed them.

19 Now therefore, O LORD our God, I beseech thee, save thou us out of his hand, that all the kingdoms of the earth may know that thou art the LORD God, even thou only.

20 ¶ Then Isaiah the son of Amoz sent to Hezekiah, saying, Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, That which thou hast prayed to me against Sennacherib king of Assyria I have heard.

cannot, give way to the weaknesses of our nature while His eye is upon us to restrain us. Jones of Nayland.

— spread it before the Lord.] Spread it before the sanctuary, where the symbol of God's presence resided. Bp. Patrick. Hezekiah had before received an assurance of protection against Sennacherib; yet here we find he does not slight these repeated threatenings, upon a presumption of his interest with God; but, with a becoming modesty, and a humble fear, he lays the affair again before God, and betakes himself to prayer. This teaches us in every emergency, however promising be our prospect of success, not to be too secure, or too presuming; much less to trust to any former acts of piety or devotion; but still to commit all to God by humble prayer. Wogan.

15. — thou art the God — of all the kingdoms of the earth;] He here directly opposes the blasphemous opinion of the Assyrians before mentioned, (ch. xvii. 27; xviii. 35,) that the God of Israel was only the particular Lord of that country, not the Creator and Sovereign of the whole world. Bp. Patrick.

20. — That which thou hast prayed — I have heard.] If God before was ready to give the messengers of Hezekiah, ver. 6, an immediate answer by His Prophet, here He shews still greater forwardness to hear and relieve His faithful servant. The king is now favoured with an answer to his prayer; he sends not to the Prophet, but the Prophet sends to him. How great is the effect of pious and repeated prayer! how sweet the influence of Divine mercy! God verifies His attributes by relieving His people that pray to Him; and by a speedy return to their prayers, not only confirms their faith, but improves it into a full assurance of His favour and goodness. Wogan.

Before
CHRIST
710.

21 This is the word that the LORD hath spoken concerning him; The virgin the daughter of Zion hath despised thee, and laughed thee to scorn; the daughter of Jerusalem hath shaken her head at thee.

22 Whom hast thou reproached and blasphemed? and against whom hast thou exalted thy voice, and lifted up thine eyes on high? even against the Holy One of Israel.

† Heb. By
the hand of.

23 † By thy messengers thou hast reproached the LORD, and hast said, With the multitude of my chariots I am come up to the height of the mountains, to the sides of Lebanon, and will cut down † the tall cedar trees thereof, and the choice fir trees thereof: and I will enter into the lodgings of his borders, and into ‖ the forest of his Carmel.

† Heb.
the tallness,
&c.

‖ Or. the forest and his fruitful field.

24 I have digged and drunk strange waters, and with the sole of my feet have

21. — The virgin the daughter of Zion &c.] By "the daughter of Zion" he means the people that inhabited the upper part of the city where the king's palace stood; and by "the daughter of Jerusalem," the people of the lower city, and all that were not comprehended under the name of Zion. He calls the daughter of Zion "a virgin," because this fortress, since the conquest of it by David, had remained inviolable, and had not been taken by any enemy. Bp. Patrick.

23. — With the multitude of my chariots &c.] This is an admirable description of the boastings of a king, puffed up with great success, and is as much as if he had said, "What place is there into which I cannot make my way; since I have gone, even in my chariots, to the tops of high mountains? Who shall hinder me from cutting down the tallest cedars and firs of Lebanon, marching to the extreme borders of the land, and climbing up to the top of Carmel, (or entering into all the fruitful places of the country,) by making an entire conquest of it?" for Carmel often signifies not the mountain of that name, but a fruitful field, in the language of this Prophet; see Isai. x. 18; xvi. 10. Bp. Patrick. Cities in the prophetic writings are sometimes metaphorically represented by woods or forests, and the several ranks of inhabitants by the taller and lesser trees which grow there; see Isai. xxxii. 19; x. 34. And this sense perhaps best agrees with the scope of this passage, which is, to set forth the proud brags of the Assyrian in a figure of pious rhetoric, and to represent him as threatening to take mount Zion and the capital city Jerusalem, and destroy their principal inhabitants. Louth.

— I will enter into the lodgings of his borders.] At Isai. xxxvii. 24, the words are, "I will enter into the height of his border;" I will take possession of the principal parts of his dominions: such were Lebanon and Carmel esteemed. Louth.

— the forest of his Carmel.] The wood or forest, which is "in the midst of Carmel," Micah vii. 14, and which is there spoken of as containing the choicest pastures of Carmel. In the margin Carmel is translated "fruitful field," because, as Carmel was a place noted for great fertility, the word is sometimes taken to signify generally "a fruitful field." Louth.

24. I have digged &c.] He boasts that he had marched through deserts, where it was expected that his army would perish with thirst, and yet even there he had digged and found water; implying, that he had overcome difficulties seemingly insuperable, and never failed in executing any design he had undertaken. Louth.

— with the sole of my feet have I dried up &c.] Meaning, that he had gone dry shod with his whole army over great rivers,

I dried up all the rivers of ‖ besieged places. Before
CHRIST
710.

25 ‖ Hast thou not heard long ago how ‖ Or, I have done it, and of ancient times that I fenced. have formed it? now have I brought it to ‖ Or, pass, that thou shouldst be to lay waste not heard how I have fenced cities into ruinous heaps. made it long ago, and formed it of ancient times? should I

26 Therefore their inhabitants were † of small power, they were dismayed and confounded; they were as the grass of the field, and as the green herb, as the grass on the house tops, and as corn blasted before it be grown up. now bring it to be laid waste, and fenced cities to be ruinous heaps? † Heb. short of hand.

27 But I know thy ‖ abode, and thy going out, and thy coming in, and thy rage against me. ‖ Or, sitting.

28 Because thy rage against me and thy tumult is come up into mine ears, therefore I will put my hook in thy nose, and my bridle in thy lips, and I will turn thee back by the way by which thou camest.

whose streams he had turned, and so had taken the strongest fortresses. Bp. Patrick.

He seems to boast, that he could as easily turn the waters of great rivers, and cause their channels to become dry, as a gardener stops water from flowing any longer in by the sole of his foot. Thus the whole verse may be an allusion to the method of watering by rills, customary in the East. "I have digged and drunk, and caused my army to drink, out of new made rivers, into which I have conducted the waters that used to flow elsewhere, and have laid those old channels dry with the sole of my foot, with as much ease as a gardener digs channels in his garden, and, directing the waters of a cistern into a new channel, stops up with his foot that in which it before ran." In confirmation of this, it is related by Thevenot, that this method of watering by rills is still in use in those countries from which Sennacherib came, continued down no doubt from ancient times, as it is in Egypt. Harmer. See the note on Deut. xi. 10. "Strange waters" are those brought from distant parts by pipes or conduits, or by canals dug for the purpose. Sennacherib is represented as boasting of his power, "I have digged and drunk strange waters, and with the sole of my feet have I dried up all the rivers of besieged places," or rather "of embankment:" the meaning of which I conceive to be, "I have caused waters to be brought from afar in canals, which I have digged for the supply of my army, which was so numerous as to dry up in its passage even such large rivers, as required a dyke or embankment to guard against their inundations." Dr. Blayney.

25. Hast thou not heard &c.] These are the words of God, in answer to the boasts of the proud Assyrian, in which He puts him in mind that all his successes ought to be ascribed to God, that His providence overruled these events, and brought them to pass in their appointed time, and made him the instrument of vengeance upon such cities as deserved utter destruction, and weakened the inhabitants so that they were unable to defend themselves. Louth.

27. — I know thy abode, &c.] God informs him that none of his designs were hid from His all-seeing eye; that He perfectly knew how much ill will be bore against His city and sanctuary; and as the successes he had obtained were owing to Him, so He could put a stop to them when He pleased. The phrase of going out and coming in, is frequently used in Scripture for leading out armies to war, and bringing them home again. Louth.

28. — therefore I will put my hook &c.] I have thee as much in My power as the fisherman can manage the fish, when he has put a hook into his jaws, (see Job xli. 2), and as the rider can curb

Before
CHRIST
710.

29 And this shall be a sign unto thee, Ye shall eat this year such things as grow of themselves, and in the second year that which springeth of the same; and in the third year sow ye, and reap, and plant vineyards, and eat the fruits thereof.

† Heb.
the escaping of the house of Judah that remaineth.

30 And † the remnant that is escaped of the house of Judah shall yet again take root downward, and bear fruit upward.

† Heb.
the escaping.

31 For out of Jerusalem shall go forth a remnant, and † they that escape out of mount Zion: the zeal of the LORD of hosts shall do this.

32 Therefore thus saith the LORD concerning the king of Assyria, He shall not come into this city, nor shoot an arrow there, nor come before it with shield, nor cast a bank against it.

33 By the way that he came, by the same shall he return, and shall not come into this city, saith the LORD.

Before
CHRIST
710.

34 For I will defend this city, to save it, for mine own sake, and for my servant David's sake.

35 ¶ And ^c it came to pass that night, that the angel of the LORD went out, and smote in the camp of the Assyrians an hundred fourscore and five thousand: and when they arose early in the morning, behold, they were all dead corpses.

^c Is. 37. 36.
Tob. 1. 21.
Ecclesiast. 48.
21.
1 Mac. 7.
41.
2 Mac. 8.
19.

36 So Sennacherib king of Assyria departed, and went and returned, and dwelt at Nineveh.

37 And it came to pass, as he was worshipping in the house of Nisroch his god, that Adrammelech and Sharezer his sons smote him with the sword: and they escaped into the land of † Armenia. And † Esarhaddon his son reigned in his stead.

709.

† Heb.
Ararat.

the horse and turn him as he pleases, when the bit is in his mouth. Lowth.

29. And this shall be a sign unto thee,] The Prophet proceeds to assure the king, that, although the Assyrian army had greatly wasted his country and destroyed the fruits of it; and though the ensuing year was the sabbatical year, in which they were neither to sow nor reap, but to live on the natural produce of the ground; yet they should have so good a self-sown crop, as to supply them till they should sow and reap again with peace and plenty. Pyle. How abundant is God's mercy to them that fear Him! Here He not only fights for His ancient people, and destroys their enemies, but confirms His promise of mercy by another extraordinary mercy: not only saves them from the misery of death, or captivity, but also from famine and want; restoring the harvest, which the Assyrian invasion had intercepted, and giving them two years' crop for the loss of one; as a sign and a pledge of His future protection and favour. Wogan.

30. — shall yet again take root downward, &c.] Signifying, that the house of Judah should have firm possession of their own country, and therein increase and multiply and flourish exceedingly. Bp. Patrick.

31. — the zeal of the Lord of hosts shall do this.] His regard for His own honour, and His great love to His people, shall do these wonders; to vindicate His glory from that contempt which was cast upon it by Sennacherib. Bp. Patrick.

32. — thus saith the Lord —, He shall not come &c.] Impotent men, what are we in the hands of the Almighty? We purpose, He overrules; we talk of great matters, and think we can perform wonders; He blasts our projects, and they vanish with ourselves. Bp. Hall.

33. — the angel of the Lord went out, and smote] How speedy an execution was this, and how miraculous! No human arm shall have the glory of this victory. It was God that was defied by this presumptuous Assyrian, it is God that shall right His own wrongs. Bp. Hall. Since it is no where expressed in Scripture in what manner this Assyrian army was destroyed, some have thought it was done by a plague, others by thunder and lightning, others by fire from heaven, others by a scorching wind, others by encountering each other in the obscurity of the night; but, by whatsoever means the defeat was effected, we have the authority of Scripture for saying, that it was done by the agency of a destroying angel. Calmel. The destruction of the army was probably effected by bringing on them the hot wind which is frequent in those parts, and which often, when it falls on a multitude, destroys vast numbers in a moment, as frequently occurs to those great caravans of Mahometans who go on annual pilgrimages to Mecca. The words of Isaiah, ver. 7, which threatened Sennacherib with a blast, to be sent upon his army by God, seems to denote that this was the method of their destruction. Dean Prideaux.
Vol. I.

The instrument of vengeance was probably the blast, or hot pestilential south wind, blowing from the deserts of Libya, called the Samum, or Simoom, which is thus described by Mr. Bruce:

“ This hot wind is called by the Arabs, Samum or Simoom. It is generally preceded by an extreme redness in the air, and usually blows from the S.E., or from the S, a little to the east. It appeared in the form of a haze, in colour like the purple part of a rainbow, but not so compressed, or thick: it was a kind of blush upon the air. The guide warned the company upon its approach to fall upon their faces, with their mouths close to the ground, and to hold their breath as long as they could, to avoid inhaling the outward air. It moved very rapidly, about twenty yards in breadth, and about twelve feet high from the ground; so that, says Bruce, I had scarcely time to turn about, and fall upon the earth with my head to the northward, when I felt the heat of its current plainly upon my face. We all fell upon our faces, until the Simoom passed on with a gentle ruffling wind. When the meteor or purple haze had passed, it was succeeded by a light air, which still blew so hot as to threaten suffocation, which sometimes lasted three hours, and left the company totally enervated and exhausted, labouring under asthmatick sensations, weakness of stomach, and violent headaches, from imbibing the poisonous vapour.” It is remarkable that the blast which destroyed the Assyrians happened at night; whereas the Simoom usually blows in the daytime, and mostly about noon, being raised by the intense heat of the sun. Dr. Hales.

— and when they arose &c.] That is, when they who survived this dreadful slaughter arose “in the morning,” for all were not slain, a small number were reserved to be the witnesses of a judgment so terrible, of a power so invincible, a power so superior to Sennacherib, who had blasphemed the true God; a power so mighty to save the good Hezekiah, who had trusted in Him. The prodigious number of the slain were so many monuments of mercy to His people, of justice to His enemies, of His eternal power and Godhead to both. The few that remained were not only eyewitnesses of this great victory of the true God, and the triumph of His people, but were sent back into their own land, to proclaim and preach it there. Wogan.

37. — smote him with the sword:] It appears from Tobit i. 18, that Sennacherib, inflamed with rage for his loss and disappointment, grew cruel and tyrannical after his return, especially towards the Israelites, many of whom he caused every day to be slain, and cast into the streets; and that it was his intolerable cruelty which

Before
CHRIST
713.

CHAP. XX.

1 Hezekiah, having received a message of death, by prayer hath his life lengthened. 8 The sun goeth ten degrees backward for a sign of that promise. 12 Bezodach-baladan sending to visit Hezekiah, because of the wonder, hath notice of his treasures. 14 Isaiah understanding thereof foretelleth the Babylonian captivity. 20 Manasseh succeedeth Hezekiah.

713.
2 Chron.
32, 24.
1s. 38. 1.

† Heb.
Give charge concerning thine house.

† Heb. with a great
weeping.
|| Or,
city.

IN ^a those days was Hezekiah sick unto death. And the prophet Isaiah the son of Amoz came to him, and said unto him, Thus saith the LORD, † Set thine house in order; for thou shalt die, and not live.

2 Then he turned his face to the wall, and prayed unto the LORD, saying,

3 I beseech thee, O LORD, remember now how I have walked before thee in truth and with a perfect heart, and have done that which is good in thy sight. And Hezekiah wept † sore.

4 And it came to pass, afore Isaiah was gone out into the middle || court, that the word of the LORD came to him, saying,

5 Turn again, and tell Hezekiah the captain of my people, Thus saith the LORD, at last made his own family conspire against him. They were his two eldest sons who slew him, and fled in consequence into Armenia; so that Esarhaddon, his third son, reigned in his stead. Dean Pridcaux.

Such was the tragical end of a king who had prospered to his own ruin; so intoxicated with his own success, and that of his ancestors, as to fancy that all the powers of heaven and earth were chained to his chariot wheels. Let every proud insolent blaspheming wretch, who has used his mouth to pour out horrid blasphemies against Heaven, look upon Sennacherib, and learn to humble himself with the lowliest penitence and meekness before that omnipotent Being, who is thus able to abase the loftiest of the sons of men that shall presume to exalt and magnify themselves against Him. God has declared in a most emphatical manner, that, of all sorts of sinners, He beholds the proud with peculiar indignation and aversion. And such proud men are all they who profanely curse and swear, and treat the Deity and sacred things with irreverent language. Such proud men are they who, being often reprov'd, harden their hearts, hear the Divine threatenings without receiving due impressions from them, reject the laws of God to follow their own lusts, and do that which is good in their own eyes. Such proud men are they who, being considerable in this world, demean themselves as if they were above the worship of God, and endeavour to persuade or terrify others to depart from some duty of piety or virtue out of respect to them; and so to please them rather than God. Such proud men are they who depend, in any circumstances, on their arms, their numbers, their wealth, their skill, or any creature, more than their Creator, and are not careful to see that their undertakings be pleasing to God, and to engage His assistance and blessing, as their main and first support. Let such look upon Sennacherib, and learn to fear God. For they are in the same way of destruction with him: and, though it may not overtake them in this world, it is reserved for them in the next: for God beholdeth the proud afar off; He will never suffer them to dwell in His presence. Reading.

Chap. XX. This chapter is to be compared with 2 Chron. xxxii. 24, &c. and Isaiah xxxviii. and xxxix.

Ver. 1. In those days was Hezekiah sick] Though this sickness of Hezekiah is thus placed after the defeat and death of Senna-the God of David thy father, I have heard thy prayer, I have seen thy tears: behold, I will heal thee: on the third day thou shalt go up unto the house of the LORD.

6 And I will add unto thy days fifteen years; and I will deliver thee and this city out of the hand of the king of Assyria; and I will defend this city for mine own sake, and for my servant David's sake.

7 And Isaiah said, Take a lump of figs. And they took and laid it on the boil, and he recovered.

8 ¶ And Hezekiah said unto Isaiah, What shall be the sign that the LORD will heal me, and that I shall go up into the house of the LORD the third day?

9 And Isaiah said, This sign shalt thou have of the LORD, that the LORD will do the thing that he hath spoken: shall the shadow go forward ten degrees, or go back ten degrees?

10 And Hezekiah answered, It is a light thing for the shadow to go down ten degrees: nay, but let the shadow return backward ten degrees.

Before
CHRIST
713.

cherib, yet it plainly happened before that time; for the promise is made at ver. 6, that Jerusalem should be delivered out of the hands of the king of Assyria. It probably happened, indeed, in the very same year; and the sacred writer deferred the account of it in order that he might give the history of Sennacherib in one continued view. Calmet.

2. — turned his face to the wall,] The beds of the Hebrews were placed with their sides against the wall of the chamber; which illustrates this expression of Hezekiah's turning his face to the wall to pray. Fleury.

3. — And Hezekiah wept sore,] Hezekiah might be sufficiently excused for his excessive grief on this occasion, from considering how natural to man is the love of life, and how deeply implanted in our frame and constitution is the fear of death. But we should further reflect, that the denunciation against him, "thou shalt die," was not absolute and irreversible; it implied a tacit condition that, provided he duly humbled himself and repented, the time of his death would be deferred. Stackhouse.

The best of men cannot strip himself of some flesh; and, while nature has an undeniable share in him, he cannot but retain some sense of the sweetness of life, of the horrors of dissolution. Both these were in Hezekiah, but neither of them could transport him to such excess of grief: they were higher feelings which swayed so holy a prince; a tender care of the glory of God, a strong pity for the church of God. Bp. Hall.

4. — into the middle court,] Either the middle court of the king's house, or the middle of the city, as in the margin: it is not material which sense is taken. Bp. Patrick.

7. — And they took and laid it on the boil,] Whatever may have been Hezekiah's disorder, and whatever the quality of the medicine applied, it is plain there was special Divine interposition in the whole affair, both from the speediness of the cure, and the nature of the sign which God gave Hezekiah, in order to convince him of it. Stackhouse.

— and he recovered,] In the speedy healing of Hezekiah, and the miracles wrought by God in his behalf, we see the efficacy of the prayers of good men, to procure the mercies of God and revoke His threatenings. We likewise see how God keeps in His own hand the lives of all men, and prolongs or shortens them as He pleases. Ostervald.

Before
CHRIST
713.

Is. 39. 8.
Ecc^l 48.
23.

† Heb.
degrees.
712.

Is. 39. 1.

|| Or, spicery.

|| Or,
jewels.
† Heb.
vessels.

11 And Isaiah the prophet cried unto the LORD: and ^b he brought the shadow ten degrees backward, by which it had gone down in the [†] dial of Ahaz.

12 ¶ ^c At that time Berodach-baladan, the son of Baladan, king of Babylon, sent letters and a present unto Hezekiah: for he had heard that Hezekiah had been sick.

13 And Hezekiah hearkened unto them, and shewed them all the house of his || precious things, the silver, and the gold, and the spices, and the precious ointment, and all the house of his ||† armour, and all that was found in his treasures: there was nothing in his house, nor in all his dominion, that Hezekiah shewed them not.

14 ¶ Then came Isaiah the prophet unto king Hezekiah, and said unto him, What said these men? and from whence came they unto thee? And Hezekiah said, They are come from a far country, even from Babylon.

15 And he said, What have they seen in thine house? And Hezekiah answered, All the things that are in mine house have they seen: there is nothing among my treasures that I have not shewed them.

16 And Isaiah said unto Hezekiah, Hear the word of the LORD.

17 Behold, the days come, that all that is in thine house, and that which thy fathers have laid up in store unto this day, ^d shall be carried into Babylon: nothing shall be left, saith the LORD.

18 And of thy sons that shall issue from thee, which thou shalt beget, shall they take away; and they shall be eunuchs in the palace of the king of Babylon.

19 Then said Hezekiah unto Isaiah, Good is the word of the LORD which thou hast spoken. And he said, || Is it not good, if peace and truth be in my days?

20 ¶ And the rest of the acts of Hezekiah, and all his might, and how he made a pool, and a conduit, and brought water into the city, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Judah?

21 And Hezekiah slept with his fathers: and Manasseh his son reigned in his stead.

Before
CHRIST
712.

^d Chap. 24.
13. & 25.
13.
Jer. 27. 19.

|| Or,
Shall there not be peace and truth,
&c.
about 710.

about 698.

11. — ten degrees backward,] Ten measures of some size; hours or half hours, or, as some have thought, quarters of an hour. Bp. Patrick. We cannot be certain what portion of time is meant by these degrees; for the division of the day into hours seems not to have been so ancient. Lowth. It is as impossible to explain this miracle on any known principles of astronomy and natural philosophy, as the standing still of the sun and moon in Joshua's time. Dr. Hales. See notes on Josh. x. 12.

— in the dial of Ahaz.] Probably a dial in Jerusalem, then well known, which was called by the name of Ahaz. Bp. Hall. It has been the subject of much debate of what nature this sundial of Ahaz was, and how far the knowledge of astronomy then subsisting could have led to the construction of a regular sundial. The word in Hebrew signifies properly steps or stairs; and many have supposed that it was a kind of ascent to the gate of the palace, marked at proper distances with figures, shewing the division of the day, rather than a regular piece of dial work. Univ. Hist.

12. — sent letters and a present] This message seems to have been sent principally for two reasons: first, to inquire about the miracle of the sun's shadow going backward on the dial; for the Chaldeans, being above all other nations given to the study of astronomy, were naturally very curious in their inquiries into such matters: and, second, to enter into an alliance with him against Sennacherib, whose growing power was feared with good reason by the Babylonians, as well as the Jews. It appears to have been for the purpose of making him set the greater value on his alliance, that Hezekiah shewed those ambassadors all the riches of his house, his treasury, armour, and stores for war. Dean Prideaux.

— had heard that Hezekiah had been sick.] And most probably of the manner of his recovery, and of the miracle wrought for the confirmation of it. Bp. Wilson.

15. — there is nothing among my treasures] This he did in "the pride of his heart," mentioned at 2 Chron. xxxii. 26, which occasioned the Prophet to denounce against him the judgment which follows.

O Hezekiah, what means this impotent ambition? Can thy heart be so vain as to be thus lifted up with thy wealth? Didst thou not see that heaven was at thy beck while thou wert humbled; and shall a little earthly dross have power over thy soul? Can the flattering applause of strangers let thee loose into a proud joy, when the late message of God's Prophet resolved thee into tears? O God, if thou keep us not, we are sure to perish. Bp. Hall.

17. Behold, the days come, &c.] As Hezekiah, by this display of his wealth, shewed much vanity and pride of mind, God sends him this rebuking message, and at the same time a prophecy of what the Babylonians would afterwards do to his family, in order to the humbling of that pride with which he was then elated. Dean Prideaux.

18. — they shall be eunuchs &c.] They shall wait upon the king of Babylon as his servants. This was partly fulfilled in the instance of Daniel and his companions, Dan. i. 1. Bp. Patrick.

19. — Good is the word of the Lord] Hezekiah received this prediction with great humility and religious composure of mind; acknowledging the justice of the Divine judgment on so sinful a nation, and owning he had reason to be thankful that it was not inflicted in his own time, and that he was favoured with the privilege of living and dying in peace. Pyle. He acknowledges that he had well deserved a speedy judgment on himself, in his own person, although God in His mercy had not proceeded thus far against him, but, notwithstanding his offence, had promised him peace during his whole life, and a continuance of his wonted grace. This rod was smart, yet good Hezekiah kisses it. His own conscience struck him no less than the mouth of the Prophet: meekly therefore does he yield to the Divine correction. He says to the Prophet, "Good is the word of the Lord which thou hast spoken." Thou hast spoken the word, but from the Lord. It is not thine, but His; and being His, it must needs be, like Himself, good: good because it is just, for I have deserved more and worse; good because it is merciful, for I suffer not according to my deserts. Bp. Hall.

— if peace and truth be in my days?] At Isai. xxxix. 8, the words are, "For there shall be peace and truth in my days." He esteemed it so great a favour that God delayed that punishment which He might have inflicted presently, and prolonged for a considerable time the tranquillity of his kingdom. Lowth.

CHAP. XXI.

Before
CHRIST
about 698.

about 698.
Chron.
53. 1.

1 Manassch's reign. 3 His great idolatry. 10 His wickedness causeth prophecies against Judah. 17 Amon succeedeth him. 19 Amon's wicked reign. 23 He being slain by his servants, and those murderers slain by the people, Josiah is made king.

MANASSEH ^a was twelve years old when he began to reign, and reigned fifty and five years in Jerusalem. And his mother's name was Hephzi-bah.

2 And he did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD, after the abominations of the heathen, whom the LORD cast out before the children of Israel.

3 For he built up again the high places ^b which Hezekiah his father had destroyed; and he reared up altars for Baal, and made a grove, as did Ahab king of Israel; and worshipped all the host of heaven, and served them.

4 And ^c he built altars in the house of the LORD, of which the LORD said, ^d In Jerusalem will I put my name.

5 And he built altars for all the host of heaven in the two courts of the house of the LORD.

6 And he made his son pass through the fire, and observed times, and used enchantments, and dealt with familiar spirits and wizards: he wrought much wickedness in the sight of the LORD, to provoke him to anger.

7 And he set a graven image of the grove that he had made in the house, of which the LORD said to David, and to Solomon his son, 'In this house, and in Jerusalem, which I have chosen out of all tribes of Israel, will I put my name for ever:

Before
CHRIST
about 698.
^c 1 Kings
8. 29. & 9.
3. chap. 29.
27.

8 Neither will I make the feet of Israel move any more out of the land which I gave their fathers; only if they will observe to do according to all that I have commanded them, and according to all the law that my servant Moses commanded them.

9 But they hearkened not: and Manasseh seduced them to do more evil than did the nations whom the LORD destroyed before the children of Israel.

10 ¶ And the LORD spake by his servants the prophets, saying,

11 'Because Manasseh king of Judah hath done these abominations, and hath done wickedly above all that the Amorites did, which were before him, and hath made Judah also to sin with his idols:

^f Jer. 15. 4.

12 Therefore thus saith the LORD God of Israel, Behold, I am bringing such evil upon Jerusalem and Judah, that whosoever heareth of it, both ^g his ears shall tingle.

^g 1 Sam. 5. 11.

13 And I will stretch over Jerusalem the line of Samaria, and the plummet of the house of Ahab: and I will wipe Jerusalem as a man wipeth a dish, [†] wiping it, and turning it upside down.

[†] Heb.
he wipeth and turneth it upon the face thereof.

14 And I will forsake the remnant of mine inheritance, and deliver them into Chap. XXI. This chapter is to be compared with 2 Chron. xxxiii.

Ver. 1. Manasseh was twelve years old] As Manasseh was only a minor of twelve years old when he came to the throne, it was probably his misfortune to fall into the hands of guardians and ministers who were ill affected to his father's reformation, and took care to breed him up in the worst principles, as to religion and government. Dean Prideaux.

3. For he built up again the high places] How dreadful are the outrages of this wicked son of Hezekiah! What havoc does he make in the church of God! as if he had been born to ruin religion; as if his only happiness had been to tear in one day that holy web which his father had been weaving nine and twenty years. The zeal of Hezekiah in demolishing the high places had honoured him above all his predecessors, and now the first act of his son is to rebuild them. That mischief may be done in a day, which many ages cannot redress. Bp. Hall.

4. — in the house of the Lord,] In the very sanctuary itself; for the two courts of the Lord's house are mentioned in the next verse.

9. — to do more evil than did the nations] Thus under Manasseh the wickedness of the Israelites grew to such a height, that it exceeded all that had been done by the Canaanites, whom God expelled to make room for these very Israelites. Bp. Patrick.

10. — by his servants the prophets,] The Prophets who are supposed to have been living in this king's reign, are Hosca, Joel, Nahum, Habakkuk, and some say Obadiah; and, who was the greatest of all, Isaiah. Stackhouse. It is an ancient tradition among the Jews, that the last of these Prophets suffered martyrdom under this prince, by being cruelly sawn asunder: and, whereas St. Paul in his Epistle to the Hebrews, chap. xi. 37, reckons among the torments undergone by the Prophets of old times, that of being sawn asunder, it has been generally thought that he alludes to the death of Isaiah. Dean Prideaux.

12. — both his ears shall tingle.] What ear can but tingle indeed at the mention of so dreadful a revenge? Can there be a worse judgment than desolation, captivity, desertion, spoil and torture of prevailing enemies? However other cities and nations may have undergone these disasters without wonder; yet that all this should befall Thy Jerusalem, O God, the place which Thou hast chosen to Thyself out of the whole earth, the lot of Thine inheritance, the seat of Thy Divine presence; it is sufficient to amaze all eyes and all ears! Bp. Hall.

13. — I will stretch over Jerusalem &c.] This is a metaphor taken from those who set out men's lots and portions by drawing a line to divide them. The meaning is, that He would give to Jerusalem the same measure which He had given to Samaria.

— the plummet of the house of Ahab:] Meaning that, as they had imitated the sin of Ahab, so they should suffer his punishment, whose house was utterly destroyed. It seems to be a metaphor taken from builders who measure with a line and plummet what part of a building should stand and what be demolished. Bp. Patrick. The meaning of the expressions in this verse is, I will take the same course with Jerusalem that I have taken with Samaria, and with the wicked house of Ahab, which I have utterly rooted out from before Me. Bp. Hall. Respecting the execution of this threat, and other circumstances relating to Manasseh, see 2 Chron. xxxiii.

Before CHRIST about 698. the hand of their enemies; and they shall become a prey and a spoil to all their enemies;

15 Because they have done that which was evil in my sight, and have provoked me to anger, since the day their fathers came forth out of Egypt, even unto this day.

16 Moreover Manasseh shed innocent blood very much, till he had filled Jerusalem † from one end to another; beside his sin wherewith he made Judah to sin, in doing that which was evil in the sight of the LORD.

17 ¶ Now the rest of the acts of Manasseh, and all that he did, and his sin that he sinned, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Judah?

18 And ^b Manasseh slept with his fathers, and was buried in the garden of his own house, in the garden of Uzza: and Amon his son reigned in his stead.

19 ¶ Amon was twenty and two years old when he began to reign, and he reigned two years in Jerusalem. And his mother's name was Meshullemeth, the daughter of Haruz of Jotbah.

20 And he did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD, as his father Manasseh did.

21 And he walked in all the way that his father walked in, and served the idols that his father served, and worshipped them:

22 And he forsook the LORD God of his fathers, and walked not in the way of the LORD.

23 ¶ And the servants of Amon conspired against him, and slew the king in his own house.

24 And the people of the land slew all them that had conspired against king Amon; and the people of the land made Josiah his son king in his stead.

25 Now the rest of the acts of Amon which he did, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Judah?

26 And he was buried in his sepulchre in the garden of Uzza: and ⁱ Josiah his son reigned in his stead.

Before CHRIST 641.

ⁱ Matth. 1. 10. called Josias.

CHAP. XXII.

¹ Josiah's good reign. ³ He taketh care for the repair of the temple. ⁸ Hilkiah having found a book of the law, Josiah sendeth to Huldah to enquire of the Lord. ¹⁵ Huldah prophesieth the destruction of Jerusalem, but respite thereof in Josiah's time.

JOSIAH ^a was eight years old when he began to reign, and he reigned thirty and one years in Jerusalem. And his mother's name was Jedidah, the daughter of Adaiah of Boscath.

641. ^a 2 Chron. 34. 1.

2 And he did that which was right in the sight of the LORD, and walked in all the way of David his father, and turned not aside to the right hand or to the left.

3 ¶ And it came to pass in the eighteenth year of king Josiah, that the king sent Shaphan the son of Azaliah, the son of Meshullam, the scribe, to the house of the LORD, saying,

about 624.

4 Go up to Hilkiah the high priest, that he may sum the silver which is brought into the house of the LORD, which the keepers of the † door have gathered of the people:

† Heb. threshold.

5 And let them deliver it into the hand of the doers of the work, that have the oversight of the house of the LORD: and let them give it to the doers of the work which is in the house of the LORD, to repair the breaches of the house,

6 Unto carpenters, and builders, and masons, and to buy timber and hewn stone to repair the house.

7 Howbeit there was no reckoning made with them of the money that was delivered into their hand, because they dealt faithfully.

8 ¶ And Hilkiah the high priest said unto Shaphan the scribe, I have found the book of the law in the house of the LORD. And Hilkiah gave the book to Shaphan, and he read it.

17. — the rest of the acts of Manasseh,] See particularly the account of his being carried to Babylon, and being afterwards restored to Jerusalem, at 2 Chron. xxxiii. 11—19, &c.

Chap. XXII. This chapter is to be compared with 2 Chron. xxxiv.

Ver. 3. — in the eighteenth year] The eighteenth year of his reign, not of his age, as we are told at 2 Chron. xxxiv. 8.

7. — there was no reckoning made] They were men of such approved honesty, that there was no need to call them to any account as to their method of laying out the money. Bp. Patrick.

8. — I have found the book of the law] Meaning, an authentick copy of the law written by Moses, as is expressed at 2 Chron. xxxiv. 14; that copy probably which by God's command was laid up in the most holy place, Deut. xxxi. 24, &c. Bp. Patrick. We are not to conclude that the people had at this time no copies of the law among them; they probably had several, though some imperfect and corrupt: and the high priest rejoiced on finding the original, because by it all the other copies might be corrected; and the more, because he had found it at a time when the king was about to make a reformation in religion, and when therefore he could not but look upon it as a remarkable providence.

Before
CHRIST
624.
† Heb.
melted.

9 And Shaphan the scribe came to the king, and brought the king word again, and said, Thy servants have † gathered the money that was found in the house, and have delivered it into the hand of them that do the work, that have the oversight of the house of the LORD.

10 And Shaphan the scribe shewed the king, saying, Hilkiah the priest hath delivered me a book. And Shaphan read it before the king.

11 And it came to pass, when the king had heard the words of the book of the law, that he rent his clothes.

12 And the king commanded Hilkiah the priest, and Ahikam the son of Shaphan, and Achbor the son of Michaiah, and Shaphan the scribe, and Asahiah a servant of the king's, saying,

13 Go ye, enquire of the LORD for me, and for the people, and for all Judah, concerning the words of this book that is found: for great is the wrath of the LORD that is kindled against us, because our fathers have not hearkened unto the words of this book, to do according unto all that which is written concerning us.

Before
CHRIST
624.

14 So Hilkiah the priest, and Ahikam, and Achbor, and Shaphan, and Asahiah, went unto Huldah the prophetess, the wife of Shallum the son of Tikvah, the son of Harhas, keeper of the † wardrobe; (now she dwelt in Jerusalem || in the college;) and they communed with her.

† Heb.
garments.
|| Or,
in the second part.

15 ¶ And she said unto them, Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, Tell the man that sent you to me,

16 Thus saith the LORD, Behold, I will bring evil upon this place, and upon the inhabitants thereof, even all the words of the book which the king of Judah hath read:

17 Because they have forsaken me, and have burned incense unto other gods, that they might provoke me to anger with all the works of their hands; therefore my wrath shall be kindled against this place, and shall not be quenched.

18 But to the king of Judah which sent you to enquire of the LORD, thus shall ye Stackhouse. It is probable, from the circumstances of the history, that, at this time of finding the book of the law by Hilkiah, copies of the law were very scarce; and that this, to his surprise, was an authentick and original copy. Dr. S. Clarke. The ignorance of the law, which seems now to have prevailed, may be sufficiently accounted for from the history of the preceding reigns; for Manasseh had been an idolatrous king for a long series of years, and he wanted neither power nor inclination to destroy the copies of the law, had they been secreted by the servants of the true God. The law, after being so long concealed, would be unknown to very many of the Jews; and thus the solemn reading of it by Josiah would awaken his own and the people's earnest attention. The copy produced was probably the original, written by Moses, which would excite still greater veneration. The distance of time was not such as to make it incredible that the copy now found was that written by Moses himself: for there was certainly not a greater interval from the death of Moses to the death of Josiah than 950 years; and we have manuscripts existing among us at the present day of greater age than this. Dr. Kennicott.

11. — had heard the words of the book] It is generally agreed that the part which Shaphan read to the king was taken out of the book of Deuteronomy; and it is supposed, not without probability, that chapters xxviii, xxix, and xxx, were those which he turned to on this occasion; for therein is contained a renewal of the covenant which Moses, as mediator, had made between God and the people of Israel at mount Horeb: and there are those terrible threats against the transgressors of the law, whether prince or people, which affected Josiah so much. Calmet.

— that he rent his clothes.] Being alarmed when he heard the dreadful threatenings against the transgressors of the law. Bp. Patrick. By the behaviour of the king, as also of the high priest, on this occasion, it might be thought to appear that neither of them had seen a copy of the law before, which shews into how corrupt a state the church of the Jews was then sunk, till this good king reformed it. For although Hezekiah kept scribes on purpose to collect and write out copies of the Holy Scriptures, yet, through the iniquity of the times that afterwards followed in the reigns of Manasseh and Amon, they had either been so destroyed, or else so neglected and lost, that there were none left in the land, unless in a few private hands, where they were kept and concealed, till this copy was found in the temple. Dean Prideaux. Or perhaps we may conclude, that it was the great reverence which Josiah bore to the original copy of the law written by Moses, as well as the seasonable and remarkable finding of it at this time, that awakened and quickened him to a more attentive consideration of all the passages contained in it than he had ever bestowed before, either in reading or hearing the ordinary copies of the law. Stackhouse. As soon as the good king hears the words of the book of the law, and especially those dreadful threats of judgment denounced against the idolatries of his Judah, he rends his clothes, to shew his heart rent with sorrow and fearful expectation of those plagues, and washes his bosom with tears. He does but once hear the law read, and is thus humbled; humbled for his father's sins, for the sins of his people: on the contrary, how many of us, after the menaces of God's law have been frequently impressed upon our guilty souls, continue yet insensible of our danger. The very reading of the law thus affects Josiah; the preaching of it stirs not us. The sins of others struck thus deep upon him; we are not affected with our own sins. Bp. Hall.

14. — unto Huldah the prophetess,] This is the only mention we have of this prophetess. It certainly contributes much to her renown that she was consulted on this weighty occasion, when both Jeremiah and Zephaniah were Prophets alive at the same time in Judah. Or perhaps these Prophets did not happen to be at hand, so as to be applied to with sufficient despatch. Stackhouse.

— in the college;] The word which we translate "college," is in the margin of the Bible rendered "the second part." For there were three walls about Jerusalem; within the first lived artificers and common people; within the second, persons of better sort, wise men, Prophets, &c.; and within the third was the mountain of the Lord. It is thought then that the sacred writer speaks of the middle part as the residence of Huldah. Bp. Patrick.

16. — I will bring evil upon this place,] In how bad a case men may be, and yet think themselves not only safe but happy! These Jews had forgotten their old revolts; and now, having framed themselves to holy courses, promised themselves nothing but peace, when the prophetess foresees and foretells their approaching ruin. Bp. Hall.

^{Before CHRIST 624.} say to him, Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, As touching the words which thou hast heard;

19 Because thine heart was tender, and thou hast humbled thyself before the LORD, when thou heardest what I spake against this place, and against the inhabitants thereof, that they should become a desolation and a curse, and hast rent thy clothes, and wept before me; I also have heard thee, saith the LORD.

20 Behold therefore, I will gather thee unto thy fathers, and thou shalt be gathered into thy grave in peace; and thine eyes shall not see all the evil which I will bring upon this place. And they brought the king word again.

CHAP. XXIII.

1 Josiah causeth the book to be read in a solemn assembly. 3 He reneweth the covenant of the Lord. 4 He destroyeth idolatry. 15 He burnt dead men's bones upon the altar of Beth-el, as was foreprophecied. 21 He kept a most solemn passover. 24 He put away nitches and all abomination. 26 God's final wrath against Judah. 29 Josiah, provoking Pharaoh-nechoh, is slain at Megiddo. 31 Jehoahaz, succeeding him, is imprisoned by Pharaoh-nechoh, who made Jehoiahim king. 36 Jehoiahim's nicked reign.

^a 2 Chron. 34. 30.

AND ^a the king sent, and they gathered unto him all the elders of Judah and of Jerusalem.

2 And the king went up into the house of the LORD, and all the men of Judah and all the inhabitants of Jerusalem with him, and the priests, and the prophets, and all the people, † both small and great: and he read in their ears all the words of the book of the covenant which was found in the house of the LORD.

^{Before CHRIST 624.}

† Heb. from small even unto great.

3 ¶ And the king stood by a pillar, and made a covenant before the LORD, to walk after the LORD, and to keep his commandments and his testimcnies and his statutes with all their heart and all their soul, to perform the words of this covenant that were written in this book. And all the people stood to the covenant.

4 And the king commanded Hilkiah the high priest, and the priests of the second order, and the keepers of the door, to bring forth out of the temple of the LORD all the vessels that were made for Baal, and for the grove, and for all the host of heaven: and he burned them without Jerusalem in the fields of Kidron, and carried the ashes of them unto Beth-el.

5 And he † put down † the idolatrous priests, whom the kings of Judah had ordained to burn incense in the high places in the cities of Judah, and in the places round about Jerusalem; them also that burned incense unto Baal, to the sun, and to the moon, and to the † planets, and to all the host of heaven.

† Heb. caused to cense.
† Heb. chemarim.

‡ Or, twelve signs, or, constellations.

6 And he brought out the ^b grove from the house of the LORD, without Jerusalem, ^c

19. Because thine heart was tender, &c.] Some observe, that here are four tokens mentioned of a true repentance and conversion to God: first, softness of heart, which is opposed to the hardness arising from disbelief of God's threatenings; secondly, great humility, arising from a sense of his own unworthiness. These two are inward: the others were outward tokens of this inward sense; the rending of his clothes, and the tears which he shed for his own and the people's offences. Bp. Patrick.

20. — thou shalt be gathered into thy grave in peace;] The phrase of "going to the grave in peace," is of some latitude, admitting of more constructions than one. Josiah died in peace during the publick tranquillity, before the troubles of his nation came on; he lived not "to see the evil brought on this place." He was taken away from the evil to come, was peaceably interred, and left his nation in a peaceable condition. So much Huldah the prophetess intended and signified; and so much was actually fulfilled. Dr. Waterland. Though he was slain in battle, chap. xxiii. 29, yet he went to his grave in peace, because, as the following words explain, he did not live to see the calamities of the nation, but left it in a peaceable condition. Bp. Patrick. This answer of the prophetess is deserving of particular attention. She informed the king, that the iniquities of the Jews were come to such a height that the Divine threatenings would soon be put in execution, and that, before they were so, God would remove him from life. This affords us these two lessons: the one is, that when the wickedness of men is past remedy, neither the endeavours nor the prayers of the righteous can prevent the judgments of God from taking their course; the other is, that death is not always a mark of God's displeasure, and that He sometimes shortens the lives of those He most loves, that they may not be involved in the judgments He intends to pour down on the heads of the wicked. Ostervald. What a gracious mixture was here of mercy with severity; severity to Judah, mercy to Josiah! Judah will be plagued, and become a desolation and a curse; Josiah will be quietly housed in his grave before this storm fall upon Judah. His eye will not see what his people must feel. It is enough that the expectation of these evils afflicts him; the feeling of them will not. Bp. Hall.

Chap. XXIII. This chapter is to be compared with 2 Chron. xxxiv, xxxv, and xxxvi; also with Jerem. xxv, xxvi, and xxvii.

Ver. 3. — stood by a pillar,] To which his throne was adjoining; see chap. xi. 14.

— and made a covenant before the Lord,] He that found himself exempted from vengeance by his repentance and deep humiliation, would fain find the same way for the deliverance of his people. The same words of the law, therefore, which had wrought on his heart, are by him caused to be publicly read in the ears of Judah and Jerusalem. The assembly is universal, of priests, Prophets, people, both small and great. Because the sin was such, the danger was such; that no man may complain that he has wanted information, the law of God sounds in every ear. The people want not an example, as of sorrow, so of amendment. Good Josiah stands by the pillar and renews his solemn covenant with God: the people cannot for shame refuse to second him. Even they who expect destruction do not withdraw their obedience. God's children may not be sullen under His corrections; but, whether they expect or feel correction, must be no other than dutiful to His awful hand. Bp. Hall.

6. — brought out the grove] That is, the image of the grove, or the idol Ashtaroth; see note at ch. xvii. 10. Having ground the unto the brook Kidron, and burned it at the brook Kidron, and stamped it small to powder, and cast the powder thereof upon the graves of the children of the people.

Before
CHRIST
624.

7 And he brake down the houses of the sodomites, that were by the house of the LORD, where the women wove † hangings for the grove.

† Heb.
houses.

8 And he brought all the priests out of the cities of Judah, and defiled the high places where the priests had burned incense, from Geba to Beer-sheba, and brake down the high places of the gates that were in the entering in of the gate of Joshua the governor of the city, which were on a man's left hand at the gate of the city.

9 Nevertheless the priests of the high places came not up to the altar of the LORD in Jerusalem, but they did eat of the unleavened bread among their brethren.

10 And he defiled Topheth, which is in the valley of the children of Hinnom, that ashes to powder, he threw them on the sepulchres of the dead, which by law were accounted most unclean places, not to be touched by any body, that so none might attempt to gather them up, or keep any part as a sacred or superstitious relic. Pyle.

It is quite amazing to think how the whole kingdom could be so overrun with wickedness and idolatry in the short time of Amon's reign: yet so it happened; and the Prophet Zephaniah gives a dreadful catalogue of the licentiousness and irreligion which then prevailed, Zeph. iii. 1, &c. Univ. Hist.

7. — the women wove hangings] To hide probably the unnatural and abominable ceremonies of their idolatrous worship. Univ. Hist.

8. And he brought all the priests out of the cities] So great and general had been the apostasy and falling away from the true religion in the preceding reigns, that the very priests had joined in the corruption of the times, and not only burnt incense in the high places, contrary to the law of Moses, but even officiated in the most impious rites of idolatry; and so, instead of ministers of the most high God, made themselves the ministers of devils. These Josiah did not put to death, but (as it is said) "brought them out of the cities of Judah." He took them as it were captive, and brought them to Jerusalem. Then it is added, ver. 9, "They came not up to the altar" that was there; that is, they were not admitted to the honour, nor restored to the full exercise of their functions, but only to the most inferior parts of their office, that so they might "bear their iniquity," as Ezekiel expresses it, chap. xlv. 10—14; that is, might bear that mark of degradation as a punishment of their crime, and a perpetual badge of their infamous fall. Wogan.

— the high places of the gates] The high places of the gates seem to have been erected there to offer incense to those tutelary gods, unto whom their idolatrous kings had committed the protection of the city; and there, it is thought, the governor of the city had his private idol, and a portable altar for its worship. This Josiah did not spare, but made the greatest men see the impartiality of his zeal against idolatry. Bp. Patrick.

9. Nevertheless the priests &c.] As to such of the priests as had been no further guilty than in worshipping the true God in the unlawful way of private altars, &c. he mixed some mercy with his severity; for though he would not admit them for the future to officiate in the temple service, yet he allowed them to be maintained, with the other priests, out of the offerings, and other revenues of the altar. Pyle.

no man might make his son or his daughter to pass through the fire to Molech. Before
CHRIST
624.

11 And he took away the horses that the kings of Judah had given to the sun, at the entering in of the house of the LORD, by the chamber of Nathan-melech the ‖ chamberlain, which was in the suburbs, and burned the chariots of the sun with fire. ‖ Or, eunuch, or, officer.

12 And the altars that were on the top of the upper chamber of Ahaz, which the kings of Judah had made, and the altars which ^c Manasseh had made in the two courts of the house of the LORD, did the king beat down, and ‖ brake them down from thence, and cast the dust of them into the brook Kidron. ^c Chap. 21. 5. ‖ Or, ran from thence.

13 And the high places that were before Jerusalem, which were on the right hand of ‖ the mount of corruption, which ^d Solomon the king of Israel had builded for Ashtoreth the abomination of the Zidonians, and for Chemosh the abomination of ‖ That is, the mount of Olives. ^d 1 Kings 11. 7.

10. — Topheth, — in the valley of the children of Hinnom,] The valley of the children of Hinnom was a pleasant place nigh unto Jerusalem, dedicated to the idol Molech, where they used to make their children pass through the fire. The spot where this was done was called Topheth, signifying Tympanum, a tabor, or kind of drum, because the priests of that idol played upon tabors at the time of sacrificing, that so the children's cries and shrieks might not be heard. Wogan.

Gehinnom, or the valley of Hinnom, having formerly belonged to the sons of Hinnom, lay to the south, and perhaps to the east, of Jerusalem, and was part of the bounds between the tribes of Benjamin and Judah. This place became infamous on account of the people passing their children here through the fire to Molech, the god of the Ammonites: it was also called Topheth, which signifies some musical instrument, which they sounded, that the cries of the children might not be heard; and it is thought that the name of Gehenna is given to hell from this place, on account of the diabolical sacrifices that were offered here. Bp. Pococke.

11. — took away the horses &c.] What these horses and chariots of the sun were, whether only statues or images of horses, or real living ones; or whether, if real ones, they were kept to be sacrificed to the sun, or for some other pompous purposes relating to the honour paid to the sun, is very much disputed amongst the learned; and there is very little certainty to be gathered respecting them from any ancient historians. Pyle. The Persians consecrated white horses and chariots to the sun: perhaps the Jews had now adopted this among other heathenish idolatries. Univ. Hist.

12. — on the top of the upper chamber of Ahaz,] It appears they were not satisfied with the public altars they had made, in a vast number of high places; but, the roofs of the houses being flat, they made altars there; see Jerem. xix. 13; xxxii. 29; and particularly on the king's palace, where they worshipped the sun, moon, and stars. But the altars were not spared by Josiah, even though they were on the king's house. Bp. Patrick.

13. — the mount of corruption,] This is probably thought to mean (as the margin states) the mount of Olives, which, from the notorious instances of idolatrous worship practised upon it, went by the name of the mount of corruption. Some however understand it to mean a different mount, lying on the south or southwest of Jerusalem near mount Sion, and separated from it by the valley, called in Scripture the valley of Hinnom. Dr. Wells. The mount of Olives has three points or summits, the centre of which, being the highest, was set apart for the worship of Ashtoreth, and other idols. Dr. E. D. Clarke.

Before
CHRIST
624.

the Moabites, and for Milcom the abomination of the children of Ammon, did the king defile.

† Heb.
statues.

14 And he brake in pieces the † images, and cut down the groves, and filled their places with the bones of men.

15 ¶ Moreover the altar that was at Beth-el, and the high place which Jeroboam the son of Nebat, who made Israel to sin, had made, both that altar and the high place he brake down, and burned the high place, and stamped it small to powder, and burned the grove.

16 And as Josiah turned himself, he spied the sepulchres that were there in the mount, and sent, and took the bones out of the sepulchres, and burned them upon the altar, and polluted it, according to the word of the LORD which the man of God proclaimed, who proclaimed these words.

1 Kings
13. 2.

17 Then he said, What title is that that I see? And the men of the city told him, It is the sepulchre of the man of God, which came from Judah, and proclaimed these things that thou hast done against the altar of Beth-el.

18 And he said, Let him alone; let no man move his bones. So they let his bones † alone, with the bones of the prophet that came out of Samaria.

† Heb.
to escape.

16. — took the bones out of the sepulchres,] In order to make it sure that the place might not be afterwards used as a place of idolatrous worship, he caused the bones of all the men of note, whether priests, prophets, or others, who had been promoters of that idolatry, to be dug out of their graves and thrown together upon the place, to pollute it as much as possible, and render it odious and contemptible. And thus was that remarkable prophecy, pronounced about three hundred and fifty years before, concerning this altar, (1 Kings xiii. 1, 2,) now exactly and literally fulfilled. Pyle.

— which the man of God proclaimed,] About 350 years before this happened, when Jeroboam first established his false worship in this place. Bp. Wilson. See note at 1 Kings xiii. 2.

19. — which the kings of Israel had made] This reformation Josiah extends to the kingdom of Israel as well as that of Judah. As the ten tribes had now gone into captivity, the ancient right which David and his posterity had to the whole kingdom of Israel (before it was divided by Jeroboam) devolved upon Josiah. The people who escaped the captivity were united with his subjects, and put themselves under his protection. It is true the kings of Assyria were the lords and conquerors of the country; but, from the time of Manasseh's restoration, (2 Chron. xxxiii. 13,) they seem to have conferred on the kings of Judah a sovereignty in all the land of Canaan, as it was exercised in the days of David and Solomon. Stackhouse.

20. — burned men's bones upon them,] Which, according to the ideas then prevailing, was the highest pollution of their altars, ver. 13, 14. Bp. Patrick.

22. Surely there was not holden such a passover] These words, taken in a literal sense, must denote that this passover, which was celebrated by two tribes only, was more numerously attended and more magnificent than all those that were observed in the days of David and Solomon, in the most happy and flourishing state of the Jewish monarchy, and when the whole twelve tribes were met together to solemnize that feast. It may not be amiss, therefore to

Before
CHRIST
624.

19 And all the houses also of the high places that were in the cities of Samaria, which the kings of Israel had made to provoke the LORD to anger, Josiah took away, and did to them according to all the acts that he had done in Beth-el.

20 And he ‖ slew all the priests of the high places that were there upon the altars, and burned men's bones upon them, and returned to Jerusalem.

‖ Or, sacrificed.

21 ¶ And the king commanded all the people, saying, Keep the passover unto the LORD your God, as it is written in the book of this covenant.

2 Chron.
35. 1.
1 Esd. 1. 1.
Exod. 12.

22 Surely there was not holden such a passover from the days of the judges that judged Israel, nor in all the days of the kings of Israel, nor of the kings of Judah;

3.
Deut. 16. 2.

23 But in the eighteenth year of king Josiah, wherein this passover was holden to the LORD in Jerusalem.

about 623.

24 ¶ Moreover the workers with familiar spirits, and the wizards, and the ‖ images, and the idols, and all the abominations that were spied in the land of Judah and in Jerusalem, did Josiah put away, that he might perform the words of the law which were written in the book that Hilkiah the priest found in the house of the LORD.

‖ Or, teraphim.

Lev. 20.
27.
Deut. 15.
11.

25 And like unto him was there no king allow, that, in these expressions, there is a kind of exaggeration not unusual in sacred as well as profane authors. For it is a usual form of expression to say, "Never was so much splendour and magnificence seen;" when we mean no more than that the thing we speak of was very splendid and magnificent. Unless we suppose with some, that a preference is given to this passover above the rest, in respect to the exact observation of the rites and ceremonies belonging to it, which, at other times, were performed according to custom, several things being either altered or omitted; whereas, at this, every thing was performed according to the prescribed form of the law; from which, since the finding of this authentick copy of it, Josiah enjoined them not to vary one tittle. Stackhouse. The piety of Josiah, in all that he now did, is the more remarkable, as God had told him that the destruction of his kingdom was determined, and that he himself should shortly die; and yet he did not abate in his zeal, but still called upon the people to return to the true service of God, and employed the remainder of his days in acts of piety and religion. Thus every good man, in whatever circumstances he may be placed, and whatever the event of things may be, takes care to be always engaged in his duty, and dedicates his whole life, and all the powers which God has given him, to promote His glory and the publick good. Ostervald.

25. — like unto him was there no king] Indeed no king that ever sat upon the throne of Judah made such a speedy alteration in the face of affairs as this prince did: his intentions were hearty and serious toward a reformation, from the moment he was thoroughly informed in the truth of his religion from the authentick copy of the books of holy Scripture; his prudence and courage kept pace with his zeal, so that nothing was wanting on the part of this consummate prince to render his kingdom happy. Pyle. It may be asked, Is it intended by this expression to prefer Josiah before David and Hezekiah, who were incomparably the best kings of all that went before him? This perhaps may not be im-

Before
CHRIST
about 623.

before him, that turned to the LORD with all his heart, and with all his soul, and with all his might, according to all the law of Moses; neither after him arose there any like him.

† Heb.
angers.

26 ¶ Notwithstanding the LORD turned not from the fierceness of his great wrath, wherewith his anger was kindled against Judah, because of all the † provocations that Manasseh had provoked him withal.

1 Kings 8.
29. & 9. 3.
chap. 21. 7.

27 And the LORD said, I will remove Judah also out of my sight, as I have removed Israel, and will cast off this city Jerusalem which I have chosen, and the house of which I said, 'My name shall be there.

tended; although there are some blemishes recorded of David and Hezekiah, while we read of none in the life of Josiah. But, if we consider how horribly the people were corrupted in religion and in morals when Josiah came to the throne; how the usurping idols had filled the very temple of God and the holy city with their images and altars; and how princes, priests, and all orders of men were become their votaries; if we compute the difficulties with which he had to struggle, and how quickly he surmounted them all, having finished the reformation of Israel and Judah at an age when other kings usually began to reign, we may indeed, with the greatest justice, and without lessening the character of others, call Josiah an incomparable prince. Reading.

26. Notwithstanding the Lord turned not] The great misfortune was, that, as to the generality of the court and people, all this seeming reformation was nothing but shew and pretence, a mere compliance with the vigour and resolution of their prince: their hearts were never firmly in it; but, as plainly appears by the event, they were ready to revolt again into their old idolatry and vice, upon the first opportunity. They complied with Josiah's religion, but their real inclinations were to the old corruptions of Manasseh: for which reason God still resolved to deliver up this part of His chosen people also to the power of a foreign monarch. Pyle.

29. In his days Pharaoh-nechok — went up] It was in the thirty-first year of king Josiah, that Necho marched with a great army towards the Euphrates, to make war on the Medes and Babylonians, who had recently dissolved the Assyrian empire and destroyed Nineveh: his object appears to have been to put a stop to their growing greatness, which had become so formidable as to raise the jealousy of their neighbours. Dean Prideaux.

— king Josiah went against him;] It has been thought by some, that Josiah engaged rashly and unadvisedly in this enterprise, from an excessive confidence in the merit of his own righteousness; but this is a supposition unworthy of so religious a prince. It is more probable that the kings of Judah had, from the time of Manasseh's restoration, bound themselves by oath to adhere to the kings of Babylon against all their enemies: and, in recompense for this, they seem to have had conferred upon them by the Assyrians the parts of the land of Canaan which had been possessed by the ten tribes. It seems certain that Josiah possessed the whole land of Israel, as David and Solomon possessed it, before the separation of the ten tribes; for his reformation extended through every part of it, and seems to have been every where conducted with the same authority. It is remarkable too, that the battle with the king of Egypt was fought at Megiddo, a town of the tribe of Manasseh, lying in the middle of the kingdom of Israel, where Josiah would have had nothing to do, if he had not been king of that kingdom as well as of Judah. Allowing then this compact to have subsisted between Josiah and the king of Babylon, he would have been guilty of a breach of fidelity if he had not endeavoured to stop the progress of the king of Egypt. Dean Prideaux.

Before
CHRIST
about 623.

28 Now the rest of the acts of Josiah, and all that he did, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Judah?

610.
2 Chron.
35. 20.

29 ¶ In his days Pharaoh-nechok king of Egypt went up against the king of Assyria to the river Euphrates: and king Josiah went against him; and he slew him at Megiddo, when he had seen him.

30 And his servants carried him in a chariot dead from Megiddo, and brought him to Jerusalem, and buried him in his own sepulchre. And the people of the land took Jehoahaz the son of Josiah, and anointed him, and made him king in his father's stead. ^{1 2 Chron. 36. 1.}

It may be a doubt whether king Josiah was not guilty of a want of trust in God, in his warlike preparations against the king of Egypt. Josiah has so good a character in Scripture, that both Jews and Christians have been at a loss to account for the unfortunate end he came to, being slain in battle against the king of Egypt. The learned Dr. Prideaux has justified his conduct in opposing the passage of the king of Egypt, because it was a service due to the king of Assyria, to whom Josiah was a vassal. Be it so; yet his duty to the king of Assyria could not dissolve his dependence on a higher Master: he went to war as vassal of the king of Assyria, but did he ask counsel of God as King of Judah? Or was he attended to the war with such forces only, as the king of Judah might lawfully use? See Deut. xvii. 16; xx. 1; and the notes there. That he had chariots and horsemen, appears plainly from the account of his death, 2 Chron. xxxv. 24; for he was wounded in one chariot, and removed into another to be carried off: and it is very probable, that there were chariots and horsemen many in his army, since there appears no scruple in him upon this head. That this was the true, or the only cause of his misfortune, I dare not affirm; for I have no express authority to support me in affirming it: but this I see, that he was found in the day of battle, not with the equipage of a king of Judah, but surrounded with forces, which the law of God had forbidden him to trust to, and which had often proved a strength fatal to his ancestors. Bp. Sherlock. See the note on 1 Kings x. 28.

— slew him at Megiddo,] See the note at chap. xxii. 20. With Josiah perished all the glory, honour, and prosperity of the Jewish nation. For after that nothing else ensued but a dismal scene of God's judgments on the land, till at length all Judah and Jerusalem were swallowed up by them in a woful destruction. The death of so excellent a prince was deservedly lamented by all his people, and by none more than Jeremiah the Prophet, who had a thorough sense of the greatness of the loss, and also a full foresight of the great calamities that were afterwards to follow upon the whole people of the Jews; and therefore, while his heart was full with the view of both, he wrote a song of lamentation upon this doleful occasion, as he afterwards did another upon the destruction of Jerusalem. Dean Prideaux.

Who doth not now pity and lament the untimely end of Josiah? Who will not be affected to see a religious, just, virtuous prince, snatched away in the vigour of his age? After all our lamentation, Providence, that directed the shaft against him, intends the wound for a stroke of mercy. The God, whom Josiah serves, looks through his death at his glory; and, by this sudden violence, will deliver him from the view and participation of the miseries of Judah. O the wonderful goodness of the Almighty, whose judgments are always merciful! How happily has Josiah gained by this change! Instead of a froward people, he is now associated with saints and angels. Instead of a fading and corruptible crown, he now enjoys one that is eternal. Bp. Hall.

Before CHRIST 610. 31 ¶ Jehoahaz was twenty and three years old when he began to reign; and he reigned three months in Jerusalem. And his mother's name was Hamutal, the daughter of Jeremiah of Libnah.

32 And he did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD, according to all that his fathers had done.

33 And Pharaoh-nechoh put him in bands at Riblah in the land of Hamath, || that he might not reign in Jerusalem; and † put the land to a tribute of an hundred talents of silver, and a talent of gold.

|| Or, because he reigned.
† Heb. set a mulct upon the land.

— Matth. 1. 11. called Jakim.

34 And Pharaoh-nechoh made Eliakim the son of Josiah king in the room of Josiah his father, and turned his name to ^m Jehoiakim, and took Jehoahaz away: and he came to Egypt, and died there.

35 And Jehoiakim gave the silver and the gold to Pharaoh; but he taxed the land to give the money according to the commandment of Pharaoh: he exacted the silver and the gold of the people of the land, of every one according to his taxation, to give it unto Pharaoh-nechoh.

610. 36 ¶ Jehoiakim was twenty and five years old when he began to reign; and he reigned eleven years in Jerusalem. And his mother's name was Zebudah, the daughter of Pedaiah of Rumah.

37 And he did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD, according to all that his fathers had done.

CHAP. XXIV.

1 Jehoiakim, first subdued by Nebuchadnezzar, then rebelling against him, procureth his own ruin. 5 Jehoiachin succeedeth him. 7 The king of Egypt is vanquished by the king of Babylon. 8 Jehoiachin's evil reign. 10 Jerusalem is taken and carried cap-

33. — put him in bands at Riblah] As Riblah is mentioned to be "in the land of Hamath," it could not be in Canaan, as some have supposed. It may have been Antioch or Apamea, or some other place on the river Orontes. Dr. Wells. It appears from Josephus, that Pharaoh-nechoh had good success against the Babylonians; and, returning after three months, he dealt with Jehoahaz as is here related. Dean Prideaux.

34. — turned his name to Jehoiakim,] It was no unusual thing for conquerors to change the names of persons whom they had vanquished in war, in order to shew their absolute power over them. But Archbishop Usher has remarked, that the king of Egypt gave to Eliakim the name of Jehoiakim, thereby to testify that he ascribed his victory over the Babylonians to Jehovah the God of Israel, by whose incitement (as he pretended, 2 Chron. xxxv. 21, 22,) he undertook the expedition. Stackhouse.

Chap. XXIV. This chapter is to be compared with 2 Chron. xxxvi. and with Jer. xxv—xxviii.

Ver. 1. — Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon] He was son of Nabopolassar king of Babylon, and was taken by his father into partnership of the empire, for the purpose of conducting an army into Babylon. 17 Zedekiah is made king, and reigneth ill unto the utter destruction of Judah.

Before CHRIST 607.

IN his days Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon came up, and Jehoiakim became his servant three years: then he turned and rebelled against him.

2 And the LORD sent against him bands of the Chaldees, and bands of the Syrians, and bands of the Moabites, and bands of the children of Ammon, and sent them against Judah to destroy it, ^a according to the word of the LORD, which he spake † by his servants the prophets.

606.

603.

600.

^a Chap. 20. 17. & 23. 27.

† Heb. by the hand of.

3 Surely at the commandment of the LORD came this upon Judah, to remove them out of his sight, for the sins of Manasseh, according to all that he did;

4 And also for the innocent blood that he shed: for he filled Jerusalem with innocent blood; which the LORD would not pardon.

5 ¶ Now the rest of the acts of Jehoiakim, and all that he did, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Judah?

6 So Jehoiakim slept with his fathers: and Jehoiachin his son reigned in his stead.

599.

7 And the king of Egypt came not again any more out of his land: for the king of Babylon had taken from the river of Egypt unto the river Euphrates all that pertained to the king of Egypt.

8 ¶ Jehoiachin was eighteen years old when he began to reign, and he reigned in Jerusalem three months. And his mother's name was Nehushta, the daughter of El-nathan of Jerusalem.

9 And he did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD, according to all that his father had done.

into Syria and Palestine, which revolted against his authority. Stackhouse.

From this time, before Christ 606, (see the margin,) is to be dated the commencement of the Babylonish captivity, which, according to the prediction of Jeremiah, was to last seventy years. This was about 115 years after the destruction of the kingdom of Israel. Bp. Tomline.

2. — and sent them against Judah] God is said to have sent them against Judah, because they came up against it by His special order and dispensation; as the next verse states. Bp. Patrick.

6. — slept with his fathers:] This expression merely means, that he died. It is not meant that he was buried with his fathers; for he was not buried, as Jeremiah had foretold, chap. xxii. 18, 19. See 2 Chron. xxxvi. 6. Bp. Wilson.

8. Jehoiachin was eighteen years old] There is a material difference between this verse and 2 Chron. xxxvi. 9, where it is stated, that he was but eight years old when he began to reign. But the two passages may be easily reconciled, as may many other similar discrepancies, by supposing that his father took him to reign together with him; and that, for the first ten years out of the eighteen mentioned, he thus reigned in conjunction with his father. Stackhouse.

Before
CHRIST
599.

• Dan. 1. 1.
† Heb. came into siege.

10 ¶ At that time the servants of Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon came up against Jerusalem, and the city † was besieged.

11 And Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon came against the city, and his servants did besiege it.

599.

¶ Or, eunuchs.

• Chap. 20.
17.
19. 29. 6.

12 And Jehoiachin the king of Judah went out to the king of Babylon, he, and his mother, and his servants, and his princes, and his officers: and the king of Babylon took him in the eighth year of his reign.

13 And he carried out thence all the treasures of the house of the LORD, and the treasures of the king's house, and cut in pieces all the vessels of gold which Solomon king of Israel had made in the temple of the LORD, as the LORD had said.

14 And he carried away all Jerusalem, and all the princes, and all the mighty men of valour, even ten thousand captives, and all the craftsmen and smiths: none remained, save the poorest sort of the people of the land.

• 2 Chron.
36. 10.
Esther 2. 6.

¶ Or, eunuchs.

15 And he carried away Jehoiachin to Babylon, and the king's mother, and the king's wives, and his officers, and the mighty of the land, those carried he into captivity from Jerusalem to Babylon.

16 And all the men of might, even seven thousand, and craftsmen and smiths a thousand, all that were strong and apt for war, even them the king of Babylon brought captive to Babylon.

599.
• Jer. 52. 1.
▲ 52. 1.

17 ¶ And the king of Babylon made Mattaniah his father's brother king in his stead, and changed his name to Zedekiah.

18 Zedekiah was twenty and one years old when he began to reign, and he reigned eleven years in Jerusalem. And his

17. — changed his name to Zedekiah.] The name Zedekiah signifies the justice of the Lord. They intended by this name to put him continually in mind of the vengeance which he was to expect from the justice of the Lord his God, if he violated that fidelity which he had sworn, in the name of God, to observe towards his conqueror. Dean Prideaux.

It is to this day the custom among the Eastern people to assume a new and different name on particular occurrences in their life. Harmer.

20. For through the anger of the Lord.] God was so highly displeased with this wicked people, that He permitted Zedekiah to break his faith with Nebuchadnezzar, and to rebel against him, forgetting for what cause he changed his name. It is probable that he was persuaded to his revolt by the ambassadors which the kings of Edom, Moab, Ammon, Tyre, and Sidon, sent to him, to throw off the yoke of the king of Babylon, Jer. xxvii. 2—4. The king of Egypt also, it is probable, promised him help; see Ezek. xvii. 15. And Hananiah, a false prophet, assured him that God would in two years' time break the yoke of the king of Babylon, and bring back all the vessels of the house of God, with mother's name was Hamutal, the daughter of Jeremiah of Libnah.

Before
CHRIST
599.

19 And he did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD, according to all that Jehoiakim had done.

20 For through the anger of the LORD it came to pass in Jerusalem and Judah, until he had cast them out from his presence, that Zedekiah rebelled against the king of Babylon.

599.

CHAP. XXV.

1 Jerusalem is besieged. 4 Zedekiah taken, his sons slain, his eyes put out. 8 Nebuzar-adan defaceth the city, carrieth the remnant, except a few poor labourers, into captivity, 13 spoileth and carrieth away the treasures. 18 The nobles are slain at Riblah. 22 Gedaliah, who was set over them that remained, being slain, the rest flee into Egypt. 27 Evil-merodach advanceth Jehoiachin in his court.

AND it came to pass in the ninth year of his reign, in the tenth month, in the tenth day of the month, that Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon came, he, and all his host, against Jerusalem, and pitched against it; and they built forts against it round about.

2 And the city was besieged unto the eleventh year of king Zedekiah.

3 And on the ninth day of the fourth month the famine prevailed in the city, and there was no bread for the people of the land.

4 ¶ And the city was broken up, and all the men of war fled by night by the way of the gate between two walls, which is by the king's garden: (now the Chaldees were against the city round about:) and the king went the way toward the plain.

5 And the army of the Chaldees pursued after the king, and overtook him in the Jecooniah and all the captives; see Jer. xxviii. 1—4. Jeremiah indeed proved that he made them trust in a falsehood, by predicting his death that very year, which accordingly fell out, ver. 5, 16, 17. But they still persisted in their vain hopes, as there were other deceivers, who "prophesied falsely in God's name," Jer. xxix. 8, 9. Bp. Patrick.

Chap. XXV. This chapter is to be compared with several chapters of Jeremiah, particularly with xxxii, xxxiv, xxxvii. to xlii, lii; and with 2 Chron. xxxvi.

Ver. 4.—by the way of the gate between two walls.] In the relation of the same event in Jeremiah, it is said, "They went by the way of the king's garden, by the gate betwixt the two walls." It appears that the besieged made their escape by some way between the wall and the outworks, which the enemy did not suspect. It is probable that the king's garden faced the country, and that there was some private and unperceptible gate, in a part where the besiegers kept a less strict watch, for the very reason of its leading towards the plain, where their complete escape was the less practicable. Stackhouse. See the note on Jer. xxxix. 4.

Before CHRIST 588. plains of Jericho: and all his army were scattered from him.

6 So they took the king, and brought him up to the king of Babylon to Riblah; and they † gave judgment upon him.

† Heb. spake judgment vouch him.

7 And they slew the sons of Zedekiah before his eyes, and † put out the eyes of Zedekiah, and bound him with fetters of brass, and carried him to Babylon.

† Heb. made blind.

8 ¶ And in the fifth month, on the seventh day of the month, which is the nineteenth year of king Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon, came Nebuzar-adan, ‖ captain of the guard, a servant of the king of Babylon, unto Jerusalem:

‖ Or, chief marshal.

9 And he burnt the house of the LORD, and the king's house, and all the houses of Jerusalem, and every great man's house burnt he with fire.

10 And all the army of the Chaldees, that were with the captain of the guard, brake down the walls of Jerusalem round about.

11 Now the rest of the people that were left in the city, and the † fugitives that fell away to the king of Babylon, with the remnant of the multitude, did Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard carry away.

† Heb. fallen away.

12 But the captain of the guard left of the poor of the land to be vinedressers and husbandmen.

° Chap. 20. 17. Jer. 27. 22.

13 And ° the pillars of brass that were in the house of the LORD, and the bases, and the brasen sea that was in the house of the LORD, did the Chaldees break in pieces, and carried the brass of them to Babylon.

6. — they gave judgment upon him.] A great council, it is probable, was called, who passed a solemn sentence upon him, in condemning him as a rebellious subject. Thus was fulfilled the prophecy of Jeremiah, that he should see the king of Babylon and speak with him, Jer. xxxii. 4; xxxiv. 3. Bp. Patrick.

7. — and put out the eyes of Zedekiah.] Thus were consistently fulfilled the two seemingly different and contrary predictions of Jeremiah and Ezekiel concerning him: the one, that he should be carried to Babylon, Jer. xxxii. 5; the other, that he should not see Babylon, Ezek. xii. 13.—for he was carried thither blind. Pyle.

On this event Josephus thus remarks: This may serve to convince, even the ignorant, of the power and wisdom of God, and of the constancy of His counsels through all the various ways of His operations. It may likewise shew us, that God's foreknowledge of things is certain, and His providence regular in the ordering of events. The example of Zedekiah, besides, holds forth to us a most instructive proof of the danger of our giving way to the notions of sin and infidelity, which deprive us of the means of discerning God's judgments, even though ready to fall upon us.

9. And he burnt the house of the Lord.] What pity it was to see the Holy of Holies, into which none might enter but the high priest once a year, now thronged with Pagans, the vails rent, the sacred ark of God violated and defaced, the tables overturned, the altars broken down, the pillars demolished, the pavements digged up, yea, the very ground where that famous pile stood, deformed! Four hundred and thirty-six years had that temple stood and 14 And the pots, and the shovels, and the snuffers, and the spoons, and all the vessels of brass wherewith they ministered, took they away.

Before CHRIST 588.

15 And the firepans, and the bowls, and such things as were of gold, in gold, and of silver, in silver, the captain of the guard took away.

16 The two pillars, † one sea, and the bases which Solomon had made for the house of the LORD; the brass of all these vessels was without weight.

† Heb. the one sea.

17 4 The height of the one pillar was eighteen cubits, and the chapter upon it was brass: and the height of the chapter three cubits; and the wreathen work, and pomegranates upon the chapter round about, all of brass: and like unto these had the second pillar with wreathen work.

4 1 Kings 7. 15. Jer. 52. 21.

18 ¶ And the captain of the guard took Seraiah the chief priest, and Zephaniah the second priest, and the three keepers of the † door:

† Heb. threshold. ‖ Or, eunuch.

19 And out of the city he took an ‖ officer that was set over the men of war, and five men of them that † were in the king's presence, which were found in the city, and the ‖ principal scribe of the host, which mustered the people of the land, and three-score men of the people of the land that were found in the city:

† Heb. saw the king's face. ‖ Or, scribe of the captain of the host.

20 And Nebuzar-adan captain of the guard took these, and brought them to the king of Babylon to Riblah:

21 And the king of Babylon smote them, and slew them at Riblah in the land beautified the earth and honoured Heaven: now it is turned into rude heaps. There is no prescription to be pleaded for the favour of the Almighty. Only that temple, not made with hands, is eternal in the heavens. Thither will He graciously bring His faithful servants, for the sake of that glorious High Priest, who has once for all entered into that Holy of Holies. Bp. Hall.

13. And the pillars of brass &c.] It appears that Nebuchadnezzar carried away the riches and furniture of the temple at three different times: first, in the third year of Jehoiakim, Dan. i. 2, these were the vessels which his son Belshazzar profaned, (Dan. v. 2,) and which Cyrus restored to the Jews, (Ezra i. 7,) to be set up in the temple when rebuilt; secondly, in the reign of Jehoiachin he again took the city, and cut in pieces a great part of the vessels of gold which Solomon had made, 2 Kings xxiv. 13; thirdly, in the eleventh year of Zedekiah, as is here related, he pillaged the temple once more. It is somewhat strange that, among the other furniture, we find no mention made of the ark of the covenant, which of all other things was held most sacred; but it was probably burnt together with the temple in this last desolation. Stackhouse.

18. — the second priest.] Whom the Jews call Sagan, who was the deputy of the high priest in the case of sickness, or any thing which made him incapable of officiating. Bp. Patrick.

21. — smote them, and slew them.] He probably did this because he looked upon them as the king's principal counsellors, who had advised him to rebel against him. Bp. Patrick.

Before
CHRIST
588.

Jer. 40.
5, 9.

Jer. 40. 7.

588.

† Heb. of the kingdom.

Jer. 41. 2.

of Hamath. So Judah was carried away out of their land.

22 ¶ And as for the people that remained in the land of Judah, whom Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon had left, even over them he made Gedaliah the son of Ahikam, the son of Shaphan, ruler.

23 And when all the captains of the armies, they and their men, heard that the king of Babylon had made Gedaliah governor, there came to Gedaliah to Mizpah, even Ishmael the son of Nethaniah, and Johanan the son of Careah, and Seraiah the son of Tanhumeth the Netophathite, and Jaazaniah the son of a Maachathite, they and their men.

24 And Gedaliah sware to them, and to their men, and said unto them, Fear not to be the servants of the Chaldees: dwell in the land, and serve the king of Babylon; and it shall be well with you.

25 But it came to pass in the seventh month, that Ishmael the son of Nethaniah, the son of Elishama, of the seed † royal, came, and ten men with him, and ² smote

25. — and smote Gedaliah, &c.] See these events more fully related in Jer. xl, xli, xlii, xliii.

27. And it came to pass &c.] As a conclusion of the history of the two kingdoms of the Israelitish nation, there is here added what befell Jehoiachin, the first captive king in Babylon after the death of Nebuchadnezzar. That great prince was no sooner dead, than his son and successor, Evil-merodach, "lifted up the head of Jehoiachin;" that is, released him out of prison, after a melancholy confinement of thirty-seven years. Pyle.

— Evil-merodach] His proper name was Merodach; he seems to have been called Evil-merodach, that is, "foolish Merodach," because he was a very profligate and vicious prince. Dean Prideaux.

30. — all the days of his life.] Evil-merodach made himself so intolerable in his government, that at length his own relations conspired against him, and put him to death. Dean Prideaux.

O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, the wonder of all times, the paragon of nations, the glory of the earth, the favourite of Heaven; how art thou now become an heap of ashes, a spectacle of desolation, a monument of ruin! Thou hast drunk that bitter cup of God's vengeance, if less early, yet no less deeply, than thy sister city, Samaria. How carefully had thy God forewarned thee: and lo, judgments, the fruits of thy iniquities, have now overtaken thee! Both cities lie together in the dust; both are made a curse to all posterity. What place will the justice of God spare, if Jerusalem, His delight, perished and was cut off for her wickedness! Bp. Hall.

Gedaliah, that he died, and the Jews and the Chaldees that were with him at Mizpah. Before
CHRIST
588.

26 And all the people, both small and great, and the captains of the armies, arose, and came to Egypt: for they were afraid of the Chaldees.

27 ¶ And it came to pass in the seven and thirtieth year of the captivity of Jehoiachin king of Judah, in the twelfth month, on the seven and twentieth day of the month, that Evil-merodach king of Babylon in the year that he began to reign did lift up the head of Jehoiachin king of Judah out of prison; 562.

28 And he spake † kindly to him, and set his throne above the throne of the kings that were with him in Babylon; † Heb.
good things with him.

29 And changed his prison garments: and he did eat bread continually before him all the days of his life.

30 And his allowance was a continual allowance given him of the king, a daily rate for every day, all the days of his life.

We have now seen the end of that glorious kingdom, and of the entire Israelitish monarchy, after it had stood 468 years from the time when David began to reign, 388 years from the revolt of the ten tribes, and 134 years from the destruction of the divided kingdom of Israel; and after it had long continued under the sunshine of the Divine protection, which nothing could have eclipsed but their almost constant and horrid ingratitude, and their invincible propensity to imitate the idolatries and witcheries of other nations; crimes which, though as abominable to God as they were universally practised by mankind, yet seemed to have flowed from a purer source, though corrupted by degrees to this vast height by the amazing degeneracy of mankind. Univ. Hist.

The most remarkable circumstance of all these events is, that the holy temple itself was involved in this destruction; and that God suffered the Babylonians to profane and burn that house, which was dedicated to Him, after they had spoiled it of its most precious things. In this manner God was pleased to punish the Jews, who had profaned the temple and His service; and to shew at the same time that the legal service which was there established, was not always to subsist; and that the worship which was then abolished for a time, should be for ever abolished at the coming of the Messiah, by the last destruction of Jerusalem and the temple, and by the dispersion of the Jews. Thus were at last accomplished the threatenings which God had denounced against His people; a great example of His tremendous judgments on those who abuse His patience and mercy, and obstinately persist in their sins. Ostervald.

The following Chapters from the second book of Kings are appointed for Proper Lessons on Sundays and Holydays.

CHAP. II.	-	-	-	-	Ascension Day,	-	-	-	-	Evening.
— V.	-	-	-	-	11th Sunday after Trinity,	-	-	-	-	Morning.
— IX.	-	-	-	-	Ditto,	-	-	-	-	Evening.
— X.	-	-	-	-	12th Sunday after Trinity,	-	-	-	-	Morning.
— XVIII.	-	-	-	-	Ditto,	-	-	-	-	Evening.
— XIX.	-	-	-	-	13th Sunday after Trinity,	-	-	-	-	Morning.
— XXIII.	-	-	-	-	Ditto,	-	-	-	-	Evening.

THE FIRST BOOK OF THE CHRONICLES.

INTRODUCTION.

THE two books of Chronicles formed but one in the Hebrew canon, which was called the book of Diaries or Journals. In the Septuagint version they were called, the books of "things omitted;" and they were first named the books of Chronicles by St. Jerome. They are supposed to be designed as a kind of supplement to the preceding books of Scripture, to supply such important particulars as had been omitted, because inconsistent with the plan of former books. They are generally, and with much probability, attributed to Ezra, whose book which bears his name is written with a similar style of expression, and appears to be a continuation of them. Ezra may have compiled these books, by the assistance of Haggai and Nehemiah, from historical records, and the accounts of contemporary Prophets. The former part of the first book of Chronicles contains a great variety of genealogical tables, beginning with Adam, and in particular gives a circumstantial account of the twelve tribes, which must have been very valuable to the Jews after their return from captivity. The descendants of Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, and David, from all of whom it was predicted that the Saviour of the world should be born, are here marked with precision. These genealogies occupy the first nine chapters, and in the tenth is recorded the death of Saul. From the eleventh chapter to the end of the book, we have a history of the reign of David, with a detailed statement of his preparations for the building of the temple, of his regulations respecting the priests and Levites, and his appointment of musicians for the publick service of religion.

The books of Chronicles, though they contain many particulars related in preceding books, and supply several circumstances omitted in preceding accounts, are not to be considered merely as an abridgment of former histories, with some supplementary additions, but as books written with a particular view; in consistency with which, the author sometimes disregards important particulars in those accounts from which he might have compiled his work, and adheres to the design proposed, which seems to have been to furnish a genealogical sketch of the twelve tribes, deduced from the earliest times: in order to point out those distinctions which were necessary to discriminate the mixed multitude that returned from Babylon; to ascertain the lineage of Judah; and to reestablish on their ancient footing the pretensions and functions of each individual tribe. The authority of the books is established by the accommodation of a prophetick passage selected from it to the character of our Saviour by St. Paul, 1 Chron. xvii. 13; xxii. 10; Heb. i. 5; and by a positive prophecy of the eternity of Christ's kingdom, 1 Chron. xvii. 14, as well as by other occasional predictions, chap. xxii. 9, 10. Dr. Gray, Bp. Townline.

CHAP. I.

Before
CHRIST
4004, &c.

1 Adam's line to Noah. 5 The sons of Japheth. 8 The sons of Ham. 17 The sons of Shem. 24 Shem's line to Abraham. 29 Ishmael's sons. 32 The sons of Keturah. 34 The posterity of Abraham by Esau. 43 The kings of Edom. 51 The dukes of Edom.

^a Gen. 5.
3, 9.

ADAM, ^a Sheth, Enosh,
2 Kenan, Mahalaleel, Jered,
3 Henoch, Methuselah, Lamech,
4 Noah, Shem, Ham, and Japheth.

Chap. I. ver. 1. Adam, Sheth, &c.] As it was one of the useful designs of the following collection out of the Israelite histories, first, to uphold the great fact of the creation of the world, and the propagation of mankind as derived from the first pair; and secondly, to preserve the distinction of the Israelite tribes and families, so as to set forth to posterity the genealogy of Christ the 5 ¶ ^b The sons of Japheth; Gomer, and Magog, and Madai, and Javan, and Tubal, and Meshech, and Tiras.

6 And the sons of Gomer; Ashchenaz, and ¶ Riphath, and Togarmah.

7 And the sons of Javan; Elishah, and Tarshish, Kittim, and ¶ Dodanim.

8 ¶ The sons of Ham; Cush, and Mizraim, Put, and Canaan.

9 And the sons of Cush; Seba, and Ha-

Before
CHRIST
4004, &c.

^b Gen. 10.

2.

¶ Or,

Diphath,

as it is in some copies.

¶ Or,

Rodanim,

according to some copies.

Messiah, in the line of David, agreeably to the ancient prophecies concerning Him, and to make it appear that this genealogy of the Israelite nation has not been lost by their dispersion during the Babylonish captivity; it was thought proper to begin this book with giving an entire view of all that is necessary, in the descent of mankind in general, and of the Israelite families in particular.

<sup>Before CHRIST
4001, &c.</sup> vilah, and Sabta, and Raamah, and Sabtecha. And the sons of Raamah; Sheba, and Dedan.

<sup>Gen. 10.
9.</sup> 10 And Cush ^c begat Nimrod: he began to be mighty upon the earth.

11 And Mizraim begat Ludim, and Anamim, and Lehabim, and Naphtuhim, <sup>Deut. 2.

23.</sup> 12 And Pathrusim, and Caslulim, (of whom came the Philistines,) and ^d Caphthorim.

13 And Canaan begat Zidon his first-born, and Heth,

14 The Jebusite also, and the Amorite, and the Girgashite,

15 And the Hivite, and the Arkite, and the Sinite,

16 And the Arvadite, and the Zemarite, and the Hamathite.

<sup>Gen. 10.
23, & 11.
10.</sup> 17 ¶ The sons of ^e Shem; Elam, and Asshur, and Arphaxad, and Lud, and Aram, and Uz, and Hul, and Gether, and

<sup>Or,
Mash, Gen.
10. 23.</sup> ¶ Meshech.

18 And Arphaxad begat Shelah, and Shelah begat Eber.

<sup>That is,
Division.</sup> 19 And unto Eber were born two sons: the name of the one was ¶ Peleg; because in his days the earth was divided: and his brother's name was Joktan.

<sup>Gen. 10.
26.</sup> 20 ^f And Joktan begat Almodad, and Sheleph, and Hazarmaveth, and Jerah, 21 Hadoram also, and Uzal, and Diklah,

22 And Ebal, and Abimael, and Sheba,

23 And Ophir, and Havilah, and Jobab. All these were the sons of Joktan.

<sup>Luke 3.
24.</sup> 24 ¶ ^g Shem, Arphaxad, Shelah,

<sup>Gen. 11.
15.</sup> 25 ^h Eber, Peleg, Reu,

26 Serug, Nahor, Terah,

^{Gen. 17. 5.} 27 ⁱ Abram; the same is Abraham.

<sup>Gen. 21.
2, 3.</sup> 28 The sons of Abraham; ^k Isaac, and ^l Ishmael.

<sup>Gen. 16.
11.</sup> 29 ¶ These are their generations: The ^m firstborn of Ishmael, Nebaioth; then Kedar, and Adbeel, and Mibsam, Pyle. The author mentions only their names briefly; but, as it is to be understood at the beginning that Adam begat Sheth, Sheth begat Enos, &c. so of those which follow. Adam, it is known from Genesis, had two sons before he had Sheth; but, as one of them was murdered without issue, and the other accursed so that all his descendants perished in the flood, therefore Sheth only, and those who came from him, are mentioned. Bp. Patrick.

17. — and Uz, and Hul, &c.] These were not the sons of Shem, but his grandsons, by Aram his youngest son, as appears from Gen. x. 23. However, it is extremely common, as has been remarked before, in Scripture, to call grandsons by the name of sons. Bp. Patrick.

24. Shem, Arphaxad, &c.] These are repeated from ver. 17, 18, for the purpose of shewing how Abraham was descended from Shem, who was the most eminent of the sons of Noah, and whom

30 Mishma, and Dumah, Massa, ¶ Hadad, and Tema,

31 Jetur, Naphish, and Kedemah. These are the sons of Ishmael.

32 ¶ Now the sons of Keturah, Abraham's concubine: she bare Zimran, and Jokshan, and Medan, and Midian, and Ishbak, and Shuah. And the sons of Jokshan; Sheba, and Dedan.

33 And the sons of Midian; Ephah, and Ephher, and Henoah, and Abida, and Eldaah. All these are the sons of Keturah.

34 And Abraham begat Isaac. The sons of Isaac; Esau and Israel.

35 ¶ The sons of ⁿ Esau; Eliphaz, Reuel, and Jeush, and Jaalam, and Korah.

36 The sons of Eliphaz; Teman, and Omar, ¶ Zephi, and Gatam, Kenaz, and Timna, and Amalek.

37 The sons of Reuel; Nahath, Zerah, Shammah, and Mizzah.

38 And the sons of Seir; Lotan, and Shobal, and Zibeon, and Anah, and Dishon, and Ezar, and Dishan.

39 And the sons of Lotan; Hori, and ¶ Homam: and Timna was Lotan's sister.

40 The sons of Shobal; ¶ Alian, and Manahath, and Ebal, ¶ Shephi, and Onam. And the sons of Zibeon; Aiah, and Anah.

41 The sons of Anah; ^o Dishon. And the sons of Dishon; ¶ Amram, and Eshban, and Ithran, and Cheran.

42 The sons of Ezer; Bilhan, and Zavan, and ¶ Jakan. The sons of Dishan; Uz, and Aran.

43 ¶ Now these are the ^p kings that reigned in the land of Edom before any king reigned over the children of Israel; Bela the son of Beor: and the name of his city was Dinhabah.

44 And when Bela was dead, Jobab the son of Zerah of Bozrah reigned in his stead.

<sup>Before
CHRIST
about 1853.</sup>
¶ Or, Hadar,
Gen. 25. 14.

ⁿ Gen. 26.
9, 10.

¶ Or, Zepho,
Gen. 36.
12.

¶ Or, Heman,
Gen. 36. 22.

¶ Or,
Alvan,
Gen. 36. 23.

¶ Or, Shepho,
Gen. 36. 23.
^o Chap. 2.
31.

¶ Or, Hemdan,
Gen. 36. 26.

¶ Or, Achan,
Gen. 36. 27.
^p Gen. 36.
31.

he solemnly blessed, as the Messiah was to spring from him, Gen. ix. 26. This promise of the Messiah was transferred from Adam to Sheth, from Sheth to Shem, from Shem to Eber, from whom, as some think, the Hebrew nation derived their name, and who, above all nations in the world, had this gracious promise committed to their trust. Bp. Patrick.

36. — Timna, and Amalek.] Rather Timna-Amalek, in one word, being the name of his son by Timna his concubine. Bp. Patrick.

43. Now these are the kings that reigned] Esau's posterity, having routed the clans or tribes, changed the government into a monarchy, which lasted for a considerable time; but when the monarchy, in the turn of human affairs, was come to an end, ver. 51, they still kept up a sort of government in the country, under distinct lords or dukes over particular districts. See Gen. xxxvi. 31—43. Pyle.

Before CHRIST about 1676. 45 And when Jobab was dead, Husham of the land of the Temanites reigned in his stead.

46 And when Husham was dead, Hadad the son of Bedad, which smote Midian in the field of Moab, reigned in his stead: and the name of his city was Avith.

47 And when Hadad was dead, Samlah of Masrekah reigned in his stead.

Gen. 36. 37. 48 ^a And when Samlah was dead, Shaul of Rehoboth by the river reigned in his stead.

49 And when Shaul was dead, Baalhanan the son of Achbor reigned in his stead.

Or, Hadar, Gen. 36. 39. 50 And when Baalhanan was dead, Or, Pau, Gen. 36. 39. Hadad reigned in his stead: and the name of his city was about 1496. ^a Gen. 36. 49. Pai; and his wife's name was Mehetabel, the daughter of Matred, the daughter of Mezahab.

51 ¶ Hadad died also. And the ^r dukes of Edom were; duke Timnah, duke Aliah, duke Jetheth, 52 Duke Aholibamah, duke Elah, duke Pinon,

53 Duke Kenaz, duke Teman, duke Mibzar,

54 Duke Magdiel, duke Iram. These are the dukes of Edom.

CHAP. II.

1 The sons of Israel. 3 The posterity of Judah by Tamar. 13 The children of Jesse. 18 The posterity of Caleb the son of Hezron. 21 Hezron's posterity by the daughter of Machir. 25 Jerahmeel's posterity. 34 Sheshan's posterity. 42 Another branch of Caleb's posterity. 50 The posterity of Caleb the son of Hur.

1752, &c. THESE are the sons of ^a Israel; ^a Reuben, Simeon, Levi, and Judah, Issachar, and Zebulun, 2 Dan, Joseph, and Benjamin, Naphtali, Gad, and Asher.

Gen. 29. 32. & 30. 5. & 35. 18. 22. & 46. 8. &c. 3 ¶ The sons of ^b Judah; Er, and Onan, and Shelah: which three were born unto him of the daughter of ^c Shua the Canaanitess. And Er, the firstborn of Judah, was evil in the sight of the LORD; and he slew him.

Gen. 38. 2. 4 And ^d Tamar his daughter in law bare him Pharez and Zerah. All the sons of Judah were five.

Before CHRIST 1752, &c. 5 The sons of ^e Pharez; Hezron, and Hamul.

6 And the sons of Zerah; ^f Zimri, ^f and Ethan, and Heman, and Calcol, and ^g Dara: five of them in all.

7 And the sons of Carmi; ^h Achar, the troubler of Israel, who transgressed in the thing ⁱ accursed.

8 And the sons of Ethan; Azariah.

9 The sons also of Hezron, that were born unto him; Jerahmeel, and ^j Ram, and ^k Chelubai.

10 And Ram ^l begat Amminadab; and Amminadab begat Nahshon, prince of the children of Judah;

11 And Nahshon begat Salma, and Salma begat Boaz,

12 And Boaz begat Obed, and Obed begat Jesse,

13 ¶ ^m And Jesse begat his firstborn Eliab, and Abinadab the second, and ⁿ Shimma the third,

14 Nethaneel the fourth, Raddai the fifth,

15 Ozem the sixth, David the seventh:

16 Whose sisters were Zeruiah, and Abigail. And the sons of Zeruiah; Abishai, and Joab, and Asahel, three.

17 And Abigail bare Amasa: and the father of Amasa was Jether the Ishmeelite.

18 ¶ And Caleb the son of Hezron begat children of Azubah his wife, and of Jerioth: her sons are these; Jesher, and Shobab, and Ardon.

19 And when Azubah was dead, Caleb took unto him Ephrath, which bare him Hur.

20 And Hur begat Uri, and Uri begat ^o Bezaleel.

21 ¶ And afterward Hezron went in to the daughter of Machir the father of Gilead, whom he ^p married when he was threescore years old; and she bare him Segub.

22 And Segub begat Jair, who had three and twenty cities in the land of Gilead.

23 ^q And he took Geshur, and Aram, with the towns of Jair, from them, with Kenath, and the towns thereof, even threescore cities. All these belonged to the sons of Machir the father of Gilead.

24 And after that Hezron was dead in Chap. II. ver. 15. — David the seventh:] It appears from 1 Sam. xvi. 10, 11, that David was at that time the eighth son of Jesse. It is probable that one of the sons was dead before he came to the kingdom.

18. — Caleb the son of Hezron] It is evident that this is not Caleb whom Moses sent to search out the land of Canaan, for he was the son of Jephunneh, of whom an account is given below at chap. iv. 15. This person is called Chelubai at ver. 9 of this chapter. Bp. Patrick.

Before
CHRIST
about 1471.

Caleb-ephratah, then Abiah Hezron's wife bare him Ashur the father of Tekoa.

25 ¶ And the sons of Jerahmeel the firstborn of Hezron were, Ram the firstborn, and Bunah, and Oren, and Ozem, and Ahijah.

26 Jerahmeel had also another wife, whose name was Atarah; she was the mother of Onam.

27 And the sons of Ram the firstborn of Jerahmeel were, Maaz, and Jamin, and Eker.

28 And the sons of Onam were, Shammai, and Jada. And the sons of Shammai; Nadab, and Abishur.

29 And the name of the wife of Abishur was Abihail, and she bare him Ahban, and Molid.

30 And the sons of Nadab; Seled, and Appaim: but Seled died without children.

31 And the sons of Appaim; Ishi. And the sons of Ishi; Sheshan. And the children of Sheshan; Ahlai.

32 And the sons of Jada the brother of Shammai; Jether, and Jonathan: and Jether died without children.

33 And the sons of Jonathan; Peleth, and Zaza. These were the sons of Jerahmeel.

34 ¶ Now Sheshan had no sons, but daughters. And Sheshan had a servant, an Egyptian, whose name was Jarha.

35 And Sheshan gave his daughter to Jarha his servant to wife; and she bare him Attai.

36 And Attai begat Nathan, and Nathan begat ^m Zabad,

37 And Zabad begat Ephlal, and Ephlal begat Obed,

38 And Obed begat Jehu, and Jehu begat Azariah,

39 And Azariah begat Helez, and Helez begat Eleasah,

40 And Eleasah begat Sisamai, and Sisamai begat Shallum, 41 And Shallum begat Jekamiah, and Jekamiah begat Elishama.

42 ¶ Now the sons of Caleb the brother of Jerahmeel were, Mesha his firstborn, which was the father of Ziph; and the sons of Mareshah the father of Hebron.

43 And the sons of Hebron; Korah, and Tappuah, and Rekem, and Shema.

44 And Shema begat Raham, the father of Jorkoam: and Rekem begat Shammai.

45 And the son of Shammai was Maon: and Maon was the father of Beth-zur.

46 And Ephah, Caleb's concubine, bare Haran, and Moza, and Gazez: and Haran begat Gazez.

47 And the sons of Jahdai; Regem, and Jotham, and Gesham, and Pelet, and Ephah, and Shaaph.

48 Maachah, Caleb's concubine, bare Sheber, and Tirhanah.

49 She bare also Shaaph the father of Madmannah, Sheva the father of Machbenah, and the father of Gibeaz: and the daughter of Caleb was ^a Achsa.

50 ¶ These were the sons of Caleb the son of Hur, the firstborn of Ephratah; Shobal the father of Kirjath-jearim, 51 Salma the father of Beth-lehem, Haraph the father of Beth-gader.

52 And Shobal the father of Kirjath-jearim had sons; ¶ Haroeh, and ¶ half of the Manahethites.

53 And the families of Kirjath-jearim; the Ithrites, and the Puhites, and the Shumathites, and the Mishraites; of them came the Zareathites, and the Eshtaulites.

54 The sons of Salma; Beth-lehem, and the Netophathites, ¶ Ataroth, the house of Joab, and half of the Manahethites, the Zorites.

55 And the families of the scribes which dwelt at Jabez; the Tirathites, the Shimethites, and Suchathites. These are the ^o Kenites that came of Hemath, the father of the house of ^p Rechab.

CHAP. III.

1 The sons of David. 10 His line to Zedekiah. 17 The successors of Jeconiah.

NOW these were the sons of David, which were born unto him in Hebron; the firstborn ^a Amnon, of Ahinoam the ^b Jezreelitess; the second ¶ Daniel, of Abigail the Carmelitess:

2 The third, Absalom the son of Maachah the daughter of Talmai king of Geshur: the fourth, Adonijah the son of Haggith:

3 The fifth, Shephatiah of Abital: the sixth, Ithream by ^c Eglah his wife.

4 These six were born unto him in Hebron; and there he reigned seven years and six months: and in Jerusalem he reigned thirty and three years.

5 ^d And these were born unto him in Jerusalem; ¶ Shimea, and Shobab, and Nathan, and Solomon, four, of ¶ Bath-shua the daughter of ¶ Ammiel:

6 Ibhar also, and ¶ Elishama, and Eliphelet,

7 And Nogah, and Nepheg, and Japhia, 8 And Elishama, and ¶ Eliada, and Eliphelet, nine.

Before
CHRIST
1471, &c.

^a Josh. 15.
17.

¶ Or, Reaiak,
chap. 4. 2.
¶ Or, half of the Menuchites, or, Hutsi-hammenu-choth.

¶ Or, Atarites, or,
crowns of the house of Joab.

^o Judges 1.
16.
^p Jer. 35. 2.

^m Chap. 11.
41.

about 1471, &c.

about 1053, &c.

^a 2 Sam. 3.
2.
^b Josh. 15.
56.

¶ Or, Chileah,
2 Sam. 3. 3.

^c 2 Sam. 5.
5.

^d 2 Sam. 5.
14.

¶ Or, Shammua,
2 Sam. 5.
14.

¶ Or, Bathsheba,
2 Sam. 11. 3.

¶ Or, Eliam,
2 Sam. 11. 3.

¶ Or, Eli-shua,
2 Sam. 5. 15.

¶ Or, Beeli-
ada, chap.
14. 7.

Before CHRIST 1055, &c.
 2 Sam. 13. 1.
 1 Kings 11. 43. & 15. 6.
 Or, Abijah,
 1 Kings 15. 1.
 Or, Azariah,
 2 Chron. 22. 6. & 21. 17.
 Or, Uziah,
 2 Kings 15. 30.
 Or, Jehoiachin,
 2 Kings 23. 30.
 Or, Eliakim,
 2 Kings 23. 34.
 Or, Mal-taniah,
 2 Kings 24. 17.
 Matt. 1. 11.
 Or, Jehoiachin,
 2 Kings 24. 6. or, Coniah,
 Jer. 22. 24. a 2 Kings 24. 17. being his uncle.
 † Heb. Shealtiel.
 1 Matt. 1. 12.

9 These were all the sons of David, beside the sons of the concubines, and Tamar their sister.

10 ¶ And Solomon's son was Rehoboam, Abia his son, Asa his son, Jehoshaphat his son,

11 Joram his son, Ahaziah his son, Joash his son,

12 Amaziah his son, Azariah his son, Jotham his son,

13 Ahaz his son, Hezekiah his son, Manasseh his son,

14 Amon his son, Josiah his son.

15 And the sons of Josiah were, the first-born Jehoiakim, the second Jehoiakim, the third Zedekiah, the fourth Shallum.

16 And the sons of Jehoiakim: Jeconiah his son, Zedekiah his son.

17 ¶ And the sons of Jeconiah; Assir, † Salathiel his son, 18 Malchiram also, and Pedaiiah, and Shenazar, Jecamiah, Hoshama, and Neda-biah.

19 And the sons of Pedaiiah were, Zerubbabel, and Shimei: and the sons of Zerubbabel; Meshullam, and Hananiah, and Shelomith their sister:

20 And Hashubah, and Ohel, and Berechiah, and Hasadiah, Jushab-hesed, five.

21 And the sons of Hananiah; Pelatiah, and Jesaiiah: the sons of Rephaiah, the sons of Arnan, the sons of Obadiah, the sons of Shechaniah.

22 And the sons of Shechaniah; She-maiah: and the sons of Shemaiah; Hattush, and Igeal, and Bariah, and Neariah, and Shaphat, six.

23 And the sons of Neariah; Elieonai, and † Hezekiah, and Azrikam, three.

24 And the sons of Elieonai were, Hodaiah, and Eliashib, and Pelaiah, and Akkub, and Johanan, and Dalaiah, and Anani, seven.

CHAP. IV.

1, 11 The posterity of Judah by Caleb the son of Hur.

5 Of Ashur the posthumous son of Hezron. 9 Of Jabez, and his prayer. 21 The posterity of Shelah.

24 The posterity and cities of Simeon. 39 Their conquest of Gedor, and of the Amalekites in mount Seir.

THE sons of Judah; Pharez, Hezron, and Carmi, and Hur, and Shobal.

2 And Reaiah the son of Shobal begat Jahath; and Jahath begat Ahumai, and Lahad. These are the families of the Zorathites.

3 And these were of the father of Etam; Jezreel, and Ishma, and Idbash: and the name of their sister was Hazeleponi:

4 And Penuel the father of Gedor, and Ezer the father of Hushah. These are the sons of Hur, the firstborn of Ephratah, the father of Beth-lehem.

5 ¶ And Ashur the father of Tekoa had two wives, Helah and Naarah.

6 And Naarah bare him Ahuzam, and Hephher, and Temeni, and Haahashtari. These were the sons of Naarah.

7 And the sons of Helah were, Zereth, and Jezoar, and Ethnan.

8 And Coz begat Anub, and Zobebah, and the families of Aharhel the son of Harum.

9 ¶ And Jabez was more honourable than his brethren: and his mother called his name Jabez, saying, Because I bare him with sorrow.

10 And Jabez called on the God of Israel, saying, Oh that thou wouldest bless me indeed, and enlarge my coast, and that thine hand might be with me, and that thou wouldest keep me from evil, that it may not grieve me! And God granted him that which he requested.

11 ¶ And Chelub the brother of Shuah begat Mehir, which was the father of Eshton.

12 And Eshton begat Beth-rapha, and Paseah, and Tehinnah the father of Ir-nahash. These are the men of Rechab.

13 And the sons of Kenaz; Othniel, and Seraiah: and the sons of Othniel; Hathath.

14 And Meonothai begat Ophrah: and Seraiah begat Joab, the father of the valley of Charashim; for they were craftsmen.

15 And the sons of Caleb the son of Jephunneh; Iru, Elah, and Naam: and the sons of Elah, even Kenaz.

16 And the sons of Jehaleleel; Ziph, and Ziphah, Tiria, and Asareel.

17 And the sons of Ezra were, Jether, and Mered, and Ephraim, and Jalon: and she bare Miriam, and Shammai, and Ishbah the father of Eshtemoa.

18 And his wife Jehudijah bare Jered the father of Gedor, and Heber the father of Socho, and Jekuthiel the father of Zanoah. And these are the sons of Bithiah the daughter of Pharaoh, which Mered took.

Before CHRIST 1300, &c.

Chap. 2. 24.

That is, sorrowful.

† Heb. If thou wilt, &c.

† Heb. do me.

Or, the city of Nahash.

Or, Hathath, and Meonothai, who begat, &c.

Or, inhabitants of the valley. That is, craftsmen.

Or, Uknaz.

Or, the Jewess.

Before
CHRIST
1300, &c.

Or, Jehudijah,
mentioned
before.

* Gen. 38,
1, 5.

Or, Jemuel,
Gen. 46. 10.
Exod. 6. 15.

† Heb.
unt.
* Josh. 19. 2.

Or,
Balak,
Josh. 19. 3.

Or,
Eltanah,
Josh. 19. 4.

Or, Hazar-susim,
Josh. 19. 5.

Or, Ether,
Josh. 19. 7.

Or, Hathath-
teer,
Josh. 19. 8.

Or,
as they divided themselves by nations among them.

19 And the sons of his wife || Hodiah the sister of Naham, the father of Keilah the Garmite, and Eshtemoa the Maachathite.

20 And the sons of Shimon were, Amnon, and Rinnah, Ben-hanan, and Tilon. And the sons of Ishi were, Zoheth, and Ben-zoheth.

21 ¶ The sons of Shelah * the son of Judah were, Er the father of Lecah, and Laadah the father of Mareshah, and the families of the house of them that wrought fine linen, of the house of Ashbea, 22 And Jokim, and the men of Chozeba, and Joash, and Saraph, who had the dominion in Moab, and Jashubi-lehem. And these are ancient things.

23 These were the potters, and those that dwelt among plants and hedges: there they dwelt with the king for his work.

24 ¶ The sons of Simeon were, || Nemuel, and Jamin, Jarib, Zerah, and Shaul:

25 Shallum his son, Mibsam his son, Mishma his son.

26 And the sons of Mishma; Hamuel his son, Zacchur his son, Shimei his son.

27 And Shimei had sixteen sons and six daughters; but his brethren had not many children, neither did all their family multiply, † like to the children of Judah.

28 And they dwelt at † Beer-sheba, and Moladah, and Hazar-shual,

29 And at || Bilhah, and at Ezem, and at || Tolad,

30 And at Bethuel, and at Hormah, and at Ziklag,

31 And at Beth-marcaboth, and || Hazar-susim, and at Beth-birei, and at Shaaraim. These were their cities unto the reign of David.

32 And their villages were, || Etam, and Ain, Rimmon, and Tochen, and Ashan, five cities:

33 And all their villages that were round about the same cities, unto || Baal. These were their habitations, and || their genealogy.

34 And Meshobab, and Jamlech, and Joshah the son of Amaziah,

35 And Joel, and Jehu the son of Josiabiah, the son of Seraiah, the son of Asiel,

36 And Elioenai, and Jaakobah, and Jeshohaiah, and Asaiah, and Adiel, and Jesimiel, and Benaiah, 37 And Ziza the son of Shiphi, the son of Allon, the son of Jedaiah, the son of Shimri, the son of Shemaiah;

38 These † mentioned by their names were princes in their families: and the house of their fathers increased greatly.

39 ¶ And they went to the entrance of Gedor, even unto the east side of the valley, to seek pasture for their flocks. about 715

40 And they found fat pasture and good, and the land was wide, and quiet, and peaceable; for they of Ham had dwelt there of old.

41 And these written by name came in the days of Hezekiah king of Judah, and smote their tents, and the habitations that were found there, and destroyed them utterly unto this day, and dwelt in their rooms: because there was pasture there for their flocks.

42 And some of them, even of the sons of Simeon, five hundred men, went to mount Seir, having for their captains Pelatiah, and Neariah, and Rephaiah, and Uzziel, the sons of Ishi.

43 And they smote the rest of the Amalekites that were escaped, and dwelt there unto this day.

CHAP. V.

1 The line of Reuben (who lost his birthright) unto the captivity. 9 Their habitation and conquest of the Hagrites. 11 The chief men and habitations of Gad. 18 The number and conquest of Reuben, Gad, and the half of Manasseh. 23 The habitations and chief men of that half tribe. 25 Their captivity for their sin.

NOW the sons of Reuben the firstborn of Israel, (for he was the firstborn; but, forasmuch as he † defiled his father's bed, † Gen. 35. his birthright was given unto the sons of 1300, &c.

Before
CHRIST

† Heb.
coming.

about 715

1300, &c.

† Gen. 35.

† 22, & 49. 4.

Chap. IV. ver. 39. — the entrance of Gedor.] There was a place of this name belonged to Judah, mentioned at Josh. xv. 58, and another called Gederah, appertaining to the same tribe, mentioned at ver. 36 of the same chapter; out of which perhaps Judah had not driven the old inhabitants. But from the circumstance mentioned in the next verse, that "they of Ham had dwelt there of old," Bochart was inclined to think that Gedor is some place in Arabia, where, as he demonstrates, some of the posterity of Ham settled. Bp. Patrick.

41. And they written by name &c.] Their names were recorded at ver. 34—37: now the time is mentioned when the events took place, in the reign of Hezekiah king of Judah, that is, as some understand it, a little before the ten tribes were carried into captivity, or rather perhaps some time after it, when these Simeonites who were mixed with Judah, finding themselves much straitened, engaged in this expedition. Bp. Patrick.

42. And some of them, — went to mount Seir.] They settled themselves in the country of the Edomites, near mount Seir, being forced to seek for subsistence abroad, either when the Assyrians invaded their country, or after that event. They then smote the Amalekites that were escaped, that is, who remained after the destruction of their nation by Saul and David; and they "dwelt there unto this day," the king of Babylon not disturbing them in their new possessions. Bp. Patrick.

Before CHRIST 1300, &c. Joseph the son of Israel: and the genealogy is not to be reckoned after the birthright.
 1 Gen. 49. 2 For ^bJudah prevailed above his brethren, and of him ^ccame the chief || ruler; but the birthright was Joseph's:)

9, 10. 3 The sons, I say, of ^dReuben the first-born of Israel were, Hanoch, and Pallu, ^eHezron, and Carmi.

4 The sons of Joel; Shemaiah his son, Gog his son, Shimei his son,

5 Micah his son, Reaia his son, Baal his son,

6 Beerah his son, whom || Tilgath-pilneser king of Assyria carried away captive: he was prince of the Reubenites.

7 And his brethren by their families, when the genealogy of their generations was reckoned, were the chief, Jeiel, and Zechariah,

8 And Bela the son of Azaz, the son of || Shema, the son of Joel, who dwelt in ^cAroer, even unto Nebo and Baal-meon:

9 And eastward he inhabited unto the entering in of the wilderness from the river Euphrates: because their cattle were multiplied in the land of Gilead.

10 And in the days of Saul they made war with the Hagarites, who fell by their hand: and they dwelt in their tents [†]throughout all the east land of Gilead.

11 ¶ And the children of Gad dwelt over against them, in the land of ^fBashan unto Salcah:

12 Joel the chief, and Shapham the next, and Jaanai, and Shaphat in Bashan.

13 And their brethren of the house of their fathers were, Michael, and Meshullam, and Sheba, and Jorai, and Jachan, and Zia, and Heber, seven.

14 These are the children of Abihail the son of Huri, the son of Jaroah, the son of Gilead, the son of Michael, the son of Jeshishai, the son of Jahdo, the son of Buz;

15 Ahi the son of Abdiel, the son of Guni, chief of the house of their fathers.

16 And they dwelt in Gilead in Bashan, and in her towns, and in all the suburbs of ^gSharon, upon [†]their borders.

17 All these were reckoned by genealogies in the days of ^hJotham king of Judah, and in the days of Jeroboam king of Israel.

18 ¶ The sons of Reuben, and the Gad-ites, and half the tribe of Manasseh, [†]of valiant men, men able to bear buckler and sword, and to shoot with bow, and skilful in war, were four and forty thousand seven hundred and threescore, that went out to the war.

19 And they made war with the Hagarites, with ⁱJetur, and Nephish, and Nodab.

20 And they were helped against them, and the Hagarites were delivered into their hand, and all that were with them: for they cried to God in the battle, and he was intreated of them; because they put their trust in him.

21 And they [†]took away their cattle; of their camels fifty thousand, and of sheep two hundred and fifty thousand, and of asses two thousand, and of [†]men an hundred thousand.

22 For there fell down many slain, because the war was of God. And they dwelt in their steads until the captivity.

23 ¶ And the children of the half tribe of Manasseh dwelt in the land: they increased from Bashan unto Baal-hermon and Senir, and unto mount Hermon.

24 And these were the heads of the house of their fathers, even Ephraim, and Ishi, and Eliel, and Azriel, and Jeremiah, and Hodaviah, and Jahdiel, mighty men of valour, [†]famous men, and heads of the house of their fathers.

25 ¶ And they transgressed against the God of their fathers, and went a ^kwhoring after the gods of the people of the land, whom God destroyed before them.

26 And the God of Israel stirred up the spirit of ^lPul king of Assyria, and the spirit

Before CHRIST 1300, &c.

2 Chap. 27.

29.

† Heb.

their goings;

forth.

2 Kings

15 5, 32.

† Heb

sons of valour.

1 Gen. 25.

15.

† Heb.

led captive.

† Heb.

souls of men, as

Numb. 31.

25.

† Heb.

men of names.

* 2 Kings

17. 7.

about 771.

2 Kings

15. 19.

† Heb. upon all the face of the east
† Josh. 13.
11.

Chap. V. ver. 2. — but the birthright was Joseph's:) As Reuben was the eldest son of Jacob, his posterity were, in course, to have enjoyed the privileges of seniority; but he having forfeited that claim by a crime against his father, the double portion which he would have received was given to the two sons of Joseph. Still the dignity and preeminence were allotted to the famous tribe of Judah. In this tribe was to be seen the long succession of princes, and rulers, and out of this was promised the greatest of all princes, the Messiah. And this is the reason why Judah's genealogy was here first set down before those of either Reuben or Joseph. Pyle.

3. The sons, — of Reuben] Among the sons of Reuben succeeded the following persons, who in their several ages were the heads of the tribe; for all in the succession are not mentioned. Pyle.

9. — the entering in of the wilderness from the river Euphrates:] The entrance of the wilderness of Kedemoth, Deut. ii. 26, which extended "from the river Euphrates." Bp. Patrick.

10. — the Hagarites.] The Ishmaelites descended from Hagar, who inhabited Arabia Deserta.

17. All these were reckoned] The short abstract here made of their genealogies is taken out of the public registers, or muster-rolls, made of this tribe, the one in the reign of Jeroboam, and the other in that of Jotham. Pyle.

25. And they transgressed &c.] These, together with the other Eastern tribes, being probably the first beginners of the national apostasy from the religion of the true God, and the ringleaders to epidemical idolatry, were the first who, in the just course of Providence, were delivered up to the arms of the Assyrian monarchs, in whose territories they lie scattered up and down to this day. Pyle.

Before
CHRIST
about 710.

^m 2 Kings
17. 6.

of Tilgath-pilneser king of Assyria, and he carried them away, even the Reubenites, and the Gadites, and the half tribe of Manasseh, and brought them unto ^m Halah, and Habor, and Hara, and to the river Gozan, unto this day.

CHAP. VI.

1 The sons of Levi. 4 The line of the priests unto the captivity. 16 The families of Gershom, Merari, and Kohath. 49 The office of Aaron, and his line unto Ahimaaz. 54 The cities of the priests and Levites.

about
1300, &c.
^a Gen. 46.
11.
Exod. 6. 16.
|| Or,
Gershom,
ver. 16.

^b Lev. 10. 1.

^c 2 Sam. 15.
27.

† Heb.
in the house.
^d 1 Kings 6.
2 Chron. 3.

|| Or,
Shallum,
chap. 9. 11.

^e Neh. 11.
11.

^f 2 Kings
25. 18.

THE sons of Levi; ^a || Gershom, Kohath, and Merari.

2 And the sons of Kohath; Amram, Izhar, and Hebron, and Uzziel.

3 And the children of Amram; Aaron, and Moses, and Miriam. The sons also of Aaron; ^b Nadab, and Abihu, Eleazar, and Ithamar.

4 ¶ Eleazar begat Phinehas, Phinehas begat Abishua,

5 And Abishua begat Bukki, and Bukki begat Uzzi,

6 And Uzzi begat Zerahiah, and Zerahiah begat Meraioth,

7 Meraioth begat Amariah, and Amariah begat Ahitub,

8 And Ahitub begat Zadok, and ^c Zadok begat Ahimaaz,

9 And Ahimaaz begat Azariah, and Azariah begat Johanan,

10 And Johanan begat Azariah, (he it is that executed the priest's office [†] in the ^d temple that Solomon built in Jerusalem:)

11 And Azariah begat Amariah, and Amariah begat Ahitub,

12 And Ahitub begat Zadok, and Zadok begat || Shallum,

13 And Shallum begat Hilkiyah, and Hilkiyah begat Azariah, 14 And Azariah begat ^e Seraiah, and Seraiah begat Jehozadak,

15 And Jehozadak went into captivity, ^f when the LORD carried away Judah and Jerusalem by the hand of Nebuchadnezzar.

16 ¶ The sons of Levi; ^e || Gershom, Kohath, and Merari. Before
CHRIST
1300, &c.

17 And these be the names of the sons of Gershom; Libni, and Shimei. ^e Exod. 6.
16.
|| Or, Gershom,
verse 1.

18 And the sons of Kohath were, Amram, and Izhar, and Hebron, and Uzziel.

19 The sons of Merari; Mahli, and Mushi. And these are the families of the Levites according to their fathers.

20 Of Gershom; Libni his son, Jahath his son, ^h Zimmah his son, ^h Verse 42.

21 || Joah his son, || Iddo his son, Zerah his son, Jeaterai his son. || Or,
Ethan,
verse 42.

22 The sons of Kohath; || Amminadab his son, Korah his son, Assir his son, || Or,
Adaiah,
verse 41.

23 Elkanah his son, and Ebiasaph his son, and Assir his son, || Or,
Izhar,
ver. 2, 18.

24 Tahath his son, Uriel his son, Uzziel his son, and Shaul his son.

25 And the sons of Elkanah; ⁱ Amasai, and Ahimoth. ⁱ See ver.
35, 36.

26 As for Elkanah: the sons of Elkanah; || Zophai his son, and Nahath his son, || Or,
Zuph,
1 Sam. 1. 1.

27 Eliab his son, Jeroham his son, Elkanah his son.

28 And the sons of Samuel; the first-born || Vashni, and Abiah. || Called also Joel, verse 33.
& 1 Sam.
8. 2.

29 The sons of Merari; Mahli, Libni his son, Shimei his son, Uzza his son, 30 Shimei his son, Haggiah his son, Asaiah his son.

31 And these are they whom David set over the service of song in the house of the LORD, after that the ^k ark had rest. about
1280, &c.

32 And they ministered before the dwelling place of the tabernacle of the congregation with singing, until Solomon had built the house of the LORD in Jerusalem: and then they waited on their office according to their order. ^k Chap. 16.
1.

33 And these are they that [†] waited with their children. Of the sons of the Kohathites: Heman a singer, the son of Joel, the son of Shemuel, † Heb.
stood.

34 The son of Elkanah, the son of Jeroham, the son of Eliel, the son of Toah, Chap. VI. ver. 1. The sons of Levi;] The genealogy of Levi divides itself into the branches derived from the three sons of that patriarch, whose posterity were appropriated to the holy services of the tabernacle and temple. The chief heads, in the lines of their several families, are here set down, as recorded in the foregoing books of the sacred history, with such alterations and diversity of names, as length of time, or the manner and custom of the Hebrews, may be supposed to have produced, and such addition of particulars, as the design of this historical collection required. Pyle.

31. And these are they whom David set &c.] Out of these Levites David, as soon as he had settled the ark at Jerusalem, chose a considerable number to be singers at the publick worship. He divided them into three principal classes, electing a certain number out of each line of the sons of Levi, with a chief master of the choir at the head of each class. To these he assigned their several distinct places at the tabernacle. The first class was of the family of the famous Samuel, (Shemuel, ver. 33,) who was of the line of Kohath, with Heman at their head. The second class of the family of Gershom, with Asaph for their chief. The third of the line of Merari, with Ethan at their head. In this order they continued in the tabernacle-service under David, and afterwards in the temple built by Solomon. Pyle.

Before
CHRIST
1290, &c.

35 The son of Zuph, the son of Elkanah, the son of Mahath, the son of Amasai, 36 The son of Elkanah, the son of Joel, the son of Azariah, the son of Zephaniah,

37 The son of Tahath, the son of Assir, the son of ¹Ebiasaph, the son of Korah, 38 The son of Izhar, the son of Kohath, the son of Levi, the son of Israel.

39 And his brother Asaph, who stood on his right hand, even Asaph the son of Bera-chiah, the son of Shimea,

40 The son of Michael, the son of Baaseiah, the son of Malchiah,

41 The son of Ethni, the son of Zerah, the son of Adaiah,

42 The son of Ethan, the son of Zim-mah, the son of Shimei, 43 The son of Jahath, the son of Gershom, the son of Levi.

44 And their brethren the sons of Merari stood on the left hand: Ethan the son of ^{||}Kishi, the son of Abdi, the son of Mal-luch,

45 The son of Hashabiah, the son of Amaziah, the son of Hilkiah,

46 The son of Amzi, the son of Bani, the son of Shamer,

47 The son of Mahli, the son of Mushi, the son of Merari, the son of Levi.

48 Their brethren also the Levites were appointed unto all manner of service of the tabernacle of the house of God.

1444, &c.

49 ¶ But Aaron and his sons offered ^m upon the altar of the burnt offering, and ⁿ on the altar of incense, and were appointed for all the work of the place most holy, and to make an atonement for Israel, according to all that Moses the servant of God had commanded.

^m Lev. 1. 9.
ⁿ Exod. 30. 7.

50 And these are the sons of Aaron; Eleazar his son, Phinehas his son, Abishua his son,

51 Bukki his son, Uzzi his son, Zerahiah his son,

52 Meraioth his son, Amariah his son, Ahitub his son, 53 Zadok his son, Ahimaaz his son.

54 ¶ Now these are their dwelling places throughout their castles in their coasts, of

Before
CHRIST
1444, &c.

the sons of Aaron, of the families of the Kohathites: for their's was the lot.

55 And they gave them Hebron in the land of Judah, and the suburbs thereof round about it.

56 But the fields of the city, and the villages thereof, they gave to Caleb the son of Jephunneh.

57 And to the sons of Aaron they gave the cities of Judah, namely, Hebron, the city of refuge, and Libnah with her suburbs, and Jattir, and Eshtemoa, with their sub-urbs,

58 And ^{||}Hilen with her suburbs, Debir with her suburbs,

59 And ^{||}Ashan with her suburbs, and Beth-shemesh with her suburbs:

60 And out of the tribe of Benjamin; Geba with her suburbs, and ^{||}Alemeth with her suburbs, and Anathoth with her sub-urbs. All their cities throughout their families were thirteen cities.

61 And unto the sons of Kohath, which were left of the family of that tribe, were cities given out of the half tribe, namely, out of the half tribe of Manasseh, ^o by lot, ten cities.

62 And to the sons of Gershom throughout their families out of the tribe of Issachar, and out of the tribe of Asher, and out of the tribe of Naphtali, and out of the tribe of Manasseh in Bashan, thirteen cities.

63 Unto the sons of Merari were given by lot, throughout their families, out of the tribe of Reuben, and out of the tribe of Gad, and out of the tribe of Zebulun, twelve cities.

64 And the children of Israel gave to the Levites these cities with their suburbs.

65 And they gave by lot out of the tribe of the children of Judah, and out of the tribe of the children of Simeon, and out of the tribe of the children of Benjamin, these cities, which are called by their names.

66 And the residue of the families of the sons of Kohath had cities of their coasts out of the tribe of Ephraim.

67 ^a And they gave unto them, of the ci- ties of refuge, Shechem in mount Ephraim lon, Josh.

^{||} Or, Ho-
21. 15.

^{||} Or, Ain,
Josh. 21.
16.

^{||} Or,
Almon,
Josh. 21.
18.

^o Josh. 21.
8.

^p Josh. 21.
7, 34.

^a Josh. 21.
21.

49. But Aaron and his sons] As it was the prerogative of Aaron's family to be appointed to the higher office of offering up incense and sacrifices upon God's altar, the priests in the great court, and the high priest in the most holy place, as appointed by the law of Moses; so from Aaron, the first anointed high priest for the tabernacle, to the time of David, (whose succession is the principal subject of this history,) there were twelve high priests in the line of Eleazar, as is here named. Pyle.

60. — were thirteen cities.] The whole number was thirteen: eleven only are mentioned here; two more, Juttah and Gibeon, being added at Josh. xxi. 16, 17. Bp. Patrick.

61. And unto the sons of Kohath,] The names of the Levitical cities follow to the end of the chapter, the same as in Josh. xxi. with such allowances for the alteration or different pronunciation of the names of places, as length of time naturally produces in all languages and countries. Pyle.

Before
CHRIST
1001, &c.

with her suburbs; they gave also Gezer with her suburbs,

68 And Jokmeam with her suburbs, and Beth-horon with her suburbs,

69 And Aijalon with her suburbs, and Gath-rimmon with her suburbs:

70 And out of the half tribe of Manassch; Aner with her suburbs, and Bileam with her suburbs, for the family of the remnant of the sons of Kohath.

71 Unto the sons of Gershom were given out of the family of the half tribe of Manassch, Golan in Bashan with her suburbs, and Ashtaroth with her suburbs:

72 And out of the tribe of Issachar; Kedesh with her suburbs, Daberath with her suburbs,

73 And Ramoth with her suburbs, and Anem with her suburbs:

74 And out of the tribe of Asher; Mashal with her suburbs, and Abdon with her suburbs,

75 And Hukok with her suburbs, and Rehob with her suburbs:

76 And out of the tribe of Naphtali; Kedesh in Galilee with her suburbs, and Hammon with her suburbs, and Kirjathaim with her suburbs.

77 Unto the rest of the children of Merari were given out of the tribe of Zebulun, Rimmon with her suburbs, Tabor with her suburbs:

78 And on the other side Jordan by Jericho, on the east side of Jordan, were given them out of the tribe of Reuben, || Bezer in the wilderness with her suburbs, and Jahzah with her suburbs,

79 Kedemoth also with her suburbs, and Mephaath with her suburbs:

80 And out of the tribe of Gad; Ramoth in Gilead with her suburbs, and Mahanaim with her suburbs, 81 And Heshbon with her suburbs, and Jazer with her suburbs.

CHAP. VII.

1 The sons of Issachar, 6 of Benjamin, 13 of Naphtali, 14 of Manassch, 20, 24 and of Ephraim. 21 The calamity of Ephraim by the men of Gath. 23 Beriah is born. 28 Ephraim's habitations. 30 The sons of Asher.

Chap. VII. ver. 6. The sons of Benjamin; — three.] In the next chapter, ver. 1, 2, five sons of Benjamin are mentioned. They were ten in all, as we read at Gen. xlv. 21. Thus either five of them died without issue, or their families were extinct, or their genealogies lost. Bp. Patrick.

12. — and Hushim, the sons of Aher.] The word Aher signifies "another" in Hebrew; whence these words admit of being

NOW the sons of Issachar were, ^a Tola, and Paah, Jashub, and Shimrom, four. ^{Before CHRIST 1444, &c.}

2 And the sons of Tola; Uzzi, and Rephaiah, and Jeriel, and Jahmai, and Jibsam, and Shemuel, heads of their father's house, to wit, of Tola: they were valiant men of might in their generations; ^b whose number was in the days of David two and twenty thousand and six hundred. ^{Gen. 46. 13. Numb. 26. 23.}

3 And the sons of Uzzi; Izrahiah: and the sons of Izrahiah; Michael, and Obadiah, and Joel, Ishiah, five: all of them chief men. ^{b 2 Sam. 24. 1, 2.}

4 And with them, by their generations, after the house of their fathers, were bands of soldiers for war, six and thirty thousand men: for they had many wives and sons.

5 And their brethren among all the families of Issachar were valiant men of might, reckoned in all by their genealogies fourscore and seven thousand.

6 ¶ The sons of ^c Benjamin; Bela, and Becher, and Jediael, three. ^{c Gen. 46. 21.}

7 And the sons of Bela; Ezbon, and Uzzi, and Uzziel, and Jerimoth, and Iri, five; heads of the house of their fathers, mighty men of valour; and were reckoned by their genealogies twenty and two thousand and thirty and four.

8 And the sons of Becher; Zemira, and Joash, and Eliezer, and Elioenai, and Omri, and Jerimoth, and Abiah, and Anathoth, and Alameth. All these are the sons of Becher.

9 And the number of them, after their genealogy by their generations, heads of the house of their fathers, mighty men of valour, was twenty thousand and two hundred.

10 The sons also of Jediael; Bilhan: and the sons of Bilhan; Jeush, and Benjamin, and Ehud, and Chenaanah, and Zethan, and Tharshish, and Ahishahar.

11 All these the sons of Jediael, by the heads of their fathers, mighty men of valour, were seventeen thousand and two hundred soldiers, fit to go out for war and battle.

12 Shuppim also, and Huppim, the children of || Ir, and Hushim, the sons of || Aher. ^{|| Or, Ir, verse 7. || Or, Aherant. Numb. 26. 28.}

translated, "Hushim, son of another tribe or family," meaning the tribe of Dan; for Hushim is mentioned as his only son, Gen. xlv. 23; and, unless the tribe of Dan is mentioned here, it is wholly omitted in these genealogies, which is very improbable; and this is the most proper place for mentioning that tribe, before Naphtali, the brother of Dan by the same mother, Bilhah. Bp. Patrick, Dr. Wells, Pyle.

Before CHRIST 1444, &c. 13 ¶ The sons of Naphtali; Jahziel, and Guni, and Jezer, and Shallum, the sons of Bilhah.

14 ¶ The sons of Manasseh; Ashriel, whom she bare: (but his concubine the Aramitess bare Machir the father of Gilead:

15 And Machir took to wife the sister of Huppim and Shuppim, whose sister's name was Maachah;) and the name of the second was Zelophehad: and Zelophehad had daughters.

16 And Maachah the wife of Machir bare a son, and she called his name Peresh; and the name of his brother was Sheresh; and his sons were Ulam and Rakem.

17 And the sons of Ulam; ^a Bedan. These were the sons of Gilead, the son of Machir, the son of Manasseh.

18 And his sister Hammoleketh bare Ishod, and Abiezer, and Mahalah.

19 And the sons of Shemidah were, Abian, and Shechem, and Likhi, and Aniam.

20 ¶ And the sons of Ephraim; Shuethelah, and Bered his son, and Tahath his son, and Eladah his son, and Tahath his son, 21 ¶ And Zabad his son, and Shuthelah his son, and Ezer, and Elead, whom the men of Gath that were born in that land slew, because they came down to take away their cattle.

22 And Ephraim their father mourned many days, and his brethren came to comfort him.

23 ¶ And when he went in to his wife, she conceived, and bare a son, and he called his name Beriah, because it went evil with his house.

24 (And his daughter was Sherah, who built Beth-horon the nether, and the upper, and Uzzen-sherah.)

25 And Rephah was his son, also Resheph, and Telah his son, and Tahan his son,

26 Laadan his son, Ammihud his son, Elishama his son,

¶ Or, Num. Numb. 13. 27 ¶ Non his son, Jehoshuah his son.

28 ¶ And their possessions and habitations were, Beth-el and the towns thereof, and eastward ^c Naaran, and westward Gezer, with the [†] towns thereof; Shechem also and the towns thereof, unto ¶ Gaza and the towns thereof:

29 And by the borders of the children of ^f Manasseh, Beth-shean and her towns, Taanach and her towns, ^g Megiddo and her towns, Dor and her towns. In these dwelt the children of Joseph the son of Israel.

30 ¶ ^h The sons of Asher; Imnah, and Isuah, and Ishuai, and Beriah, and Serah their sister.

31 And the sons of Beriah; Heber, and Malchiel, who is the father of Birzavith.

32 And Heber begat Japhlet, and Shomer, and Hotham, and Shua their sister.

33 And the sons of Japhlet; Pasach, and Binhal, and Ashvath. These are the children of Japhlet.

34 And the sons of Shamer; Ahi, and Rohgah, Jehubbah, and Aram.

35 And the sons of his brother Helem; Zophah, and Imna, and Shelesli, and Amal.

36 The sons of Zophah; Suah, and Harnepher, and Shual, and Beri, and Imrah, 37 Bezer, and Hod, and Shamma, and Shilshah, and Ithran, and Beera.

38 And the sons of Jether; Jephunneh, and Pispah, and Ara.

39 And the sons of Ulla; Arah, and Haniel, and Rezia.

40 All these were the children of Asher, heads of their father's house, choice and mighty men of valour, chief of the princes. And the number throughout the genealogy of them that were apt to the war and to battle was twenty and six thousand men.

CHAP. VIII.

¹ The sons and chief men of Benjamin. 33 The stock of Saul and Jonathan.

NOW Benjamin begat ^a Bela his first-born, Ashbel the second, and Aharah the third,

2 Noah the fourth, and Rapha the fifth.

born.] As the tribe of Benjamin was that from which Saul the first king of Israel, and the predecessor of David, descended, whose particular family and succession to the throne form the chief subject of this history; and as this tribe alone was united to the tribe of Judah, making up with it that monarchy of Judah, which was held by the line of David; a more particular account of the genealogy of this tribe is here given, especially in that line from which the race of Saul was derived. Pyle.

14. — whom she bare:] That is, whom his wife bare, for his concubine is opposed to her in the next words. Asriel was the great grandson of Manasseh; see Numb. xxvi. 29, &c.

23. — because it went evil &c.] For the name Beriah signifies, "In an evil condition." Bp. Patrick.

28. — unto Gaza, and the towns] Rather, as the margin gives, unto "Adasa" and her towns; for the border of Ephraim could not reach to Gaza. Dr. Wall.

Chap. VIII. ver. 1. Now Benjamin begat Bela his first-born. Vol. I.

14. — Or, Jed, Gen. 1. 21. 8 And the sons of Bela were, || Addar, and Gera, and Abihud,
14. — Or, Jed, Gen. 1. 21. 4 And Abishua, and Naaman, and Ahoah,

14. — Or, Shupham, Numb. 26. 39. 5 And Gera, and || Shephuphan, and Hiram.

14. — Or, Shupham, Numb. 26. 39. 6 And these are the sons of Ehud: these are the heads of the fathers of the inhabitants of Geha, and they removed them to ^b Manahath:
14. — Or, Shupham, Numb. 26. 39. 7 And Naaman, and Ahiah, and Gera, he removed them, and begat Uzza, and Ahihud.

8 And Shaharaim begat children in the country of Moab, after he had sent them away; Hushim and Baara were his wives.

9 And he begat of Hodesh his wife, Jobab, and Zibia, and Mesha, and Malcham, 10 And Jeuz, and Shachia, and Mirma. These were his sons, heads of the fathers.

11 And of Hushim he begat Abitub, and Elpaal.

12 The sons of Elpaal; Eber, and Misham, and Shamed, who built Ono, and Lod, with the towns thereof:

13 Beriah also, and Shema, who were heads of the fathers of the inhabitants of Aijalon, who drove away the inhabitants of Gath:

14 And Ahio, Shashak, and Jeremoth,

15 And Zebadiah, and Arad, and Ader,

16 And Michael, and Ispah, and Joha, the sons of Beriah;

17 And Zebadiah, and Meshullam, and Hezeki, and Heber,

18 Ishmerai also, and Jezliah, and Jobab, the sons of Elpaal;

19 And Jakim, and Zichri, and Zabdi,

20 And Elienai, and Zilthai, and Eliel,

14. — *Or, She-
ma, ver. 13.* 21 And Adaiah, and Beraiah, and Shimrath, the sons of || Shimhi;

22 And Ishpan, and Heber, and Eliel,

23 And Abdon, and Zichri, and Hanan,

24 And Hananiah, and Elam, and Anothijah,

25 And Iphedeiah, and Penuel, the sons of Shashak;

26 And Shamsheraï, and Shehariah, and Athaliah,

27 And Jaresiah, and Eliah, and Zichri, the sons of Jeroham. Before CHRIST 1400, &c.

28 These were heads of the fathers, by their generations, chief men. These dwelt in Jerusalem.

29 And at Gibeon dwelt the || father of Gibeon; whose ^c wife's name was Maachah: || Called Jehiel, chap. 9. 35. ^c Chap. 9. 35.

30 And his firstborn son Abdon, and Zur, and Kish, and Baal, and Nadab, 31 And Gedor, and Ahio, and || Zacher. || Or, Zechariah, chap. 9. 37.

32 And Mikloth begat || Shimeah. And these also dwelt with their brethren in Jerusalem, over against them. || Or, Shimeam, chap. 9. 38. ^a 1 Sam. 14. 51.

33 ¶ And ^d Ner begat Kish, and Kish begat Saul, and Saul begat Jonathan, and Malchi-shua, and Abinadab, and || Esh-baal. || Or, Ish-bosheth, 2 Sam. 2. 8.

34 And the son of Jonathan was || Merib-baal; and Merib-baal begat Micah. || Or, Mephisheth, 2 Sam. 4. 4.

35 And the sons of Micah were, Pithon, and Melech, and || Tarea, and Ahaz. || Or, Tahrea, chap. 9. 41.

36 And Ahaz begat Jehoadah; and Jehoadah begat Alemeth, and Azmaveth, and Zimri; and Zimri begat Moza, 37 And Moza begat Binea: Rapha was his son, Eleasah his son, Azel his son:

38 And Azel had six sons, whose names are these, Azrikam, Bocheru, and Ishmael, and Sheariah, and Obadiah, and Hanan. All these were the sons of Azel.

39 And the sons of Eshek his brother were, Ulam his firstborn, Jehush the second, and Eliphelet the third.

40 And the sons of Ulam were mighty men of valour, archers, and had many sons, and sons' sons, an hundred and fifty. All these are of the sons of Benjamin.

CHAP. IX.

¹ The original of Israel's and Judah's genealogies. ² The Israelites, 10 the priests, 14 and the Levites, with Nethinims, which dwelt in Jerusalem. ²⁷ The charge of certain Levites. ³⁵ The stock of Saul and Jonathan.

SO all Israel were reckoned by genealogies; and, behold, they were written in the book of the kings of Israel and Judah, who were carried away to Babylon for their transgression. 1200, &c.

2 ¶ Now the first inhabitants that dwelt about 536.

12. — built Ono, and Lod,] These two cities are joined together in other places, being neighbouring cities; see Ezra ii. 33; Nehem. vii. 37; xi. 35. Lod is probably the same as Lydda. Dr. Lightfoot.

40. — archers,] The expression in the original here means, "those that tread the bow," because the steel bows which were then in use were so strong as not to admit of being drawn by the hands, but it was the custom for the person using them to sit down and press them with his feet, pulling the arrow with both his hands that it might fly with the greater force. Bp. Patrick.

Chap. IX. ver. 1. So all Israel &c.] Thus has been given a brief genealogy of the whole Israelite nation, as it stood in the ancient records of the two monarchies of Israel and Judah.

2. Now the first inhabitants that dwelt] Here follows an account of those who returned into their own land with Zerubbabel,

Before
CHRIST
1200, &c.

in their possessions in their cities ~~were~~, the Israelites, the priests, Levites, and the Nethinims.

^a Neh. 11. 1.

3 And in ^a Jerusalem dwelt of the children of Judah, and of the children of Benjamin, and of the children of Ephraim, and Manasseh ;

4 Uthai the son of Ammihud, the son of Omri, the son of Imri, the son of Bani, of the children of Pharez the son of Judah.

5 And of the Shilonites ; Asaiah the firstborn, and his sons.

6 And of the sons of Zerah ; Jeuel, and their brethren, six hundred and ninety.

7 And of the sons of Benjamin ; Sallu the son of Meshullam, the son of Hodaviah, the son of Hasenuah,

8 And Ibneiah the son of Jeroham, and Elah the son of Uzzi, the son of Michri, and Meshullam the son of Shephathiah, the son of Reuel, the son of Ibrijah ;

9 And their brethren, according to their generations, nine hundred and fifty and six. All these men ~~were~~ chief of the fathers in the house of their fathers.

10 ¶ And of the priests ; Jedaiah, and Jehoiarib, and Jachin,

11 And Azariah the son of Hilkiyah, the son of Meshullam, the son of Zadok, the son of Meraioth, the son of Ahitub, the ruler of the house of God ;

12 And Adaiah the son of Jeroham, the son of Pashur, the son of Malchijah, and Maasiai the son of Adiel, the son of Jahze-rah, the son of Meshullam, the son of Meshillemith, the son of Immer ;

13 And their brethren, heads of the house of their fathers, a thousand and seven hundred and threescore ; † very able men for the work of the service of the house of God. ^{† Heb. mighty men of valour.}

14 And of the Levites ; Shemaiah the son of Hasshub, the son of Azrikam, the son of Hashabiah, of the sons of Merari ;

15 And Bakbakkar, Heresh, and Galal, and Mattaniah the son of Micah, the son of Zichri, the son of Asaph ;

16 And Obadiah the son of Shemaiah, the son of Galal, the son of Jeduthun, and Berechiah the son of Asa, the son of Elkanah, that dwelt in the villages of the Netophathites.

17 And the porters ~~were~~, Shallum, and Akkub, and Talmon, and Ahiman, and their brethren : Shallum ~~was~~ the chief ;

18 Who hitherto ~~waited~~ in the king's gate eastward : they ~~were~~ porters in the companies of the children of Levi.

19 And Shallum the son of Kore, the son of Ebiasaph, the son of Korah, and his brethren, of the house of his father, the Korahites, ~~were~~ over the work of the service, keepers of the † gates of the tabernacle : and their fathers, ~~being~~ over the host of the LORD, ~~were~~ keepers of the entry. ^{† Heb. thresholds.}

20 And Phinehas the son of Eleazar upon the decree of Cyrus, 2 Chron. xxxvi. 22, 23. They were divided, as is here expressed, into four descriptions of persons. The first are Israelites, that is, some of the ten tribes who were carried into Assyria and Media, and now chose to come back with their brethren of Judah. The second and third sort were priests and Levites, whose ancestors formerly officiated in the temple at Jerusalem. And the fourth were Nethinim, that is, such under servants as David had appointed to assist the Levites in waiting on the house of God. The word Nethinim signifies "persons given or appointed." Pyle.

— Nethinims.] The Nethinim were originally the Gibeonites, who, having obtained by artifice a league of peace with the Israelites soon after they came into Canaan, were condemned by Joshua to the lowest and most laborious offices belonging to the service of the tabernacle, as drawing water, fetching wood for the service of the altar, &c. Josh. ix. 23. We never find them called Nethinim before David's time ; but afterwards, when the Israelites had enlarged their conquests, and probably added persons from other nations to these vassals of the sanctuary, they obtained this name. They seem not to have been treated like slaves, but rather as the lowest order of servants of the sanctuary, having no doubt embraced the Jewish religion. At their return from the Babylonish captivity, (Nehem. xi. 3,) they were placed in cities with the Levites. It appears, indeed, there were but few which chose to return, probably on account of the lowness of their condition among the Israelites. We read of no more than 220 who came with Ezra, (Ezra viii. 20,) and 392 with Zerubbabel, (Ezra ii. 58;) in which latter number are included "the children of Solomon's servants." Dr. Jennings.

3. — children of Ephraim, and Manasseh ;] We have here a plain proof that many out of those tribes returned from Babylon, together with the tribe of Judah. Dr. Wall.

10. And of the priests ; &c.] The second description of persons who returned were priests, several of the heads of whose families are here named. These were persons of great skill in the services and sacrifices of the Mosaic law, and of great courage to defend it (ver. 13) against such enemies as were likely to oppose it on their first return from captivity. One of these, Ahitub, was "the ruler of the house of God," ver. 11 ; that is, though he was not high priest, he was a man of eminent authority in that order. It appears from Ezra iii. 2, Haggai i. 1, that Jeshua or Joshua was high priest at the time. Pyle.

17. And the porters] Rather the guards, as the Hebrew word more properly signifies. The next verse tells us, that they waited "in the king's gate eastward," that is, where the king's gate formerly was. This shews that the tabernacle which they erected since their return from the captivity was not on mount Moriah, but in Sion. It is probable that they erected this tabernacle immediately after their return, till the temple could be built, being unwilling to remain for any time without a place of public worship. Bp. Patrick.

20. And Phinehas the son of Eleazar &c.] He "was the ruler over them in time past," that is, when they marched through the wilderness, &c. before he was high priest ; and "the Lord was with him," so that even then he was held in great esteem. This seems to be here noticed to shew that Shallum's office was no mean office. Dr. Wells.

^{Before CHRIST 1200, &c.} was the ruler over them in time past, and the Lord was with him.

21 And Zechariah the son of Meshelemiah was porter of the door of the tabernacle of the congregation.

22 All these which were chosen to be porters in the gates were two hundred and twelve. These were reckoned by their genealogy in their villages, whom David and Samuel the seer † did ordain in their || set office.

† Heb. founded.
‡ Or, trust.

23 So they and their children had the oversight of the gates of the house of the Lord, namely, the house of the tabernacle, by wards.

24 In four quarters were the porters, toward the east, west, north, and south.

25 And their brethren, which were in their villages, were to come after seven days from time to time with them.

26 For these Levites, the four chief porters, were in their || set office, and were over the || chambers and treasuries of the house of God.

‡ Or, trust.
‡ Or, storehouses.

27 ¶ And they lodged round about the house of God, because the charge was upon them, and the opening thereof every morning pertained to them.

28 And certain of them had the charge of the ministering vessels, that they should † bring them in and out by tale.

† Heb. bring them in by tale, and carry them out by tale.
‡ Or, vessels.

29 Some of them also were appointed to oversee the vessels, and all the || instruments of the sanctuary, and the fine flour, and the wine, and the oil, and the frankincense, and the spices.

30 And some of the sons of the priests made ^b the ointment of the spices.

• Exod. 30.
23.

31 And Mattithiah, one of the Levites, who was the firstborn of Shallum the Korahite, had the || set office over the things that were made || in the pans.

‡ Or, trust.
‡ Or, on flat plates, or, suacs.

32 And other of their brethren, of the sons of the Kohathites, were over the † shewbread, to prepare it every sabbath.

† Heb. bread of order.

33 And these are the singers, chief of the fathers of the Levites, who remaining in the chambers were free: for † they

† Heb. upon them.

22. All these which were chosen &c.] Thus, in the temporary tabernacle erected after the return from captivity, all these Levites had their posts and offices assigned to them, exactly in the same manner as they had been arranged by David, with the advice of the famous Prophet Samuel. They had all, by a certain number at a time, their several charges, and were constantly relieved by others that came out of the villages to supply their places "after seven days from time to time," ver. 25. Pyle.

35. And in Gibeon dwelt &c.] The account now returns to the genealogy of Saul; and a repetition here takes place of what had before been given at chap. viii. 29, &c. It is supposed to be were employed in that work day and night. ^{Before CHRIST 1200, &c.}

34 These chief fathers of the Levites were chief throughout their generations; these dwelt at Jerusalem.

35 ¶ And in Gibeon dwelt the father of Gibeon, Jehiel, whose wife's name was ^c Maachah:

^c Chap. 3.
29.

36 And his firstborn son Abdon, then Zur, and Kish, and Baal, and Ner, and Nadab, 37 And Gedor, and Ahio, and Zechariah, and Mikloth.

38 And Mikloth begat Shimeam. And they also dwelt with their brethren at Jerusalem, over against their brethren.

39 ^d And Ner begat Kish; and Kish begat Saul; and Saul begat Jonathan, and Malchi-shua, and Abinadab, and Esh-baal.

^d Chap. 8.
33.

40 And the son of Jonathan was Merib-baal: and Merib-baal begat Micah.

41 And the sons of Micah were, Pithon, and Melech, and Tahrea, ^e and Ahaz.

^e Chap. 8.
35.

42 And Ahaz begat Jarah; and Jarah begat Alemeth, and Azmaveth, and Zimri; and Zimri begat Moza;

43 And Moza begat Binea; and Rephaiah his son, Eleasah his son, Azel his son.

44 And Azel had six sons, whose names are these, Azrikam, Bocheru, and Ishmael, and Sheariah, and Obadiah, and Hanan: these were the sons of Azel.

CHAP. X.

1 Saul's overthrow and death. 8 The Philistines triumph over Saul. 11 The kindness of Jabez-gilead towards Saul and his sons. 13 Saul's sin, for which the kingdom was translated from him to David.

NOW ^a the Philistines fought against Israel; and the men of Israel fled ^{1056.} from before the Philistines, and fell down ^{a 1 Sam. 31. 1, 2.} || slain in mount Gilboa.

2 And the Philistines followed hard after Saul, and after his sons; and the Philistines slew Jonathan, and || Abinadab, and Malchi-shua, the sons of Saul.

‡ Or, wounded.

‡ Or, Ishui, 1 Sam. 14. 49.

3 And the battle went sore against Saul, repeated in order to form the connexion with the history of Saul in the following chapter. Pyle.

Chap. X. ver. 1. Now the Philistines &c.] Here the author of this book passes over all the time of Moses, Joshua, the Judges, and Samuel, and begins at the death of Saul and reign of David. Dr. Wail.

The account of the death of Saul is here repeated, from 1 Sam. xxxi, in the same words, and with very little difference. It is introduced to make way for the history of David, (which is mainly intended in the rest of this book,) who by Saul's death was advanced to the crown. Bp. Patrick.

Before
CHRIST
1056.

† Heb. shooters with bows.
† Heb. found him.
|| Or,
mock me.

and the † archers † hit him, and he was wounded of the archers.

4 Then said Saul to his armourbearer, Draw thy sword, and thrust me through therewith; lest these uncircumcised come and || abuse me. But his armourbearer would not; for he was sore afraid. So Saul took a sword, and fell upon it.

5 And when his armourbearer saw that Saul was dead, he fell likewise on the sword, and died.

6 So Saul died, and his three sons, and all his house died together.

7 And when all the men of Israel that were in the valley saw that they fled, and that Saul and his sons were dead, then they forsook their cities, and fled: and the Philistines came and dwelt in them.

8 ¶ And it came to pass on the morrow, when the Philistines came to strip the slain, that they found Saul and his sons fallen in mount Gilboa.

9 And when they had stripped him, they took his head, and his armour, and sent into the land of the Philistines round about, to carry tidings unto their idols, and to the people.

10 And they put his armour in the house of their gods, and fastened his head in the temple of Dagon.

11 ¶ And when all Jabesh-gilead heard all that the Philistines had done to Saul, 12 They arose, all the valiant men, and took away the body of Saul, and the bodies of his sons, and brought them to Jabesh, and buried their bones under the oak in Jabesh, and fasted seven days.

13 ¶ So Saul died for his transgression which he † committed against the LORD, ^b even against the word of the LORD, which he kept not, and also for asking counsel of one that had a familiar spirit, ^c to enquire of it;

14 And enquired not of the LORD: therefore he slew him, and turned the kingdom unto David the son of † Jesse.

† Heb.
Isai.

13. [So Saul died for his transgression] Thus expired the reign and succession of this unhappy prince, whose rash and ungoverned spirit led him into those impieties, for which God, in great justice, transferred the crown from his family, to that of the very person from whom he had received so great services, and whom notwithstanding he treated with such unparalleled envy and oppression. Pyle. Saul "died for his transgression:" his two greatest transgressions (one against the express command of God delivered by Samuel, and the other against a known law of Moses) were his sparing the Amalekites, and his consulting the witch of Endor; which were plain proofs of his want of regard to God. For "he inquired not of the Lord," as the next verse states, that is, he did not pay that regard and reverence to Him which he ought; he

CHAP. XI.

Before
CHRIST
1048.

1 David by a general consent is made king at Hebron.
4 He winneth the castle of Zion from the Jebusites by Joab's valour. 10 A catalogue of David's mighty men.

THEN ^a all Israel gathered themselves ^{* 2 Sam. 5. 1.} to David unto Hebron, saying, Behold, we are thy bone and thy flesh.

2 And moreover † in time past, even † Heb. both yesterday and the third day. when Saul was king, thou wast he that leddest out and broughtest in Israel: and the LORD thy God said unto thee, Thou shalt || feed my people Israel, and thou shalt be || Or, rule. ruler over my people Israel.

3 Therefore came all the elders of Israel to the king to Hebron; and David made a covenant with them in Hebron before the LORD; and they anointed David king over Israel, according to the word of the LORD † by ^b Samuel.

4 ¶ And David and all Israel ^c went to Jerusalem, which is Jebus; where the Jebusites were, the inhabitants of the land. ^{† Heb. by the hand of. b 1 Sam. 16. 15. c 2 Sam. 5. 6.}

5 And the inhabitants of Jebus said to David, Thou shalt not come hither. Nevertheless David took the castle of Zion, which is the city of David.

6 And David said, Whosoever smiteth the Jebusites first shall be † chief and captain. So Joab the son of Zeruiah went first up, and was chief. ^{† Heb. head.}

7 And David dwelt in the castle; therefore they called || it the city of David. ^{|| That is, Zion, 2 Sam. 5. 7.}

8 And he built the city round about, even from Millo round about: and Joab † repaired the rest of the city. ^{† Heb. revived. † Heb. went in going and increasing. d 2 Sam. 23. 8.}

9 So David † waxed greater and greater: for the LORD of hosts was with him. ^{|| Or, held strongly with him.}

10 ¶ ^d These also are the chief of the mighty men whom David had, who || strengthened themselves with him in his kingdom, and with all Israel, to make him king, according to the word of the LORD concerning Israel.

* 11 And this is the number of the mighty men whom David had; Jashobeam, || an ^{|| Or, son of Hachmoni.}

did in fact inquire of him, (1 Sam. xxviii. 6,) but not with a religious mind. Ep. Patrick.

Chap. XI. ver. 1. [Then all Israel gathered themselves] Between the death of Saul and the settlement of David on the throne, many transactions took place which are recorded in 2 Sam. i, ii, iii, and iv. At length, David received the addresses of the whole nation, desiring that he would take the crown upon him in just reward of his many eminent services, and agreeably to the predictions of the Prophet Samuel. Pyle.

10. [These — are the chief of the mighty men] The sacred writer, having touched upon David's promotion to the throne, and his settlement in Zion, thought fit next to record who those valiant

Before
CHRIST
1046.

Hachmonite, the chief of the captains: he lifted up his spear against three hundred slain by him at one time.

12 And after him was Eleazar the son of Dodo, the Ahohite, who was one of the three mighties.

1047.
Or, Ephesdomim,
1 Sam. 17.
1.

13 He was with David at || Pas-dam-mim, and there the Philistines were gathered together to battle, where was a parcel of ground full of barley; and the people fled from before the Philistines.

Or, stood.

14 And they || set themselves in the midst of that parcel, and delivered it, and slew the ^e Philistines; and the LORD saved them by a great || deliverance.

e 2 Sam. 23.
18.
Or,
salvation.
Or, three captains over the thirty.

15 ¶ Now || three of the thirty captains went down to the rock to David, into the cave of Adullam; and the host of the Philistines encamped in the valley of Rephaim.

16 And David was then in the hold, and the Philistines' garrison was then at Beth-lehem.

17 And David longed, and said, Oh that one would give me drink of the water of the well of Beth-lehem, that is at the gate!

18 And the three brake through the host of the Philistines, and drew water out of the well of Beth-lehem, that was by the gate, and took it, and brought it to David: but David would not drink of it, but poured it out to the LORD,

† Heb.
with their lives.

19 And said, My God forbid it me, that I should do this thing: shall I drink the blood of these men † that have put their lives in jeopardy? for with the jeopardy of their lives they brought it. Therefore he would not drink it. These things did these three mightiest.

20 ¶ And Abishai the brother of Joab, he was chief of the three: for lifting up his spear against three hundred, he slew them, and had a name among the three.

e 2 Sam. 23.
19, &c.

21 ^e Of the three, he was more honourable than the two; for he was their captain: howbeit he attained not to the first three.

22 Benaiah the son of Jehoiada, the son of a valiant man of Kabzeel, † who had done many acts; he slew two lionlike men of Moab: also he went down and slew a lion in a pit in a snowy day.

Before
CHRIST
1047.† Heb. great of deeds.
† Heb.
a man of measure.

23 And he slew an Egyptian, † a man of great stature, five cubits high; and in the Egyptian's hand was a spear like a weaver's beam; and he went down to him with a staff, and plucked the spear out of the Egyptian's hand, and slew him with his own spear.

24 These things did Benaiah the son of Jehoiada, and had a name among the three mighties.

25 Behold, he was honourable among the thirty, but attained not to the first three: and David set him over his guard.

26 ¶ Also the valiant men of the armies were, Asahel the brother of Joab, Elhanan the son of Dodo of Beth-lehem,

27 Shammoth the || Harorite, Helez the Pelonite, || Or,
Harodite,
2 Sam. 23.
25.

28 Ira the son of Ikkesh the Tekoite, Abi-ezer the Antothite,

29 Sibbecai the Hushathite, Ilai the Ahohite,

30 Maharai the Netophathite, Heled the son of Baanah the Netophathite,

31 Ithai the son of Ribai of Gibeah, that pertained to the children of Benjamin, Benaiah the Pirathonite,

32 Hurai of the brooks of Gaash, Abiel the Arbathite,

33 Azmaveth the Baharumite, Eliahba the Shaalbonite,

34 The sons of Hashem the Gizonite, Jonathan the son of Shage the Hararite, 35 Ahiam the son of Sacar the Hararite, Eliphal the son of Ur, 36 Hopher the Mecherathite, Ahijah the Pelonite,

37 Hezro the Carmelite, Naarai the son of Ezbai,

38 Joel the brother of Nathan, Mibhar || the son of Haggeri,

|| Or, the Haggerite.

39 Zelek the Ammonite, Naharai the Berothite, the armourbearer of Joab the son of Zeruiah, 40 Ira the Ithrite, Gareb the Ithrite, men were, that assisted him in his advancement, and helped to establish him in his authority; of whom a particular account is also given at 2 Sam. xxiii. 8, &c. Bp. Patrick.

11. — lifted up his spear against three hundred] At 2 Sam. xxiii. 8, it is stated that "he lift up his spear against eight hundred, whom he slew at one time." Some have supposed that an error in the number has crept into one of the passages; or perhaps it may be plainer to interpret, that he slew 300 with his own hand, and thereby routed the enemy, in which flight 500 more were slain during the pursuit. Bp. Patrick.

26. Also the valiant men &c.] The rest that here follow make up the thirty famous soldiers in David's army, with an addition of some others, whose exploits made them worthy to be left on record. There are some changes and additions, with respect to the names of several of them, which must be accounted for by length of time and accidental circumstances. Pyle.

By comparing this list of names with the parallel list in 2 Sam. xxiii, it is easy to perceive that several mistakes in regard to the proper names have been made by transcribers. Dr. Wells.

Before
CHRIST
1047.

41 Uriah the Hittite, Zabad the son of Ahlai,

42 Adina the son of Shiza the Reubenite, a captain of the Reubenites, and thirty with him,

43 Hanan the son of Maachah, and Josphat the Mithnite,

44 Uzzi the Ashterathite, Shama and Jehiel the sons of Hothan the Aroerite,

|| Or,
Shimrite.

45 Jedaiel the || son of Shimri, and Joha his brother, the Tizite,

46 Eliel the Mahavite, and Jeribai, and Joshaviah, the sons of Elnaam, and Ithmah the Moabite, 47 Eliel, and Obed, and Jasiel the Mesobaite.

CHAP. XII.

1 The companies that came to David at Ziklag. 23 The armies that came to him at Hebron.

about 1058.
1 Sam. 27.

1.
† Heb. being yet shut up.

NOW ^a these are they that came to David to Ziklag, † while he yet kept himself close because of Saul the son of Kish: and they were among the mighty men, helpers of the war.

2 They were armed with bows, and could use both the right hand and the left in hurling stones and shooting arrows out of a bow, even of Saul's brethren of Benjamin.

|| Or,
Hamaah.

3 The chief was Ahiezer, then Joash, the sons of || Shemaah the Gibeathite; and Jeziel, and Pelet, the sons of Aznaveth; and Berachah, and Jehu the Antothite,

4 And Ismaiah the Gibeonite, a mighty man among the thirty, and over the thirty; and Jeremiah, and Jahaziel, and Johanan, and Josabad the Gederathite,

5 Eluzai, and Jerimoth, and Bealiah, and Shemariah, and Shephatiah the Haruphite,

6 Elkanah, and Jesiah, and Azareel, and Joezer, and Jashobeam, the Korhites,

7 And Joelah, and Zebadiah, the sons of Jeroham of Gedor.

Before
CHRIST
about 1058.

8 And of the Gadites there separated themselves unto David into the hold to the wilderness men of might, and men † of war fit for the battle, that could handle shield and buckler, whose faces were like the faces of lions, and were † as swift as the roes upon the mountains;

† Heb. of the host.

† Heb.
as the roes
upon the mountains to make haste.

9 Ezer the first, Obadiah the second, Eliab the third,

10 Mishmannah the fourth, Jeremiah the fifth,

11 Attai the sixth, Eliel the seventh,

12 Johanan the eighth, Elzabad the ninth,

13 Jeremiah the tenth, Machbanai the eleventh.

14 These were of the sons of Gad, captains of the host: || one of the least was over an hundred, and the greatest over a thousand.

|| Or,
one that was least could resist an hundred, and the greatest a thousand.
† Heb. filled over.
Josh. 3. 15

15 These are they that went over Jordan in the first month, when it had † overflowed all his banks; and they put to flight all them of the valleys, both toward the east, and toward the west.

16 And there came of the children of Benjamin and Judah to the hold unto David.

17 And David went out † to meet them, and answered and said unto them, If ye be come peaceably unto me to help me, mine heart shall † be knit unto you: but if ye be come to betray me to mine enemies, seeing there is no || wrong in mine hands, the God of our fathers look thereon, and rebuke it.

† Heb.
before them.

† Heb. be one.

|| Or,
violence.

18 Then † the spirit came upon Amasai, who was chief of the captains, and he said, Thine are we, David, and on thy side, thou son of Jesse: peace, peace be unto thee, and peace be to thine helpers; for thy

† Heb.
the spirit clothed Amasai.

Chap. XII. ver. 1. — they that came to David to Ziklag,] The sacred writer, having now mentioned the principal commanders of David's army, at and after the time of his accession to the throne, and having left their great achievements on honourable record, proceeds to do justice to the memory of those brave persons who stood by him in his lowest condition, and joined him in his exile during his persecution under Saul. Of these no mention has been made in the books of Samuel or Kings. Pyle.

2. — even of Saul's brethren] The circumstance here mentioned is remarkable, that these persons who took part with David were of the kindred of Saul. They were probably moved so to act by some extraordinary cause, either by the great virtues of David, or by abhorrence of the persecution raised against an innocent man, or by regard to the words of Samuel concerning David's right to the kingdom. Bp. Patrick.

8. — into the hold to the wilderness] There are several holds or inaccessible places mentioned, where David secured himself from Saul's persecution. See 1 Sam. xxii. 4; xxiii. 14; xxiv. 22. Perhaps however the text may still be referring to Ziklag. Bp. Patrick.

— whose faces were like the faces of lions,] This expression may be understood to signify the fierceness of their countenances; or rather perhaps, as is preferable, the undauntedness of their courage. Pyle.

15. — that went over Jordan in the first month,] This is mentioned as a proof and instance of their undaunted valour, that they ventured to swim over Jordan in the most dangerous season, and "put to flight all them of the valleys, &c." that is, some of the neighbouring people who had seized the opportunity of invading and spoiling the land thereabout, perhaps when Saul was engaged in an enterprise against the Philistines. Bp. Patrick.

18 Then the spirit came upon Amasai,] That is, God moved him with an heroic boldness and resolution to profess, in the name of them all, their fidelity to David in such pathetic words as convinced him of their good intentions towards him. Bp. Patrick.

Before
CHRIST
about 1036

God helpeth thee. Then David received them, and made them captains of the band.

19 And there fell some of Manasseh to David, when he came with the Philistines against Saul to battle: but they helped them not: for the lords of the Philistines upon advisement sent him away, saying, He will fall to his master Saul † to the jeopardy of our heads.

1 Sam. 29.
† Heb. in our heads.

20 As he went to Ziklag, there fell to him of Manasseh, Adnah, and Jozabad, and Jediael, and Michael, and Jozabad, and Elihu, and Zilthai, captains of the thousands that were of Manasseh.

† Or, with a band.

21 And they helped David ‖ against the band of the rovers: for they were all mighty men of valour, and were captains in the host.

22 For at that time day by day there came to David to help him, until it was a great host, like the host of God.

1043.
‖ Or, captains, or men.
† Heb. heads.

23 ¶ And these are the numbers of the ‖ † bands that were ready armed to the war, and came to David to Hebron, to turn the kingdom of Saul to him, according to the word of the Lord.

24 The children of Judah that bare shield and spear were six thousand and eight hundred, ready ‖ armed to the war.

† Or, prepared.

25 Of the children of Simeon, mighty men of valour for the war, seven thousand and one hundred.

26 Of the children of Levi four thousand and six hundred.

27 And Jehoiada was the leader of the Aaronites, and with him were three thousand and seven hundred;

28 And Zadok, a young man mighty of valour, and of his father's house twenty and two captains.

† Heb. between.
† Heb. a multitude of them.

29 And of the children of Benjamin, the † kindred of Saul, three thousand: for hitherto † the greatest part of them had kept the ward of the house of Saul.

30 And of the children of Ephraim twenty thousand and eight hundred, mighty men of valour, † famous throughout the house of their fathers.

Before
CHRIST
about 1048.

31 And of the half tribe of Manasseh eighteen thousand, which were expressed by name, to come and make David king.

† Heb. men of names.

32 And of the children of Issachar, which were men that had understanding of the times, to know what Israel ought to do; the heads of them were two hundred; and all their brethren were at their commandment.

33 Of Zebulun, such as went forth to battle, ‖ expert in war, with all instruments of war, fifty thousand, which could ‖ keep rank: they were † not of double heart.

‖ Or, rang-ers of battle, or, ranged in battle.

34 And of Naphtali a thousand captains, and with them with shield and spear thirty and seven thousand.

‖ Or, set the battle in array.

† Heb. without a heart and a heart.

35 And of the Danites expert in war twenty and eight thousand and six hundred.

36 And of Asher, such as went forth to battle, ‖ expert in war, forty thousand.

‖ Or, keep- ing their rank.

37 And on the other side of Jordan, of the Reubenites, and the Gadites, and of the half tribe of Manasseh, with all manner of instruments of war for the battle, an hundred and twenty thousand.

38 All these men of war, that could keep rank, came with a perfect heart to Hebron, to make David king over all Israel: and all the rest also of Israel were of one heart to make David king.

39 And there they were with David three days, eating and drinking: for their brethren had prepared for them.

40 Moreover they that were nigh them, even unto Issachar and Zebulun and Naphtali, brought bread on asses, and on camels, and on mules, and on oxen, and ‖ meat, meal, cakes of figs, and bunches of raisins, and wine, and oil, and oxen, and sheep abundantly: for there was joy in Israel.

‖ Or, victual of meal.

CHAP. XIII.

1 David fetcheth the ark with great solemnity from Kirjath-jearim. 9 Uzza being smitten, the ark is left at the house of Obed-edom.

19. — but they helped them not:] See 1 Sam. xxix. 1, &c. where it is related, that the Philistines refused the assistance of David and his companions, from suspecting their good faith.

20. As he went to Ziklag, &c.] Others of the tribe of Manasseh, whose names are here mentioned, joined him at the very point of time when "the band of (Amalekite) rovers" had destroyed his fortunes and carried his family into slavery, which great loss these valiant commanders helped to repair. See 1 Sam. xxx. Pyle.

22. For at that time] Namely, after the battle in which Saul was slain. Dr. Wells.

32. — men that had understanding of the times,] The meaning of these words has been the subject of doubt. Some have supposed them to imply such a skill in computing the years and months, as enabled them exactly to determine the time of all festivals, the new moons, the passover, &c. Houbigant. But a more probable sense seems to be, that these men of Issachar now gave proof of their knowledge of the times, or fit seasons of action, in telling the rest of the nation that this was the proper season for making David king, when Saul's family was dead; and that he was the person most likely to subdue the Philistines, by whom they had been so often beaten. Bp. Patrick, Pyle. Or generally, men who had political prudence to discern and embrace the fit seasons for all actions. S. Clarke.

40. — and on oxen,] The mention of oxen as beasts of burden is remarkable; but the same custom still obtains in the East. Dandini expresses surprise at seeing them so employed in the neighbourhood of Tripoli in Syria. Harmer.

Before
CHRIST
1045.

AND David consulted with the captains of thousands and hundreds, and with every leader.

† Heb. let us break forth and send.

2 And David said unto all the congregation of Israel, If it seem good unto you, and that it be of the LORD our God, † let us send abroad unto our brethren every where, that are left in all the land of Israel, and with them also to the priests and Levites which are † in their cities and suburbs, that they may gather themselves unto us :

† Heb.
in the cities of their suburbs.

† Heb.
bring about.

3 And let us † bring again the ark of our God to us : for we enquired not at it in the days of Saul.

4 And all the congregation said that they would do so : for the thing was right in the eyes of all the people.

1 Sam. 7.
1.
2 Sam. 6. 2.

5 So ^a David gathered all Israel together, from Shihor of Egypt even unto the entering of Hemath, to bring the ark of God from Kirjath-jearim.

† Josh. 15.
9.

6 And David went up, and all Israel, to ^b Baalah, that is, to Kirjath-jearim, which belonged to Judah, to bring up thence the ark of God the LORD, that dwelleth between the cherubims, whose name is called on it.

† Heb. made the ark to ride.

7 And they † carried the ark of God in a new cart out of the house of Abinadab : and Uzza and Ahio drave the cart.

† Heb.
songs.

8 And David and all Israel played before God with all their might, and with † singing, and with harps, and with psalteries, and with timbrels, and with cymbals, and with trumpets.

|| Called Nachon,
2 Sam. 6. 6.
|| Or,
shook it.

9 ¶ And when they came unto the threshingfloor of || Chidon, Uzza put forth his hand to hold the ark ; for the oxen || stumbled.

* Num. 4.
15.

10 And the anger of the LORD was kindled against Uzza, and he smote him, because he put his hand to the ^c ark : and there he died before God.

† Heb. breach of Uzza.

11 And David was displeased, because the LORD had made a breach upon Uzza : wherefore that place is called || Perez-uzza to this day.

12 And David was afraid of God that day, saying, How shall I bring the ark of God home to me ?

Before
CHRIST
1045.

13 So David † brought not the ark home to himself to the city of David, but carried it aside into the house of Obed-edom the Gittite.

† Heb.
removed.

14 And the ark of God remained with the family of Obed-edom in his house three months. And the LORD blessed ^d the house of Obed-edom, and all that he had.

^d As chap.
26. 5.

CHAP. XIV.

1 Hiram's kindness to David. 2 David's felicity in people, wives, and children. 8 His two victories against the Philistines.

NOW ^a Hiram king of Tyre sent messengers to David, and timber of cedars, with masons and carpenters, to build him an house.

about 1045.
^a 2 Sam. 5.
11, &c.

2 And David perceived that the LORD had confirmed him king over Israel, for his kingdom was lifted up on high, because of his people Israel.

3 ¶ And David took † more wives at Jerusalem : and David begat more sons and daughters.

† Heb. yet.

4 Now these are the names of his children which he had in Jerusalem ; Shamua, and Shobab, Nathan, and Solomon,

5 And Ibhar, and Elishua, and Elpalet,

6 And Nogah, and Nepheg, and Japhia,

7 And Elishama, and || Beeliada, and Eliphalet.

|| Or,
Eliada,
2 Sam. 5.
16.

8 ¶ And when the Philistines heard that ^b David was anointed king over all Israel, all the Philistines went up to seek David. And David heard of it, and went out against them.

^b 2 Sam. 5.
17.

9 And the Philistines came and spread themselves in the valley of Rephaim.

1047.

10 And David enquired of God, saying, Shall I go up against the Philistines ? and wilt thou deliver them into mine hand ? And the LORD said unto him, Go up ; for I will deliver them into thine hand.

11 So they came up to Baal-perazim ;

Chap. XIII. ver. 3. — let us bring again the ark of our God] It is stated in 2 Sam. v, vi, that this took place after what is mentioned in the next chapter respecting the wars of Hiram and David with the Philistines. And thus probably it happened ; only David, as became a good king whose first care is about religion, took advice, as soon as he came to the crown, of the elders of his people, concerning the bringing up the ark of God, which was not put in execution till some time afterwards.

— for we enquired not at it in the days of Saul.] The words in the Hebrew may be translated, “ We enquired not about it in the days of Saul : ” meaning, that they were not solicitous in those days to find a fit place for the residence of the ark of God, where they might conveniently attend upon His worship and service, being hindered by perpetual wars, and not sufficiently concerned about religion. Bp. Patrick.

For what follows in this chapter, see the notes on 2 Sam. vi.

Chap. XIV. ver. 4. — these are the names of his children] Two more names are mentioned here than were given at 2 Sam. v. Probably two of the children died in their infancy, and on that account were not there mentioned. Pyle. See the notes on 2 Sam. v. for the rest of this chapter.

^{Before CHRIST 1017.} and David smote them there. Then David said, God hath broken in upon mine enemies by mine hand like the breaking forth of waters: therefore they called the name of that place || Baal-perazim.

^{|| That is, a place of breaches.} 12 And when they had left their gods there, David gave a commandment, and they were burned with fire.

13 And the Philistines yet again spread themselves abroad in the valley.

^{2 Sam. 5.} 14 Therefore David enquired again of God; and God said unto him, Go not up after them; turn away from them, ² and come upon them over against the mulberry trees.

15 And it shall be, when thou shalt hear a sound of going in the tops of the mulberry trees, that then thou shalt go out to battle: for God is gone forth before thee to smite the host of the Philistines.

16 David therefore did as God commanded him: and they smote the host of the Philistines from Gibeon even to Gazer.

17 And the fame of David went out into all lands; and the LORD brought the fear of him upon all nations.

CHAP. XV.

1 David, having prepared a place for the ark, ordereth the priests and Levites to bring it from Obed-edom.
25 He performeth the solemnity thereof with great joy.
29 Michal despiseth him.

1042.

AND David made him houses in the city of David, and prepared a place for the ark of God, and pitched for it a tent.

^{† Heb. It is not to carry the ark of God, but for the Levites.}
^{a Numb. 4 2, 15.}
^{about 1042.}

2 Then David said, [†] None ought to carry the ^a ark of God but the Levites: for them hath the LORD chosen to carry the ark of God, and to minister unto him for ever.

3 And David gathered all Israel together to Jerusalem, to bring up the ark of the LORD unto his place, which he had prepared for it.

4 And David assembled the children of Aaron, and the Levites:

5 Of the sons of Kohath; Uriel the chief, and his || brethren an hundred and twenty: ^{Before CHRIST about 1042.}

6 Of the sons of Merari; Asaiah the chief, and his brethren two hundred and twenty: ^{|| Or, kinsmen.}

7 Of the sons of Gershon; Joel the chief, and his brethren an hundred and thirty:

8 Of the sons of Elizaphan; Shemaiah the chief, and his brethren two hundred:

9 Of the sons of Hebron; Eliel the chief, and his brethren fourscore:

10 Of the sons of Uzziel; Amminadab the chief, and his brethren an hundred and twelve.

11 And David called for Zadok and Abiathar the priests, and for the Levites, for Uriel, Asaiah, and Joel, Shemaiah, and Eliel, and Amminadab, 12 And said unto them, Ye are the chief of the fathers of the Levites: sanctify yourselves, both ye and your brethren, that ye may bring up the ark of the LORD God of Israel unto the place that I have prepared for it.

13 For because ye did it not at the first, the LORD our God made a breach upon us, for that we sought him not after the due order.

14 So the priests and the Levites sanctified themselves to bring up the ark of the LORD God of Israel.

15 And the children of the Levites bare the ark of God upon their shoulders with the staves thereon, as ^b Moses commanded ^{b Exod. 25. 14.} according to the word of the LORD.

16 And David spake to the chief of the Levites to appoint their brethren to be the singers with instruments of musick, psalteries and harps and cymbals, sounding, by lifting up the voice with joy.

17 So the Levites appointed ^c Heman ^{c Chap. 6. 33.} the son of Joel; and of his brethren,

^d Asaph the son of Berechiah; and of the sons of Merari their brethren, ^e Ethan the son of Kushaiah; ^{d Chap. 6. 39.} ^{e Chap. 6. 44.}

17. — into all lands;] Into a great many lands; for in this restrained sense the Hebrew word rendered all is frequently used. Bp. Patrick.

Chap. XV. ver. 1. And David made him houses] The history now returns to the transactions of David at Jerusalem, which were left off at chap. xiii. The king having "made him houses," that is, having completed all the apartments of his palace, and prepared a new tabernacle for the reception of the ark, resolved to move it thither. Pyle.

2. — None ought to carry the ark — but the Levites:] The former miscarriage, when they brought up the ark from Kirjath-jearim, had taught David to treat it with greater reverence, and to have it carried on the shoulders of the priests, according to the prescription of the law at Num. iv. 15. Bp. Patrick.

13. — for that we sought him not after the due order.] This good king does not wholly excuse himself and lay all the blame upon others, but places himself in the number of those who were careless in this matter. For it was his duty as well as theirs to give due attention to the law, and to pray to God for His direction. Bp. Patrick.

Before
CHRIST
about 1042.

18 And with them their brethren of the second degree, Zechariah, Ben, and Jaaziel, and Shemiramoth, and Jehiel, and Unni, Eliab, and Benaiah, and Maaseiah, and Mattithiah, and Elipheleh, and Mikneiah, and Obed-edom, and Jeiel, the porters.

19 So the singers, Heman, Asaph, and Ethan, were appointed to sound with cymbals of brass;

20 And Zechariah, and Aziel, and Shemiramoth, and Jehiel, and Unni, and Eliab, and Maaseiah, and Benaiah, with psalteries on Alamoth;

21 And Mattithiah, and Elipheleh, and Mikneiah, and Obed-edom, and Jeiel, and Azaziah, with harps || on the Sheminith to excel.

22 And Chenaniah, chief of the Levites, || was for † song: he instructed about the song, because he was skilful.

23 And Berechiah and Elkanah were doorkeepers for the ark.

24 And Shebaniah, and Jehoshaphat, and Nethaneel, and Amasai, and Zechariah, and Benaiah, and Eliezer, the priests, did blow with the trumpets before the ark of God: and Obed-edom and Jehiah were doorkeepers for the ark.

25 ¶ So † David, and the elders of Israel, and the captains over thousands, went to bring up the ark of the covenant of the LORD out of the house of Obed-edom with joy.

26 And it came to pass, when God helped the Levites that bare the ark of the covenant of the LORD, that they offered seven bullocks and seven rams.

27 And David was clothed with a robe of fine linen, and all the Levites that bare the ark, and the singers, and Chenaniah the master of the || song with the singers: David also had upon him an ephod of linen.

28 Thus all Israel brought up the ark of the covenant of the LORD with shouting, and with sound of the cornet, and with trumpets, and with cymbals, making a noise with psalteries and harps.

20. — with psalteries on Alamoth; Or the words may be translated, “together with Alamoth.” What is meant by Alamoth is uncertain; but, from its being joined with psalteries, it is thought to mean a musical instrument. Bp. Patrick.

21. — with harps on the Sheminith Or “together with the Sheminith.” The Hebrew Sheminith refers to the number eight, whence some understand by it an instrument with eight strings, or an instrument which sounds the note called an octave by musicians. Simonis.

26. — when God helped the Levites When God enabled them to discharge their duty without any gross error or disaster befall-

29 ¶ And it came to pass, as the ark of the covenant of the LORD came to the city of David, that Michal the daughter of Saul looking out at a window saw king David dancing and playing: and she despised him in her heart.

Before
CHRIST
about 1042.

CHAP. XVI.

1 David's festival sacrifice. 4 He ordereth a choir to sing thanksgiving. 7 The psalm of thanksgiving. 37 He appointeth ministers, porters, priests, and musicians, to attend continually on the ark.

SO ^a they brought the ark of God, and set it in the midst of the tent that David had pitched for it: and they offered burnt sacrifices and peace offerings before God.

about 1042.
^a 2 Sam. 6.
17.

2 And when David had made an end of offering the burnt offerings and the peace offerings, he blessed the people in the name of the LORD.

3 And he dealt to every one of Israel, both man and woman, to every one a loaf of bread, and a good piece of flesh, and a flagon of wine.

4 ¶ And he appointed certain of the Levites to minister before the ark of the LORD, and to record, and to thank and praise the LORD God of Israel:

5 Asaph the chief, and next to him Zechariah, Jeiel, and Shemiramoth, and Jehiel, and Mattithiah, and Eliab, and Benaiah, and Obed-edom: and Jeiel † with psalteries and with harps; but Asaph made a sound with cymbals;

† Heb. with instruments of psalteries and harps.

6 Benaiah also and Jahaziel the priests with trumpets continually before the ark of the covenant of God.

7 ¶ Then on that day David delivered first this psalm to thank the LORD into the hand of Asaph and his brethren.

8 ^b Give thanks unto the LORD, call upon his name, make known his deeds among the people.

^b Psalm
105. 1.

9 Sing unto him, sing psalms unto him, talk ye of all his wondrous works.

ing them. Pyle. Or, when He encouraged them in their work with some comfortable sign of His approbation. S. Clarke.

Chap. XVI. ver. 8. Give thanks unto the Lord, &c. This hymn is entirely made up of parts of three psalms which occur in the book of Psalms, where the notes upon them will be given. Part of Psalm cv. makes up all from ver. 8 to ver. 22 of this chapter inclusively; Psalm xcvi. makes up all from ver. 23 to ver. 33; and Psalm cvi. ver. 1, 47, 48, makes up the three last verses of this hymn, that is, ver. 34, 35, 36, of this chapter. Dr. Wells.

Before
CHRIST
about 1042.

10 Glory ye in his holy name: let the heart of them rejoice that seek the LORD.

11 Seek the LORD and his strength, seek his face continually.

12 Remember his marvellous works that he hath done, his wonders, and the judgments of his mouth;

13 O ye seed of Israel his servant, ye children of Jacob, his chosen ones.

14 He is the LORD our God; his judgments are in all the earth.

15 Be ye mindful always of his covenant; the word which he commanded to a thousand generations;

* Gen. 17.
2. & 26. 3.
& 28. 13.

16 Even of the ^ccovenant which he made with Abraham, and of his oath unto Isaac;

17 And hath confirmed the same to Jacob for a law, and to Israel for an everlasting covenant,

† Heb.
the word.

18 Saying, Unto thee will I give the land of Canaan, † the lot of your inheritance;

† Heb.
men of number.
* Gen. 34.
20.

19 When ye were but † few, ^aeven a few, and strangers in it.

20 And when they went from nation to nation, and from one kingdom to another people;

* Gen. 12.
17. & 20. 3.

21 He suffered no man to do them wrong: yea, he ^areproved kings for their sakes,

* Psal. 105.
15.

22 Saying, ^fTouch not mine anointed, and do my prophets no harm.

* Psal. 96. 1.

23 ^eSing unto the LORD, all the earth; shew forth from day to day his salvation.

24 Declare his glory among the heathen; his marvellous works among all nations.

25 For great is the LORD, and greatly to be praised: he also is to be feared above all gods.

* Lev. 19.
4.

26 For all the gods ^hof the people are idols: but the LORD made the heavens.

27 Glory and honour are in his presence; strength and gladness are in his place.

28 Give unto the LORD, ye kindreds of the people, give unto the LORD glory and strength.

29 Give unto the LORD the glory due unto his name: bring an offering, and come before him: worship the LORD in the beauty of holiness.

36. — all the people said, Amen,] At the conclusion of this hymn, all the people expressed their hearty concurrence in every part of it, and their wish that God might be for ever praised in the same manner, by saying Amen. Hence we observe the great antiquity of this custom of saying Amen at the conclusion of our prayers and benedictions. We find from Nehem. viii. 6, that this

30 Fear before him, all the earth: the world also shall be stable, that it be not moved. Before
CHRIST
about 1042.

31 Let the heavens be glad, and let the earth rejoice: and let men say among the nations, The LORD reigneth.

32 Let the sea roar, and the fulness thereof: let the fields rejoice, and all that is therein.

33 Then shall the trees of the wood sing out at the presence of the LORD, because he cometh to judge the earth.

34 ⁱO give thanks unto the LORD; for he † Psal. 107.
1. & 118. 1.
& 136. 1. is good; for his mercy endureth for ever.

35 And say ye, Save us, O God of our salvation, and gather us together, and deliver us from the heathen, that we may give thanks to thy holy name, and glory in thy praise.

36 Blessed be the LORD God of Israel for ever and ever. And all ^kthe people * Deut. 27.
15. said, Amen, and praised the LORD.

37 ¶ So he left there before the ark of the covenant of the LORD Asaph and his brethren, to minister before the ark continually, as every day's work required:

38 And Obed-edom with their brethren, threescore and eight; Obed-edom also the son of Jeduthun and Hosah to be porters:

39 And Zadok the priest, and his brethren the priests, before the tabernacle of the LORD in the high place that was at Gibeon, 40 To offer burnt offerings unto the LORD upon the altar of the burnt offering continually † morning and evening, and to do according to all that is written in the law of the LORD, which he commanded Israel; † Heb.

in the morning and in the evening.

41 And with them Heman and Jeduthun, and the rest that were chosen, who were expressed by name, to give thanks to the LORD, because his mercy endureth for ever;

42 And with them Heman and Jeduthun with trumpets and cymbals for those that should make a sound, and with musical instruments of God. And the sons of Jeduthun were † porters.

† Heb.
for the gate.

43 And all the people departed every man to his house: and David returned to bless his house.

custom was continued after the captivity. Bp. Patrick. See note on Deut. xxvii. 15.

42. And with them Heman and Jeduthun with trumpets] It should be translated, "And with them (Heman and Jeduthun) there were trumpets and cymbals." Bp. Patrick.

Before
CHRIST
about 1012.

CHAP. XVII.

about 1042.
• 2 Sam. 7.
1, &c.

1 Nathan first approving the purpose of David, to build God an house, 3 after by the word of God forbiddeth him. 11 He promiseth him blessings and benefits in his seed. 16 David's prayer and thanksgiving.

NOW ^a it came to pass, as David sat in his house, that David said to Nathan the prophet, Lo, I dwell in an house of cedars, but the ark of the covenant of the LORD remaineth under curtains.

2 Then Nathan said unto David, Do all that is in thine heart; for God is with thee.

3 ¶ And it came to pass the same night, that the word of God came to Nathan, saying,

4 Go and tell David my servant, Thus saith the LORD, Thou shalt not build me an house to dwell in:

5 For I have not dwelt in an house since the day that I brought up Israel unto this day; but † have gone from tent to tent, and from one tabernacle to another.

† Heb.
have been.

6 Wheresoever I have walked with all Israel, spake I a word to any of the judges of Israel, whom I commanded to feed my people, saying, Why have ye not built me an house of cedars?

7 Now therefore thus shalt thou say unto my servant David, Thus saith the LORD of hosts, I took thee from the sheepcote, even † from following the sheep, that thou shouldest be ruler over my people Israel:

† Heb.
from after.

8 And I have been with thee whithersoever thou hast walked, and have cut off all thine enemies from before thee, and have made thee a name like the name of the great men that are in the earth.

9 Also I will ordain a place for my people Israel, and will plant them, and they shall dwell in their place, and shall be moved no more; neither shall the children of wickedness waste them any more, as at the beginning,

Before
CHRIST
about 1042.

10 And since the time that I commanded judges to be over my people Israel. Moreover I will subdue all thine enemies. Furthermore I tell thee that the LORD will build thee an house.

11 ¶ And it shall come to pass, when thy days be expired that thou must go to be with thy fathers, that I will raise up thy seed after thee, which shall be of thy sons; and I will establish his kingdom.

12 He shall build me an house, and I will stablish his throne for ever.

13 ^b I will be his father, and he shall be my son: and I will not take my mercy away from him, as I took it from him that was before thee: ^{b 2 Sam. 7. 14, 15.}

14 But I will settle him in mine house and in my kingdom for ever: and his throne shall be established for evermore.

15 According to all these words, and according to all this vision, so did Nathan speak unto David.

16 ¶ And David the king came and sat before the LORD, and said, Who am I, O LORD God, and what is mine house, that thou hast brought me hitherto?

17 And yet this was a small thing in thine eyes, O God; for thou hast also spoken of thy servant's house for a great while to come, and hast regarded me according to the estate of a man of high degree, O LORD God.

18 What can David speak more to thee for the honour of thy servant? for thou knowest thy servant.

19 O LORD, for thy servant's sake, and according to thine own heart, hast thou

Chap. XVII. ver. 5. — I — have gone from tent to tent, &c. In the parallel place at 2 Sam. vii. 6. it is said, “I have walked in a tent and in a tabernacle;” the meaning of both is the same, that the ark of the Divine Presence was kept in a moveable tent, and not in a fixed temple. Bp. Patrick. The expression, “I have gone from tent to tent,” may allude to the removal of the tent from one place to another; “I have gone from one place where the tent was pitched, to another place where it was pitched again.” Dr. Wells.

14. — in mine house and in my kingdom]. It is very observable, that in the parallel passage at 2 Sam. vii. 16, God speaking to David says, “thine house” and “thy kingdom;” whereas here He says, “Mine house” and “My kingdom.” This confirms what was there noted, that this passage principally refers to the Messiah, of whom David was a type and figure. Bp. Patrick.

The general meaning of this passage (ver. 11—15) is, That although, in order to shew David and the whole nation how little desirous God was of having a temple, David should not be the man to erect it, yet a commission to erect it should be given to his next successor, whom Providence would bless with a numerous royal issue, and from them would raise at the last that great Prince and Saviour, whose dominion was to be endless, and of universal benefit to mankind. Pyle. To which of all the sons of mortal man can this promise be judged applicable? Does it not naturally lead us to acknowledge that singularly illustrious Person who was also in a more eminent sense the Son of God? Dr. Berriman.

16. — David the king came and sat before the Lord. Niebuhr informs us, that “in presence of superiours, an Arab sits with his two knees touching each other, and with the weight of his body resting upon his heels.” This describes the attitude of David, when he sat before the Lord. Fragments to Calmet.

17. — and hast regarded me according to the estate &c. In the parallel place at 2 Sam. vii. 19, instead of these words, it is expressed, “Is this the manner of men, O Lord?” The meaning is, that it was not after the manner of men to treat a poor shepherd as if he were a prince; but in this manner God had dealt with David. Bp. Patrick.

In the remainder of this chapter the expressions are the same as at 2 Sam. vii, with the exception of here and there a little variation.

Before
CHRIST
about 1042.
† Heb.
greatnesses.

done all this greatness, in making known all these † great things.

20 O LORD, there is none like thee, neither is there any God beside thee, according to all that we have heard with our ears.

21 And what one nation in the earth is like thy people Israel, whom God went to redeem to be his own people, to make thee a name of greatness and terribleness, by driving out nations from before thy people, whom thou hast redeemed out of Egypt?

22 For thy people Israel didst thou make thine own people for ever; and thou, LORD, becamest their God.

23 Therefore now, LORD, let the thing that thou hast spoken concerning thy servant and concerning his house be established for ever, and do as thou hast said.

24 Let it even be established, that thy name may be magnified for ever, saying, The LORD of hosts is the God of Israel, even a God to Israel: and let the house of David thy servant be established before thee.

† Heb.
hast revealed the ear of thy servant.

25 For thou, O my God, † hast told thy servant that thou wilt build him an house: therefore thy servant hath found in his heart to pray before thee.

26 And now, LORD, thou art God, and hast promised this goodness unto thy servant:

|| Or, it hath pleased thee.

27 Now therefore || let it please thee to bless the house of thy servant, that it may be before thee for ever: for thou blessest, O LORD, and it shall be blessed for ever.

CHAP. XVIII.

1 David subdueth the Philistines and the Moabites. 3 He smiteth Hadarezer and the Syrians. 9 Thou sendest Hadoram with presents to bless David. 11 The presents and the spoil David dedicateth to God. 13 He putteth garrisons in Edom. 14 David's officers.

about 1010.
2 Sam. 8.
1. &c.

NOW after this ^a it came to pass, that David smote the Philistines, and subdued them, and took Gath and her towns out of the hand of the Philistines.

2 And he smote Moab; and the Moabites became David's servants, and brought gifts.

|| Or,
Hadarezer,
2 Sam. 8. 3.

3 ¶ And David smote || Hadarezer king of Zobah unto Hamath, as he went to establish his dominion by the river Euphrates.

4 And David took from him a thousand chariots, and seven thousand horsemen, and twenty thousand footmen: David also houghed all the chariot horses, but reserved of them an hundred chariots.

Before
CHRIST
about 1010.

5 And when the Syrians of † Damascus came to help Hadarezer king of Zobah, David slew of the Syrians two and twenty thousand men.

† Heb.
Darmasak.

6 Then David put garrisons in Syria-damascus; and the Syrians became David's servants, and brought gifts. Thus the LORD preserved David whithersoever he went.

7 And David took the shields of gold that were on the servants of Hadarezer, and brought them to Jerusalem.

8 Likewise from || Tibhath, and from Chun, cities of Hadarezer, brought David very much brass, wherewith ^b Solomon made the brasen sea, and the pillars, and the vessels of brass.

|| Called in the book of Samuel Betah, and Berothai.
b 1 Kings
7. 23.
2 Chron. 4
15.

9 ¶ Now when || Tou king of Hamath heard how David had smitten all the host of Hadarezer king of Zobah;

|| Or, Tvi,
2 Sam. 8. 9.

10 Hēsēt || Hadoram his son to king David, || to enquire of his welfare, and † to congratulate him, because he had fought against Hadarezer, and smitten him; (for Hadarezer † had war with Tou;) and with him all manner of vessels of gold and silver and brass.

|| Or,
Joram,
2 Sam. 8.
10.
|| Or,
to salute.
† Heb.
to bless.
† Heb. was the more of wars.

11 ¶ Then also king David dedicated unto the LORD, with the silver and the gold that he brought from all these nations; from Edom, and from Moab, and from the children of Ammon, and from the Philistines, and from Amalek.

12 Moreover Abishai the son of Zeruiah slew of the Edomites in the valley of salt eighteen thousand.

13 ¶ And he put garrisons in Edom; and all the Edomites became David's servants. Thus the LORD preserved David whithersoever he went.

14 ¶ So David reigned over all Israel, and executed judgment and justice among all his people.

|| Or,
remembrancer.
|| Called Ahimelech,
2 Sam. 8.
17.

15 And Joab the son of Zeruiah was over the host; and Jehoshaphat the son of Ahilud, || recorder.

16 And Zadok the son of Ahitub, and || Abimelech the son of Abiathar, were the priests; and || Shavsha was scribe;

|| Called Seraiah,
2 Sam. 8.
17.
and Shisha.
1 Kings 4.
3.

17 And Benaiah the son of Jehoiada was over the Cherethites and the Pelethites;

Chap. XVIII. ver. 1. Now after this] This chapter is repeated from 2 Sam. viii, with some slight variations, as to names particularly. For instance, we have, ver. 1, "Gath and her towns," instead of Metheg-ammah; also, ver. 8, "Tibhath and Chun," instead of Betah and Berothai; in all which cases we conclude that the places were called by different names. Bp. Patrick.

Before CHRIST about 1040. and the sons of David were chief † about the king.

† Heb. at the hand of the king.

CHAP. XIX.

1 David's messengers, sent to comfort Hanun the son of Nahash, are villanously entreated. 6 The Ammonites, strengthened by the Syrians, are overcome by Joab and Abishai. 16 Shophach, making a new supply of the Syrians, is slain by David.

about 1037. 2 Sam. 10. 1, &c.

NOW ^a it came to pass after this, that Nahash the king of the children of Ammon died, and his son reigned in his stead.

2 And David said, I will shew kindness unto Hanun the son of Nahash, because his father shewed kindness to me. And David sent messengers to comfort him concerning his father. So the servants of David came into the land of the children of Ammon to Hanun, to comfort him.

† Heb. In thine eyes doth David, &c.

3 But the princes of the children of Ammon said to Hanun, † Thinkest thou that David doth honour thy father, that he hath sent comforters unto thee? are not his servants come unto thee for to search, and to overthrow, and to spy out the land?

4 Wherefore Hanun took David's servants, and shaved them, and cut off their garments in the midst hard by their buttocks, and sent them away.

5 Then there went certain, and told David how the men were served. And he sent to meet them: for the men were greatly ashamed. And the king said, Tarry at Jericho until your beards be grown, and then return.

† Heb. to stink.

6 ¶ And when the children of Ammon saw that they had made themselves † odious to David, Hanun and the children of Ammon sent a thousand talents of silver to hire them chariots and horsemen out of Mesopotamia, and out of Syria-maachah, and out of Zobah.

7 So they hired thirty and two thousand chariots, and the king of Maachah and his people; who came and pitched before Medeba. And the children of Ammon gathered themselves together from their cities, and came to battle.

about 1037.

8 And when David heard of it, he sent Joab, and all the host of the mighty men.

9 And the children of Ammon came out, and put the battle in array before the gate of the city: and the kings that were come were by themselves in the field.

Chap. XIX. ver. 7. — thirty and two thousand chariots.] The meaning must probably be, so many foot soldiers who fought in chariots; for no soldiers are mentioned; and at 2 Sam. x. 6, it is expressly stated that they hired 20,000 footmen of Zobah, and 12,000 men of Ish-tob, which together make up the number 10 Now when Joab saw that † the battle was set against him before and behind, he chose out of all the ‖ choice of Israel, and put them in array against the Syrians.

11 And the rest of the people he delivered unto the hand of † Abishai his brother, and they set themselves in array against the children of Ammon.

12 And he said, If the Syrians be too strong for me, then thou shalt help me: but if the children of Ammon be too strong for thee, then I will help thee.

13 Be of good courage, and let us behave ourselves valiantly for our people, and for the cities of our God: and let the LORD do that which is good in his sight.

14 So Joab and the people that were with him drew nigh before the Syrians unto the battle; and they fled before him.

15 And when the children of Ammon saw that the Syrians were fled, they likewise fled before Abishai his brother, and entered into the city. Then Joab came to Jerusalem.

16 ¶ And when the Syrians saw that they were put to the worse before Israel, they sent messengers, and drew forth the Syrians that were beyond the ‖ river: and ‖ Shophach the captain of the host of Hadarezer went before them.

about 1036.

‖ That is, Euphrates.
† Or, Shobach, 2 Sam. 10. 16.

17 And it was told David; and he gathered all Israel, and passed over Jordan, and came upon them, and set the battle in array against them. So when David had put the battle in array against the Syrians, they fought with him.

18 But the Syrians fled before Israel; and David slew of the Syrians seven thousand men which fought in chariots, and forty thousand footmen, and killed Shophach the captain of the host.

19 And when the servants of Hadarezer saw that they were put to the worse before Israel, they made peace with David, and became his servants: neither would the Syrians help the children of Ammon any more.

CHAP. XX.

1 Rabbah is besieged by Joab, spoiled by David, and the people thereof tortured. 4 Three giants are slain in three several overthrows of the Philistines.

about 1035. 2 Sam. 11. 1.

AND ^a it came to pass, that † after the year was expired, at the time that † Heb. at the return of the year.

32,000. Bp. Patrick. The words admit of being translated "thirty and two thousand with chariots." Dr. Waterland, Hou- bigant.

Chap. XX. ver. 1. And it came to pass, that after the year &c.] In this part of the history, the account of David's adultery with

Before
CHRIST
about 1035.

kings go out to battle, Joab led forth the power of the army, and wasted the country of the children of Ammon, and came and besieged Rabbah. But David tarried at Jerusalem. And Joab smote Rabbah, and destroyed it.

about 1025.
2 Sam. 12.
26.
† Heb.
the weight
of.

2 And David took the crown of their king from off his head, and found it † to weigh a talent of gold, and there were precious stones in it; and it was set upon David's head: and he brought also exceeding much spoil out of the city.

3 And he brought out the people that were in it, and cut them with saws, and with harrows of iron, and with axes. Even so dealt David with all the cities of the children of Ammon. And David and all the people returned to Jerusalem.

about 1015.
2 Sam. 21.
15.
‡ Or,
continued.
† Heb. stood.
‡ Or, Goliath.
‡ Or,
Rapha.
‡ Called also Jarecoregim.
2 Sam. 21.
19.

4 ¶ And it came to pass after this, that there † † arose war at Gezer with the Philistines; at which time Sibbechai the Hushathite slew Sippai, that was of the children of the giant: and they were subdued.

5 And there was war again with the Philistines; and Elhanan the son of † † Jair slew Lahmi the brother of Goliath the Gittite, whose spear staff was like a weaver's beam.

2 Sam. 21.
20.
† Heb.
a man of measure.

6 And yet again † there was war at Gath, where was † a man of great stature, whose fingers and toes were four and twenty, six on each hand, and six on each foot: and he also was † the son of the giant.

† Heb.
born to the giant, or,
Raphia.
‡ Or, reproached.
‡ Called Shammah,
1 Sam. 16.
9.

7 But when he † defied Israel, Jonathan the son of † † Shimea David's brother slew him.

8 These were born unto the giant in Gath; and they fell by the hand of David, and by the hand of his servants.

CHAP. XXI.

1 David, tempted by Satan, forceth Joab to number the people. 5 The number of the people being brought, David repenteth of it. 9 David having three plagues propounded by Gad chooseth the pestilence. 14 After the death of seventy thousand, David by repentance preventeth the destruction of Jerusalem. 18 David, by Gad's direction, purchaseth Ornan's threshing floor: where having built an altar, God giveth a sign of his favour by fire, and stayeth the plague. 28 David sacrificeth there, being restrained from Gibeon by fear of the angel.

Before
CHRIST
1017.

AND † Satan stood up against Israel, and provoked David to number Israel.

2 And David said to Joab and to the rulers of the people, Go, number Israel from Beer-sheba even to Dan; and bring the number of them to me, that I may know it.

3 And Joab answered, The Lord make his people an hundred times so many more as they be: but, my lord the king, are they not all my lord's servants? why then doth my lord require this thing? why will he be a cause of trespass to Israel?

4 Nevertheless the king's word prevailed against Joab. Wherefore Joab departed, and went throughout all Israel, and came to Jerusalem.

5 ¶ And Joab gave the sum of the number of the people unto David. And all they of Israel were a thousand thousand and an hundred thousand men that drew sword: and Judah was four hundred threescore and ten thousand men that drew sword.

6 But Levi and Benjamin counted he not among them: for the king's word was abominable to Joab.

7 † And God was displeased with this thing; therefore he smote Israel.

8 And David said unto God, † I have sinned greatly, because I have done this thing: but now, I beseech thee, do away the iniquity of thy servant; for I have done very foolishly.

† Heb.
And it was evil in the eyes of the LORD concerning this thing.
2 Sam.
24. 10.

Bath-sheba intervenes at 2 Sam. xi; but, as that transaction is there so fully related, it is in the book of Chronicles wholly omitted. Bp. Patrick.

3. — and cut them with saws, &c.] It is not said that David did thus to all the people, nor is any thing more implied than that he did thus to some of them; and it is certain, from 2 Chron. xx. &c. that he did not wholly extirpate the children of Ammon. It is probable that David was thus remarkably severe on some of the children of Ammon, as a retaliation or punishment for some horrid cruelties of which they had been guilty towards his Israelitish subjects, although we are not particularly informed what these cruelties were. It appeared from the notes on 2 Sam. xii. 31, that some learned men wish to vindicate David from the charge of cruelty, by explaining the text there in the sense of his putting them to labour under saws, &c. Those who favour this opinion read in the present passage, instead of "cut them with saws, &c." he "ruled them by the saws, by the harrows, &c." that is, made them slaves, and condemned them to these servile employments. Parkhurst.

4. — that there arose war at Gezer &c.] At this place followed the several transactions and disasters of David's affairs for the space of about thirteen years, which are to be supplied from the second book of Samuel, from chap. xii. to chap. xxi. 15, &c. Pyle.

Chap. XXI. ver. 1. And Satan stood up &c.] See the notes at 2 Sam. xxiv. 1. On the phrase "stood up against Israel," it should be remarked, that standing up was the posture of those who charged and accused any person of a crime in a court of justice; see 1 Kings xxii. 21. Thus the allusion here may be, that Satan is represented as bringing some sin to the charge of the Israelites, which he laid before God as a reason for punishing them. For this is the manner of the holy Scripture, thus to bring things down, and accommodate them to the lowest capacities. Bp. Patrick.

Before CHRIST 1017. 9 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Gad, David's seer, saying, † Heb. stretch out. 10 Go and tell David, saying, Thus saith the LORD, I † offer thee three things: choose thee one of them, that I may do it unto thee.

† Heb. Take to thee. 11 So Gad came to David, and said unto him, Thus saith the LORD, † Choose thee

12 Either three years famine; or three months to be destroyed before thy foes, while that the sword of thine enemies overtaketh thee; or else three days the sword of the LORD, even the pestilence, in the land, and the angel of the LORD destroying throughout all the coasts of Israel. Now therefore advise thyself what word I shall bring again to him that sent me.

¶ Or, many. 13 And David said unto Gad, I am in a great strait: let me fall now into the hand of the LORD; for very ¶ great are his mercies: but let me not fall into the hand of man.

14 ¶ So the LORD sent pestilence upon Israel: and there fell of Israel seventy thousand men.

¶ 2 Sam. 24. 16. 15 And God sent an ° angel unto Jerusalem to destroy it: and as he was destroying, the LORD beheld, and he repented him of the evil, and said to the angel that destroyed, It is enough, stay now thine hand. And the angel of the LORD stood by the threshingfloor of ¶ Or, Araunah, 2 Sam. 24. 18.

16 And David lifted up his eyes, and saw the angel of the LORD stand between the earth and the heaven, having a drawn sword in his hand stretched out over Jerusalem. Then David and the elders of Israel, who were clothed in sackcloth, fell upon their faces.

17 And David said unto God, Is it not I that commanded the people to be numbered? even I it is that have sinned and done evil indeed; but as for these sheep, what have they done? let thine hand, I pray thee, O LORD my God, be on me, and on my father's house; but not on thy people, that they should be plagued.

Before CHRIST 1017. 18 ¶ Then the ° angel of the LORD commanded Gad to say to David, that David should go up, and set up an altar unto the LORD in the threshingfloor of Ornan the Jebusite. ¶ 2 Chron. 3. 1.

19 And David went up at the saying of Gad, which he spake in the name of the LORD.

20 ¶ And Ornan turned back, and saw the angel; and his four sons with him hid themselves. Now Ornan was threshing wheat. ¶ Or, When Ornan turned back and saw the angel, then he and his four sons with him hid themselves.

21 And as David came to Ornan, Ornan looked and saw David, and went out of the threshingfloor, and bowed himself to David with his face to the ground.

22 Then David said to Ornan, † Grant me the place of this threshingfloor, that I may build an altar therein unto the LORD: thou shalt grant it me for the full price: that the plague may be stayed from the people. † Heb. Give.

23 And Ornan said unto David, Take it to thee, and let my lord the king do that which is good in his eyes: lo, I give thee the oxen also for burnt offerings, and the threshing instruments for wood, and the wheat for the meat offering; I give it all.

24 And king David said to Ornan, Nay; but I will verily buy it for the full price: for I will not take that which is thine for the LORD, nor offer burnt offerings without cost.

25 So ° David gave to Ornan for the place six hundred shekels of gold by weight. ¶ 2 Sam. 24. 24.

26 And David built there an altar unto the LORD, and offered burnt offerings and peace offerings, and called upon the LORD; and he answered him from heaven by fire upon the altar of burnt offering.

27 And the LORD commanded the angel; and he put up his sword again into the sheath thereof.

28 ¶ At that time when David saw that the LORD had answered him in the threshingfloor of Ornan the Jebusite, then he sacrificed there.

9. — Gad, David's seer,] See the note on 2 Chron. xxxiii. 19.

20. And Ornan turned back, and saw the angel;] This book, it will be observed, supplies many circumstances omitted in the account given in the book of Samuel; and amongst these is the circumstance of Ornan, or Araunah, having himself seen the angel; for there it was only mentioned that David saw him. Bp. Patrick.

23. — and the threshing instruments for wood,] That is, to burn the sacrifice of the oxen. The threshing instrument used in the East is not like a flail, but is a sledge, drawn by two oxen, and driven by a man seated in a chair fixed on the sledge. Such instruments as these might serve to accomplish the purpose of consuming the sacrifice, which our flails could not have done, unless they were used in a very great number. Fragments to Calmet.

25. — six hundred shekels of gold] See note at 2 Sam. xxiv. 24. 26. — he answered him — by fire] In a similar manner God testified His acceptance of the sacrifices of Gideon and Elijah; and this was the highest and plainest token of His gracious acceptance of any sacrifice. Bp. Patrick.

28. — then he sacrificed there.] David, finding how acceptable to God this place was, concluded it was his duty to continue to

Before
CHRIST
1017.

1 Chap. 16.
39.
2 Chron.
1. 3.
1 Kings
3. 4.

29 For the tabernacle of the LORD, which Moses made in the wilderness, and the altar of the burnt offering, were at that season in the high place at Gibeon.

30 But David could not go before it to enquire of God: for he was afraid because of the sword of the angel of the LORD.

CHAP. XXII.

¹ David, foreknowing the place of the temple, prepareth abundance for the building of it. ⁶ He instructeth Solomon in God's promises, and his duty in building the temple. ¹⁷ He chargeth the princes to assist his son.

THEN David said, This is the house of the LORD God, and this is the altar of the burnt offering for Israel.

2 And David commanded to gather together the strangers that were in the land of Israel; and he set masons to hew wrought stones to build the house of God.

3 And David prepared iron in abundance for the nails for the doors of the gates, and for the joinings; and brass in abundance without weight;

4 Also cedar trees in abundance: for the Zidonians and they of Tyre brought much cedar wood to David.

¹ Chap. 29.
1. 5 And David said, ^a Solomon my son is young and tender, and the house that is to be builded for the LORD must be exceeding magnifical, of fame and of glory throughout all countries: I will therefore now offer up such sort of sacrifices as these in it, since God had in a manner consecrated it to His service by so special a testimony of His Divine favour and acceptance. Accordingly, though the tabernacle with the altar was still at Gibeon, yet the king made this for the future the place of his worship. And here it was that he appointed the temple to be built. See the next chapter, ver. 1, 2, &c. and 2 Chron. iii. 1. Pyle.

30. — he was afraid because of the sword of the angel] As he thought that God had now consecrated to His service the threshing-floor of Araunah, he thought there might still be danger that the angel might smite Jerusalem if he did not continue to worship God there, and if he went to the altar at Gibeon. The altar which he had now erected was set up, by the express command of God, as well as that of Moses; and he probably knew that God intended a temple should be built on this spot to His perpetual honour. Bp. Patrick.

Chap. XXII. ver. 1. — This is the house] This is the place where the temple must be built. Dr. Wall. From the tokens of acceptance which God had been pleased to afford, David concluded that this was the place in which "the house of the Lord God" was to be built, which he had purposed to erect himself, and which was now to be intrusted to his son Solomon; and that in this place was to be "the altar of the burnt offering" which was to be made. Dr. Wells.

2. — the strangers that were in the land] The proselytes to the Jewish religion, who were probably better skilled in the arts and works which follow, than the Israelites themselves. Bp. Patrick.

5. — Solomon my son &c.] It hence appears, that it was well known he intended Solomon for his successor. Bp. Patrick. The make preparation for it. So David prepared abundantly before his death. Before CHRIST

about 1017.

6 ¶ Then he called for Solomon his son, and charged him to build an house for the LORD God of Israel.

7 And David said to Solomon, My son, as for me, it was in my mind to build an house unto the name of the LORD my God:

8 But the word of the LORD came to me, saying, ^b Thou hast shed blood abundantly, and hast made great wars: thou shalt not build an house unto my name, because thou hast shed much blood upon the earth in my sight. ^b Chap. 28.
3.
2 Sam. 7.
13.

9 Behold, a son shall be born to thee, who shall be a man of rest; and I will give him rest from all his enemies round about: for his name shall be || Solomon, and I will give peace and quietness unto Israel in his days. || That is, peaceable.

10 He shall build an house for my name; and he shall be my son, and I will be his father; and I will establish the throne of his kingdom over Israel for ever.

11 Now, my son, the LORD be with thee; and prosper thou, and build the house of the LORD thy God, as he hath said of thee.

12 Only the LORD give thee wisdom and understanding, and give thee charge concerning Israel, that thou mayest keep the law of the LORD thy God.

main considerations which, as David here states, determined him to make this early provision for the building of the temple, were, the great magnificence of the intended structure, and the uncommon care which would be required to accomplish it properly; which he concluded would be too weighty a concern for so young a prince as Solomon would be at his accession to the throne. Pyle.

8. — because thou hast shed much blood upon the earth] Though this reason for David's being forbidden to build the house of God is not mentioned in the book of Samuel, (see 2 Sam. vii. 12, &c.) yet it is recorded here, to shew perhaps that, although the wars of David were warranted by God, and succeeded through His gracious aid in an extraordinary manner, yet it did not so well accord with the majesty of God, to have a temple built by one who had shed so much blood, as by one whose reign passed in quietness and peace. Bp. Patrick.

There is a particular reflection to be made on God's not approving of David's building the temple at Jerusalem, because he had been a man of war, and had shed much blood. We may hence conclude, that God, who is a God of peace, does not delight in blood; that even just and necessary wars are a great evil; and that by peace and tranquillity, rather than by confusion and trouble, His kingdom is promoted and advanced. Ostervald.

10. — I will establish the throne — for ever.] In the proper and full sense of the words, this can only belong to Christ: for Solomon reigned only forty years; and, after that, his kingdom was torn to pieces. Accordingly the author of the Epistle to the Hebrews applies this expression to Christ, Heb. i. 5. Bp. Patrick.

Before
CHRIST
about 1017.

13 Then shalt thou prosper, if thou takest heed to fulfil the statutes and judgments which the LORD charged Moses with concerning Israel: be strong, and of good courage; dread not, nor be dismayed.

¶ Or, in my poverty.

14 Now, behold, ¶ in my trouble I have prepared for the house of the LORD an hundred thousand talents of gold, and a thousand thousand talents of silver; and of brass and iron without ^c weight; for it is in abundance: timber also and stone have I prepared; and thou mayest add thereto.

^c As ver. 3.

¶ That is, masons and carpenters.

15 Moreover there are workmen with thee in abundance, hewers and ¶ workers of stone and timber, and all manner of cunning men for every manner of work.

16 Of the gold, the silver, and the brass, and the iron, there is no number. Arise therefore, and be doing, and the LORD be with thee.

17 ¶ David also commanded all the princes of Israel to help Solomon his son, saying,

18 Is not the LORD your God with you? and hath he not given you rest on every side? for he hath given the inhabitants of the land into mine hand; and the land is subdued before the LORD, and before his people.

19 Now set your heart and your soul to seek the LORD your God; arise therefore, and build ye the sanctuary of the LORD God, to bring the ark of the covenant of the LORD, and the holy vessels of God, into the house that is to be built to the name of the LORD.

13. Then shalt thou prosper, &c.] David here gives to his son the truly valuable instruction to improve his happy advantages, and to be discouraged by no difficulties in doing his duty; and always to remember that his own, and the kingdom's prosperity, depended solely and entirely on the piety and justice of his government, and upon his and their scrupulous regard to the laws of their religion. Pyle.

14. — in my trouble] In my reign, which has been full of various troubles. Dr. Wells.

— an hundred thousand talents of gold, &c.] This sum, when added to those of chap. xxix. 3—5, &c. is so prodigious, that many judicious writers have come to the conclusion, either that the talents here spoken of were another sort of talent, of far less value than those mentioned by Moses, or else that some error as to the numbers may have been introduced into the text; for these sums amount to no less than 800 millions sterling of our money. Pyle.

The Hebrew word for "talent," signifies a cake or mass of metal. The account here given of the vast wealth prepared by David appears incredible, if we allow the talent mentioned to be that of which Moses speaks, and to be of the value which is commonly supposed. As to an error in the numbers, it should be mentioned that Josephus, the Jewish historian, states them at 10,000 talents of gold, and 100,000 talents of silver, which is a tenth part of what we read in our present copies of this text. The Arabick

CHAP. XXIII.

Before
CHRIST
1015.

1 David in his old age maketh Solomon king. 2 The number and distribution of the Levites. 7 The families of the Gershonites. 12 The sons of Kohath. 21 The sons of Merari. 24 The office of the Levites.

SO when David was old and full of days, he ^a made Solomon his son king over ^a Israel. ^a Chap. 28. 5.

2 ¶ And he gathered together all the princes of Israel, with the priests and the Levites. 1015.

3 Now the Levites were numbered from the age of ^b thirty years and upward: and their number by their polls, man by man, was thirty and eight thousand. ^b Numb. 4. 3.

4 Of which, twenty and four thousand were ¶ to set forward the work of the house of the LORD; and six thousand were officers and judges. ¶ Or, to oversee.

5 Moreover four thousand were porters; and four thousand praised the LORD with the instruments which I made, said David, to praise therewith.

6 And ^c David divided them into ^c courses among the sons of Levi, namely, Gershon, Kohath, and Merari. ^c Exod. 6. 16. chap. 6. 1, &c.

7 ¶ Of the ^d Gershonites were, ¶ Laadan, and Shimei. ^d Chron. 3. 14. & 29. 25. ¶ Heb. divisions.

8 The sons of Laadan; the chief was Jehiel, and Zetham, and Joel, three. ^d Chap. 26. 21.

9 The sons of Shimei; Shelomith, and Haziel, and Haran, three. These were the chief of the fathers of Laadan. ¶ Or, Libni, chap. 6. 17.

10 And the sons of Shimei were, Jahath, ¶ Zina, and Jeush, and Beriah. These four were the sons of Shimei. ¶ Or, Zizah, ver. 11.

11 And Jahath was the chief, and Zizah version says, "Gold a thousand talents, and silver a thousand talents." At the same time we should remember, that, in an age when princes were accustomed to hoard up vast quantities of gold and silver, as Eastern princes do still, it is by no means improbable that David, in his many successful wars with various great nations, might amass a quantity of treasure which to us appears prodigious. Parkhurst.

Chap. XXIII. ver. 2. And he gathered together all the princes] He called together a general assembly of the heads of the nation, to whom he gave the scheme he had been formerly projecting for the regular courses of the priests and Levites in the temple service, as a method of preventing the inconveniences he had observed in the usual manner of performing it. Pyle.

David was well aware of what vast consequence the establishment of the publick worship of God, in true piety and purity, was to the virtue and happiness of a people; inasmuch as all religion depends upon it, and would without it absolutely fail amongst men, in the space of a few years. He therefore judged it advisable to allure men to it, by all the advantages of a graceful, solemn, and delightful magnificence; as the sacred writer proceeds to describe in this and the following chapters. Dr. Delancy.

3. Now the Levites were numbered] It was appointed by law, Numb. iv. 3; viii. 24, &c. that the Levites were to be called up to enter on their duties at the age of twenty-five or thirty, and were to be discharged at the age of fifty. Pyle.

Before
CHRIST
about 1045.
† Heb.
did not multiply sons.

* Exod. 6.
20.
† Exod. 28.
1.
Hebr. 5. 4.

* Exod. 2.
22.

* Exod. 18.
3, 4.

† Chap. 26.
25.
|| Or,
the first.

† Heb. were highly multiplied.

† Or, kinsmen.

† Numb. 10.
24.

the second: but Jeush and Beriah † had not many sons; therefore they were in one reckoning, according to their father's house.

12 ¶ The sons of Kohath; Amram, Izhar, Hebron, and Uzziel, four.

13 The sons of * Amram; Aaron and Moses: and † Aaron was separated, that he should sanctify the most holy things, he and his sons for ever, to burn incense before the LORD, to minister unto him, and to bless in his name for ever.

14 † Now concerning Moses the man of God, his sons were named of the tribe of Levi.

15 ^b The sons of Moses were, Gershom, and Eliezer.

16 Of the sons of Gershom, Shebuel was the chief.

17 And the sons of Eliezer were, ⁱ Rehabiah || the chief. And Eliezer had none other sons; but the sons of Rehabiah † were very many.

18 Of the sons of Izhar; Shelomith the chief.

19 Of the sons of Hebron; Jeriah the first, Amariah the second, Jahaziel the third, and Jekameam the fourth.

20 Of the sons of Uzziel; Micah the first, and Jesiah the second.

21 ¶ The sons of Merari; Mahli, and Mushi. The sons of Mahli; Eleazar, and Kish.

22 And Eleazar died, and had no sons, but daughters: and their || brethren the sons of Kish took them.

23 The sons of Mushi; Mahli, and Eder, and Jeremoth, three.

24 ¶ These were the sons of ^k Levi after the house of their fathers; even the chief of the fathers, as they were counted by number of names by their polls, that did the work for the service of the house of the LORD, from the age of ^l twenty years and upward. ^{Before CHRIST about 1045.}

25 For David said, The LORD God of Israel hath given rest unto his people, || that they may dwell in Jerusalem for ever: ^{† Or, and he dwelleth in Jerusalem, &c.}

26 And also unto the Levites: they shall no more carry the tabernacle, nor any vessels of it for the service thereof.

27 For by the last words of David the Levites were † numbered from twenty years old and above: ^{about 1015. † Heb. numbers.}

28 Because † their office was to wait on the sons of Aaron for the service of the house of the LORD, in the courts, and in the chambers, and in the purifying of all holy things, and the work of the service of the house of God; ^{† Heb. their station was at the hand of the sons of Aaron.}

29 Both for the shewbread, and for ^m the fine flour for meat offering, and for the unleavened cakes, and for that which is baked in the || pan, and for that which is fried, and for all manner of measure and size; ^{m Chap. 9. 29, &c. Lev. 6. 21. || Or, flat plate.}

30 And to stand every morning to thank and praise the LORD, and likewise at even;

31 And to offer all burnt sacrifices unto the LORD in the sabbaths, in the new moons, and on the set feasts, by number, according to the order commanded unto them, continually before the LORD:

32 And that they should keep the charge of the tabernacle of the congregation, and the charge of the holy place, and the charge of the sons of Aaron their brethren, in the service of the house of the LORD.

12. The sons of Kohath;] From the family of Kohath, the head of the second class, descended Moses and Aaron: Aaron and his posterity were honoured with the priesthood; but Moses, ver. 14, though the most eminent Prophet and governor that ever the Israelitish nation had, left his children in no higher situation than that of simple Levites, who spread into numerous families, the chief of which will be mentioned. Pyle.

14. Now concerning Moses &c.] Such was the wonderful humility and modesty of this great man, that he did not aim at obtaining high situations for his posterity: which circumstance is perhaps here noted, to the end that none amongst the Israelites might presume, on account of their noble descent, to meddle with the priesthood, which was settled in the family of Aaron. Bp. Patrick.

24. — as they were counted — from the age of twenty years] It appears that the Levites were twice numbered and registered in the time of David, as they had anciently been in the time of Moses. At the first poll, ver. 3, they were not taken into the service till the age of thirty; but afterwards, on the king considering that the service of the temple would require more hands than that of the tabernacle, and would at the same time be more light and easy, from the circumstance of there being no ark and tabernacle to carry about from place to place, he ordered, at the second poll, all to be summoned from the age of twenty, in order that they might be employed in some easy and familiar business, till they were fit to go through all the offices that belonged to them. Pyle.

25. — dwell in Jerusalem for ever:] It must always be remembered, that these expressions, of their dwelling in Jerusalem “for ever,” imply the condition of their continued obedience to God, in which if they failed, they would be expelled from their habitations. Bp. Patrick.

29. — for all manner of measure and size;] The standards of all measures and weights were kept in the sanctuary, in the custody of the Levites, of whom it was the duty to see that they were kept with exactness. Hence we frequently read of “the shekel of the sanctuary,” by which is meant the shekel of the true standard. It should be observed, that in a similar manner the standard weights and measures used anciently to be kept in Pagan temples, and, in later times, in Christian churches. Bp. Patrick.

Before
CHRIST
1015.

CHAP. XXIV.

1 The divisions of the sons of Aaron by lot into four and twenty orders. 20 The Kohathites, 27 and the Merarites divided by lot.

^a Lev. 10.
1.

^b Numb. 3.
4. & 26. 61.

NOW these are the divisions of the sons of Aaron. ^a The sons of Aaron; Nadab, and Abihu, Eleazar, and Ithamar.

2 But ^b Nadab and Abihu died before their father, and had no children: therefore Eleazar and Ithamar executed the priest's office.

3 And David distributed them, both Zadok of the sons of Eleazar, and Ahimelech of the sons of Ithamar, according to their offices in their service.

4 And there were more chief men found of the sons of Eleazar than of the sons of Ithamar; and thus were they divided. Among the sons of Eleazar there were sixteen chief men of the house of their fathers, and eight among the sons of Ithamar according to the house of their fathers.

5 Thus were they divided by lot, one sort with another; for the governors of the sanctuary, and governors of the house of God, were of the sons of Eleazar, and of the sons of Ithamar.

6 And Shemaiah the son of Nethaneel the scribe, one of the Levites, wrote them before the king, and the princes, and Zadok the priest, and Ahimelech the son of Abiathar, and before the chief of the fathers of the priests and Levites: one principal household being taken for Eleazar, and one taken for Ithamar.

† Heb. house of the father.

Chap. XXIV. ver. 1. Now these are the divisions] David, having settled the courses of the Levites, ordered, in much the same manner, those of the priests, as their families were severally derived from the only two sons of Aaron who survived, Eleazar and Ithamar. Pyle.

These courses of the priests, many of the Hebrew doctors assert, were first ordained by Moses, who, as they relate, established them eight in number, four of the line of Eleazar, and four of the line of Ithamar; then Samuel added eight more, and made them sixteen; and David added other eight, and made them twenty-four. However, it is certain that the first time the Scripture speaks of any courses, it makes mention of twenty-four, and that David is recorded as the founder and distributor of them. These courses served under the first temple, and continued in their ministry till the Babylonish captivity; but it is generally allowed that no more than four of them returned from that captivity. Every one of these courses ministered its week from sabbath to sabbath. The course which went out did not depart till the sabbath was over, and that which came in, entered when it began. They served a week only at a time, so that the attendance of each course was required twice in the year. As these courses were determined by lot, so every particular priest had his office appointed to him by the same method. Thus the lot determined who should attend the altar of incense, who should feed the fire, who carry out the incense; and so of all other parts of the service. Levis.

3. — Zadok —, Ahimelech] These two were the chief persons

Before
CHRIST
1015.

7 Now the first lot came forth to Jehoiarib, the second to Jedaiah,

8 The third to Harim, the fourth to Seorim,

9 The fifth to Malchijah, the sixth to Mijamin,

10 The seventh to Hakkoz, the eighth to ^c Abijah,

^c Luke 1. 5.

11 The ninth to Jeshuah, the tenth to Shecaniah,

12 The eleventh to Eliashib, the twelfth to Jakim,

13 The thirteenth to Huppah, the fourteenth to Jeshebeab,

14 The fifteenth to Bilgah, the sixteenth to Immer,

15 The seventeenth to Hezir, the eighteenth to Apses,

16 The nineteenth to Pethahiah, the twentieth to Jehezkeel,

17 The one and twentieth to Jachin, the two and twentieth to Gamul.

18 The three and twentieth to Delaiah, the four and twentieth to Maaziah.

19 These were the orderings of them in their service to come into the house of the LORD, according to their manner, under Aaron their father, as the LORD God of Israel had commanded him.

20 ¶ And the rest of the sons of Levi were these: Of the sons of Amram; Shubael: of the sons of Shubael; Jehdeiah.

21 Concerning Rehabiah: of the sons of Rehabiah, the first was Isshiah.

in David's days of the posterity of those sons of Aaron, Eleazar and Ithamar.

5. Thus were they divided by lot, &c.] To prevent all jealousy and ground of complaint, the selection of persons was determined by lot, the most usual and ancient method of choosing to sacred offices. The "governours of the sanctuary" probably were the principal ministers about holy things: in the expression "the governours of the house of God," there is no word for house in Hebrew; they seem to have been "the chief judges." Bp. Patrick.

This appointment of separate courses for the priests and Levites, according to which they were to officiate by turns, carried one great national advantage with it; (and possibly many more not now to be understood;) namely, that this weekly circulation of priests and Levites tended to diffuse a general acquaintance amongst the different inhabitants of the kingdom.

19. These were the orderings &c.] Thus were they ranged into their weekly courses, under the high priest, the successor of Aaron for the time being, who had the inspection over them, and took care that there should be no confusion or interfering amongst them. Pyle.

20. And the rest of the sons of Levi &c.] The author here speaks again of the Levites who were before named in chap. xxiii, to distinguish them from the priests, and to shew that they had all their places assigned to them by lot. Some names are here mentioned as descended from Merari, which are mentioned no where else; but we can have no reasonable doubt, that the author of this book derived them from authentick records. Bp. Patrick.

Before
CHRIST
1015.
Chap. 24.
19. & 26.
41.

22 Of the Izharites; Shelomoth: of the sons of Shelomoth; Jahath.

23 And the sons of ^dHebron; Jeriah the first, Amariah the second, Jahaziel the third, Jekameam the fourth.

24 Of the sons of Uzziel; Michah: of the sons of Michah; Shamir.

25 The brother of Michah was Isshiah: of the sons of Isshiah; Zechariah.

26 The sons of Merari were Mahli and Mushi: the sons of Jaaziah; Beno.

27 ¶ The sons of Merari by Jaaziah; Beno, and Shoham, and Zaccur, and Ibri.

28 Of Mahli came Eleazar, who had no sons.

29 Concerning Kish: the son of Kish was Jerahmeel.

30 The sons also of Mushi; Mahli, and Eder, and Jerimoth. These were the sons of the Levites after the house of their fathers.

31 These likewise cast lots over against their brethren the sons of Aaron in the presence of David the king, and Zadok, and Ahimelech, and the chief of the fathers of the priests and Levites, even the principal fathers over against their younger brethren.

CHAP. XXV.

1 The number and offices of the singers. 8 Their division by lot into four and twenty orders.

about 1015.

MOREOVER David and the captains of the host separated to the service of the sons of Asaph, and of Heman, and of Jeduthun, who should prophesy with harps, with psalteries, and with cymbals: and the number of the workmen according to their service was:

[Otherwise called Jesse's sons, verse 14.]

2 Of the sons of Asaph; Zaccur, and Joseph, and Nethaniah, and || Asarelah, the

31. — the principal fathers over against their younger brethren.] This is obscurely expressed; but the meaning is, that the elder and younger had their places by lot, not by seniority of houses: they that were of greater dignity drew lots against those who were of less; and all were to take their courses as they chanced to fall, to the elder or to the younger family. Bp. Patrick.

Chap. XXV. ver. 1. — the captains of the host] We cannot understand by this expression the commanders in war, since it would be absurd to think that they interfered in arranging the service of the temple. We must therefore understand to be meant the companies of priests, who waited on the service of God at the temple; the captains or chief leaders of whom, together with David, divided the singers, as is hereafter related. Thorndike.

— who should prophesy &c.] That is, should sing the psalms which David and other Prophets composed. For these young men were not actually Prophets; but are on this account said to sons of Asaph under the hands of Asaph, which prophesied † according to the order of the king.

Before
CHRIST
about 1015.

† Heb.
by the hands
of the king.
|| Or, Izri,
verse 11.
|| With Shimei mentioned,
verse 17.

3 Of Jeduthun: the sons of Jeduthun; Gedaliah, and || Zeri, and Jeshaiiah, Hashabiah, and Mattithiah, || six, under the hands of their father Jeduthun, who prophesied with a harp, to give thanks and to praise the Lord.

4 Of Heman: the sons of Heman; Bukkiah, Mattaniah, || Uzziel, || Shebuel, and Jerimoth, Hananiah, Hanani, Eliathah, Giddalti, and Romamti-ezer, Joshbekashah, Mallothi, Hothir, and Mahazioth:

|| Or,
Azareel,
verse 18.
|| Or,
Shubael,
verse 20.

5 All these were the sons of Heman the king's seer in the || words of God, to lift up the horn. And God gave to Heman fourteen sons and three daughters.

|| Or,
matters.

6 All these were under the hands of their father for song in the house of the Lord, with cymbals, psalteries and harps, for the service of the house of God, † according to the king's order to Asaph, Jeduthun, and Heman.

† Heb.
by the hands
of the king.

7 So the number of them, with their brethren that were instructed in the songs of the Lord, even all that were cunning, was two hundred fourscore and eight.

8 ¶ And they cast lots, ward against ward, as well the small as the great, the teacher as the scholar.

9 Now the first lot came forth for Asaph to Joseph: the second to Gedaliah, who with his brethren and sons were twelve:

10 The third to Zaccur, he, his sons, and his brethren, were twelve:

11 The fourth to Izri, he, his sons, and his brethren, were twelve:

12 The fifth to Nethaniah, he, his sons, and his brethren, were twelve:

13 The sixth to Bukkiah, he, his sons, and his brethren, were twelve:

“prophesy,” because they sang in the service of God those divine prophetic hymns, which were composed by men divinely inspired. “The number of the workmen according to their service” should rather be translated, “The number of the men of the ministry (that is, of those who ministered in singing and playing on instruments) according to their service was as follows.” Bp. Patrick.

3. — the sons of Jeduthun; — six,] Only five names are mentioned; that of Shimei (as the margin states) seems to have been omitted by a transcriber, and is given at verse 17. Dr. Wall.

5. — to lift up the horn.] That is, at stated times to blow aloud with trumpets made of horn: this seems to be the most natural sense of the expression, though some have understood it to mean figuratively the singing of hymns to magnify the power, greatness, and exaltation of David's kingdom, as we find power and exaltation frequently expressed in Scripture by a horn. Bp. Patrick.

Before
CHRIST
about 1015.

Before
CHRIST
about 1015.

14 The seventh to Jesharelah, he, his sons, and his brethren, were twelve :
15 The eighth to Jeshaiiah, he, his sons, and his brethren, were twelve :
16 The ninth to Mattaniah, he, his sons, and his brethren, were twelve :
17 The tenth to Shimei, he, his sons, and his brethren, were twelve :
18 The eleventh to Azareel, he, his sons, and his brethren, were twelve :
19 The twelfth to Hashabiah, he, his sons, and his brethren, were twelve :
20 The thirteenth to Shubael, he, his sons, and his brethren, were twelve :
21 The fourteenth to Mattithiah, he, his sons, and his brethren, were twelve :
22 The fifteenth to Jeremoth, he, his sons, and his brethren, were twelve :
23 The sixteenth to Hananiah, he, his sons, and his brethren, were twelve :
24 The seventeenth to Joshbekashah, he, his sons, and his brethren, were twelve :
25 The eighteenth to Hanani, he, his sons, and his brethren, were twelve :
26 The nineteenth to Mallothi, he, his sons, and his brethren, were twelve :
27 The twentieth to Eliathah, he, his sons, and his brethren, were twelve :
28 The one and twentieth to Hothir, he, his sons, and his brethren, were twelve :
29 The two and twentieth to Giddalti, he, his sons, and his brethren, were twelve :
30 The three and twentieth to Mahazioth, he, his sons, and his brethren, were twelve :
31 The four and twentieth to Romamti-ezer, he, his sons, and his brethren, were twelve.

CHAP. XXVI.

1 The divisions of the porters. 13 The gates assigned by lot. 20 The Levites that had charge of the treasures. 29 Officers and judges.

Or,
Shelemiah,
verse 14.
Or,
Ehiasaph,
chap. 9. 19.
& 6. 37.

CONCERNING the divisions of the porters : Of the Korhites was || Meshelemiah the son of Kore, of the sons of || Asaph.

Chap. XXVI. ver. 1. — of the porters :] By these are meant, the guards of the several outward gates and passages of the temple, who were to attend there in their several turns, to open and shut them, to keep out all profane persons, and to prevent any thing that might be done to the prejudice of the peace, safety, and purity of that sacred place. Pyle. The office of these porters was not an ignoble one, as the use of the word porter among us might seem to imply ; they were a sort of standing guard about the temple, who had the care of its treasures, as follows at ver. 20, 26 : officers and judges were chosen from them, ver. 29, 30, which shews that they were eminent persons, and some amongst them were wise counsellors, ver. 14. Bp. Patrick.

15. — the house of Asuppim.] It is not to be determined what is meant by “ the house of Asuppim.” A probable opinion

2 And the sons of Meshelemiah were, Zechariah the firstborn, Jediahel the second, Zebadiah the third, Jathniel the fourth,
3 Elam the fifth, Jehohanan the sixth, Elioenai the seventh.

4 Moreover the sons of Obed-edom were, Shemaiah the firstborn, Jehozabad the second, Joah the third, and Sacar the fourth, and Nethaneel the fifth,

5 Ammiel the sixth, Issachar the seventh, Peulthai, the eighth : for God blessed || him.

|| That is,
Obed-edom, see
chap. 13.
14.

6 Also unto Shemaiah his son were sons born, that ruled throughout the house of their father : for they were mighty men of valour.

7 The sons of Shemaiah ; Othni, and Rephael, and Obed, Elzabad, whose brethren were strong men, Elihu, and Sema-chiah.

8 All these of the sons of Obed-edom : they and their sons and their brethren, able men for strength for the service, were threescore and two of Obed-edom.

9 And Meshelemiah had sons and brethren, strong men, eighteen.

10 Also Hosah, of the children of Merari, had sons ; Simri the chief, (for though he was not the firstborn, yet his father made him the chief ;)

11 Hilkiah the second, Tebaliah the third, Zechariah the fourth : all the sons and brethren of Hosah were thirteen.

12 Among these were the divisions of the porters, even among the chief men, having wards one against another, to minister in the house of the LORD.

13 ¶ And they cast lots, || as well the small as the great, according to the house of their fathers, for every gate.

|| Or,
as well for the small as for the great.

14 And the lot eastward fell to || Shelemiah. Then for Zechariah his son, a wise counsellor, they cast lots ; and his lot came out northward.

|| Called Meshelemiah, verse 1.

15 To Obed-edom southward ; and to his sons the house of † Asuppim.

† Heb.
gatherings.

is, that it was a treasury, because it comes from a word which signifies “ to gather or collect ;” also because Obed-edom (whose sons are here said to be placed at the house of Asuppim) is stated in 2 Chron. xxv. 24, to have the custody of the treasures of the temple. As to its situation, there is reason to conclude that Asuppim were two gates in the western wall of the temple, and that the house of Asuppim was a large building, that ran between them, containing various apartments for laying up the treasure and utensils belonging to the temple. It ought however to be remarked generally, that it is a most difficult matter to ascertain aright the different parts of the temple, the situation of its different buildings, the charges of the several porters, &c. ; there is so much variety of expression respecting them in Scripture, and so little explanation relating to them can be derived from other writers. Dr. Lightfoot.

Before
CHRIST
about 1015.

See
1 Kings 10.
5.
2 Chron. 9.
4, 11.

† Heb.
holy things.
|| Or,
Lubni,
chap. 6. 17.

|| Or,
Jehiel,
chap. 23. 8.

16 To Shupphim and Hosah the lot came forth westward, with the gate Shallecheth, by the causeway of the going || up, ward against ward.

17 Eastward were six Levites, northward four a day, southward four a day, and toward Asupphim two and two.

18 At Parbar westward, four at the causeway, and two at Parbar.

19 These are the divisions of the porters among the sons of Kore, and among the sons of Merari.

20 ¶ And of the Levites, Ahijah was over the treasures of the house of God, and over the treasures of the † dedicated things.

21 As concerning the sons of || Laadan; the sons of the Gershonite Laadan, chief fathers, even of Laadan the Gershonite, were || Jehieli.

22 The sons of Jehieli; Zetham, and Joel his brother, which were over the treasures of the house of the LORD.

23 Of the Amramites, and the Izharites, the Hebronites, and the Uzzielites:

24 And Shebuel the son of Gershom, the son of Moses, was ruler of the treasures.

25 And his brethren by Eliezer; Rehabiah his son, and Jeshaiiah his son, and Joram his son, and Zichri his son, and Shelomith his son.

26 Which Shelomith and his brethren were over all the treasures of the dedicated things, which David the king, and the chief fathers, the captains over thousands and hundreds, and the captains of the host, had dedicated.

16. — the gate Shallecheth,] The word Shallecheth signifies literally "a casting up;" this gate is here stated to be "by the causeway of the going up;" which "going up" is probably the ascent that Solomon made for his own passage up to the temple, 1 Kings x. 5; 2 Chron. ix. 4; and the causeway is that which Josephus means when he says, "a gate led to the king's house from the temple, the valley betwixt being filled up for the passage," which was a great work, from the extent and depth of the valley. Thus we may conclude that the gate was called Shallecheth, or "the casting up," from the causeway that was cast up to lead to it from the king's palace, this being his ordinary way to the temple. Dr. Lightfoot.

18. At Parbar westward,] Many think the name of this gate to be the same with Parvar, which betokens "suburbs," and that it had its name from leading to the suburbs of Zion, which were distinguished and parted from Zion by a wall. Dr. Lightfoot.

20. — the treasures of the house &c.] By "the treasures of the house of God" are meant such things as were of ordinary use and employment in the temple; together with money or vessels voluntarily offered for the repair of the house of God, and the advancement of the service there. By the "treasures of the dedicated things" are meant all that the different kings and commanders had consecrated and dedicated to divine uses; which lay as a stock for the temple, and as monuments of their devotion. Bp. Patrick.

27 † Out of the spoils won in battles did they dedicate to maintain the house of the LORD.

28 And all that Samuel the seer, and Saul the son of Kish, and Abner the son of Ner, and Joab the son of Zeruiah, had dedicated; and whosoever had dedicated any thing, it was under the hand of Shelomith, and of his brethren.

29 ¶ Of the Izharites, Chenaniah and his sons were for the outward business over Israel, for officers and judges.

30 And of the Hebronites, Hashabiah and his brethren, men of valour, a thousand and seven hundred, were † officers among them of Israel on this side Jordan westward in all the business of the LORD, and in the service of the king.

31 Among the Hebronites was Jerijah the chief, even among the Hebronites, according to the generations of his fathers. In the fortieth year of the reign of David they were sought for, and there were found among them mighty men of valour at Jazer of Gilead.

32 And his brethren, men of valour, were two thousand and seven hundred chief fathers, whom king David made rulers over the Reubenites, the Gadites, and the half tribe of Manasseh, for every matter pertaining to God, and † affairs of the king.

CHAP. XXVII.

1 The twelve captains for every several month. 16 The princes of the twelve tribes. 23 The numbering of the people is hindered. 25 David's several officers.

24. — the son of Gershom, &c.] The descendant of Gershom, &c. This is the only honour that we read of hitherto, as conferred upon any of the posterity of Moses. Shelomith, mentioned at ver. 26, is another of his posterity, preferred to a great office. Bp. Patrick.

29. — were for the outward business] That is, the business without the city of Jerusalem, as distinguished from that of the other Levites, the singers, porters, &c. whose business was within the city. Bp. Patrick. These were to be Levites of the greatest ability and authority, who were to reside in the country, to be a sort of magistrates, or assessors to the magistrates, in each town, for the purpose of contributing to the preservation of good order, both in civil and religious matters. Pyle.

30. — in all the business of the Lord,] "The business of the Lord," no doubt, was to take care of all things pertaining to religion; among which divine employments, the chief probably was, to judge the people according to the law of God, and to see their sentence put in execution. The "service of the king" appears to mean, the collection of his tribute, and perhaps the publication of his orders and commands. Bp. Patrick.

32. And his brethren, men of valour, &c.] Although the eastern Canaan was much less in circumference than the western; yet, as it lay at a greater distance from the capital, and the temple, and might therefore be subject to greater neglects and more frequent disorders, the number of Levite officers appointed to take care of it amounted to the number of 2700. Pyle.

Before
CHRIST
about 1015.

† Heb.
Out of the battles and spoils.

† Heb. over the charge

† Heb.
king.

Before
CHRIST
about 1015.

NOW the children of Israel after their number, to wit, the chief fathers and captains of thousands and hundreds, and their officers that served the king in any matter of the courses, which came in and went out month by month throughout all the months of the year, of every course were twenty and four thousand.

2 Over the first course for the first month was Jashobeam the son of Zabdiel: and in his course were twenty and four thousand.

3 Of the children of Perez was the chief of all the captains of the host for the first month.

4 And over the course of the second month was || Dodai an Ahohite, and of his course was Mikloth also the ruler: in his course likewise were twenty and four thousand.

5 The third captain of the host for the third month was Benaiah the son of Jehoiada, a || chief priest: and in his course were twenty and four thousand.

6 This is that Benaiah, who was ^a mighty among the thirty, and above the thirty: and in his course was Ammizabad his son.

7 The fourth captain for the fourth month was Asahel the brother of Joab, and Zebadiah his son after him: and in his course were twenty and four thousand.

8 The fifth captain for the fifth month was Shamhuth the Izrahite: and in his course were twenty and four thousand.

9 The sixth captain for the sixth month was Ira the son of Ikkeish the Tekoite: and in his course were twenty and four thousand.

10 The seventh captain for the seventh month was Helez the Pelonite, of the children of Ephraim: and in his course were twenty and four thousand.

11 The eighth captain for the eighth month was Sibbecai the Hushathite, of the Zarlites: and in his course were twenty and four thousand.

12 The ninth captain for the ninth month was Abiezer the Anetothite, of the Benjamites: and in his course were twenty and four thousand.

13 The tenth captain for the tenth month was Maharai the Netophathite, of the Zarlites: and in his course were twenty and four thousand.

14 The eleventh captain for the eleventh month was Benaiah the Pirathonite, of the children of Ephraim: and in his course were twenty and four thousand.

15 The twelfth captain for the twelfth month was || Heldai the Netophathite, of Othniel: and in his course were twenty and four thousand.

16 ¶ Furthermore over the tribes of Israel: the ruler of the Reubenites was Eli-ezer the son of Zichri: of the Simeonites, Shephatiah the son of Maachah:

17 Of the Levites, Hashabiah the son of Kemuel: of the Aaronites, Zadok:

18 Of Judah, Elihu, one of the brethren of David: of Issachar, Omri the son of Michael:

19 Of Zebulun, Ishmaiah the son of Obadiah: of Naphtali, Jerimoth the son of Azriel:

20 Of the children of Ephraim, Hoshea the son of Azaziah: of the half tribe of Manasseh, Joel the son of Pedaiah:

21 Of the half tribe of Manasseh in Gilead, Iddo the son of Zechariah: of Benjamin, Jaasiel the son of Abner:

22 Of Dan, Azareel the son of Jeroham. These were the princes of the tribes of Israel.

Before
CHRIST
about 1015.

|| Or,
Heled,
chap. 11.
30.

|| Or,
Dodai,
2 Sam. 23.
9.

|| Or, principal officer.

* 2 Sam. 23.
20, 22, 39.
chap. 11.
24.

Chap. XXVII. ver. 1. Now the children of Israel &c.] After the settlement of ecclesiastical affairs, here is an account given how the militia (if this term may be allowed) of the kingdom was settled, in such an order as might be serviceable. They were distributed into twelve legions, consisting each of 24,000 men, who were commanded by one of the chief of the fathers. Under these were the captains of thousands, being twenty-four in every legion: under these again, centurions or captains of hundreds, under whom were inferior officers. Each of these generals attended with the legions one month, for the security of the king and kingdom; at the end of which they marched off, and another legion with its general succeeded. Thus their course came round but once a year, for one month, which was by no means burdensome. It is thought that this order was instituted in the beginning of David's reign, but was interrupted by the many foreign wars in which he was engaged, and not renewed till his last years, when he left the kingdom thus governed and arranged to his son Solomon. Bp. Patrick.

3. Of the children of Perez] The above-mentioned Jashobeam was of the children of Pharez, the son of Judah; which tribe therefore had the honour of having the first chief commander chosen out of it. Bp. Patrick.

5. — Benaiah, — a chief priest:] Rather, a chief prince or ruler; for it is certain that neither Benaiah nor his father was either high priest or second priest; but Abiathar and Zadok were in those offices. Bp. Patrick.

16. Furthermore over the tribes] Besides these military commands, there was a principal head over each tribe, who had the chief authority in it, under the king. The tribes are here reckoned up according to the birthright of the patriarchs, from whom they are named. Pyle.

22. — of the tribes of Israel.] That is, of the above-mentioned tribes. It is remarkable that the tribes of Gad and Asher are omitted; and of this circumstance no certain account can be given. The most probable explanation is, that they were governed by the ruler of some neighbouring tribe: Asher, being a very small tribe, might be put under the command of either Naphtali or Zebulun, next adjoining to it; and Gad might be under that of Reuben. Bp. Patrick.

Before
CHRIST
about 1015.

about 1017.

^b Chap. 21.

7.

² Sam. 24.

5, &c.

[†] Heb.

ascend.

about 1015.

[†] Heb. over that which was of the vineyards.

^{||} Or,
secretary.
^{||} Or,
Hachmonite

23 ¶ But David took not the number of them from twenty years old and under: because the LORD had said he would increase Israel like to the stars of the heavens.

24 Joab the son of Zeruiah began to number, but he finished not, because^b there fell wrath for it against Israel; neither † was the number put in the account of the chronicles of king David.

25 ¶ And over the king's treasures was Azmaveth the son of Adiel: and over the storehouses in the fields, in the cities, and in the villages, and in the castles, was Jehonathan the son of Uziah:

26 And over them that did the work of the field for tillage of the ground was Ezri the son of Chelub:

27 And over the vineyards was Shimei the Ramathite: † over the increase of the vineyards for the wine cellars was Zabdi the Shiphmite:

28 And over the olive trees and the sycamore trees that were in the low plains was Baal-hanan the Gederite: and over the cellars of oil was Joash:

29 And over the herds that fed in Sharon was Shitrai the Sharonite: and over the herds that were in the valleys was Shaphat the son of Adlai:

30 Over the camels also was Obil the Ishmaelite: and over the asses was Jehdeiah the Meronothite:

31 And over the flocks was Jaziz the Hagerite. All these were the rulers of the substance which was king David's.

32 Also Jonathan David's uncle was a counsellor, a wise man, and a || scribe: and Jehiel the || son of Hachmoni was with the king's sons:

33 And Ahithophel was the king's counsellor: and Hushai the Archite was the king's companion:

34 And after Ahithophel was Jehoiada the son of Benaiah, and Abiathar: and the general of the king's army was Joab.

23. — from twenty years old and under:] King David never attempted to get a perfect account of the whole body of the Israelite nation, but only endeavoured to obtain a list of those capable of bearing arms, contenting himself with the knowledge that they were vastly numerous, agreeably to the Divine promise made to Abraham, Gen. xv. 5. Even that muster-roll of his, (see the next verse,) of men of twenty years old and upwards, made by Joab, chap. xxi, was very imperfect; for it was left unfinished "because there fell wrath for it against Israel," that is, because the Prophet denounced the anger of God on account of it; and there never was any complete register of this kind entered on the publick records of the kingdom. Pyle.

28. — over the cellars of oil] Dr. Chandler says, that the modern Greeks keep their oil in large earthen jars sunk in the ground, in the areas before their houses. This custom, it may be

CHAP. XXVIII.

Before
CHRIST
about 1015.

1 David in a solemn assembly having declared God's favour to him, and promise to his son Solomon, exhorteth them to fear God. 9, 20 He encourageth Solomon to build the temple. 11 He giveth him patterns for the form, and gold and silver for the materials.

AND David assembled all the princes of Israel, the princes of the tribes, and the captains of the companies that ministered to the king by course, and the captains over the thousands, and captains over the hundreds, and the stewards over all the substance and || possession of the king, and of his sons, with the || officers, and with the mighty men, and with all the valiant men, unto Jerusalem.

^{||} Or,
cattle.
^{||} Or,
eunuchs.

2 Then David the king stood up upon his feet, and said, Hear me, my brethren, and my people: As for me, I had in mine heart to build an house of rest for the ark of the covenant of the LORD, and for the footstool of our God, and had made ready for the building:

3 But God said unto me, ^a Thou shalt not build an house for my name, because thou hast been a man of war, and hast shed † blood.

^a 2 Sam. 7.
5, 19.
1 Kings 5.
5.
chap. 22. 8.
[†] Heb.
bloods.

4 Howbeit the LORD God of Israel chose me before all the house of my father to be king over Israel for ever: for he hath chosen^b Judah to be the ruler; and of the house of Judah, the house of my father; and among the sons of my father he liked me to make me king over all Israel:

^b Gen. 49.
8.
1 Sam. 16.
13.
Psal. 78.
68.

5 ^c And of all my sons, (for the LORD hath given me many sons,) he hath chosen Solomon my son to sit upon the throne of the kingdom of the LORD over Israel.

^c Chap. 23.
1.

6 And he said unto me, ^d Solomon thy son, he shall build my house and my courts: for I have chosen him to be my son, and I will be his father.

^d 2 Sam. 7.
19.
2 Chron. 1.
9.

7 Moreover I will establish his kingdom for ever, if he be † constant to do my com-

[†] Heb.
strong.

thought from this passage, obtained among the Jews. It is certain from Jer. xli. 8, that they buried it sometimes in the earth, in times of danger, for the purpose of concealment. Harmer.

Chap. XXVIII. ver. 2. — and for the footstool of our God,] It should rather be translated, "even for the footstool of our God," the ark being so called, as being the resting place of the symbol of His presence. Jos. Mede, Bp. Patrick.

5. — of all my sons, — he hath chosen Solomon] Thus the choice of Solomon to the throne before his elder brothers proceeded entirely from God, not from David or from the people, (see chap. xxix. 1; 1 Kings viii. 20; 2 Chron. i. 1.) David clears up this matter to the people, for the purpose of proving to them that the fundamental law of nature, the right of elder birth, was not altered by him, but by God, who took the matter into His own disposal. Bp. Wilson.

Before CHRIST about 1015. mandments and my judgments, as at this day.

8 Now therefore in the sight of all Israel the congregation of the LORD, and in the audience of our God, keep and seek for all the commandments of the LORD your God: that ye may possess this good land, and leave it for an inheritance for your children after you for ever.

9 ¶ And thou, Solomon my son, know thou the God of thy father, and serve him with a perfect heart and with a willing mind: for the LORD searcheth all hearts, and understandeth all the imaginations of the thoughts: if thou seek him, he will be found of thee; but if thou forsake him, he will cast thee off for ever.

10 Take heed now; for the LORD hath chosen thee to build an house for the sanctuary: be strong, and do it.

11 ¶ Then David gave to Solomon his son the pattern of the porch, and of the houses thereof, and of the treasuries thereof, and of the upper chambers thereof, and of the inner parlours thereof, and of the place of the mercy seat,

12 And the pattern † of all that he had by the spirit, of the courts of the house of the LORD, and of all the chambers round about, of the treasuries of the house of God, and of the treasuries of the dedicated things:

13 Also for the courses of the priests and the Levites, and for all the work of the service of the house of the LORD, and for all the vessels of service in the house of the LORD.

14 He gave of gold by weight for things of gold, for all instruments of all manner of service; silver also for all instruments of silver by weight, for all instruments of every kind of service:

15 Even the weight for the candlesticks of gold, and for their lamps of gold, by weight for every candlestick, and for the lamps thereof: and for the candlesticks of silver by weight, both for the candlestick, and also for the lamps thereof, according to the use of every candlestick.

16 And by weight he gave gold for the tables of shewbread, for every table; and likewise silver for the tables of silver:

17 Also pure gold for the fleshhooks, and the bowls, and the cups: and for the golden basons he gave gold by weight for every bason; and likewise silver by weight for every bason of silver:

18 And for the altar of incense refined gold by weight; and gold for the pattern of the chariot of the cherubims, that spread out their wings, and covered the ark of the covenant of the LORD.

19 All this, said David, the LORD made me understand in writing by his hand upon me, even all the works of this pattern.

20 And David said to Solomon his son, Be strong and of good courage, and do it: fear not, nor be dismayed: for the LORD God, even my God, will be with thee; he

Before CHRIST about 1015.

† 1 Sam. 4. 4. 1 Kings 6. 23, &c.

† 1 Sam. 16. 7. Psal. 139. 2. & 7. 9. Jer. 11. 20. & 17. 10. & 20. 12.

† Heb. of all that was with him.

9. And thou, Solomon &c.] David instructs his son to "know the God of his father," that is, to acknowledge and to love Him; also to "serve Him with a perfect heart and a willing mind," shewing him thereby that his love was to be expressed by obedience to God, and that entirely and cheerfully, out of choice, and not by constraint; not to gain the good opinion of men, but the favour of God: for hearty piety, and not the outward appearance of it merely, is the surest support of a prince's power and authority; and will dispose his servants to love and reverence him as sincerely as he does God. David proceeds to press him with two arguments for sincerity in his obedience; the first, because "the LORD searcheth all hearts," that is, cannot be deceived with external services, but looks into the heart, and discerns the most secret motions there; the second, because "if thou seek Him He will be found of thee," that is, God bestows His blessings on men, only on the condition of their hearty obedience: as we behave towards Him, so will He behave towards us. Bp. Patrick.

12. — the pattern of all that he had by the spirit,] That is, of all things inspired into him by the Spirit of God. As the temple was to be sacred for the worship of the Supreme Being, and for the residence of the symbol of His presence, it was fit that it should not be merely of human, but of Divine contrivance, as was the tabernacle built by Moses. On this account God suggested to David by His Spirit, as appears from these words, the pattern according to which He would have it constructed in all its parts. Bp. Patrick.

18. — the chariot of the cherubims,] As God is represented in Scripture, as sitting upon the ark, between the cherubim that covered it; and, in some passages, as riding upon the cherubim,

Ps. xviii. 10, which is of the same signification with His reigning or ruling in majesty and triumph, Ps. xcix. 1; therefore these cherubim are called His chariot, and are described in Ezek. i. as having wheels. It is possible that the sacred historian may here be alluding to this last description. Pyle. The Hebrew word translated chariot signifies, generally, a vehicle, a thing to ride or sit upon; and the cherubim are so spoken of, because the symbol of the Divine presence used to dwell upon them. Parkhurst.

19. All this, — the LORD made me understand in writing] There seems to be no doubt from this expression that God inspired David with the plan of the whole work of the temple, with all its parts, dimensions, and utensils; and there is reason to believe that the Greek and Roman architecture, which is the most perfect that human wisdom, invention, and industry have ever framed, was derived from this Divine source, having the architecture of the temple of Jerusalem for its model. Dr. Delaney.

20. — Be strong and of good courage,] David now repeats his earnest advice to Solomon, to prosecute this work with unwearied courage; not to be dismayed by terrors from enemies, either abroad or at home, but to trust in the Divine Providence that all his subjects, both ecclesiastical and civil, great and small, would cheerfully unite in their endeavours to carry him through it. Pyle. We still see David's great zeal for the service of God, in the care he took before his death to give to the rulers of the kingdom, and to Solomon his son, necessary instructions for the building of the temple, and in the provision which he made of gold, silver, and various necessary materials, for the execution of this pious design. Let us all be animated with the same zeal, and contribute

Before
CHRIST
about 1015.

will not fail thee, nor forsake thee, until thou hast finished all the work for the service of the house of the Lord.

21 And, behold, the courses of the priests and the Levites, even they shall be with thee for all the service of the house of God: and there shall be with thee for all manner of workmanship every willing skilful man, for any manner of service: also the princes and all the people will be wholly at thy commandment.

CHAP. XXIX.

¹ David, by his example and intreaty, 6 causeth the princes and people to offer willingly. 10 David's thanksgiving and prayer. 20 The people, having blessed God, and sacrificed, make Solomon king. 26 David's reign and death.

1015.

^a Chap. 22. 5. FURTHERMORE David the king said unto all the congregation, Solomon my son, whom God alone hath chosen, is yet ^a young and tender, and the work is great: for the palace is not for man, but for the Lord God.

2 Now I have prepared with all my might for the house of my God the gold for things to be made of gold, and the silver for things of silver, and the brass for things of brass, the iron for things of iron, and wood for things of wood; onyx stones, and stones to be set, glistening stones, and of divers colours, and all manner of precious stones, and marble stones in abundance.

3 Moreover, because I have set my affection to the house of my God, I have of mine own proper good, of gold and silver, according to our station and abilities, to the promoting and establishing of God's worship and service: and if the nature of that worship, which the Gospel teaches us to pay to God, does not require such great expense, we may employ our substance in works of piety still more acceptable in the sight of God; in procuring the edification and instruction of our neighbours, in relieving those that are in necessity, and in labouring by all possible means, and especially by our examples, to promote and advance the kingdom of Jesus Christ. Ostervald.

Chap. XXIX. ver. 1. — Solomon my son, whom God alone hath chosen, &c. David proceeds to stir the people up to the assistance of his son, by these considerations, that he was a person chosen by God, not by him, for this work; that he was but a youth, and therefore needed their assistance; and that the work was to be of extreme magnificence, being "not for man, but for the Lord God," who was there to be peculiarly present by the symbol of His glorious majesty. Bp. Patrick.

2. — gold, This gold was of Ophir, ver. 4; so that Solomon appears to have been not the first prince who trafficked to Ophir: it is probable that David procured this gold of Ophir by land traffick, not by navigation; for we read nothing of his ships, or of his people being engaged in navigation. By "brass," which follows, we should probably understand copper, which is a native mineral; brass being formed by mixing two different metals. Script. illust. Expos. Ind.

which I have given to the house of my God, over and above all that I have prepared for the holy house, Before 1015.
CHRIST

4 Even three thousand talents of gold, of the gold of ^b Ophir, and seven thousand talents of refined silver, to overlay the walls of the houses withal: ^b 1 Kings
9. 28.

5 The gold for things of gold, and the silver for things of silver, and for all manner of work to be made by the hands of artificers. And who then is willing [†] to consecrate his service this day unto the Lord? [†] Heb.
to fill his
hand.

6 ¶ Then the chief of the fathers and princes of the tribes of Israel, and the captains of thousands and of hundreds, with the rulers of the king's work, offered willingly,

7 And gave for the service of the house of God of gold five thousand talents and ten thousand drams, and of silver ten thousand talents, and of brass eighteen thousand talents, and one hundred thousand talents of iron.

8 And they with whom precious stones were found gave them to the treasure of the house of the Lord, by the hand of Jehiel the Gershonite.

9 Then the people rejoiced, for that they offered willingly, because with perfect heart they offered willingly to the Lord: and David the king also rejoiced with great joy.

10 ¶ Wherefore David blessed the Lord before all the congregation: and David said, Blessed be thou, Lord God of Israel our father, for ever and ever.

— onyx stones, The word onyx is equivocal, signifying, first, a precious stone or gem, called onyx, in Greek onychion; secondly, a marble, very distinct from the nature of the former, called in Greek onychites. Pliny mentions it as a stone of Carmania. The onyx of the high priest's pectoral was no doubt the gem onyx; the stone prepared by David was the marble onyx, or rather onychus. Some have thought, that as the pectoral was ornamented with precious stones, so was the temple. It can scarcely be supposed, however, that gems of any kind were used externally to such a building, but variegated marble may readily be admitted. Script. illust. Expos. Ind.

5. — to consecrate his service "To fill his hand," as it is literally in the Hebrew; a phrase which signifies in that language "to make an offering." Bp. Patrick.

9. — and David the king also rejoiced &c. It was a singular comfort to him in his old age to see the people so well disposed, and his exhortation so effectual on their heart; which inspired him with the pleasing hope that this great work could not fail of being speedily accomplished. Bp. Patrick.

10. — Blessed be thou, Lord God of Israel &c. Here follows a noble declaration of the sense king David had of the Divine excellencies and perfections, with a thankful acknowledgment of the power, immensity, goodness, eternity, and majesty, which are the properties and attributes of God. Bp. Patrick.

This hymn of praise and thanksgiving, ver. 10—19, may thus be paraphrased: For ever blessed be the great God of Israel, the 1015.

Before
CHRIST

* Matth. 6.

† Heb.

1 Tim. 1.

17.

Rev. 5. 13.

11 * Thine, O LORD, is the greatness, and the power, and the glory, and the victory, and the majesty: for all that is in the heaven and in the earth is thine: thine is the kingdom, O LORD, and thou art exalted as head above all.

12 Both riches and honour come of thee, and thou reignest over all; and in thine hand is power and might; and in thine hand it is to make great, and to give strength unto all.

13 Now therefore, our God, we thank thee, and praise thy glorious name.

† Heb. retain, or, obtain strength.
† Heb. of thine
hand.

14 But who am I, and what is my people, that we should † be able to offer so willingly after this sort? for all things come of thee, and † of thine own have we given thee.

* Psal. 39.
12. & 90. 9.
Heb. 11. 13.
1 Pet. 2. 11.
† Heb.
expectation.

15 For we are strangers before thee, and sojourners, as were all our fathers: ^a our days on the earth are as a shadow, and there is none † abiding.

16 O LORD our God, all this store that we have prepared to build thee an house for thine holy name cometh of thine hand, and is all thine own.

* Chap. 28.
9.
1 Sam. 16.
7.

17 I know also, my God, that thou triest the heart, and hast pleasure in uprightness. As for me, in the uprightness of mine heart I have willingly offered all these things: and now have I seen with joy thy people, which are || present here, to offer willingly unto thee.

Before
CHRIST
1015.

† Heb.
found.

18 O LORD God of Abraham, Isaac, and of Israel, our fathers, keep this for ever in the imagination of the thoughts of the heart of thy people, and || prepare their heart unto thee:

|| Or,
stablish.

19 And give unto Solomon my son a perfect heart, to keep thy commandments, thy testimonies, and thy statutes, and to do all these things, and to build the palace, for the which I have made provision.

20 ¶ And David said to all the congregation, Now bless the LORD your God. And all the congregation blessed the LORD God of their fathers, and bowed down their heads, and worshipped the LORD, and the king.

21 And they sacrificed sacrifices unto the LORD, and offered burnt offerings unto the LORD, on the morrow after that day, even a thousand bullocks, a thousand rams, and a thousand lambs, with their drink offerings, and sacrifices in abundance for all Israel:

22 And did eat and drink before the LORD on that day with great gladness.

And they made Solomon the son of David king the second time, and † anointed him

* 1 Kings
1. 33.

one Lord of heaven and earth, Supreme Governour of all things, Author of every blessing, and of every good and virtuous disposition! Praised be Thy goodness in bestowing earthly riches upon us, and then giving us an heart to pay back our tribute to Thee, to whom we owe all that we are or can enjoy! In thus doing, we are far from being or esteeming ourselves benefactors, for all things are Thine; we possess them here for a short duration, through Thy Divine favour and bounty, and our largest gifts and offerings are no more than returning to Thee what is Thy own. Graciously accept my sincere intentions toward Thy honour and service, and the unfeigned joy of my heart to find my subjects so well disposed to contribute their utmost toward so great a purpose. But grant that neither I nor they, nor the king my successor, nor any of their posterity after them, may vainly boast and deceive themselves, in the mere external work of building their temple, or in the outward pomp of its services, but may all with real and inward reverence of mind, and by actions truly virtuous, glorify Thee their God, who art the searcher of hearts, and canst not be deceived by any false appearance. Pyle.

The piety of David shines forth with the greatest lustre in the prayer he made upon this occasion. Herein he acknowledges and adores the majesty of God; with great humility presents his offering before Him, and the offerings of the chief of the people; offers up ardent prayers for all the people, and for Solomon his son; and exhorts the whole congregation of Israel to join with him in blessing and praising God. The humble and ardent devotion, and the extraordinary spirit, which are diffused through every part of this excellent prayer, should wonderfully animate us to the same duties. Let us then discharge these duties with pleasure and a holy zeal: let us adore and praise the infinite power and majesty of God: let us with profound humility acknowledge, that we are in His sight but frail mortal creatures; that all we have comes from Him, and that, whatever we offer or do for His glory, we do but offer Him His own, and what He has first given unto us. Let us beseech Him to produce in us good dispositions, ever to maintain them in us, and to turn our hearts and thoughts towards Him; let us excite our neighbours to join their praises with ours; and let us continually animate one another to bless and glorify His holy name by our prayers and praises, by our obedient conduct, and by our steady application to His service. Ostervald.

14. But who am I, and what is my people,] We here perceive, when David is making his most solemn acknowledgments to God for His great mercies towards him, how he abases himself before Him. In the same manner, in another place, Psalm ciii. 10, after he had summoned all the powers and faculties of his soul to join in the praises of God, he interposes this reasonable meditation, "He hath not dealt with us after our sins." The greater and more lively sense we have of the goodness of God towards us, the more we shall abhor ourselves in dust and ashes; nothing being more apt to melt us into tears of repentance, than the consideration of great and undeserved mercies vouchsafed to us. Abp. Tillotson.

22. — they made Solomon — king the second time,] It has been supposed by some, that the anointing of Solomon here mentioned took place after the death of David; but this cannot be understood without a very forced construction of the words of the sacred history; for it is here stated, that the persons who had been rejoicing and feasting were those who now made him king the second time. The most clear method of understanding the several accounts of the consecration of Solomon to be king seems to be this. He was first anointed (1 Kings i. 21, 27) on the aspiring of Adonijah to be king, in the presence of a few, when David wished to point out who was to succeed him; and this was concurrent or the same with the making him king, mentioned 1 Chron. xxiii. 1; but his second and more formal consecration was that here mentioned, when he was anointed publicly before all the nation in the midst of the princes and great commanders. Perhaps David now resigned the entire government into his hands, finding that he had not long to live. Bp. Patrick.

Before
CHRIST
1015.

unto the LORD to be the chief governor, and Zadok to be priest.

23 Then Solomon sat on the throne of the LORD as king instead of David his father, and prospered; and all Israel obeyed him.

24 And all the princes, and the mighty men, and all the sons likewise of king David, † submitted themselves unto Solomon the king.

† Heb. gave the hand unto Solomon.

25 And the LORD magnified Solomon exceedingly in the sight of all Israel, and ‡ bestowed upon him such royal majesty as had not been on any king before him in Israel.

§ 1 Kings
3. 13.
2 Chron. 1.
12.
Eccles. 2.
9.

26 ¶ Thus David the son of Jesse reigned over all Israel.

— and Zadok to be priest.] Zadok, it is meant, was appointed to be the next high priest when a vacancy should occur; for Abiathar continued in the office till the beginning of Solomon's reign. Pyle.

23. — on the throne of the Lord.] Thus the throne of this kingdom is called, because the land was God's peculiarly, and Israel His people, and Solomon reigned over them, not by inheritance, but by His special appointment. Bp. Patrick.

24. — submitted themselves unto Solomon the king.] In the original, as in the margin, "gave the hand." The putting of the protester's hand into the hand of him who received the protestation, appears from Ockley's History of the Saracens to have been in the East a customary token of acknowledgment and allegiance, and to have conveyed the notion of an oath between the parties. "Several Mahometan chiefs came to Ali, and desired him to accept the government. He resolved not to accept of their allegiance in private; for they proffered to give him their hands (the customary ceremony then in use among them on such occasions) at his own house, but would have it performed at the mosque. Telka

27 And the time that he reigned over Israel was forty years; seven years reigned he in Hebron, and thirty and three years reigned he in Jerusalem.

Before
CHRIST
1015.

28 And he died in a good old age, full of days, riches, and honour: and Solomon his son reigned in his stead.

29 Now the acts of David the king, first and last, behold, they are written in the || † book of Samuel the seer, and in the book of Nathan the prophet, and in the book of Gad the seer,

|| Or,
history.
† Heb.
words.

30 With all his reign and his might, and the times that went over him, and over Israel, and over all the kingdoms of the countries.

and Zobein came, and offered him their hands, as a mark or token of their approbation. Ali bid them, if they did it, to be in good earnest, otherwise he would give his own hand to either of them that would accept of the government; which they refused, and gave him theirs." Again: "Telka, just before he died, saw one of Ali's men, and asked him, if he belonged to the emperor of the faithful? Being informed that he did, Give me then, said he, your hand, that I may put mine in it, and by this action renew the oath of fidelity, which I have already made to Ali." Fragments to Calmet.

29 — the book of Samuel the seer, &c.] In the Hebrew, the titles given to Samuel, Nathan, and Gad, which we translate "seer, prophet, and seer," are three distinct titles; but it is by no means easy to determine whether or not they have distinct significations, denoting different ways of receiving Divine inspirations, or different degrees of it. It is probable that Samuel began to write a history of the life of David, which Nathan and Gad finished; and out of this, the matters here recorded were extracted. Bp. Patrick. See the note on 2 Chron. xxxiii. 19.

THE SECOND BOOK OF THE CHRONICLES.

INTRODUCTION.

THE second book of Chronicles contains a brief sketch of the sacred history from the accession of Solomon to the throne, in the year of the world 2989, (before Christ 1015,) to the return from captivity, in the year 3468, (before Christ 536.) It contains many things omitted in the historical books which precede. It begins with a description of the reign of Solomon, and dilates with particular exactness on the munificent piety of that monarch in the construction of the temple, minutely specifying its ornaments as typical of spiritual decorations which were to embellish the Christian church; a subject highly interesting and useful to the Jews, who, at the time when this book was written, were preparing to rebuild the temple. Hence the account of the solemn consecration of the first building; of the noble and comprehensive prayer of Solomon; and of the covenanted promises which God graciously imparted at the dedication, must have furnished such consolation to the Jews, scarce yet reviving from the despondence of captives. Then is repeated from the book of Kings, the representation of the magnificence and prosperity which Solomon enjoyed agreeably to God's promise, chap. i. 11, 12. After this we are furnished with a recapitulation of the history of the kings of Judah, occasionally intermixed with relations respecting Israel, when connected with Judah. Great part of this history is selected either immediately from the book of Kings, or both Kings and Chronicles were copied from some larger annals, known under the title of the Books of Kings; since frequent references are herein made to some books of Kings, and sometimes for circumstances not extant in the canonical books, chap. xvi. 11; xxi; xxiv. 27; xxv. 26; xxviii. 26; xxxii. 32; xxxiii. 18; xxxv. 27.

These accounts however, in the books of Chronicles, are enriched with many additional particulars. They present us with a lively picture of the state of the kingdom of Judah; and of the various vicissitudes and revolutions which it sustained under different princes. They serve, as the author seems to have designed, greatly to illustrate the necessity of depending on God for defence, without whose protection kingdoms must fall. The advantage derived from obedience to God, and the miseries that resulted from wickedness and sin, are strikingly shewn. The book abounds with useful examples, and the characters are forcibly displayed by a contrasted succession of pious and depraved princes. The change and defection even of individual persons, and their decline from righteousness to evil, are shewn with much effect. The rebellion of Israel, and the contest between the two kingdoms; the preservation of Joash from the destruction which overwhelmed the rest of the house of Judah; the struggles between idolatry and true religion; the seasonable discovery of the copy of the law; with many other interesting particulars which exhibit the interposition of the Almighty defeating evil, and effecting His concerted purposes, deserve to be considered with great attention.

Several predictions are scattered through the book: as the promises made to Solomon, chap. i. 12; vii. 17—22; to Jehoshaphat, xix. 2; xx. 15, 17, 37; and to others, xxxiii. 8. Some sentiments appear to be transcribed from it into the New Testament. Compare 2 Chron. ii. 5, 6, with Acts vii. 48, 49, and xvii. 24; also 2 Chron. xix. 7, with 1 Peter i. 17. Dr. Gray.

CHAP. I.

Before
CHRIST
1015.

1 The solemn offering of Solomon at Gibeon. 7 Solomon's choice of wisdom is blessed by God. 13 Solomon's strength and wealth.

^a 1 Kings
2. 46.

AND ^a Solomon the son of David was strengthened in his kingdom, and the LORD his God was with him, and magnified him exceedingly.

Chap. I. ver. 3. — went to the high place — at Gibeon;] See note at 1 Kings iii. 4. It is remarkable that the original tabernacle was at this time at Gibeon, while the ark was at Jerusalem. On what account they were separated, so that the ark was with-

2 Then Solomon spake unto all Israel, to the captains of thousands and of hundreds, and to the judges, and to every governor in all Israel, the chief of the fathers.

Before
CHRIST
1015.

3 So Solomon, and all the congregation with him, went to the high place that was at ^b Gibeon; for there was the tabernacle

^b 1 Kings
3. 4.
1 Chron.
16. 39. &
21. 29.

out the tabernacle and its vessels, and the vessels, altar, and tabernacle without the seat of the Divine glory, it is by no means easy to explain. Bp. Patrick.

Before
CHRIST
1015.

2 Sam. 6
2. 17
1015

1 K. 8
1

|| Or,
was there.

of the congregation of God, which Moses the servant of the LORD had made in the wilderness.

4 ^c But the ark of God had David brought up from Kirjath-jearim to the place which David had prepared for it: for he had pitched a tent for it at Jerusalem.

5 Moreover ^d the brasen altar, that Bezaleel the son of Uri, the son of Hur, had made, || he put before the tabernacle of the LORD: and Solomon and the congregation sought unto it.

6 And Solomon went up thither to the brasen altar before the LORD, which was at the tabernacle of the congregation, and offered a thousand burnt offerings upon it.

7 ¶ In that night did God appear unto Solomon, and said unto him, Ask what I shall give thee.

8 And Solomon said unto God, Thou hast shewed great mercy unto David my father, and hast made me ^e to reign in his stead.

1 Chron.
28. 5.

9 Now, O LORD God, let thy promise unto David my father be established: ^f for thou hast made me king over a people ^g like the dust of the earth in multitude.

† Heb. much as the dust of the earth

10 ^h Give me now wisdom and knowledge, that I may ^h go out and come in before this people: for who can judge this thy people, that is so great?

1 Kings
3. 11, 12.
Numb.
27. 17.

11 And God said to Solomon, Because this was in thine heart, and thou hast not asked riches, wealth, or honour, nor the life of thine enemies, neither yet hast asked long life; but hast asked wisdom and knowledge for thyself, that thou mayest judge my people, over whom I have made thee king:

12 Wisdom and knowledge is granted unto thee; and I will give thee riches, and wealth, and honour, such as ⁱ none of the kings have had that have been before thee, neither shall there any after thee have the like.

1 Chron.
29. 25
Eccles. 2. 9
chap. 9. 22.

13 ¶ Then Solomon came from his journey to the high place that was at Gibeon to Jerusalem, from before the tabernacle of the congregation, and reigned over Israel.

14. — which he placed in the chariot cities,] Meaning those cities where there was abundance of good pasturage for horses. Bp. Patrick.

15. — and linen yarn:] See note at 1 Kings x. 28.

Chap. II. ver. 5. — the house which I build is great:] A temple, Solomon says, for the worship of the one infinite and all-perfect Being, ought to be as sumptuous and magnificent as possible;

Before
CHRIST
1015.

1 Kings
10. 26, &c.
& 4. 26.

14 ^k And Solomon gathered chariots and horsemen: and he had a thousand and four hundred chariots, and twelve thousand horsemen, which he placed in the chariot cities, and with the king at Jerusalem.

15 ^l And the king [†] made silver and gold at Jerusalem as plenteous as stones, and cedar trees made he as the sycomore trees that are in the vale for abundance.

1 Kings
10. 27.
chap. 9. 27.
28.
† Heb.
gave.

16 ^m And [†] Solomon had horses brought out of Egypt, and linen yarn: the king's merchants received the linen yarn at a price.

1 Kings
10. 28.
chap. 9. 28.
† Heb.
the going forth of the horses which was Solomon's.

17 And they fetched up, and brought forth out of Egypt a chariot for six hundred shekels of silver, and an horse for an hundred and fifty: and so brought they out horses for all the kings of the Hittites, and for the kings of Syria, [†] by their means.

† Heb.
by their
hand.

CHAP. II.

1, 17 Solomon's labourers for the building of the temple.
3 His embassy to Hiram for workmen and provision of stuff. 11 Hiram sendeth him a kind answer.

AND Solomon determined to build an house for the name of the LORD, and an house for his kingdom.

2 And Solomon told out threescore and ten thousand men to bear burdens, and fourscore thousand to hew in the mountain, and three thousand and six hundred to oversee them.

3 ¶ And Solomon sent to || Hiram the king of Tyre, saying, As thou didst deal with David my father, and didst send him cedars to build him an house to dwell therein, even so deal with me.

|| Or,
Hiram,
1 Kings 5.
1.

4 Behold, I build an house to the name of the LORD my God, to dedicate it to him, and to burn before him [†] sweet incense, and for the continual shewbread, and for the burnt offerings morning and evening, on the sabbaths, and on the new moons, and on the solemn feasts of the LORD our God. This is an ordinance for ever to Israel.

† Heb.
incense of spices.

5 And the house which I build is great: for great is our God above all gods.

not that it is to be thought that God can receive pleasure from any external pomp or ornaments of human services, or that His presence can be confined to any place whatever, as He is immeasurable in greatness, and equally diffused through every place. But my only design is, to signify (as far as outward things can do so) a regard proportionate to the majesty of Him whom we adore. Pyle.

Before
CHRIST
1015.

* 1 Kings
8. 27.
chap. 6. 18.
† Heb.
hath retained, or, obtained strength.

† Heb. to grave
gravings.

|| Or,
almuggim,
1 Kings 10.
11.

† Heb. great and wonderful.

† Heb. knowing prudence and understanding.

6 ^a But who † is able to build him an house, seeing the heaven and heaven of heavens cannot contain him? who am I then, that I should build him an house, save only to burn sacrifice before him?

7 Send me now therefore a man cunning to work in gold, and in silver, and in brass, and in iron, and in purple, and crimson, and blue, and that can skill † to grave with the cunning men that are with me in Judah and in Jerusalem, whom David my father did provide.

8 Send me also cedar trees, fir trees, and || algum trees, out of Lebanon: for I know that thy servants can skill to cut timber in Lebanon; and, behold, my servants shall be with thy servants,

9 Even to prepare me timber in abundance: for the house which I am about to build shall be † wonderful great.

10 And, behold, I will give to thy servants, the hewers that cut timber, twenty thousand measures of beaten wheat, and twenty thousand measures of barley, and twenty thousand baths of wine, and twenty thousand baths of oil.

11 ¶ Then Hiram the king of Tyre answered in writing, which he sent to Solomon, Because the LORD hath loved his people, he hath made thee king over them.

12 Hiram said moreover, Blessed be the LORD God of Israel, that made heaven and earth, who hath given to David the king a wise son, † endued with prudence and understanding, that might build an house for the LORD, and an house for his kingdom.

13 And now I have sent a cunning man, endued with understanding, of Hiram my father's,

14 The son of a woman of the daughters of Dan, and his father was a man of Tyre, skilful to work in gold, and in silver, in brass, in iron, in stone, and in timber, in purple, in blue, and in fine linen, and in crimson; also to grave any manner of graving, and to find out every device which shall be put to him, with thy cunning men, and with the cunning men of my lord David thy father.

15 Now therefore the wheat, and the barley, the oil, and the wine, which my lord hath spoken of, let him send unto his servants:

16 And we will cut wood out of Lebanon, † as much as thou shalt need: and we will bring it to thee in flotes by sea to † Joppa; and thou shalt carry it up to Jerusalem.

17 ¶ ^b And Solomon numbered all † the strangers that were in the land of Israel, after the numbering wherewith David his father had numbered them; and they were found an hundred and fifty thousand and three thousand and six hundred.

18 And he set ^c threescore and ten thousand of them to be bearers of burdens, and fourscore thousand to be hewers in the mountain, and three thousand and six hundred overseers to set the people a work.

CHAP. III.

1 The place, and time of building the temple. 3 The measure and ornaments of the house. 11 The cherubims. 14 The vail and pillars.

THEN ^a Solomon began to build the house of the LORD at Jerusalem in mount Moriah, || where the LORD appeared unto David his father, in the place that 1015.

Before
CHRIST

† Heb.
according to
all thy need.
† Heb.
Japho.

^b As ver. 2.
† Heb.
the men the strangers.

^c As it is
ver. 2.

1012.
^a 1 Kings
6. 1, &c.
|| Or,
which was seen of David his father.

10. — I will give to thy servants,] Or, as it may be rendered, "I will give on account of thy servants." It is said at 1 Kings v. 11, that Solomon gave these stores to Hiram: they were designed probably in part for the subsistence of the workmen, and the rest was sent to the king. Pyle.

12. — Blessed be the Lord God of Israel,] From these words it has been inferred by some, that Hiram was a proselyte to the true religion, because he here owns the God of Israel to be Jehovah, the Maker of heaven and earth; because he congratulates the Israelites on the happiness they enjoyed under such a king, which was the effect of his love to God and His church, and because he declared his love to God's chosen people, not only by embassies and letters, but by real acts of kindness, sending to Solomon materials for building the house of God, and the best artificers in the world. Bp. Patrick. Or perhaps these expressions respecting the God of Israel are only used in compliment to Solomon, who, as well as all the Israelites, as Hiram knew, delighted in hearing terms of respect applied to the God of Israel. Pyle.

17. And Solomon numbered all the strangers &c.] By these strangers are probably meant those who remained of the Amorites, Hittites, &c. mentioned afterwards at chap. viii. 7. It is probable they were not idolaters, for, if they had been so, David would not have suffered them to remain in the land; but they were worshippers of the true God, though not admitted into the Jewish religion. Solomon numbered them on this occasion, "after the numbering wherewith David had numbered them," that he might know their strength and condition; not from motives of vanity and ostentation, but from a prudent care that he might distinguish them from the Jews, and that he might employ them in such parts of his work as he did not think fit to assign to his own people. Bp. Patrick.

Chap. III. ver. 1. — in mount Moriah,] See note at Gen. xxii. 2. It is generally admitted, as a well-grounded opinion, that this mount Moriah, on which Solomon built his temple, was the same as that to which Abraham was commanded to go to offer his son Isaac, Gen. xxii. 2. Dr. Wells.

— where the Lord appeared unto David] Where the angel of the Lord appeared unto David, and commanded him to offer sacrifice in the threshingfloor of Ornan, or Araunah. Bp. Patrick.

Before
CHRIST
1012.Or,
Araunah,
2 Sam. 24.
18.1 Chron.
21. 18.
1 Kings6. 2
† Heb.
founded.1 Kings
6. 3.† Heb.
covered.Or, (as some think) of moveable work.

David had prepared in the threshingfloor of || Ornan the Jebusite.

2 And he began to build in the second day of the second month, in the fourth year of his reign.

3 ¶ Now these are the things wherein ^b Solomon was † instructed for the building of the house of God. The length by cubits after the first measure was threescore cubits, and the breadth twenty cubits.

4 And the ^c porch that was in the front of the house, the length of it was according to the breadth of the house, twenty cubits, and the height was an hundred and twenty: and he overlaid it within with pure gold.

5 And the greater house he cieled with fir tree, which he overlaid with fine gold, and set thereon palm trees and chains.

6 And he † garnished the house with precious stones for beauty: and the gold was gold of Parvaim.

7 He overlaid also the house, the beams, the posts, and the walls thereof, and the doors thereof, with gold; and graved cherubims on the walls.

8 And he made the most holy house, the length whereof was according to the breadth of the house, twenty cubits, and the breadth thereof twenty cubits: and he overlaid it with fine gold, amounting to six hundred talents.

9 And the weight of the nails was fifty shekels of gold. And he overlaid the upper chambers with gold.

10 And in the most holy house he made two cherubims || of image work, and overlaid them with gold.

11 ¶ And the wings of the cherubims were twenty cubits long: one wing of the one cherub was five cubits, reaching to the wall of the house: and the other wing was likewise five cubits, reaching to the wing of the other cherub.

12 And one wing of the other cherub was five cubits, reaching to the wall of the house: and the other wing was five cubits also, joining to the wing of the other cherub.

13 The wings of these cherubims spread themselves forth twenty cubits: and they stood on their feet, and their faces were || inward.

14 ¶ And he made the ^d vail of blue, and purple, and crimson, and fine linen, and † wrought cherubims thereon.

15 Also he made before the house ^e two pillars of thirty and five cubits † high, and the chapter that was on the top of each of them was five cubits.

16 And he made chains, as in the oracle, and put them on the heads of the pillars; and made an hundred pomegranates, and put them on the chains.

17 And he ^f reared up the pillars before the temple, one on the right hand, and the other on the left; and called the name of that on the right hand || Jachin, and the name of that on the left || Boaz.

CHAP. IV.

1 The altar of brass. 2 The molten sea upon twelve oxen. 6 The ten lavers, candlesticks, and tables. 9 The courts, and the instruments of brass. 19 The instruments of gold.

MOREOVER he made an altar of brass, twenty cubits the length thereof, and twenty cubits the breadth thereof, and ten cubits the height thereof.

2 ¶ ^a Also he made a molten sea of ten cubits † from brim to brim, round in compass, and five cubits the height thereof; and a line of thirty cubits did compass it round about.

3 ^b And under it was the similitude of oxen, which did compass it round about: ten in a cubit, compassing the sea round about. Two rows of oxen were cast, when it was cast.

4 It stood upon twelve oxen, three looking toward the north, and three looking toward the west, and three looking toward the south, and three looking toward the east: and the sea was set above upon them, and all their hinder parts were inward.

5 And the thickness of it was an handbreadth, and the brim of it like the work of the brim of a cup, || with flowers of li-

Before
CHRIST
1012.Or, toward the house.^d Matth.
27. 51.

† Heb.

caused to ascend.
^e Jer. 52. 21.

1 Kings

7. 15.

† Heb.

long.

^f 1 Kings
7. 21.|| That is,
he shall
establish.|| That is,
in it is strength.^a 1 Kings
7. 23, &c.

† Heb.

from his brim to his brim.^b 1 Kings
7. 24.Or,
like a lily flower.

6. — gold of Parvaim.] The situation of this place, from which gold was procured, has been the subject of much discussion. There are reasons for concluding that the island of Ceylon may be meant. That island was called by the Phenicians, Tapharvan, which means in their language, "the shore of Parvan," Taph signifying a shore. Bochart.

[Chap. IV. ver. 1. — he made an altar of brass.] The altar erected by Solomon in his temple, as here described, was much larger than that which had been made for the tabernacle, Exod.

xxvii. 1—3; as that was five cubits square, and three in height, whereas this was twenty cubits square, and ten in height. Though it is said to be made of brass, it is thought to have been filled within with rough stones, which were covered with thick plates of brass: there was an easy ascent leading up to it on the east side. The altar, which was in the temple built after the return of the Jews from captivity, consisted entirely of rough stones. Josephus says, that the altar, which was in the temple in his time, consisted of rough stones, being fifteen cubits high, forty long, and as many broad. Calmet.

Before
CHRIST
1012.

lies; and it received and held three thousand baths.

† Heb.
the work of burnt offering.

6 ¶ He made also ten lavers, and put five on the right hand, and five on the left, to wash in them: † such things as they offered for the burnt offering they washed in them; but the sea was for the priests to wash in.

7 And he made ten candlesticks of gold according to their form, and set them in the temple, five on the right hand, and five on the left.

8 He made also ten tables, and placed them in the temple, five on the right side, and five on the left. And he made an hundred || basons of gold.

|| Or,
bowls.

9 ¶ Furthermore he made the court of the priests, and the great court, and doors for the court, and overlaid the doors of them with brass.

10 And he set the sea on the right side of the east end, over against the south.

11 And Hiram made the pots, and the shovels, and the || basons. And Hiram † finished the work that he was to make for king Solomon for the house of God;

|| Or,
bowls.
† Heb. finished to make.

12 To wit, the two pillars, and the pommels, and the chapiters which were on the top of the two pillars, and the two wreaths to cover the two pommels of the chapiters which were on the pillars;

13 And four hundred pomegranates on the two wreaths; two rows of pomegranates on each wreath, to cover the two pommels of the chapiters which were † upon the pillars.

† Heb. upon the face.

14 He made also bases, and || lavers made he upon the bases;

|| Or,
caldrons.

15 One sea, and twelve oxen under it.

16 The pots also, and the shovels, and the fleshhooks, and all their instruments, did Hiram his father make to king Solomon for the house of the LORD of † bright brass.

† Heb. made bright,
or, scoured.

17 In the plain of Jordan did the king cast them, in the † clay ground between Succoth and Zeredathah.

† Heb.
thicknesses of the ground.

18 Thus Solomon made all these vessels in great abundance: for the weight of the brass could not be found out.

19 ¶ And Solomon made all the vessels that were for the house of God, the golden altar also, and the tables whereon the shewbread was set;

20 Moreover the candlesticks with their lamps, that they should burn after the manner before the oracle, of pure gold;

Before
CHRIST
1012.

21 And the flowers, and the lamps, and the tongs, made he of gold, and that † perfect gold;

† Heb. perfection
of gold.
|| Or,
bowls.

22 And the snuffers, and the || basons, and the spoons, and the censers, of pure gold: and the entry of the house, the inner doors thereof for the most holy place, and the doors of the house of the temple, were of gold.

CHAP. V.

1 The dedicated treasures. 2 The solemn induction of the ark into the oracle. 11 God being praised giveth a visible sign of his favour.

THUS all the work that Solomon made for the house of the LORD was finished: ^a and Solomon brought in all the things that David his father had dedicated; and the silver, and the gold, and all the instruments, put he among the treasures of the house of God.

1005.

^a 1 Kings
7. 51.

2 ¶ ^b Then Solomon assembled the elders of Israel, and all the heads of the tribes, the chief of the fathers of the children of Israel, unto Jerusalem, to bring up the ark of the covenant of the LORD out of the city of David, which is Zion.

1004.
^b 1 Kings
8. 1, &c.

3 Wherefore all the men of Israel assembled themselves unto the king in the feast which was in the seventh month.

4 And all the elders of Israel came; and the Levites took up the ark.

5 And they brought up the ark, and the tabernacle of the congregation, and all the holy vessels that were in the tabernacle, these did the priests and the Levites bring up.

6 Also king Solomon, and all the congregation of Israel that were assembled unto him before the ark, sacrificed sheep and oxen, which could not be told nor numbered for multitude.

7 And the priests brought in the ark of the covenant of the LORD unto his place, to the oracle of the house, into the most holy place, even under the wings of the cherubims:

8 For the cherubims spread forth their wings over the place of the ark, and the cherubims covered the ark and the staves thereof above.

9 And they drew out the staves of the ark, that the ends of the staves were seen from the ark before the oracle; but they

16. — did Hiram his father make to king Solomon] The word translated "father" is perhaps a proper name; "did Hiram Abi make to king Solomon:" or it is a short mode of speaking, "Hiram and his father." Bp. Patrick.

Before
CHRIST
1004.

Or, there, as
1 Kings 8.
8.
Deut. 10.
2, 5.
Or,
where.

Heb. found.

1 Chron.
25. 1.

* Psal. 136.
found.

were not seen without. And || there it is unto this day.

10 There was nothing in the ark save the two tables which Moses ^c put therein at Horeb, || when the LORD made a covenant with the children of Israel, when they came out of Egypt.

11 ^q And it came to pass, when the priests were come out of the holy place: (for all the priests that were ^t present were sanctified, and did not then wait by course:

12 ^d Also the Levites which were the singers, all of them of Asaph, of Heman, of Jeduthun, with their sons and their brethren, being arrayed in white linen, having cymbals and psalteries and harps, stood at the east end of the altar, and with them an hundred and twenty priests sounding with trumpets:)

13 It came even to pass, as the trumpeters and singers were as one, to make one sound to be heard in praising and thanking the LORD; and when they lifted up their voice with the trumpets and cymbals and instruments of musick, and praised the LORD, saying, 'For he is good; for his mercy endureth for ever: that then the house was filled with a cloud, even the house of the LORD;

14 So that the priests could not stand to minister by reason of the cloud: for the glory of the LORD had filled the house of God.

CHAP. VI.

1 Solomon, having blessed the people, blesseth God. 12

Chap. V. ver. 9. — And there it is unto this day.] Or rather, as the margin translates, "There they are (meaning the staves) unto this day;" for so the same words are translated at 1 Kings viii. 8. And, when that book was written, they were exactly true; but, when the author of this book of Chronicles transcribed them into his book, after the captivity, there were then neither staves nor ark remaining. See note on 1 Kings viii. 4. Therefore, it is here only recited from the book of Kings, how Solomon settled things. Bp. Patrick.

11. — (for all the priests — were sanctified, &c.) This solemnity was performed, not by any particular course of the priests, but the whole body of them attended the service, being purified on purpose by solemn washings, &c. And all the Levite musicians, ver. 12—14, placed in their several desks, joined the priests in playing the sacred hymn in honour of God; which was no sooner performed, than God, in testimony of His gracious acceptance of this temple for the stated place of His public worship, filled the whole place with the same cloud of glory which used to reside in the tabernacle; which appeared with such a mixture of tremendous darkness and brightness, that the priests were prevented from proceeding in the sacrifices till it was abated. See 1 Kings viii. 10, &c. Pyle.

As God vouchsafed to travel with His people in the tabernacle of Moses, so did it please Him to rest with them in the temple of Solomon. The feast of the dedication of that temple afforded the most magnificent sight that was ever presented to the eyes of Solomon's prayer in the consecration of the temple, Before upon the brazen scaffold. CHRIST 1004.

THEN ^a said Solomon, The LORD hath ^a said that he would dwell in the ^b thick darkness. ^a 1 Kings 8. 12, &c. ^b Lev. 16. 2.

2 But I have built an house of habitation for thee, and a place for thy dwelling for ever.

3 And the king turned his face, and blessed the whole congregation of Israel: and all the congregation of Israel stood.

4 And he said, Blessed be the LORD God of Israel, who hath with his hands fulfilled that which he spake with his mouth to my father David, saying,

5 Since the day that I brought forth my people out of the land of Egypt I chose no city among all the tribes of Israel to build an house in, that my name might be there; neither chose I any man to be a ruler over my people Israel:

6 But I have chosen Jerusalem, that my name might be there; and have chosen David to be over my people Israel.

7 Now ^c it was in the heart of David my father to build an house for the name of the LORD God of Israel. ^c 2 Sam. 7. ^d 1 Chron. 28. 2.

8 But the LORD said to David my father, Forasmuch as it was in thine heart to build an house for my name, thou didst well in that it was in thine heart:

9 Notwithstanding thou shalt not build the house; but thy son which shall come forth out of thy loins, he shall build the house for my name.

mortals. Let us imagine to ourselves a building, where scarce any thing appeared less valuable than silver and gold; a building, of which God Himself condescended to be the architect, and which had therefore in the design and execution all the perfection that Infinite Wisdom could give it. Before this building let us think we see the nation of the Israelites assembled, encircling their king, seated upon an exalted throne of burnished brass, with all the ensigns of majesty and royalty; while, amid the harmony of different kinds of instruments, with the acclamations of a whole people, joining in a grand chorus of praise and thanksgiving, the glory of Jehovah, or a body of light above the brightness of the sun, descends from heaven, and fills the temple! Imagination can hardly reach the amazing idea. But this is the scene described by the sacred writer: "And it came to pass, when the priests were come out of the holy place, &c." ver. 11—14. Never, after this, let us entertain low notions of God, or of the house where His glory dwelleth. Bp. Horne. See the note on chap. vi. 18.

Chap. VI. ver. 5. — neither chose I any man to be a ruler] These words differ from the parallel place at 1 Kings viii. 16, where it is said, "But I chose David to be over My people Israel." The meaning is, that till the time of David there was no settled succession of rulers, but God raised up judges out of what tribe and family He pleased; and, when He made Saul king, He did not continue the dignity in his family, as was the case with David. Bp. Patrick.

Before
CHRIST
1004.

10 The LORD therefore hath performed his word that he hath spoken: for I am risen up in the room of David my father, and am set on the throne of Israel, as the LORD promised, and have built the house for the name of the LORD God of Israel.

11 And in it have I put the ark, wherein is the covenant of the LORD, that he made with the children of Israel.

12 ¶ And he stood before the altar of the LORD in the presence of all the congregation of Israel, and spread forth his hands:

13 For Solomon had made a brasen scaffold, of five cubits † long, and five cubits broad, and three cubits high, and had set it in the midst of the court: and upon it he stood, and kneeled down upon his knees before all the congregation of Israel, and spread forth his hands toward heaven,

14 And said, O LORD God of Israel, ^d there is no God like thee in the heaven,

† Heb.
the length thereof, &c.

^d Exod. 15.
11.

13. For Solomon had made a brasen scaffold, &c.] This verse is added to what we have in the book of Kings: it had been stated in the last verse, that Solomon stood in the presence of all Israel; and here it is explained, that he was raised for that purpose on a scaffold. Bp. Patrick.

— and kneeled down upon his knees &c.] The house of God does not take its name from the practice of preaching there, but from that of praying: “My house shall be called the house of prayer,” Matt. xxi. 13. Accordingly we find, that when the temple of Solomon was finished, it was immediately applied to its proper use. We hear of no preaching on this great occasion, but only of prayers and religious offerings. The king, the priests, and all the people, attended at the solemn service of its dedication. Sacrifices were offered without number; and the king, in his capacity of a Prophet, prayed publicly for the blessing and favour of God upon the house which he had built. His words upon this occasion are very striking. Jones of Nayland.

14. And said, O Lord God of Israel, &c.] See note at 1 Kings viii. 23.

In his dedication-prayer, king Solomon, personating, as it should seem, the great Mediator, states before God the various wants and miseries of his people, requesting for those, who should pray in or towards that temple, that they might be supplied and relieved: see ver. 20, 21. Pardon for time past, and grace for time to come, comprehend between them the spiritual necessities of mankind; and both are supposed to have been justly and beautifully represented by the service and the furniture of the tabernacle and temple of old: the former by the acceptance of sacrifice and the sprinkling of blood, without which there is no remission; the latter by the table of shewbread, the golden candlestick with its lamps, and the altar of incense, denoting the support of our spirits by the true bread which cometh down from heaven, the instruction of our minds by the light of truth shining forth in the word of God, and the merits of a Redeemer ascending with the prayers of the faithful, to render them acceptable at the eternal throne. Under the new law, in like manner, at the baptismal font, and at the holy table, are exhibited and communicated the Spirit purifying and cleansing from sin, the body and blood of Christ strengthening and refreshing the souls of men. Such are the benefits (and what greater benefits can heart desire, or imagination conceive?) to be obtained, through faith, in these holy places, where God is pleased to meet us and to bless us, if indeed we are disposed to receive the blessing, by turning every one of us from his iniquities. Bp. Horne.

nor in the earth; which keepest covenant, and shewest mercy unto thy servants, that walk before thee with all their hearts:

15 Thou which hast kept with thy servant David my father that which thou hast promised him; and spakest with thy mouth, and hast fulfilled it with thine hand, as it is this day.

16 Now therefore, O LORD God of Israel, keep with thy servant David my father that which thou hast promised him, saying, † There shall not fail thee a man in my sight to sit upon the throne of Israel; yet so that thy children take heed to their way to walk in my law, as thou hast walked before me.

17 Now then, O LORD God of Israel, let thy word be verified, which thou hast spoken unto thy servant David.

18 But will God in very deed dwell with men on the earth? ^s behold, heaven and the heaven of heavens cannot contain thee;

Before
CHRIST
1004.

^e 2 Sam. 7.
12.

1 Kings 2.
4. & 6. 12.

† Heb.
There shall not a man be cut off.

^f Psal. 132.
12.

^e Chap. 2. 6.
Isai. 66. 1.

Acts 7. 49.

18. But will God in very deed dwell with men on the earth? &c.] This most awful and important question seems to have almost overwhelmed the vast and capacious mind of Solomon himself. Certainly that which is without bounds cannot be comprehended within that which has bounds, whether large or small; and therefore, in a strict and proper sense, “the Most High dwelleth not in temples made with hands;” see Acts vii. 48. But it is no less certain, that there is a sense, agreeably to which it may be truly said, that the Most High does dwell in temples made with hands. So Solomon asserts in this same prayer at the dedication of the temple, ver. 1, 2: and God Himself is introduced as saying the same in the 132d Psalm, ver. 13, 14. Accordingly we read, that “when the priests were come out of the holy place, the house of the Lord was filled with a cloud, so that the priests could not stand to minister, &c.” see chap. v. 11—14. The Master took possession of His house, and for a time dispossessed even His own servants, to show that he did so. As if He had said, “The house, which you have designed for My worship, I have designed for your blessing: what you gave dedicated, I have accepted: what you have consecrated, I have hallowed: I have taken it for the purpose you intended.” Or, to use the far more emphatical words of the sacred penman, “I have heard thy prayer and thy supplication, that thou hast made before Me: I have hallowed this house, which thou hast built, to put My name there for ever; and Mine eyes and Mine heart shall be there perpetually.” Thus, notwithstanding the iniquities of mankind, and His own purity, as well as incomprehensible majesty, has God been pleased to “dwell indeed on earth,” and to vouchsafe an especial manifestation of His presence in holy places, dedicated to His name, and set apart for His worship. An house designed for that end is therefore styled “the house of God,” or place of His residence. And let us not think that He is less present with us, than He was with Israel. Is the Christian church less favoured than the Jewish church was? Have we lost any thing by the incarnation of his Son? Surely not. It may be said indeed, we do not see Him as the Israelites did. But “the glory,” or body of light or fire, which the Israelites saw, was only a sign or token of His presence. “God is a Spirit, whom no man hath seen, nor can see.” We do not see the souls of those who are assembled to worship Him: yet are they present. The holy angels may be present when we worship Him; and God Himself, we trust, is so by His Spirit. We know who has said, “Where two or three are gathered together in My name, there am I in the midst of them,” Matth. xviii. 20. Bp. Horne.

Before
CHRIST
1004.

how much less this house which I have built!

19 Have respect therefore to the prayer of thy servant, and to his supplication, O LORD my God, to hearken unto the cry and the prayer which thy servant prayeth before thee:

20 That thine eyes may be open upon this house day and night, upon the place whereof thou hast said that thou wouldest put thy name there; to hearken unto the prayer which thy servant prayeth || toward this place.

|| Or,
in this place.

21 Hearken therefore unto the supplications of thy servant, and of thy people Israel, which they shall † make toward this place: hear thou from thy dwelling place, even from heaven; and when thou hearest, forgive.

† Heb.
pray.

22 ¶ If a man sin against his neighbour, † and an oath be laid upon him to make him swear, and the oath come before thine altar in this house;

† Heb. and he require an oath of him.

23 Then hear thou from heaven, and do, and judge thy servants, by requiring the wicked, by recompensing his way upon his own head; and by justifying the righteous, by giving him according to his righteousness.

24 ¶ And if thy people Israel || be put to the worse before the enemy, because they have sinned against thee; and shall return and confess thy name, and pray and make supplication before thee || in this house;

|| Or,
be smitten.

|| Or, toward.

25 Then hear thou from the heavens, and forgive the sin of thy people Israel, and bring them again unto the land which thou gavest to them and to their fathers.

20. That thine eyes may be open upon this house &c.] In these words the use of the temple is signified. This house was the place where God would give audience, and have respect to the petition, out of regard to the place in which it was offered. They, who expect to be heard when they address a king, go into his court, and present themselves in the proper place for an audience. The temple was the court of the great King; and, though He can hear the voice of men in every place, yet it was expedient that one place should be honoured above all others to stir up reverence in men, and give them a reasonable ground of hope when they should offer their petitions. It seems by the expression, that the people were encouraged, not only to pray within the temple, but to have respect to it, and to turn themselves toward it in their devotions, even when they prayed to the God of Israel in distant places: "Hearken unto the supplications of Thy people Israel, which they shall make toward this place." And the practice was duly observed by Daniel in his captivity at Babylon: it was his manner "to open his window toward Jerusalem, and to kneel and pray three times a day," Dan. vi. 10. His respect was to the temple; and he held to the practice, though then the ruins of it only were remaining. In fact, the tabernacle and temple were the places where the devotion of the people, and the favour of God, met together: the house

26 ¶ When the ^{Before}heaven is shut up, and there is no rain, because they have sinned against thee; ^{CHRIST}yet if they pray toward this place, and confess thy name, and turn from their sin, when thou dost afflict them; 1004. 1 Kings 17. 1.

27 Then hear thou from heaven, and forgive the sin of thy servants, and of thy people Israel, when thou hast taught them the good way, wherein they should walk; and send rain upon thy land, which thou hast given unto thy people for an inheritance.

28 ¶ If there ¹be dearth in the land, if there be pestilence, if there be blasting, or mildew, locusts, or caterpillars; if their enemies besiege them † in the cities of their land; whatsoever sore or whatsoever sickness ^{9.}there be: ^{† Heb.}in the land of their gates.

29 Then what prayer or what supplication soever shall be made of any man, or of all thy people Israel, when every one shall know his own sore and his own grief, and shall spread forth his hands || in this house:

|| Or,
toward this house.

30 Then hear thou from heaven thy dwelling place, and forgive, and render unto every man according unto all his ways, whose heart thou knowest; (for thou only ¹knowest the hearts of the children of men:)

¹ 1 Chron. 28. 9.

31 That they may fear thee, to walk in thy ways, † so long as they live † in the land which thou gavest unto our fathers.

† Heb.
all the days which.

32 ¶ Moreover concerning the stranger, † which is not of thy people Israel, but is come from a far country for thy great name's sake, and thy mighty hand, and thy stretched out arm; if they come and pray in this house;

† Heb.
upon the face of the land.
¹ John 12.
20.
Acts 8. 27.

of God was the common assembly of heaven and earth; there God was to be found, and there the people sought Him: there Hannah, in the bitterness of her soul, offered up her devotions, and her petition was granted. Yea, and Christ Himself allows, Matth. xxiii. 17, that "the temple sanctified the gold" which was offered in it: and, if it could sanctify the gold, it would rather sanctify the more valuable offerings of prayer and thanksgiving. This was known to that godly woman Anna the prophetess, who, having devoted herself to God, departed not from the temple, but served Him there with fastings and prayers night and day. There the prayers of Simeon were granted, and the promise of God fulfilled to him, when he took up the child Jesus in his arms, and blessed God, who in the temple had indulged him with a sight of what his eyes most desired to behold. Jones of Nayland.

28. — or caterpillars;] The Hebrew word here means some small destructive insects. That they are liable to the ravages of such animals in the East, appears from Sir J. Chardin, who says, that Persia is subject to have its harvest spoiled by locusts and small insects, which they call Sim; these are small white lice, which fix themselves on the foot of the stalk of corn, gnaw it, and make it die. It is rare for a year to be exempt from some scourge of this description. Harmer.

Before
CHRIST
1004.

33 Then hear thou from the heavens, even from thy dwelling place, and do according to all that the stranger calleth to thee for; that all people of the earth may know thy name, and fear thee, as doth thy people Israel, and may know that † this house which I have built is called by thy name.

† Heb.
thy name is called upon
this house.

34 If thy people go out to war against their enemies by the way that thou shalt send them, and they pray unto thee toward this city which thou hast chosen, and the house which I have built for thy name;

35 Then hear thou from the heavens their prayer and their supplication, and maintain their || cause.

|| Or, right.

Proverbs
20. 9.
Eccles. 7.
21.

James 3. 2.
1 John 1. 8.

† Heb.
they that take them captives carry them away.
† Heb. bring back to their heart.

36 If they sin against thee, (for there is ^m no man which sinneth not,) and thou be angry with them, and deliver them over before their enemies, and † they carry them away captives unto a land far off or near;

37 Yet if they † bethink themselves in the land whither they are carried captive, and turn and pray unto thee in the land of their captivity, saying, We have sinned, we have done amiss, and have dealt wickedly:

38 If they return to thee with all their heart and with all their soul in the land of their captivity, whither they have carried them captives, and pray toward their land, which thou gavest unto their fathers, and toward the city which thou hast chosen, and toward the house which I have built for thy name:

39 Then hear thou from the heavens, even from thy dwelling place, their prayer and their supplications, and maintain their || cause, and forgive thy people which have sinned against thee.

|| Or, right.

38. — and pray toward their land,] Thus both prince and people were to pray in this house, while they possessed the land of Judea and the city where it stood; to pray towards it when they sojourned in foreign coasts, or were detained in the land of their captivity; to pray towards the place where it had stood, in case it should be demolished. Thus Daniel did, (Dan. vi. 10,) after this house, built by Solomon, was burnt to the ground. Dr. Jackson.

41. Now therefore arise, O Lord God, &c.] These words form part of Psalm cxxii. 8, 9, with very little variation. In them he beseeches God to take up His habitation here, with "the ark of His strength," so as to stir from hence no more; and also so to defend His priests who ministered to Him, that they might obtain His blessings for others, and that all the people might rejoice in His great bounty. Bp. Patrick.

Chap. VII. ver. 1. — the fire came down from heaven,] God had already given one gracious token of His acceptance of the temple for the place of His holy residence and worship, by the cloud of glory coming into it, chap. v. 13, 14: and now, as a further confirmation of it, the king's foregoing prayer was no sooner ended, than the sacrifices were immediately burnt and consumed by a flame, from the same cloud, upon the altar; in 40 Now, my God, let, I beseech thee, thine eyes be open, and let thine ears be attent † unto the prayer that is made in this place.

Before
CHRIST
1004.

† Heb. to the prayer of this place.
n Psal. 132.
9.

41 Now ^a therefore arise, O LORD God, into thy resting place, thou, and the ark of thy strength: let thy priests, O LORD God, be clothed with salvation, and let thy saints rejoice in goodness.

42 O LORD God, turn not away the face of thine anointed: remember the mercies of David thy servant.

CHAP. VII.

1 God having given testimony to Solomon's prayer by fire from heaven, and glory in the temple, the people worship him. 4 Solomon's solemn sacrifice. 8 Solomon having kept the feast of tabernacles, and the feast of the dedication of the altar, dismisseth the people. 12 God appearing to Solomon giveth him promises upon condition.

NOW ^a when Solomon had made an end of praying, the ^b fire came down from heaven, and consumed the burnt offering and the sacrifices; and the glory of the LORD filled the house.

a 1 Kings
8. 54, &c.
b Lev. 9. 24.

2 And the priests could not enter into the house of the LORD, because the glory of the LORD had filled the LORD's house.

3 And when all the children of Israel saw how the fire came down, and the glory of the LORD upon the house, they bowed themselves with their faces to the ground upon the pavement, and worshipped, and praised the LORD, saying, For he is good; for his mercy endureth for ever.

4 ¶ Then the king and all the people offered sacrifices before the LORD.

5 And king Solomon offered a sacrifice of twenty and two thousand oxen, and an hundred and twenty thousand sheep: so the same manner as it was at the consecration of the tabernacle, Lev. ix. 24. Pyle.

The cloud, which denoted the presence of God, had already filled the house, so that the priest could not stand to minister: and in the ages after, as well as before, the Divine presence was manifested about the ark, and between the cherubim which overshadowed it. On special occasions, it appeared in a visible manner, under the symbol of a cloud, with a light or glory attending it: and, when the cloud was not seen, the place was always understood as being inhabited in a particular manner by the glory of the Godhead. Jones of Nayland.

This kind of answer by fire was of the most satisfactory kind. By this answer God determined the controversies between Elijah and Baal's priests: by the like effects of fire from heaven, the calling of Aaron to the priesthood was proved to be not by man, but by God's immediate appointment. And so was the consecration of the Son of God to His everlasting priesthood confirmed by the visible appearance of the Holy Ghost in tongues of fire, which was the accomplishment of both the former miraculous appearances from heaven, the one at the consecration of Aaron, the other at the consecration of this material temple. Dr. Jackson.

Before
CHRIST
1001.

* 1 Chron.
15. 16.

† Heb. by their hand.

the king and all the people dedicated the house of God.

6 * And the priests waited on their offices: the Levites also with instruments of musick of the LORD, which David the king had made to praise the LORD, because his mercy endureth for ever, when David praised † by their ministry; and the priests sounded trumpets before them, and all Israel stood.

7 Moreover Solomon hallowed the middle of the court that was before the house of the LORD: for there he offered burnt offerings, and the fat of the peace offerings, because the brasen altar which Solomon had made was not able to receive the burnt offerings, and the meat offerings, and the fat.

8 ¶ Also at the same time Solomon kept the feast seven days, and all Israel with him, a very great congregation, from the entering in of Hamath unto ^a the river of Egypt.

† Heb.
a restraint.

9 And in the eighth day they made † a solemn assembly: for they kept the dedication of the altar seven days, and the feast seven days.

10 And on the three and twentieth day of the seventh month he sent the people away into their tents, glad and merry in heart for the goodness that the LORD had shewed unto David, and to Solomon, and to Israel his people.

* 1 Kings
9. 1, &c.

11 Thus * Solomon finished the house of the LORD, and the king's house: and all that came into Solomon's heart to make in the house of the LORD, and in his own house, he prosperously effected.

12 ¶ And the LORD appeared to Solomon by night, and said unto him, I have heard thy prayer, [†] and have chosen this place to myself for an house of sacrifice.

† Deut. 12.
9.

13 If I shut up heaven that there be no rain, or if I command the locusts to devour the land, or if I send pestilence among my people;

Before
CHRIST
1004.

14 If my people, † which are called by my name, shall humble themselves, and pray, and seek my face, and turn from their wicked ways; then will I hear from heaven, and will forgive their sin, and will heal their land.

† Heb. upon whom my name is called.

15 Now * mine eyes shall be open, and mine ears attent † unto the prayer that is made in this place.

* Chap. 6.
40.
† Heb. to the prayer
of this place.
a Chap. 6. 6.

16 For now have ^a I chosen and sanctified this house, that my name may be there for ever: and mine eyes and mine heart shall be there perpetually.

17 And as for thee, if thou wilt walk before me, as David thy father walked, and do according to all that I have commanded thee, and shalt observe my statutes and my judgments;

18 Then will I stablish the throne of thy kingdom, according as I have covenanted with David thy father, saying, [†] There shall not fail thee a man to be ruler in Israel.

† Chap. 6.
16.
† Heb.
There shall not be cut off to thee.
a Lev. 26.
14.
Deut. 28.
15.

19 * But if ye turn away, and forsake my statutes and my commandments, which I have set before you, and shall go and serve other gods, and worship them;

20 Then will I pluck them up by the roots out of my land which I have given them; and this house, which I have sanctified for my name, will I cast out of my sight, and will make it to be a proverb and a byword among all nations.

21 And this house, which is high, shall be an astonishment to every one that passeth by it; so that he shall say, [†] Why hath the LORD done thus unto this land, and unto this house?

† Deut. 29.
24.
Jer. 22. 8.
9.

22 And it shall be answered, Because they forsook the LORD God of their fathers, which brought them forth out of the land of Egypt, and laid hold on other gods, and worshipped them, and served them:

13. If I shut up heaven &c.] God here again declares to Solomon, that His dispensations of mercies or judgments would always be in proportion to the virtuous or disobedient behaviour of the people; that their conscientious regard to the laws of their religion would never fail to draw down upon them continued blessings; and their true repentance and reformation of life, to stop the miseries that at any time befell them: but that, whenever they degenerated into obstinate idolatry and irreligion, neither the promises made to David, nor the name of Israel, nor the splendour of the temple, would screen them from the Divine vengeance; they should become wretched even to a proverb, ver. 21, and be forced to acknowledge that the slavery of the whole nation, and the desolation of their sacred temple, are but just retributions of Heaven for their ingratitude under the choicest favours and blessings, by forsaking the great God who so mercifully bestowed them. Pyle.

14. If my people, — shall humble themselves, — and turn &c.] Solomon is here instructed, that the only way, by which God can be reconciled to a sinful people, is, by their prosecuting their fasting and humiliation to the actual reformation and amendment of their lives; that it is ever the proper fruit of repentance, to forsake our sins and become better for the future, more pious and devout towards God, more sober and chaste with regard to ourselves, more just and charitable, meek and humble towards all men. Without this, humiliation and prayer will signify nothing; sorrow and tears will have no avail to save our own souls, or to preserve our generation from destruction. Abp. Tillotson.

Before CHRIST 1004. therefore hath he brought all this evil upon them.

CHAP. VIII.

1 Solomon's buildings. 7 The Gentiles which were left Solomon made tributaries; but the Israelites rulers. 11 Pharaoh's daughter removeth to her house. 12 Solomon's yearly solemn sacrifices. 14 He appointeth the priests and Levites to their places. 17 The navy fetcheth gold from Ophir.

992.
a 1 Kings
9. 10, &c.

AND ^a it came to pass at the end of twenty years, wherein Solomon had built the house of the LORD, and his own house,

2 That the cities which Hiram had restored to Solomon, Solomon built them, and caused the children of Israel to dwell there.

3 And Solomon went to Hamath-zobah, and prevailed against it.

4 And he built Tadmor in the wilderness, and all the store cities, which he built in Hamath.

5 Also he built Beth-horon the upper, and Beth-horon the nether, fenced cities, with walls, gates, and bars;

6 And Baalath, and all the store cities that Solomon had, and all the chariot cities, and the cities of the horsemen, and [†] all that Solomon desired to build in Jerusalem, and in Lebanon, and throughout all the land of his dominion.

† Heb.
all the desire of Solomon which he desired to build.

7 ¶ As for all the people that were left of the Hittites, and the Amorites, and the Perizzites, and the Hivites, and the Jebusites, which were not of Israel,

8 But of their children, who were left after them in the land, whom the children of Israel consumed not, them did Solomon make to pay tribute until this day.

9 But of the children of Israel did Solomon make no servants for his work; but they were men of war, and chief of his captains, and captains of his chariots and horsemen.

10 And these were the chief of king Solomon's officers, even two hundred and fifty, that bare rule over the people.

Before CHRIST 992.

11 ¶ And Solomon ^b brought up the daughter of Pharaoh out of the city of David unto the house that he had built for her: for he said, My wife shall not dwell in the house of David king of Israel, because the places are [†] holy, whereunto the ark of the LORD hath come.

† Heb.
holiness.

12 ¶ Then Solomon offered burnt offerings unto the LORD on the altar of the LORD, which he had built before the porch, 13 Even after a certain rate every ^c day, offering according to the commandment of Moses, on the sabbaths, and on the new moons, and on the solemn feasts, ^d three times in the year, even in the feast of unleavened bread, and in the feast of weeks, and in the feast of tabernacles.

^c Exod. 29. 23.

^d Exod. 23. 14.
Deut. 16. 16.

14 ¶ And he appointed, according to the order of David his father, the ^e courses of the priests to their service, and the Levites to their charges, to praise and minister before the priests, as the duty of every day required: the ^f porters also by their courses at every gate: for [†] so had David the man of God commanded.

^e 1 Chron. 24. 1.

^f 1 Chron. 9. 17.
† Heb.
so was the commandment of David the man of God.

15 And they departed not from the commandment of the king unto the priests and Levites concerning any matter, or concerning the treasures.

16 Now all the work of Solomon was prepared unto the day of the foundation of the house of the LORD, and until it was finished. So the house of the LORD was perfected.

17 ¶ Then went Solomon to Ezion-geber, and to ^{||} Elath, at the sea side in the land of Edom.

|| Or,
Elath,
Deut. 2. 8.

18 And Hiram sent him by the hands of his servants ships, and servants that had knowledge of the sea; and they went with

Chap. VIII. ver. 2. That the cities which Hiram had restored &c. Here is a short relation of what is told more largely at 1 Kings ix. 12, 13: only we are further informed in this place, that Solomon rebuilt the cities, after they were restored to him by Hiram, so that his own subjects became the inhabitants. Bp. Patrick.

3. — went to Hamath-zobah,] Probably the country lying between the Euphrates and Damascus. Bochart. Perhaps the country is so called, as being a part of the kingdom of Hamath, seized on by the king of Zobah. Dr. Wells. See notes at Numb. xiii. 21; xxxiv. 2; 2 Sam. viii. 9; and 1 Kings viii. 65.

11. — My wife shall not dwell in the house of David] "The ark of the Lord" had dwelt for a considerable time in the house of David, where a tabernacle had been made on purpose for it. On this account, Solomon thought that especial regard should be paid to a place, which had been employed for so sacred an end, and would not suffer his wife, who was a stranger, though a proselyte to the Jewish religion, to keep her court there: for she and her servants might in many ways have defiled a place, which had been made sacred by the symbol of the Divine presence dwelling there. Bp. Patrick.

14. — David the man of God] It is observable that David is here called "the man of God" as Moses had been; because, after Moses, there was none like him divinely inspired, to raise the publick worship to a higher pitch by his heavenly hymns; and to direct the manner of its performance in proper order. Solomon was a very wise man in natural knowledge, and in political affairs, and in moral and Divine things; but he was much inferior to David both in true piety, and in the gift of prophecy. Bp. Patrick.

Before
CHRIST
992.

the servants of Solomon to Ophir, and took thence four hundred and fifty talents of gold, and brought them to king Solomon.

CHAP. IX.

1 The queen of Sheba admireth the wisdom of Solomon. 13 Solomon's gold. 15 His targets. 17 The throne of ivory. 20 His vessels. 23 His presents. 25 His chariots and horse. 26 His tributes. 29 His reign and death.

about 992.
1 Kings
10. 1, &c.
Matt. 12.
42.
Luke 11.
31.

AND ^a when the queen of Sheba heard of the fame of Solomon, she came to prove Solomon with hard questions at Jerusalem, with a very great company, and camels that bare spices, and gold in abundance, and precious stones: and when she was come to Solomon, she communed with him of all that was in her heart.

2 And Solomon told her all her questions: and there was nothing hid from Solomon which he told her not.

3 And when the queen of Sheba had seen the wisdom of Solomon, and the house that he had built,

4 And the meat of his table, and the sitting of his servants, and the attendance of his ministers, and their apparel; his ^{||} cupbearers also, and their apparel; and his ascent by which he went up into the house of the Lord; there was no more spirit in her.

^{||} Or,
butlers.

5 And she said to the king, It was a true [†] report which I heard in mine own land of thine ^{||} acts, and of thy wisdom:

[†] Heb.
word.
^{||} Or,
sayings.

6 Howbeit I believed not their words, until I came, and mine eyes had seen it: and, behold, the one half of the greatness of thy wisdom was not told me: for thou exceedest the fame that I heard.

7 Happy are thy men, and happy are these thy servants, which stand continually before thee, and hear thy wisdom.

8 Blessed be the Lord thy God, which delighted in thee to set thee on his throne, to be king for the Lord thy God: because thy God loved Israel, to establish them for ever, therefore made he thee king over them, to do judgment and justice.

9 And she gave the king an hundred and twenty talents of gold, and of spices great abundance, and precious stones: neither was there any such spice as the queen of Sheba gave king Solomon.

10 And the servants also of Hiram, and the servants of Solomon, which brought gold from Ophir, brought alnum trees and precious stones.

Before
CHRIST
about 992.

11 And the king made of the alnum trees ^{||} [†] terraces to the house of the Lord, and to the king's palace, and harps and psalteries for singers: and there were none such seen before in the land of Judah.

^{||} Or,
stays.
[†] Heb.
highways.

12 And king Solomon gave to the queen of Sheba all her desire, whatsoever she asked, beside that which she had brought unto the king. So she turned, and went away to her own land, she and her servants.

13 ¶ Now the weight of gold that came to Solomon in one year was six hundred and threescore and six talents of gold;

14 Beside that which chapmen and merchants brought. And all the kings of Arabia and ^{||} governors of the country brought gold and silver to Solomon.

^{||} Or,
captains.

15 ¶ And king Solomon made two hundred targets of beaten gold: six hundred shekels of beaten gold went to one target.

16 And three hundred shields made he of beaten gold: three hundred shekels of gold went to one shield. And the king put them in the house of the forest of Lebanon.

17 Moreover the king made a great throne of ivory, and overlaid it with pure gold.

18 And there were six steps to the throne, with a footstool of gold, which were fastened to the throne, and [†] stays on each side of the sitting place, and two lions standing by the stays:

[†] Heb.
hands.

19 And twelve lions stood there on the one side and on the other upon the six steps. There was not the like made in any kingdom.

20 ¶ And all the drinking vessels of king Solomon were of gold, and all the vessels of the house of the forest of Lebanon were of [†] pure gold: ^{||} none were of silver; it was not any thing accounted of in the days of Solomon.

[†] Heb. shut up.
^{||} Or,
there was no silver in them.

21 For the king's ships went to Tarshish with the servants of Hiram: every three years once came the ships of Tarshish bringing gold, and silver, ^{||} ivory, and apes, and peacocks.

^{||} Or,
elephants'
teeth.

22 And king Solomon passed all the kings of the earth in riches and wisdom.

Chap. IX. ver. 8. Blessed be the Lord thy God,] In these words she says much more than is related at 1 Kings x. 9: for here she calls the throne of Israel "the throne of the Lord," and acknowledges Solomon to be made king "for the Lord his God;" that is, not only to rule by His authority, and as His deputy; but for His glory, and to promote His religion. Bp. Patrick:

Before
CHRIST
about 992.

23 ¶ And all the kings of the earth sought the presence of Solomon, to hear his wisdom, that God had put in his heart.

24 And they brought every man his present, vessels of silver, and vessels of gold, and raiment, harness, and spices, horses, and mules, a rate year by year.

^b 1 Kings
4. 26.

25 ¶ And Solomon ^b had four thousand stalls for horses and chariots, and twelve thousand horsemen; whom he bestowed in the chariot cities, and with the king at Jerusalem.

^c Gen. 15.
18.
¶ That is,
Euphrates.
† Heb.
gave.

26 ¶ And he reigned over all the kings ^c from the ¶ river even unto the land of the Philistines, and to the border of Egypt.

27 And the king [†] made silver in Jerusalem as stones, and cedar trees made he as the sycamore trees that are in the low plains in abundance.

^d 1 Kings
10. 28.
chap. 1. 16.

28 ^d And they brought unto Solomon horses out of Egypt, and out of all lands.

^e 1 Kings
11. 41.

29 ¶ Now the rest of the ^e acts of Solomon, first and last, are they not written in the [†] book of Nathan the prophet, and in the prophecy of Ahijah the Shilonite, and in the visions of [†] Iddo the seer against Jeroboam the son of Nebat?

† Heb.
words.

^f Chap. 12.
15.

30 And Solomon reigned in Jerusalem over all Israel forty years.

975.

31 And Solomon slept with his fathers, and he was buried in the city of David his father: and Rehoboam his son reigned in his stead.

CHAP. X.

¹ The Israelites, assembled at Shechem to crown Rehoboam, by Jeroboam make a suit of relaxation unto him. 6 Rehoboam, refusing the old men's counsel, by the advice of young men answereth them roughly. 16 Ten tribes revolting kill Hadoram, and make Rehoboam to flee.

^a 1 Kings
12. 1, &c.

AND ^a Rehoboam went to Shechem: for to Shechem were all Israel come to make him king.

2 And it came to pass, when Jeroboam the son of Nebat, who was in Egypt, whither he had fled from the presence of Solomon the king, heard it, that Jeroboam returned out of Egypt.

3 And they sent and called him. So

Jeroboam and all Israel came and spake to Rehoboam, saying,

Before
CHRIST
about 975.

4 Thy father made our yoke grievous: now therefore ease thou somewhat the grievous servitude of thy father, and his heavy yoke that he put upon us, and we will serve thee.

5 And he said unto them, Come again unto me after three days. And the people departed.

6 ¶ And king Rehoboam took counsel with the old men that had stood before Solomon his father while he yet lived, saying, What counsel give ye me to return answer to this people?

7 And they spake unto him, saying, If thou be kind to this people, and please them, and speak good words to them, they will be thy servants for ever.

8 But he forsook the counsel which the old men gave him, and took counsel with the young men that were brought up with him, that stood before him.

9 And he said unto them, What advice give ye that we may return answer to this people, which have spoken to me, saying, Ease somewhat the yoke that thy father did put upon us?

10 And the young men that were brought up with him spake unto him, saying, Thus shalt thou answer the people that spake unto thee, saying, Thy father made our yoke heavy, but make thou it somewhat lighter for us; thus shalt thou say unto them, My little finger shall be thicker than my father's loins.

11 For whereas my father [†] put a heavy yoke upon you, I will put more to your yoke: my father chastised you with whips, but I will chastise you with scorpions.

† Heb.
linded.

12 So Jeroboam and all the people came to Rehoboam on the third day, as the king bade, saying, Come again to me on the third day.

13 And the king answered them roughly; and king Rehoboam forsook the counsel of the old men,

14 And answered them after the advice of the young men, saying, My father made

24. — and raiment,] Presents of raiment are still frequently made in these countries to the great. Thevenot tells us it was the custom in Egypt, in his time, for the consuls of the European nations to send to the basha and his officers valuable presents of vestments, whenever a new basha arrived, or a new consul entered on his office. Harmer.

29. — in the book of Nathan the prophet, &c.] See note at 1 Kings xi. 41. It is there stated only generally, that his acts were written in "the book of the acts of Solomon." We are here told the particular books in which they were recorded. The last of these authors, Iddo, wrote also the acts of Rehoboam, chap. xii. 15; some suppose that he lived till the time of Asa, chap. xv. 1, where he is called Oded. We need not suppose that the three writers here mentioned joined to make one book; but they severally and distinctly gave an account of such things as occurred to their knowledge; out of which, it is probable, the author of these books of Chronicles took many things which are here supplied. Bp. Patrick.

Chap. X. For notes on this chapter, see those on 1 Kings xii.
5 H 2

Before
CHRIST
about 975.

* 1 Kings
11. 29.

† Heb. strengthened himself.

* 1 Kings
12. 21, &c.

your yoke heavy, but I will add thereto: my father chastised you with whips, but I will chastise you with scorpions.

15 So the king hearkened not unto the people: for the cause was of God, that the LORD might perform his word, which he spake by the ^b hand of Ahijah the Shilonite to Jeroboam the son of Nebat.

16 ¶ And when all Israel saw that the king would not hearken unto them, the people answered the king, saying, What portion have we in David? and we have none inheritance in the son of Jesse: every man to your tents, O Israel: and now, David, see to thine own house. So all Israel went to their tents.

17 But as for the children of Israel that dwelt in the cities of Judah, Rehoboam reigned over them.

18 Then king Rehoboam sent Hadoram that was over the tribute; and the children of Israel stoned him with stones, that he died. But king Rehoboam † made speed to get him up to his chariot, to flee to Jerusalem.

19 And Israel rebelled against the house of David unto this day.

CHAP. XI.

¹ Rehoboam raising an army to subdue Israel, is forbidden by Shemaiah. ⁵ He strengtheneth his kingdom with forts and provision. ¹³ The priests and Levites, and such as feared God, forsaken by Jeroboam, strengthen the kingdom of Judah. ¹⁸ The wives and children of Rehoboam.

AND ^a when Rehoboam was come to Jerusalem, he gathered of the house of Judah and Benjamin an hundred and fourscore thousand chosen men, which were warriors, to fight against Israel, that he might bring the kingdom again to Rehoboam.

2 But the word of the LORD came to Shemaiah the man of God, saying,

3 Speak unto Rehoboam the son of Solomon, king of Judah, and to all Israel in Judah and Benjamin, saying,

Chap. XI. ver. 6. He built even Beth-lehem, &c.] By "building" it is meant, here as in other passages, that he repaired and fortified places which were built before.

13. And the priests and the Levites &c.] The wicked changes which Jeroboam had made in matters of religion, became a further addition of strength to Rehoboam; for the priests and Levites were either expelled from their habitations among the ten tribes, or voluntarily deserted their habitations, and came to Jerusalem; Jeroboam having set up the worship of the golden calves, and made priests out of the laity for the service of his idols. Pyle.

15. — and for the devils.] The Hebrew word here signifies "goats" literally, and was a term commonly used for demons or false gods of all denominations; who, according to the notions prevailing in those times, were supposed to appear under this

Before
CHRIST
about 975.

4 Thus saith the LORD, Ye shall not go up, nor fight against your brethren: return every man to his house: for this thing is done of me. And they obeyed the words of the LORD, and returned from going against Jeroboam.

5 ¶ And Rehoboam dwelt in Jerusalem, and built cities for defence in Judah.

6 He built even Beth-lehem, and Etam, and Tekoa,

7 And Beth-zur, and Shoco, and Adullam,

8 And Gath, and Mareshah, and Ziph,

9 And Adoraim, and Lachish, and Azekah,

10 And Zorah, and Aijalon, and Hebron, which are in Judah and in Benjamin fenced cities.

11 And he fortified the strong holds, and put captains in them, and store of victual, and of oil and wine.

12 And in every several city he put shields and spears, and made them exceeding strong, having Judah and Benjamin on his side.

13 ¶ And the priests and the Levites that were in all Israel † resorted to him out of all their coasts.

14 For the Levites left their suburbs and their possession, and came to Judah and Jerusalem: for ^b Jeroboam and his sons had cast them off from executing the priest's office unto the LORD:

15 And he ordained him priests for the high places, and for the devils, and for the calves which he had made.

16 And after them out of all the tribes of Israel such as set their hearts to seek the LORD God of Israel came to Jerusalem, to sacrifice unto the LORD God of their fathers.

17 So they strengthened the kingdom of Judah, and made Rehoboam the son of Solomon strong, three years: for three years they walked in the way of David and Solomon.

shape. Pyle. As we no where read of Jeroboam having set up or allowed any other false worship than that of the golden calves, we may reasonably conclude that by the word "devils" are meant these idols:—perhaps it should be translated, "for devils, even for the calves which he had made." Dr. Wells. See note at Lev. xvii. 7.

17. — in the way of David and Solomon.] Although the number of people which came to him out of all the tribes added great strength to Rehoboam's kingdom, yet his power was chiefly owing to God, who protected and assisted him as long as he and his people continued in the way of his predecessors, David and Solomon. It is observable, that in these words Solomon is mentioned as an example of true piety, as well as David: this is probably said with reference to the greater part of his reign, before the period of his old age, when he forsook the law of Moses. Bp. Patrick.

Before
CHRIST
974.

18 ¶ And Rehoboam took him Mahalath the daughter of Jerimoth the son of David to wife, and Abihail the daughter of Eliab the son of Jesse;

19 Which bare him children; Jeush, and Shamariah, and Zaham.

1 Kings
15. 2.

20 And after her he took ^c Maachah the daughter of Absalom; which bare him Abijah, and Attai, and Ziza, and Shelomith.

21 And Rehoboam loved Maachah the daughter of Absalom above all his wives and his concubines: (for he took eighteen wives, and threescore concubines; and begat twenty and eight sons, and threescore daughters.)

22 And Rehoboam made Abijah the son of Maachah the chief, to be ruler among his brethren: for he thought to make him king.

23 And he dealt wisely, and dispersed of all his children throughout all the countries of Judah and Benjamin, unto every fenced city: and he gave them victual in abundance. And he desired [†] many wives.

† Heb.
a multitude of wives.

CHAP. XII.

1 Rehoboam, forsaking the Lord, is punished by Shishak.
5 He and the princes, repenting at the preaching of Shemaiah, are delivered from destruction, but not from spoil. 13 The reign and death of Rehoboam.

972.

AND it came to pass, when Rehoboam had established the kingdom, and had strengthened himself, he forsook the law of the LORD, and all Israel with him.

971.

2 And it came to pass, that in the fifth year of king Rehoboam Shishak king of Egypt came up against Jerusalem, ^a because they had transgressed against the LORD,

1 Kings
14. 24, 25.

21. — for he took eighteen wives,] When we read of the many instances which occur of the kings of Israel disobeying the law of God, which commanded them not to multiply wives, we should always bear in mind that, in those days, the desire of having abundance of children was extremely great, and that barrenness, or the want of children, was esteemed the greatest possible unhappiness. Bp. Patrick.

23. And he dealt wisely, and dispersed &c.] It seems probable that, on his designing to make Abijah his son king, who was one of his younger sons, the other sons took great offence, and shewed a disposition of rebellion; and his method of preventing the effects of this was to send them away from court, and to disperse them through the kingdom by preferring them to the government of several small towns: and “he gave them victual in abundance,” that is, enabled them to live with splendour and abundance. Pyle.

Chap. XII. ver. 1. — he forsook the law of the Lord,] As Rehoboam's mother was an Ammonitess, it is probable that he received an education which naturally led to idolatry, or to an indifference to true religion. Bp. Wilson.

Before
CHRIST
971.

3 With twelve hundred chariots, and threescore thousand horsemen: and the people were without number that came with him out of Egypt; the Lubims, the Sukkiims, and the Ethiopians.

4 And he took the fenced cities which pertained to Judah, and came to Jerusalem.

5 ¶ Then came Shemaiah the prophet to Rehoboam, and to the princes of Judah, that were gathered together to Jerusalem because of Shishak, and said unto them, Thus saith the LORD, Ye have forsaken me, and therefore have I also left you in the hand of Shishak.

6 Whereupon the princes of Israel and the king humbled themselves; and they said, The LORD is righteous.

7 And when the LORD saw that they humbled themselves, the word of the LORD came to Shemaiah, saying, They have humbled themselves; therefore I will not destroy them, but I will grant them ^{||} some deliverance; and my wrath shall not be poured out upon Jerusalem by the hand of Shishak.

|| Or, a little while.

8 Nevertheless they shall be his servants; that they may know my service, and the service of the kingdoms of the countries.

9 So Shishak king of Egypt came up against Jerusalem, and took away the treasures of the house of the LORD, and the treasures of the king's house; he took all: he carried away also the shields of gold which Solomon ^b had made.

^b Chap. 9.
15.

10 Instead of which king Rehoboam made shields of brass, and committed them to the hands of the chief of the guard, that kept the entrance of the king's house.

2. — in the fifth year] Their apostasy took place in the fourth year of Rehoboam's reign, (after they had been three years obedient, chap. xi. 17 :) therefore God speedily corrected them, that He might reduce them to His service, before they were settled in their impiety. Bp. Patrick.

3. — the Lubims, the Sukkiims, and the Ethiopians.] The Lubims were, no doubt, the people of Libya, a famous country in Africa, bordering on Egypt. The Sukkiims are thought to have lived near the Red sea, and to have been so named from their living in caves and dens of the earth, the word from which the name is derived signifying a cave or den; hence they are thought to have been the same with a people called Troglodites, inhabiting those parts, whose habits of life were of this description. The people called Cush, (which we translate Ethiopians,) were either those to the south of Egypt, or in Arabia; for, as has been observed before, the name applied to both. Bp. Patrick.

8. — that they may know my service, &c.] That they may feel the difference between being under My protection, and being abandoned by Me; between the blessings which attend a true course of piety, and the wretched effects of irreligion and lewdness. Pyle.

Before
CHRIST
971.

11 And when the king entered into the house of the LORD, the guard came and fetched them, and brought them again into the guard chamber.

¶ Or,
and yet in Judah there were good things.

12 And when he humbled himself, the wrath of the LORD turned from him, that he would not destroy him altogether: || and also in Judah things went well.

¶ 1 Kings
14. 21.

13 ¶ So king Rehoboam strengthened himself in Jerusalem, and reigned: for Rehoboam was one and forty years old when he began to reign, and he reigned seventeen years in Jerusalem, the city which the LORD had chosen out of all the tribes of Israel, to put his name there. And his mother's name was Naamah an Ammonitess.

† Or, fixed.

14 And he did evil, because he || prepared not his heart to seek the LORD.

† Heb.
words.

15 Now the acts of Rehoboam, first and last, are they not written in the † book of Shemaiah the prophet, and of Iddo the seer concerning genealogies? And there were wars between Rehoboam and Jeroboam continually.

16 And Rehoboam slept with his fathers, and was buried in the city of David: and Abijah his son reigned in his stead.

CHAP. XIII.

1 Abijah succeeding maketh war against Jeroboam. 4 He declareth the right of his cause. 13 Trusting in God he overcometh Jeroboam. 21 The wives and children of Abijah.

958.
¶ 1 Kings
15. 1, &c.

NOW ^a in the eighteenth year of king Jeroboam began Abijah to reign over Judah.

2 He reigned three years in Jerusalem. His mother's name also was Michaiah the daughter of Uriel of Gibeah. And there was war between Abijah and Jeroboam.

† Heb.
bound together.

3 And Abijah † set the battle in array with an army of valiant men of war, even four hundred thousand chosen men: Jeroboam also set the battle in array against him with eight hundred thousand chosen men, being mighty men of valour.

Before
CHRIST
958.

4 ¶ And Abijah stood up upon mount Zemaraim, which is in mount Ephraim, and said, Hear me, thou Jeroboam, and all Israel;

957.

5 Ought ye not to know that the LORD God of Israel gave the kingdom over Israel to David for ever, even to him and to his sons by a covenant of salt?

6 Yet Jeroboam the son of Nebat, the servant of Solomon the son of David, is risen up, and hath ^b rebelled against his lord.

¶ 1 Kings
11. 26.

7 And there are gathered unto him vain men, the children of Belial, and have strengthened themselves against Rehoboam the son of Solomon, when Rehoboam was young and tenderhearted, and could not withstand them.

8 And now ye think to withstand the kingdom of the LORD in the hand of the sons of David; and ye be a great multitude, and there are with you golden calves, which Jeroboam ^c made you for gods.

¶ 1 Kings
12. 28.
¶ Chap. 11.
14.

9 ^d Have ye not cast out the priests of the LORD, the sons of Aaron, and the Levites, and have made you priests after the manner of the nations of other lands? so that whosoever cometh † to consecrate himself with a young bullock and seven rams, the same may be a priest of them that are no gods.

† Heb. to fill his
hand.

10 But as for us, the LORD is our God, and we have not forsaken him; and the priests, which minister unto the LORD, are the sons of Aaron, and the Levites wait upon their business:

11 ^e And they burn unto the LORD ^f every morning and every evening burnt sa-

¶ Chap. 2. 4.

12. — and also in Judah things went well.] Affairs began again to prosper. But the words in the Hebrew are, "there were good things in Judah," which may be understood of the reformation made in the whole kingdom; many good things being found amongst them in the midst of their corruption. It is probable that the priests kept up the worship of God in its purity, and many good people joined in it, especially those who had fled from the idolatries of Jeroboam. Bp. Patrick.

14. — he did evil, because he prepared not &c.] He did evil again, because he set not his heart sincerely to seek or follow the Lord. Dr. Wells.

Chap. XIII. ver. 2. — His mother's name — Michaiah the daughter of Uriel] It was stated at chap. xi. 20, 21, that his mother was named Maachar, the daughter of Absalom, (or Abishalom, 1 Kings xv. 2.) It seems her name was both Michaiah and Maachah, and her father's name Uriel as well as Absalom. Bp. Patrick, Dr. Wells.

4. — and said, Hear me, &c.] Of course it is not meant that he addressed the whole army of Jeroboam, but that he entered on a parley with Jeroboam and his principal officers, to see if matters could be accommodated without bloodshed. Bp. Patrick.

5. — a covenant of salt?] See notes on Levit. ii. 13; Numb. xviii. 19.

7. — when Rehoboam was young and tenderhearted.] Not young in years, but in the conduct of government, (for Rehoboam was forty years old when he began to reign, chap. xii. 13.) The meaning is, that Rehoboam acted at first as young and inexperienced princes are wont to do. Pyle.

11. And they burn unto the Lord every morning &c.] Abijah, in his address to the Israelite army, is thus particular in detailing these matters, in order to put them in mind with what regularity and solemnity the worship of God was kept up in Judah, which they had not seen for some years, and perhaps had forgotten. Bp. Patrick.

Before
CHRIST
957.

† Lev. 24.
6.

crifices and sweet incense: the ^f shewbread also set they in order upon the pure table; and the candlestick of gold with the lamps thereof, to burn every evening: for we keep the charge of the LORD our God; but ye have forsaken him.

12 And, behold, God himself is with us for our captain, and his priests with sounding trumpets to cry alarm against you. O children of Israel, fight ye not against the LORD God of your fathers; for ye shall not prosper.

13 ¶ But Jeroboam caused an ambushment to come about behind them: so they were before Judah, and the ambushment was behind them.

14 And when Judah looked back, behold, the battle was before and behind: and they cried unto the LORD, and the priests sounded with the trumpets.

15 Then the men of Judah gave a shout: and as the men of Judah shouted, it came to pass, that God smote Jeroboam and all Israel before Abijah and Judah.

16 And the children of Israel fled before Judah: and God delivered them into their hand.

17 And Abijah and his people slew them with a great slaughter: so there fell down slain of Israel five hundred thousand chosen men.

18 Thus the children of Israel were brought under at that time, and the children of Judah prevailed, because they relied upon the LORD God of their fathers.

957. 19 And Abijah pursued after Jeroboam, and took cities from him, Beth-el with the towns thereof, and Jeshanah with the towns thereof, and Ephraim with the towns thereof.

20 Neither did Jeroboam recover strength again in the days of Abijah: and the LORD struck him, and he died.

21 ¶ But Abijah waxed mighty, and married fourteen wives, and begat twenty and two sons, and sixteen daughters.

22 And the rest of the acts of Abijah, and his ways, and his sayings, are written in the *h*istory of the prophet ^g Iddo.

§ Or, commentary.
* Chap. 12.
15.

13. But Jeroboam caused an ambushment &c.] Jeroboam, it appears, made no reply to this address of Abijah; but he seems to have been so struck with the effect it might produce, that he would not trust to his superiour numbers, but had recourse to artifice for the purpose of conquering his enemy. Bp. Patrick.

15. — and as the men of Judah shouted, &c.] They gave a shout for the purpose of terrifying their enemies with this mark of their

CHAP. XIV.

Before
CHRIST
955.

1 Asa succeeding destroyeth idolatry. 6 Having peace, he strengtheneth his kingdom with forts and armies. 9 Calling on God, he overthroweth Zerah, and spoileth the Ethiopians.

955. SO Abijah slept with his fathers, and they buried him in the city of David: and ^a Asa his son reigned in his stead. In ² 1 Kings 15. 8, &c. his days the land was quiet ten years.

2 And Asa did that which was good and right in the eyes of the LORD his God:

3 For he took away the altars of the strange gods, and the high places, and brake down the [†] images, and cut down [†] Heb. statues. the groves:

4 And commanded Judah to seek the LORD God of their fathers, and to do the law and the commandment.

5 Also he took away out of all the cities of Judah the high places and the [†] images: [†] Heb. sun images. and the kingdom was quiet before him.

6 ¶ And he built fenced cities in Judah: for the land had rest, and he had no war in those years; because the LORD had given him rest.

7 Therefore he said unto Judah, Let us build these cities, and make about them walls, and towers, gates, and bars, while the land is yet before us; because we have sought the LORD our God, we have sought him, and he hath given us rest on every side. So they built and prospered.

8 And Asa had an army of men that bare targets and spears, out of Judah three hundred thousand; and out of Benjamin, that bare shields and drew bows, two hundred and fourscore thousand: all these were mighty men of valour.

9 ¶ ^b And there came out against them ^{941.} Zerah the Ethiopian with an host of a ^b Chap. 16. 8. thousand thousand, and three hundred chariots; and came unto Mareshah.

10 Then Asa went out against him, and they set the battle in array in the valley of Zephathah at Mareshah.

11 And Asa cried unto the LORD his God, and said, LORD, it is ^c 1 Sam. 14. 6. nothing with thee to help, whether with many, or with them that have no power: help us, O LORD our God; for we rest on thee, and in thy confidence in the victory: and “God smote Jeroboam and all Israel before Abijah and Judah;” that is, they were struck with such terror that they fled without striking a blow, and suffered a vast slaughter, such as is scarcely paralleled in history. Pyle.

22. — the prophet Iddo.] See note at 2 Chron. ix. 29.

Chap. XIV. ver. 9. — the Ethiopian] Rather, the Arabian, king of Arabian Ethiopia. See note at Numb. xii. 1.

^{Before} name we go against this multitude. O ^{CHRIST} Lord, thou art our God; let not ^{941.} man prevail against thee.

^{1 Or.} 12 So the Lord smote the Ethiopians ^{in a great man.} before Asa, and before Judah; and the Ethiopians fled.

^{† Heb.} 13 And Asa and the people that ^{broken.} were with him pursued them unto Gerar: and the Ethiopians were overthrown, that they could not recover themselves; for they were † destroyed before the Lord, and before his host; and they carried away very much spoil.

14 And they smote all the cities round about Gerar; for the fear of the Lord came upon them: and they spoiled all the cities; for there was exceeding much spoil in them.

15 They smote also the tents of cattle, and carried away sheep and camels in abundance, and returned to Jerusalem.

CHAP. XV.

1 Asa with Judah and many of Israel, moved by the prophecy of Azariah the son of Oded, make a solemn covenant with God. 16 He putteth down Maachab his mother for her idolatry. 18 He bringeth dedicate things into the house of God, and enjoyeth a long peace.

AND the Spirit of God came upon Azariah the son of Oded:

^{† Heb.} 2 And he went out to ^{before Asa.} meet Asa, and said unto him, Hear ye me, Asa, and all Judah and Benjamin; The Lord is with you, while ye be with him; and if ye seek him, he will be found of you; but if ye forsake him, he will forsake you.

3 Now for a long season Israel hath been without the true God, and without a teaching priest, and without law.

12. So the Lord smote &c.] Asa had called upon the Lord with profound humility and sure trust and confidence; and the Ethiopians were put to flight. Thus God blesses and protects religious princes, and, in general, those who are truly zealous for His glory; and, if He suffers them to be exposed to great dangers, He displays His power in their behalf, and delivers them. Ostervald.

14. — for the fear of the Lord came upon them:] The inhabitants, seeing so vast a host defeated, had no courage to defend themselves. Bp. Patrick.

Chap. XV. ver. 2. — The Lord is with you, &c.] God hath been pleased to bless you with a glorious victory over an enemy far superior to you in number and strength, in reward for the justice and piety you have hitherto exercised; and you may expect continual successes, upon your cheerful perseverance in the ways of virtue and religion. Pyle. This is a prophecy which is well worthy of serious notice at all times and by all nations and people. Bp. Wilson.

3. Now for a long season &c.] From the time when the kingdom of Israel separated from their brethren of Judah in the days of Jeroboam, Israel has been "without the true God, and without a teaching priest," for they have not worshipped the true God,

4 But when they in their trouble did turn unto the Lord God of Israel, and sought him, he was found of them. ^{Before} ^{CHRIST} ^{941.}

5 And in those times there was no peace to him that went out, nor to him that came in, but great vexations were upon all the inhabitants of the countries.

6 And nation was † destroyed of nation, and city of city: for God did vex them with all adversity. ^{† Heb.} ^{beaten in} ^{pieces.}

7 Be ye strong therefore, and let not your hands be weak: for your work shall be rewarded.

8 And when Asa heard these words, and the prophecy of Oded the prophet, he took courage, and put away the † abominable idols out of all the land of Judah and Benjamin, and out of the cities which he had taken from mount Ephraim, and renewed the altar of the Lord, that was before the porch of the Lord. ^{† Heb.} ^{abomina-} ^{tions.}

9 And he gathered all Judah and Benjamin, and the strangers with them out of Ephraim and Manasseh, and out of Simeon: for they fell to him out of Israel in abundance, when they saw that the Lord his God was with him.

10 So they gathered themselves together at Jerusalem in the third month, in the fifteenth year of the reign of Asa.

11 And they offered unto the Lord † the same time, of the spoil which they had brought, seven hundred oxen and seven thousand sheep. ^{† Heb.} ^{in that day.}

12 And they entered into a covenant to seek the Lord God of their fathers with all their heart and with all their soul;

13 That whosoever would not seek the but the golden calves, and all the true priests have gone into the land of Judah. Bp. Patrick.

4. But when they in their trouble did turn] If we follow the common interpretation which respects the present and future state of Israel, these words should rather be translated, "If in their trouble they had turned, &c. they should have found Him." Bp. Patrick.

These expressions in the 4th, 5th, and 6th verses, seem to be applicable either to past or future times. Thus the general sense may be, Take warning from the dealings of Providence with the Israelites, either in ancient times, or in their present apostasy from God's worship; or with respect to what is threatened against them, if they for the future should persist in their disobedience to the Divine laws. You never saw, nor ever will see them given up to idolatry and impiety, but you always did, and always will find them embroiled in wars and confusion, and wretched beyond expression; as, on the other hand, you will find the mercies of Heaven extended towards them upon their repentance and reformation. Pyle.

8. — the prophecy of Oded] Probably a short expression for "the prophecy of the son of Oded;" although some think that the father may have prophesied as well as the son, and foretold the same calamities. Bp. Patrick.

^{Before}
CHRIST
941.
² Deut. 13.
9.
LORD God of Israel ^a should be put to death, whether small or great, whether man or woman.

14 And they sware unto the LORD with a loud voice, and with shouting, and with trumpets, and with cornets.

15 And all Judah rejoiced at the oath: for they had sworn with all their heart, and sought him with their whole desire; and he was found of them: and the LORD gave them rest round about.

¹ 1 Kings
15. 13.
† Heb.
horror.
16 ¶ And also concerning ^b Maachah the mother of Asa the king, he removed her from being queen, because she had made an idol in a grove: and Asa cut down her idol, and stamped it, and burnt it at the brook Kidron.

17 But the high places were not taken away out of Israel: nevertheless the heart of Asa was perfect all his days.

18 ¶ And he brought into the house of God the things that his father had dedicated, and that he himself had dedicated, silver, and gold, and vessels.

19 And there was no more war unto the five and thirtieth year of the reign of Asa.

CHAP. XVI.

1 Asa, by the aid of the Syrians, diverteth Baasha from building of Ramah. 7 Being reproved thereof by Hanani, he putteth him in prison. 11 Among his other acts in his disease he seeketh not to God, but to the physicians. 13 His death and burial.

^{940.}
¹ 1 Kings
15. 17.
IN the six and thirtieth year of the reign of Asa ^a Baasha king of Israel came up

17. — the high places were not taken away out of Israel:] It had been said twice in the preceding chapter, that Asa did take away the high places, ver. 3, 5, but that related to Judah; whereas, out of the territories he had conquered in the land of Israel, we are here informed, he was not able to remove them. Or the meaning may be, that he gave orders for the removal of the high places, which were not obeyed. Or, as others think, he took away the high places which were devoted to the service of idols, but suffered those to remain which were employed in the worship of the true God. Bp. Patrick.

— the heart of Asa was perfect all his days.] By comparing these words with chap. xvi. 7. to the end, it plainly appears that their meaning is nothing more than that Asa kept himself from idolatry to the last; though, in other instances, in the latter end of his life, he was not so religious as he ought to have been. Pyle.

19. — there was no more war] That is, as some interpret, there was no more war with the Ethiopians, or other such people, though with Baasha king of Israel he had perpetual war, 1 Kings xv. 16. Bp. Patrick.

Chap. XVI. ver. 1. In the six and thirtieth year of the reign of Asa] A considerable difficulty arises from comparing this passage with 1 Kings xv. 33; for there it is said, that "in the third year of Asa began Baasha to reign," and that he reigned "twenty-four years;" so that the last year of Baasha's reign must answer to about the twenty-sixth year of Asa, and consequently Baasha must have been dead about nine or ten years before the thirty-against Judah, and built Ramah, to the intent that he might let none go out or come in to Asa king of Judah.

2 Then Asa brought out silver and gold out of the treasures of the house of the LORD and of the king's house, and sent to Ben-hadad king of Syria, that dwelt at † Damascus, saying,

3 There is a league between me and thee, as there was between my father and thy father: behold, I have sent thee silver and gold; go, break thy league with Baasha king of Israel, that he may depart from me.

4 And Ben-hadad hearkened unto king Asa, and sent the captains of † his armies against the cities of Israel; and they smote Ijon, and Dan, and Abel-maim, and all the store cities of Naphtali.

5 And it came to pass, when Baasha heard it, that he left off building of Ramah, and let his work cease.

6 Then Asa the king took all Judah; and they carried away the stones of Ramah, and the timber thereof, wherewith Baasha was building; and he built therewith Geba and Mizpah.

7 ¶ And at that time Hanani the seer came to Asa king of Judah, and said unto him, Because thou hast relied on the king of Syria, and not relied on the LORD thy God, therefore is the host of the king of Syria escaped out of thine hand.

8 Were not ^b the Ethiopians and the Lubims † a huge host, with very many cha-

^{Before} CHRIST
940.

† Heb.
Darneseek.

† Heb. which were his.

941.

^b Chap. 14.
9.

† Heb.
in abundance.

sixth year of Asa's reign. Of this difficulty, which has been much discussed by learned men, two principal solutions have been proposed. According to the one, which is supported by the authority of Josephus, it is supposed that the transcribers of the original copies have committed a mistake in the number, and that it should be written the twenty-sixth year of Asa, instead of the thirty-sixth, (as also at ver. 19 of the last chapter, the twenty-fifth instead of thirty-fifth,) which will make it the last year of his reign when Baasha "came up against Judah." According to the other solution, we are to understand by the words, "In the thirty-sixth year of the reign of Asa," not actually the thirty-sixth year of Asa's reign, but the thirty-sixth year of the kingdom of Judah over which he reigned, that is, from the time of the separation under Jeroboam; agreeably to which the translation should be, "the thirty-sixth year of the kingdom of Asa," that is, the kingdom of Judah. This method of solving the difficulty has a great number of learned commentators for its support. Bp. Patrick, Dr. Wells.

3. There is a league between me and thee.] Here was another instance of false policy, to send to an infidel king, when God had so lately rescued him from a much greater army. And, what added to the sin, he gave him the treasure which he had devoted to God. Bp. Wilson. These words may be translated, "Let there be a league between me and thee." Houbigant.

7. — at that time Hanani the seer] Here follows a remarkable history added to what we read in the book of Kings, (1 Kings xv.) which relates the great weakness of Asa in his declining years, and God's displeasure at it. Bp. Patrick.

Before
CHRIST
941.

riots and horsemen? yet, because thou didst rely on the LORD, he delivered them into thine hand.

¶ Or, strongly to hold with them, &c.

9 For the eyes of the LORD run to and fro throughout the whole earth, || to shew himself strong in the behalf of them whose heart is perfect toward him. Herein thou hast done foolishly: therefore from henceforth thou shalt have wars.

† Heb.
crushed.

10 Then Asa was wroth with the seer, and put him in a prison house; for he was in a rage with him because of this thing. And Asa † oppressed some of the people the same time.

11 ¶ And, behold, the acts of Asa, first and last, lo, they are written in the book of the kings of Judah and Israel.

12 And Asa in the thirty and ninth year of his reign was diseased in his feet, until his disease was exceeding great: yet in his disease he sought not to the LORD, but to the physicians.

914.

13 ¶ And Asa slept with his fathers, and died in the one and fortieth year of his reign.

† Heb.
dugged.

14 And they buried him in his own sepulchres, which he had † made for himself in the city of David, and laid him in the bed which was filled with sweet odours and divers kinds of spices prepared by the apothecaries' art: and they made a very great burning for him.

CHAP. XVII.

1 Jehoshaphat, succeeding Asa, reigneth well, and prospereth. 7 He sendeth Levites with the princes to teach Judah. 10 His enemies being terrified by God, some of them bring him presents and tribute. 12 His greatness, captains, and armies. Before CHRIST 914.

AND ^a Jehoshaphat his son reigned in ^a 1 Kings 15. 21. his stead, and strengthened himself against Israel.

2 And he placed forces in all the fenced cities of Judah, and set garrisons in the land of Judah, and in the cities of Ephraim, which Asa his father had taken.

3 And the LORD was with Jehoshaphat, because he walked in the first ways of his father David, and sought not unto Baalim;

4 But sought to the LORD God of his father, and walked in his commandments, and not after the doings of Israel.

5 Therefore the LORD stablished the kingdom in his hand; and all Judah † brought to Jehoshaphat presents; and he had riches and honour in abundance.

† Heb. gave.
913.

6 And his heart || was lifted up in the ways of the LORD: moreover he took away the high places and groves out of Judah. || That is, was encouraged.

7 ¶ Also in the third year of his reign he sent to his princes, even to Ben-hail, and to Obadiah, and to Zechariah, and to Nethaneel, and to Michaiah, to teach in the cities of Judah.

912.

8 And with them he sent Levites, even Shemaiah, and Nethaniah, and Zebadiah, and Asahel, and Shemiramoth, and Jehonathan, and Adonijah, and Tobijah, and Tob-adonijah, Levites; and with them Elishama and Jehoram, priests.

9 And they taught in Judah, and had

9. For the eyes of the Lord &c.] The Prophet Hanani teaches us, in these beautiful expressions, that God grants and continues His favours only to those who serve Him with an upright and sincere heart. The change now wrought in Asa shews that it is of no consequence to have begun well, and to have done our duty for some time, if we do not persevere. This is a warning to persons of pious dispositions to be on their guard, lest, by growing careless and remiss, they deprive themselves of the protection of God, and the effects of His love. Ostervald.

— Herein thou hast done foolishly:] He was defective in his inward trust and confidence in God, and "foolish" in relying rather on the arm of man than on the Divine protection. Bp. Patrick.

12. — Asa — was diseased in his feet.] The diseases mentioned in Scripture are described by so few symptoms, that physicians hardly know how to determine them. Such is the case in this instance of Asa. Script. illust. Expos. Ind.

— he sought not to the Lord, but to the physicians.] It is not meant that he committed a fault in desiring the help of the physicians; but in trusting to their skill more than to the goodness and power of God, to whom he did not address his prayers, but continued in his former fault of putting confidence in man. Bp. Patrick.

13. And Asa slept with his fathers.] Such was the dark end of a reign, which had begun and continued for a series of years with so many bright virtues and excellencies. He died a melancholy instance of the weakness and depravity of human nature. However, from regard to his former services, he was honourably interred in the royal sepulchre, (ver. 14.) in a vault which he had made for himself, which he appointed to be decked and perfumed with great art; and the court celebrated his funeral with burning great quantities of spice, and other similar testimonies of respect. Pyle.

14. — and divers kinds of spices] The embalming of bodies had been a very ancient custom, as it was adopted in the burial of Jacob. Some think that the circumstance of his ordering his body to be embalmed, and buried after the manner of the Gentiles, is here mentioned as a blamable piece of vanity, in addition to his other offences. Bp. Patrick.

— they made a very great burning for him.] The burning seems to have been not of his body, but of odours and spices at his funeral. Dr. Wall.

Chap. XVII. ver. 7. — he sent to his princes, &c.] To attain more effectually his good end of establishing true religion, and rooting out idolatry, he made it his early care to have a number of priests and Levites (ver. 8) in all his chief towns, to read and teach the law of God to the people, as it was laid down in the original Scriptures; and he appointed some of his "princes," that is, magistrates, to see it regularly done. Pyle. When princes thus take care of religion and the service of God, they may expect the favour and protection of God, as this prince experienced so signally. Bp. Wilson.

Before CHRIST 912. the book of the law of the LORD with them, and went about throughout all the cities of Judah, and taught the people.

† Heb. was. 10 ¶ And the fear of the LORD † fell upon all the kingdoms of the lands that were round about Judah, so that they made no war against Jehoshaphat.

11 Also some of the Philistines brought Jehoshaphat presents, and tribute silver; and the Arabians brought him flocks, seven thousand and seven hundred rams, and seven thousand and seven hundred he goats.

¶ Or, palaces. 12 ¶ And Jehoshaphat waxed great exceedingly; and he built in Judah || castles, and cities of store.

13 And he had much business in the cities of Judah: and the men of war, mighty men of valour, were in Jerusalem.

14 And these are the numbers of them according to the house of their fathers: Of Judah, the captains of thousands; Adnah the chief, and with him mighty men of valour three hundred thousand.

† Heb. at his hand. 15 And † next to him was Jehohanan the captain, and with him two hundred and fourscore thousand.

16 And next him was Amasiah the son of Zichri, who willingly offered himself unto the LORD; and with him two hundred thousand mighty men of valour.

17 And of Benjamin; Eliada a mighty man of valour, and with him armed men with bow and shield two hundred thousand.

18 And next him was Jehozabad, and with him an hundred and fourscore thousand ready prepared for the war.

19 These waited on the king, beside those whom the king put in the fenced cities throughout all Judah.

CHAP. XVIII.

1 Jehoshaphat, joined in affinity with Ahab, is persuaded to go with him against Ramoth-gilead. 4 Ahab, seduced by false prophets, according to the word of Micaiah, is slain there.

897.

NOW Jehoshaphat had riches and honour in abundance, and joined affinity with Ahab.

2 ¹ And † after certain years he went down to Ahab to Samaria. And Ahab killed sheep and oxen for him in abundance, and for the people that he had with him, and persuaded him to go up with him to Ramoth-gilead.

3 And Ahab king of Israel said unto Jehoshaphat king of Judah, Wilt thou go with me to Ramoth-gilead? And he answered him, I am as thou art, and my people as thy people; and we will be with thee in the war.

4 ¶ And Jehoshaphat said unto the king of Israel, Enquire, I pray thee, at the word of the LORD to day.

5 Therefore the king of Israel gathered together of prophets four hundred men, and said unto them, Shall we go to Ramoth-gilead to battle, or shall I forbear? And they said, Go up; for God will deliver it into the king's hand.

6 But Jehoshaphat said, Is there not here a prophet of the LORD † besides, that we might enquire of him? † Heb. yet, or, more.

7 And the king of Israel said unto Jehoshaphat, There is yet one man, by whom we may enquire of the LORD: but I hate him; for he never prophesied good unto me, but always evil: the same is Micaiah the son of Imla. And Jehoshaphat said, Let not the king say so.

8 And the king of Israel called for one of his || officers, and said, † Fetch quickly Micaiah the son of Imla. || Or. eunuchs. † Heb. Hasten.

9 And the king of Israel and Jehoshaphat king of Judah sat either of them on his throne, clothed in their robes, and they sat in a || void place at the entering in of the gate of Samaria; and all the prophets prophesied before them. || Or, floor.

10 And Zedekiah the son of Chenaanah had made him horns of iron, and said, Thus saith the LORD, With these thou shalt push Syria until † they be consumed.

11 And all the prophets prophesied so, saying, Go up to Ramoth-gilead, and prosper: for the LORD shall deliver it into the hand of the king. † Heb. thou consume them.

11. — the Philistines brought &c.] They voluntarily paid him their tribute, which it is probable had been neglected in the time of some of his predecessors, though imposed on them by David.

— and the Arabians brought him flocks.] The Arabians courted his favour, and made him rich presents of flocks, in which their wealth principally consisted. Bp. Patrick, Pyle.

14. And these are the numbers &c.] The names of the commanders are mentioned, and the number of their troops. From which it appears, that, so mightily did the nation prosper under the religious administration of this king, that though he possessed little more than a third part of the ancient dominions of Israel, yet he was able to raise above a million of men capable of bearing arms, which exceeded the proportion that even David had. Pyle.

Chap. XVIII. ver. 3. — I am as thou art, &c.] The Prophet Hanani had before cautioned his father Asa against forming an alliance with the king of Syria, chap. xvi. 7; and Jehoshaphat is afterwards reproved for it at chap. xix. 2; xx. 37. Bp. Patrick.

In all that follows in this chapter there is scarcely any thing different from what occurs in the book of Kings. See 1 Kings xxii.

Before
CHRIST
897.

† Heb. with one mouth.

12 And the messenger that went to call Micaiah spake to him, saying, Behold, the words of the prophets declare good to the king † with one assent; let thy word therefore, I pray thee, be like one of their's, and speak thou good.

13 And Micaiah said, As the LORD liveth, even what my God saith, that will I speak.

14 And when he was come to the king, the king said unto him, Micaiah, shall we go to Ramoth-gilead to battle, or shall I forbear? And he said, Go ye up, and prosper, and they shall be delivered into your hand.

15 And the king said to him, How many times shall I adjure thee that thou say nothing but the truth to me in the name of the LORD?

16 Then he said, I did see all Israel scattered upon the mountains, as sheep that have no shepherd: and the LORD said, These have no master; let them return therefore every man to his house in peace.

17 And the king of Israel said to Jehoshaphat, Did I not tell thee that he would not prophesy good unto me, || but evil?

|| Or,
but for evil.

18 Again he said, Therefore hear the word of the LORD; I saw the LORD sitting upon his throne, and all the host of heaven standing on his right hand and on his left.

19 And the LORD said, Who shall entice Ahab king of Israel, that he may go up and fall at Ramoth-gilead? And one spake saying after this manner, and another saying after that manner.

* Job 1. 6.

20 Then there came out a ^b spirit, and stood before the LORD, and said, I will entice him. And the LORD said unto him, Wherewith?

21 And he said, I will go out, and be a lying spirit in the mouth of all his prophets. And the LORD said, Thou shalt entice him, and thou shalt also prevail: go out, and do even so.

22 Now therefore, behold, the LORD hath put a lying spirit in the mouth of these thy prophets, and the LORD hath spoken evil against thee.

23 Then Zedekiah the son of Chenaanah came near, and smote Micaiah upon the cheek, and said, Which way went the Spirit of the LORD from me to speak unto thee?

|| Or,
from chamber to chamber.

† Heb. a chamber in a chamber.

24 And Micaiah said, Behold, thou shalt see on that day when thou shalt go || into † an inner chamber to hide thyself.

25 Then the king of Israel said, Take ye

Micaiah, and carry him back to Amon the governor of the city, and to Joash the king's son;

Before
CHRIST
897.

26 And say, Thus saith the king, Put this fellow in the prison, and feed him with bread of affliction and with water of affliction, until I return in peace.

27 And Micaiah said, If thou certainly return in peace, then hath not the LORD spoken by me. And he said, Hearken, all ye people.

28 So the king of Israel and Jehoshaphat the king of Judah went up to Ramoth-gilead.

29 And the king of Israel said unto Jehoshaphat, I will disguise myself, and will go to the battle; but put thou on thy robes. So the king of Israel disguised himself; and they went to the battle.

30 Now the king of Syria had commanded the captains of the chariots that were with him, saying, Fight ye not with small or great, save only with the king of Israel.

31 And it came to pass, when the captains of the chariots saw Jehoshaphat, that they said, It is the king of Israel. Therefore they compassed about him to fight: but Jehoshaphat cried out, and the LORD helped him; and God moved them to depart from him.

32 For it came to pass, that, when the captains of the chariots perceived that it was not the king of Israel, they turned back again † from pursuing him.

33 And a certain man drew a bow † at a venture, and smote the king of Israel † between the joints of the harness: therefore he said to his chariot man, Turn thine hand, that thou mayest carry me out of the host; for I am † wounded.

† Heb.
from after him.

† Heb. in his simplicity.

† Heb. between the joints and between the breastplate.

34 And the battle increased that day: howbeit the king of Israel stayed himself up in his chariot against the Syrians until the even: and about the time of the sun going down he died.

† Heb. made sick.

CHAP. XIX.

1 Jehoshaphat, reprov'd by Jehu, visiteth his kingdom.
5 His instructions to the judges, 8 to the priests and Levites.

AND Jehoshaphat the king of Judah returned to his house in peace to Jerusalem.

896.

2 And Jehu the son of Hanani the seer went out to meet him, and said to king Jehoshaphat, Shouldest thou help the ungodly, and love them that hate the LORD?

Before
CHRIST
896.

^a Chap. 17.
4, 6.

† Heb.
he returned and went out.

† Heb. in the matter of judgment.

^b Deut. 10.
17.
Job 24. 19.
Acts 10. 34.
Rom. 2. 11.
Gal. 2. 6.
1 Pet. 1. 17.

therefore is wrath upon thee from before the LORD.

3 Nevertheless there are ^a good things found in thee, in that thou hast taken away the groves out of the land, and hast prepared thine heart to seek God.

4 And Jehoshaphat dwelt at Jerusalem: and † he went out again through the people from Beer-sheba to mount Ephraim, and brought them back unto the LORD God of their fathers.

5 ¶ And he set judges in the land throughout all the fenced cities of Judah, city by city,

6 And said to the judges, Take heed what ye do: for ye judge not for man, but for the LORD, who is with you † in the judgment.

7 Wherefore now let the fear of the LORD be upon you; take heed and do it: for there is no iniquity with the LORD our God, nor ^b respect of persons, nor taking of gifts.

8 ¶ Moreover in Jerusalem did Jehoshaphat set of the Levites, and of the priests, and of the chief of the fathers of Israel, for the judgment of the LORD, and for controversies, when they returned to Jerusalem.

9 And he charged them, saying, Thus shall ye do in the fear of the LORD, faithfully, and with a perfect heart.

10 And what cause soever shall come to you of your brethren that dwell in their cities, between blood and blood, between law and commandment, statutes and judgments, ye shall even warn them that they trespass not against the LORD, and so wrath come upon you, and upon your brethren: this do, and ye shall not trespass.

11 And, behold, Amariah the chief priest is over you in all matters of the LORD; and Zebadiah the son of Ishmael, the ruler of the house of Judah, for all the king's matters: also the Levites shall be officers before you. † Deal courageously, and the LORD shall be with the good.

Before
CHRIST
896.

† Heb.
Take courage and do.

CHAP. XX.

1 Jehoshaphat in his fear proclaimeth a fast. 5 His prayer. 14 The prophecy of Jahaziel. 20 Jehoshaphat exhorteth the people, and setteth singers to praise the Lord. 22 The great overthrow of the enemies. 26 The people, having blessed God at Beraiah, return in triumph. 31 Jehoshaphat's reign. 35 His convoy of sheps, which he made with Ahaziah, according to the prophecy of Eliezer, unhappily perished.

IT came to pass after this also, that the children of Moab, and the children of Ammon, and with them other beside the Ammonites, came against Jehoshaphat to battle.

2 Then there came some that told Jehoshaphat, saying, There cometh a great multitude against thee from beyond the sea on this side Syria; and, behold, they be in Hazazon-tamar, which is En-gedi.

3 And Jehoshaphat feared, and set † himself to seek the LORD, and proclaimed a fast throughout all Judah.

† Heb.
his face.

Chap. XIX. ver. 4. — he went out again through the people &c.] Resolving to make the utmost amends for his miscarriage, by promoting a further reformation in his kingdom, he made a progress in person through all the principal towns, and settled the magistracy with such care and exactness, that all irregularities, both in sacred and civil matters, might be either prevented or duly punished; giving a severe charge to them to execute the laws with perfect courage and impartiality, as they would answer it to God, whose vicegerents they were. Pyle.

8. — for the judgment of the Lord, and for controversies,] These words are variously expounded, some understanding by the “judgment of the Lord,” causes about sacred matters; and by “controversies,” some understanding civil causes, others criminal and capital. It is sufficient to say, that they tried all sorts of causes. Bp. Patrick.

10. And what cause soever shall come to you] It is meant, whatsoever cause shall come to you by way of appeal from the other cities, in which it was the custom of the judges to refer matters of great difficulty to this supreme court at Jerusalem.

— between blood and blood,] Probably meaning, in a question of bloodshed, whether it was voluntary or accidental.

— ye shall even warn them that they trespass not] This seems to be a command that they should not only pronounce a righteous sentence in every cause that came before them; but that they should admonish him who was in the wrong, and all other persons in the like case, to beware of injuring their neighbours in the time to come. Bp. Patrick.

11. — all matters of the Lord; &c.] Some understand by the “matters of the Lord,” all sacred things; and by “the king's matters,” all civil and political causes. Others conceive the former to relate to those things which were defined by the law of God, and were to be judged by that law; and the latter, to those things which, not being defined by the Divine law, were left to the judgment of the king. Bp. Patrick.

— Deal courageously, and the Lord shall be with the good.] Administer justice impartially, and as persons who fear not man in the discharge of their duty to God; and the Lord will bless and defend you, as long as you act like good and upright judges. Dr. Wells.

Chap. XX. ver. 2. — from beyond the sea on this side Syria;] From the Dead sea, which is on this (or the western) side of Syria; the Dead sea being the western boundary of that country. It seems that Jehoshaphat did not hear of the enemies' approach till they were actually in En-gedi, a place in the tribe of Judah. By comparing Gen. xiv. 7, with this passage, it appears that Hazazon-tamar was an ancient name for En-gedi. Bp. Patrick.

3. — and proclaimed a fast] In important and perilous circumstances, the kings used to proclaim fasts in particular towns, or through the whole kingdom, according as the case required. Thus Jezebel proclaimed a fast in Jezreel, to procure the condemnation of Naboth, 1 Kings xxi. 9. So the king of Nineveh ordained a fast in his capital, when he was threatened with approach-

Before
CHRIST
896.

4 And Judah gathered themselves together, to ask help of the LORD: even out of all the cities of Judah they came to seek the LORD.

5 ¶ And Jehoshaphat stood in the congregation of Judah and Jerusalem, in the house of the LORD, before the new court,

6 And said, O LORD God of our fathers, art not thou God in heaven? and rulest not thou over all the kingdoms of the heathen? and in thine hand is there not power and might, so that none is able to withstand thee?

† Heb.
13711.

7 Art not thou our God, † who didst drive out the inhabitants of this land before thy people Israel, and gavest it to the seed of Abraham thy friend for ever?

8 And they dwelt therein, and have built thee a sanctuary therein for thy name, saying,

* Chap. 6.
28.
1 Kings
15 37.

9 ^a If, when evil cometh upon us, as the sword, judgment, or pestilence, or famine, we stand before this house, and in thy presence, (for thy name is in this house,) and cry unto thee in our affliction, then thou wilt hear and help.

* Deut. 2.
9.

10 And now, behold, the children of Ammon and Moab and mount Seir, whom thou ^b wouldst not let Israel invade, when they came out of the land of Egypt, but they turned from them, and destroyed them not;

11 Behold, I say, how they reward us, to come to cast us out of thy possession, which thou hast given us to inherit.

12 O our God, wilt thou not judge them? for we have no might against this great company that cometh against us; neither know we what to do: but our eyes are upon thee.

13 And all Judah stood before the LORD, with their little ones, their wives, and their children.

Before
CHRIST
896.

14 ¶ Then upon Jahaziel the son of Zechariah, the son of Benaiah, the son of Jeiel, the son of Mattaniah, a Levite of the sons of Asaph, came the Spirit of the LORD in the midst of the congregation;

15 And he said, Harken ye, all Judah, and ye inhabitants of Jerusalem, and thou king Jehoshaphat, Thus saith the LORD unto you, Be not afraid nor dismayed by reason of this great multitude; for the battle is not your's, but God's.

16 To morrow go ye down against them: behold, they come up by the † cliff of Ziz; and ye shall find them at the end of the || brook, before the wilderness of Jeruel.

† Heb.
ascent.

|| Or,
valley

17 Ye shall not need to fight in this bat- tle: set yourselves, stand ye still, and see the salvation of the LORD with you, O Judah and Jerusalem: fear not, nor be dismayed; to morrow go out against them: for the LORD will be with you.

18 And Jehoshaphat bowed his head with his face to the ground: and all Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem fell before the LORD, worshipping the LORD.

19 And the Levites, of the children of the Kohathites, and of the children of the Korhites, stood up to praise the LORD God of Israel with a loud voice on high.

20 ¶ And they rose early in the morning, and went forth into the wilderness of Tekoa: and as they went forth, Jehoshaphat stood and said, Hear me, O Judah, and ye inhabitants of Jerusalem; ^c Believe ^c Isai. 7. 9. in the LORD your God, so shall ye be established; believe his prophets, so shall ye prosper.

21 And when he had consulted with the people, he appointed singers unto the LORD, and † that should praise the beauty of holi-praisers.

† Heb.

ing ruin, Jonah iii. 7. In this instance, as the danger concerned the whole kingdom, a fast was proclaimed through the whole kingdom. Calmel.

6. — O Lord God of our fathers, &c.] This is the most admirable prayer that we have recorded, as made by any of the kings. Jehoshaphat begins with an acknowledgment of God's supreme and irresistible power, which extends over every creature in heaven and in earth. He then represents to his Maker, ver. 7, the peculiar relation which the people of Israel had to Him, and the promise of possession of their land, which they inherited from Him, and the circumstance of their having built a sanctuary for His peculiar worship, ver. 8. He proceeds to represent, ver. 10, the foul ingratitude and injustice of their enemies in invading their country, when the Israelites had formerly gone out of the way on purpose to avoid giving them disturbance; appeals to the justice of God, ver. 12, who helps those to right who suffer wrong; and, lastly, describes the weak condition of His people, whose only hope was in their God. Bp. Patrick.

9. — as the sword, judgment,] Some translate "the sword of judgment." Bp. Patrick. Otherwise "the sword, or any other judgment, even pestilence and famine, &c." Dr. Wells.

14. Then upon Jahaziel &c.] Jahaziel seems not to have been a Prophet before this time, but now to have received an immediate inspiration from God, for the purpose of giving comfort and assurance to the people before they stirred from the place where they prayed. Bp. Patrick.

16. — go ye down] As Jerusalem was seated on an eminence, they are said to "go down" from it, as their enemies are immediately after "to come up to it." Bp. Patrick.

20. — believe his prophets, &c.] Belief is in Scripture always supposed to arise and begin from a willingness to know and be informed in the will of God, and to end in actual obedience to His commands so made known. The meaning here is, "Observe and obey His Prophets, obey the commandments which they deliver you from God: so shall ye be partakers of the promises annexed." Dr. S. Clarke.

Before CHRIST 896. ness, as they went out before the army, and to say, Praise the LORD; for his mercy endureth for ever.

† Heb. And in the time that they, &c. † Heb. in singing and praise. † Or, they smote one another. 22 ¶ † And when they began † to sing and to praise, the LORD set ambushments against the children of Ammon, Moab, and mount Seir, which were come against Judah; and † they were smitten.

23 For the children of Ammon and Moab stood up against the inhabitants of mount Seir, utterly to slay and destroy them: and when they had made an end of the inhabitants of Seir, every one helped † to destroy another.

† Heb. for the destruction. 24 And when Judah came toward the watch tower in the wilderness, they looked unto the multitude, and, behold, they were dead bodies fallen to the earth, and † none escaped.

† Heb. there was not an escaping. 25 And when Jehoshaphat and his people came to take away the spoil of them, they found among them in abundance both riches with the dead bodies, and precious jewels, which they stripped off for themselves, more than they could carry away: and they were three days in gathering of the spoil, it was so much.

‡ That is, blessing. 26 ¶ And on the fourth day they assembled themselves in the valley of † Berachah; for there they blessed the LORD: therefore the name of the same place was called, The valley of Berachah, unto this day.

† Heb. head. 27 Then they returned, every man of Judah and Jerusalem, and Jehoshaphat in the † forefront of them, to go again to Jerusalem with joy; for the LORD had made them to rejoice over their enemies.

28 And they came to Jerusalem with psalteries and harps and trumpets unto the house of the LORD.

29 And the fear of God was on all the kingdoms of those countries, when they had heard that the LORD fought against the enemies of Israel. Before CHRIST 896.

30 So the realm of Jehoshaphat was quiet: for his God gave him rest round about.

31 ¶ ^d And Jehoshaphat reigned over Judah: he was thirty and five years old when he began to reign, and he reigned twenty and five years in Jerusalem. And his mother's name was Azubah the daughter of Shilhi. ^d 1 Kings 22. 41, &c.

32 And he walked in the way of Asa his father, and departed not from it, doing that which was right in the sight of the LORD.

33 Howbeit the high places were not taken away: for as yet the people had not prepared their hearts unto the God of their fathers.

34 Now the rest of the acts of Jehoshaphat, first and last, behold, they are written in the † book of Jehu the son of Hanani, ^c who † is mentioned in the book of the kings of Israel. † Heb. words. ^c 1 Kings 16. 1.

35 ¶ And after this did Jehoshaphat king of Judah join himself with Ahaziah king of Israel, who did very wickedly: † Heb. was made to ascend.

36 And he joined himself with him to make ships to go to Tarshish: and they made the ships in Ezion-gaber.

37 Then Eliezer the son of Dodavah of Mareshah prophesied against Jehoshaphat, saying, Because thou hast joined thyself with Ahaziah, the LORD hath broken thy works. And the ships were broken, that they were not able to go to Tarshish.

CHAP. XXI.

¹ Jehoram, succeeding Jehoshaphat, slayeth his brethren. ⁵ His wicked reign. ⁸ Edom and Libnah revolt. ¹² The prophecy of Elijah against him in writing. ¹⁶

22. — the Lord set ambushments] The meaning seems to be, that the ambushments which the Syrians had laid against Judah, by a confusion among themselves, caused by the hand of God, fell upon a part of their own army, mistaking them for their enemies. Bp. Patrick. "The Lord" ordered things so, that the ambushments "which were come against Judah," that is, which were designed to fall unawares on the army of Judah, by some mistake came against or fell upon the Syrians, so that they smote each other. Dr. Wells.

23. — every one helped to destroy another.] They continued, it appears, in the greatest confusion, each falling upon his neighbour, and all imagining that they were destroying the army of Judah, which, according to the Prophet's direction, came upon them early in the morning. Bp. Patrick.

27. Then they returned, — to go again to Jerusalem] This is a further instance of their gratitude to God for the victory, that they did not return every man to his home, but went immediately to Jerusalem to offer up their publick thanksgiving. Bp. Patrick.

As Jehoshaphat had called upon the Lord in the time of his distress, so he discharged the duty of gratitude in a very edifying manner, rendering publick thanks to God on his return from the war. On the whole, we draw the three following topics of instruction from the events relating to Jehoshaphat here recorded: first, That prayer, fasting, and humiliation, are the most effectual means to which we can have recourse in time of danger or necessity, whether publick or private: secondly, That God can never want the means to save and to deliver those who place their trust in Him: thirdly, That when God has heard our prayers, and granted our requests, we are bound to render Him our hearty and sincere thanks and praise for His mercies towards us. Ostervald.

33. — for as yet the people had not &c.] The reason why the high places were not taken away is here given; namely, that the people could not bear it; for their hearts were not disposed to serve God exactly according to the law of Moses; they had renounced indeed idolatry, but they still required the liberty of offering sacrifices to God in the "high places," as well as in the temple. Bp. Patrick.

36. — to go to Tarshish: &c.] See note at 1 Kings x. 22.

Before
CHRIST
889.

Philistines and Arabians oppress him. 18 His incurable disease, infamous death, and burial.

* 1 Kings
22. 50.

NOW ^a Jehoshaphat slept with his fathers, and was buried with his fathers in the city of David. And Jehoram his son || reigned in his stead.

2 And he had brethren the sons of Jehoshaphat, Azariah, and Jehiel, and Zechariah, and Azariah, and Michael, and Shephatiah: all these were the sons of Jehoshaphat king of Israel.

3 And their father gave them great gifts of silver, and of gold, and of precious things, with fenced cities in Judah: but the kingdom gave he to || Jehoram; because he was the firstborn.

* 2 Kings
5. 16, 17.

4 Now ^b when Jehoram was risen up to the kingdom of his father, he strengthened himself, and slew all his brethren with the sword, and divers also of the princes of Israel.

892.

5 ¶ Jehoram was thirty and two years old when he began to reign, and he reigned eight years in Jerusalem.

* Chap. 22.
2.

6 And he walked in the way of the kings of Israel, like as did the house of Ahab: for he had the daughter of ^c Ahab to wife: and he wrought that which was evil in the eyes of the LORD.

† Heb.
lamp, or,
candle.
* 2 Sam. 7.
12, 13.
1 Kings 11.
36.

7 Howbeit the LORD would not destroy the house of David, because of the covenant that he had made with David, and as he promised to give a [†] light to him and to his ^d sons for ever.

2 Kings 8.
19.
Psalm 132.
11, &c.
† Heb.
hand.

8 ¶ In his days the Edomites revolted from under the [†] dominion of Judah, and made themselves a king.

899.
* 2 Kings
3. 21.

9 Then Jehoram ^e went forth with his princes, and all his chariots with him: and he rose up by night, and smote the Edomites which compassed him in, and the captains of the chariots.

Before
CHRIST
889.

10 So the Edomites revolted from under the hand of Judah unto this day. The same time also did Libnah revolt from under his hand; because he had forsaken the LORD God of his fathers.

11 Moreover he made high places in the mountains of Judah, and caused the inhabitants of Jerusalem to commit fornication, and compelled Judah thereto.

12 ¶ And there came a writing to him from Elijah the prophet, saying, Thus saith the LORD God of David thy father, Because thou hast not walked in the ways of Jehoshaphat thy father, nor in the ways of Asa king of Judah,

13 But hast walked in the way of the kings of Israel, and hast made Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem to go a whoring, like to the whoredoms of the house of Ahab, and also hast slain thy brethren of thy father's house, which were better than thyself:

14 Behold, with [†] a great plague will the LORD smite thy people, and thy children, and thy wives, and all thy goods:

† Heb.
a great stroke.

15 And thou shalt have great sickness by disease of thy bowels, until thy bowels fall out by reason of the sickness day by day.

16 ¶ Moreover the LORD stirred up ^{about 887.} against Jehoram the spirit of the Philistines, and of the Arabians, that were near the Ethiopians:

17 And they came up into Judah, and brake into it, and [†] carried away all the substance that was found in the king's

† Heb. carried captive.

Chap. XXI. ver. 2. — Jehoshaphat king of Israel.] He was king of Judah; but, as all the tribes had the common name of Israel, he may here be called king of Israel, by a latitude of expression, as Asa also is at chap. xxviii. 19. Pyle. But almost all the ancient versions have "king of Judah" instead of "king of Israel," and "Israel" seems here to have been written for "Judah" by a mistake of transcribers. Houbigant.

3. — the kingdom gave he to Jehoram;] Jehoram was made partner of the kingdom with his father, 2 Kings viii. 16. Afterwards, at ver. 5, when Jehoram "began to reign," it is meant, in consort with his father. Bp. Lloyd.

4. — he strengthened himself, and slew &c.] He first "strengthened himself" that he might slay his brethren without danger to himself, and then proceeded to the act itself. Bp. Patrick.

11. — and caused the inhabitants &c.] He not only gave his subjects a bad example, and enticed them to idolatry, but by threatenings and compulsions endeavoured to constrain them to conform to his evil example. Bp. Patrick.

12. — there came a writing — from Elijah] It is certain that Elijah had been taken up into heaven in the time of Jehoshaphat; thus it is probable that he foresaw, by the spirit of prophecy, the wickedness of Jehoram, and that he spake the words here delivered to one of the Prophets, charging him to convey them in a letter to Jehoram, when he arrived at that pitch of impiety which is here related, so that he might be affected by them, as by a message from heaven, and might be induced to repent. For the words in the original admit this sense, that the writing was sent as the writing of Elijah; but they do not necessarily imply that it came immediately from him. Some have supposed that, by a mistake of transcribers, the name Elijah may have been substituted for Elisha: but this is entirely conjectural. Bp. Patrick, Pyle. And another supposition has been, that not Elijah the Tishbite is meant, but some other Prophet of the same name, who was then living. Dr. Wall.

14. — with a great plague will the Lord smite &c.] No calamity can be thought of, which did not befall this wicked prince; his kingdom being destroyed and depopulated by the fiercest nations, his treasures ransacked, his wives carried into captivity, his children slain, himself labouring for two years under a sore disease, and deprived at his death of the honour of royal sepulture, ver. 19. All these calamities were denounced against him in the writing sent to him in the name of Elijah, that he might not think they came by chance, but by the special direction of Almighty God, as a punishment for his impieties. Bp. Patrick.

Before CHRIST about 887. Or, Ahaziah, chap. 22. 1. or, Azariah, chap. 22. 6.

house, and his sons also, and his wives; so that there was never a son left him, save || Jehoahaz, the youngest of his sons.

18 ¶ And after all this the LORD smote him in his bowels with an incurable disease.

885. 19 And it came to pass, that in process of time, after the end of two years, his bowels fell out by reason of his sickness: so he died of sore diseases. And his people made no burning for him, like the burning of his fathers.

20 Thirty and two years old was he when he began to reign, and he reigned in Jerusalem eight years, and departed † without being desired. Howbeit they buried him in the city of David, but not in the sepulchres of the kings.

† Heb. without desire.

CHAP. XXII.

1 Ahaziah succeeding reigneth wickedly. 5 In his confederacy with Joram the son of Ahab, he is slain by Jehu. 10 Athaliah, destroying all the seed royal, save Joash, whom Jehoshabeath his aunt hid, usurpeth the kingdom.

385. 2 Kings 9. 24, &c. Chap. 21. 17.

AND the inhabitants of Jerusalem made ^a Ahaziah his youngest son king in his stead: for the band of men that came with the Arabians to the camp had slain all the ^b eldest. So Ahaziah the son of Jehoram king of Judah reigned.

2 Forty and two years old was Ahaziah when he began to reign, and he reigned one year in Jerusalem. His mother's name also was ^c Athaliah the daughter of Omri.

3 He also walked in the ways of the house of Ahab: for his mother was his counsellor to do wickedly.

4 Wherefore he did evil in the sight of the LORD like the house of Ahab: for they were his counsellors after the death of his father to his destruction.

884. 5 ¶ He walked also after their counsel, and went with Jehoram the son of Ahab king of Israel to war against Hazael king of Syria at Ramoth-gilead: and the Syrians smote Joram.

Before CHRIST 884.

6 And he returned to be healed in Jezreel because of the wounds † which were given him at Ramah, when he fought with Hazael king of Syria. And || Azariah the son of Jehoram king of Judah went down to see Jehoram the son of Ahab at Jezreel, because he was sick.

† Heb. wherewith they wounded him.

|| Otherwise called Ahaziah, ver. 1. & Jehoahaz, chap. 21. 17.

7 And the † destruction of Ahaziah was of God by coming to Joram: for when he was come, he went out with Jehoram against Jehu the son of Nimshi, ^d whom the LORD had anointed to cut off the house of Ahab.

† Heb. treading down.

^d 2 Kings 9. 7.

8 And it came to pass, that, when Jehu was executing judgment upon the house of Ahab, and found the princes of Judah, and the sons of the brethren of Ahaziah, that ministered to Ahaziah, he slew them.

9 ^e And he sought Ahaziah: and they caught him, (for he was hid in Samaria,) and brought him to Jehu: and when they had slain him, they buried him: Because, said they, he is the son of Jehoshaphat, who sought the LORD with all his heart. So the house of Ahaziah had no power to keep still the kingdom.

^e 2 Kings 9. 27.

10 ¶ ^f But when Athaliah the mother of Ahaziah saw that her son was dead, she arose and destroyed all the seed royal of the house of Judah.

^f 2 Kings 11. 1.

11 But Jehoshabeath, the daughter of the king, took Joash the son of Ahaziah, and stole him from among the king's sons that were slain, and put him and his nurse in a bed chamber. So Jehoshabeath, the daughter of king Jehoram, the wife of Jehoiada the priest, (for she was the sister of Ahaziah,) hid him from Athaliah, so that she slew him not.

12 And he was with them hid in the house of God six years: and Athaliah reigned over the land.

19. — his bowels fell out by reason of his sickness:] As was observed of the disease of Asa, ch. xvi. 12, so it may be observed on this disease, that the symptoms related do not determine it. Some physicians suppose it to have been the dysentery; others have suggested other disorders. Script. illust. Expos. Ind.

— so he died of sore diseases.] These words seem to imply that he died of a complication of other diseases, besides a severe dysentery by which his bowels fell out. Bp. Patrick.

20. — without being desired.] His people not desiring his longer life, but rather being rejoiced that his reign was so short. Dr. Wells. Without any loyal or grateful dispositions to his memory. Dr. Berriman.

Chap. XXII. ver. 2. Forty and two years old &c.] See note at 2 Kings viii. 26.

VOL. I.

— the daughter of Omri.] The granddaughter of Omri; for she was daughter of Ahab.

5. — Jehoram — Joram.] It should be observed, to prevent confusion, that Jehoram and Joram are the same name; and that the Joram here mentioned was son of Ahab, and king of Israel, as another of this name, father of Azariah, ver. 6, whose history is given in chap. xxi, was king of Judah.

9. — (for he was hid in Samaria,)] In the kingdom of Samaria, into which he had come from his own kingdom. The place was Megiddo, 2 Kings ix. 27. Dr. Wall.

— and when they had slain him,] The circumstances of Ahaziah's death are mentioned here a little more particularly than in the book of Kings; see 2 Kings ix. 27, 28.

11. — the daughter of the king,] The daughter of the former king of Judah, Joram. Bp. Patrick.

5 K

Before
CHRIST
878.

CHAP. XXIII.

1 Jehoiada, having set things in order, maketh Joash king.
12 Athaliah is slain. 16 Jehoiada restoreth the worship of God.

2 Kings
11. 4, &c.

AND ^a in the seventh year Jehoiada strengthened himself, and took the captains of hundreds, Azariah the son of Jeroham, and Ishmael the son of Jehohanan, and Azariah the son of Obed, and Maaseiah the son of Adaiah, and Elishaphat the son of Zichri, into covenant with him.

2 And they went about in Judah, and gathered the Levites out of all the cities of Judah, and the chief of the fathers of Israel, and they came to Jerusalem.

2 Sam. 7.
12.

1 Kings 2.
4. & 9. 5.
chap. 6. 16.
& 7. 18.

3 And all the congregation made a covenant with the king in the house of God. And he said unto them, Behold, the king's son shall reign, as the LORD hath ^b said of the sons of David.

† Heb.
thresholds.

4 This is the thing that ye shall do; A third part of you entering on the sabbath, of the priests and of the Levites, shall be porters of the † doors;

5 And a third part shall be at the king's house; and a third part at the gate of the foundation: and all the people shall be in the courts of the house of the LORD.

6 But let none come into the house of the LORD, save the priests, and they that minister of the Levites; they shall go in, for they are holy: but all the people shall keep the watch of the LORD.

7 And the Levites shall compass the king round about, every man with his weapons in his hand; and whosoever else cometh into the house, he shall be put to death: but be ye with the king when he cometh in, and when he goeth out.

8 So the Levites and all Judah did according to all things that Jehoiada the priest had commanded, and took every man his men that were to come in on the sabbath, with them that were to go out on the sabbath: for Jehoiada the priest dismissed not the courses.

9 Moreover Jehoiada the priest delivered to the captains of hundreds spears, and bucklers, and shields, that had been king David's, which were in the house of God.

10 And he set all the people, every man having his weapon in his hand, from the right † side of the † temple to the left side of the temple, along by the altar and the temple, by the king round about.

Before
CHRIST
878.

† Heb. shoulder.

† Heb.
house.
c Deut. 17.
18.

11 Then they brought out the king's son, and put upon him the crown, and ^c gave him the testimony, and made him king. And Jehoiada and his sons anointed him, and said, † God save the king.

† Heb.
Let the king
live.

12 ¶ Now when Athaliah heard the noise of the people running and praising the king, she came to the people into the house of the LORD:

13 And she looked, and, behold, the king stood at his pillar at the entering in, and the princes and the trumpets by the king: and all the people of the land rejoiced, and sounded with trumpets, also the singers with instruments of musick, and such as taught to sing praise. Then Athaliah rent her clothes, and said, † Treason, Treason.

† Heb.
Conspiracy.

14 Then Jehoiada the priest brought out the captains of hundreds that were set over the host, and said unto them, Have her forth of the ranges: and whoso followeth her, let him be slain with the sword. For the priest said, Slay her not in the house of the LORD.

15 So they laid hands on her; and when she was come to the entering of the horse gate by the king's house, they slew her there.

16 ¶ And Jehoiada made a covenant between him, and between all the people, and between the king, that they should be the LORD's people.

17 Then all the people went to the house of Baal, and brake it down, and brake his altars and his images in pieces, and ^d slew Mattan the priest of Baal before the altars.

d Deut. 13.
9.

18 Also Jehoiada appointed the offices of the house of the LORD by the hand of the priests the Levites, whom David had ^e distributed in the house of the LORD, to offer the burnt offerings of the LORD, as it is written in the ^f law of Moses, with rejoicing and with singing, as it was ordained † by David.

e 1 Chron.
24. 1.

f Numb. 28.
2.

† Heb. by the hands of David.
g 1 Chron.
26. 1, &c.

19 And he set the ^g porters at the gates of the house of the LORD, that none which was unclean in any thing should enter in.

20 And he took the captains of hundreds, and the nobles, and the governors of the people, and all the people of the Chap. XXIII. ver. 16. — between him, and between all the people, &c. It is stated at 2 Kings xi. 17, that this covenant was made "between the Lord and the king and the people;" which is perfectly in agreement with this passage: for, Jehoiada the priest sustaining the person of God, the covenant was made, not with him, but with God. Bp. Patrick.

18. — the priests the Levites, The priests and the Levites. Houbigant.

Before
CHRIST
878.

land, and brought down the king from the house of the LORD: and they came through the high gate into the king's house, and set the king upon the throne of the kingdom.

21 And all the people of the land rejoiced: and the city was quiet, after that they had slain Athaliah with the sword.

CHAP. XXIV.

1 Joash reigneth well all the days of Jehoiada. 4 He giveth order for the repair of the temple. 15 Jehoiada's death and honourable burial. 17 Joash, falling to idolatry, slayeth Zechariah the son of Jehoiada. 23 Joash is spoiled by the Syrians, and slain by Zabad and Jehozabad. 27 Amaziah succeedeth him.

about 878.
2 Kings
12. 1, &c.

JOASH ^a was seven years old when he began to reign, and he reigned forty years in Jerusalem. His mother's name also was Zibiah of Beer-sheba.

2 And Joash did that which was right in the sight of the LORD all the days of Jehoiada the priest.

3 And Jehoiada took for him two wives; and he begat sons and daughters.

† Heb.
to renew.

4 ¶ And it came to pass after this, that Joash was minded † to repair the house of the LORD.

856.

5 And he gathered together the priests and the Levites, and said to them, Go out unto the cities of Judah, and gather of all Israel money to repair the house of your God from year to year, and see that ye hasten the matter. Howbeit the Levites hastened it not.

6 And the king called for Jehoiada the chief, and said unto him, Why hast thou not required of the Levites to bring in out of Judah and out of Jerusalem the collection, according to the commandment of ^b Moses the servant of the LORD, and of the congregation of Israel, for the tabernacle of witness?

^b Exod. 30.
12, 15, 14.

7 For the sons of Athaliah, that wicked woman, had broken up the house of God; and also all the dedicated things of the house of the LORD did they bestow upon Baalim.

8 And at the king's commandment they made a chest, and set it without at the gate of the house of the LORD.

Before
CHRIST
856.

9 And they made † a proclamation † Heb. a voice. through Judah and Jerusalem, to bring in to the LORD the collection that Moses the servant of God laid upon Israel in the wilderness.

10 And all the princes and all the people rejoiced, and brought in, and cast into the chest, until they had made an end.

11 Now it came to pass, that at what time the chest was brought unto the king's office by the hand of the Levites, and when they saw that there was much money, the king's scribe and the high priest's officer came and emptied the chest, and took it, and carried it to his place again. Thus they did day by day, and gathered money in abundance.

12 And the king and Jehoiada gave it to such as did the work of the service of the house of the LORD, and hired masons and carpenters to repair the house of the LORD, and also such as wrought iron and brass to mend the house of the LORD.

13 So the workmen wrought, and † the work was perfected by them, and they set the house of God in his state, and strengthened it. † Heb. the healing went up upon the work.

14 And when they had finished it, they brought the rest of the money before the king and Jehoiada, whereof were made vessels for the house of the LORD, even vessels to minister, and ‖ to offer withal, and spoons, and vessels of gold and silver. And they offered burnt offerings in the house of the LORD continually all the days of Jehoiada. ‖ Or, pestils.

15 ¶ But Jehoiada waxed old, and was full of days when he died; an hundred and thirty years old was he when he died. about 650.

16 And they buried him in the city of David among the kings, because he had done good in Israel, both toward God, and toward his house.

17 Now after the death of Jehoiada came the princes of Judah, and made obeisance about 640.

Chap. XXIV. ver. 3. And Jehoiada took for him two wives; That is, recommended to the king, when he was come to an age fit to marry, two wives. Dr. Wells.

16. — because he had done good in Israel, “In Israel,” that is, in the part of the land of Israel, over which he reigned, namely, Judah. This shews a good disposition then subsisting in the king and his people, that they paid honour to the memory of Jehoiada, “because he had done good toward God, and toward His house,” having been the instrument of restoring the Divine worship, and of repairing the decays which had taken place in the temple, and furnishing it with vessels for the Divine service. Bp. Patrick.

17. — came the princes of Judah, Some of the principal men, who in their hearts continued devoted to the worship of Baal, “made obeisance to the king;” that is, made their addresses to him with great reverence, pretending devotion to his service, and requested leave to worship the idols which Jehoiada had destroyed. Bp. Patrick.

The great change now wrought in Joash shews of how great importance it is for men in eminent situations to have about them wise and virtuous persons, and for the ministers of religion to be endued with zeal and prudence. The death of persons of this character is a great loss; and evil counsels are ever fatal to those who follow them. Ostervald.

Before
CHRIST
about 840.

to the king. Then the king hearkened unto them.

18 And they left the house of the LORD God of their fathers, and served groves and idols: and wrath came upon Judah and Jerusalem for this their trespass.

19 Yet he sent prophets to them, to bring them again unto the LORD; and they testified against them: but they would not give ear.

† Heb.
clothed.

20 And the Spirit of God † came upon Zechariah the son of Jehoiada the priest, which stood above the people, and said unto them, Thus saith God, Why transgress ye the commandments of the LORD, that ye cannot prosper? because ye have forsaken the LORD, he hath also forsaken you.

840.

21 And they conspired against him, and stoned him with stones at the commandment of the king in the court of the house of the LORD.

22 Thus Joash the king remembered not the kindness which Jehoiada his father had done to him, but slew his son. And when he died, he said, The LORD look upon it, and require it.

840.
† Heb.
in the revolution of the year.
839.

23 ¶ And it came to pass † at the end of the year, that the host of Syria came up against him: and they came to Judah and Jerusalem, and destroyed all the princes of the people from among the people, and sent all the spoil of them unto the king of † Damascus.

† Heb.
Darmesick.

24 For the army of the Syrians came with a small company of men, and the LORD delivered a very great host into their hand, because they had forsaken the LORD God of their fathers. So they executed judgment against Joash.

25 And when they were departed from

21. And they conspired against him, &c.] So degenerate was this prince grown, that he suffered that very temple, which he himself had piously repaired, to be profaned with the blood of a virtuous man, the son of his best benefactor, to whom he owed his life and his crown. Pyle.

To what extremities of wickedness will not wretched man proceed, when deserted by his Maker! King Joash is turned, not idolater only, but persecutor; yea, which is more horrible to consider, persecutor of the son of that Jehoiada, to whom he owed his own life. Zechariah, his foster brother, the only issue of those parents, by whom Joash lived and reigned, is, for his conscientious rebuke of the idolatry of prince and people, unjustly and cruelly murdered by that unthankful hand. How possible is it for fair and pious beginnings to close in monstrous impieties! Bp. Hall.

22. — he said, The Lord look upon it, and require it.] The Prophet resigned his breath without any the least reviling word; only telling them that God would not fail to punish such outrageous impieties. The words, "The Lord look upon it, &c." are not an imprecation, but a prophecy: they are to be taken in a future sense, "The Lord will look upon it and require it." Pyle.

him, (for they left him in great diseases,) his own servants conspired against him for the blood of the sons of Jehoiada the priest, and slew him on his bed, and he died: and they buried him in the city of David, but they buried him not in the sepulchres of the kings.

Before
CHRIST
839.

26 And these are they that conspired against him; || Zabad the son of Shimeath an Ammonitess, and Jehozabad the son of || Shimrith a Moabitess.

|| Or,
Jozachar,
2 Kings 12.
21.

|| Or,
Shomer.
839.

27 ¶ Now concerning his sons, and the greatness of the burdens laid upon him, and the † repairing of the house of God, behold, they are written in the || story of the book of the kings. And Amaziah his son reigned in his stead.

† Heb.
founding.
|| Or, commentary.

CHAP. XXV.

1 Amaziah beginneth to reign well. 3 He executeth justice on the traitors. 5 Having hired an army of Israelites against the Edomites, at the word of a prophet he loseth the hundred talents, and dismisseth them. 11 He overthroweth the Edomites. 10, 13 The Israelites, discontented with their dismission, spoil as they return home. 14 Amaziah, proud of his victory, serveth the gods of Edom, and despiseth the admonitions of the prophet. 17 He provoketh Joash to his overthrow. 25 His reign. 27 He is slain by conspiracy.

AMAZIAH ^a was twenty and five years old when he began to reign, and he reigned twenty and nine years in Jerusalem. And his mother's name was Jehoaddan of Jerusalem.

839.
^a 2 Kings
14. 1, &c.

2 And he did that which was right in the sight of the LORD, but not with a perfect heart.

3 ¶ Now it came to pass, when the kingdom was † established to him, that he slew his servants that had killed the king his father.

† Heb. confirmed upon him.

4 But he slew not their children, but did as it is written in the law in the book of Assuredly, his zeal for justice, not the uncharitable thirst of revenge, drew forth these words. God heard his dying words, and soon called Joash to a severe account. His crime made him odious when living, and deprived him, when slain, of the sepulchre of his fathers, ver. 25; as if this last mark of royalty were too good for him who had forgotten the law of humanity. Bp. Hall.

23. — all the princes of the people] Those who had advised Joash to restore the worship of Baal. Bp. Patrick.

25. — buried him not in the sepulchres of the kings.] Because he had been a notorious idolater. Bp. Wilson. The fate of Joash was like that of other bad kings. God delivered him up to the Syrians, though they "came with a small company of men," ver. 24; he was killed in his bed by his own subjects, and buried with disgrace: whence we are taught, that they who provoke the wrath of God by their sins, will experience sooner or later the severity of His judgments. Ostervald.

Chap. XXV. ver. 2. — but not with a perfect heart.] It is said at 2 Kings xiv. 3, that he did that which was right, but "not like David his father." He did in fact what the law required, but not with a sincere and solid piety. Bp. Patrick.

Before
CHRIST
839.

^b Deut. 24.
16.
2 Kings 14.
6.
Jer. 31. 30.
Ezek. 18.
20.

Moses, where the LORD commanded, saying, ^b The fathers shall not die for the children, neither shall the children die for the fathers, but every man shall die for his own sin.

5 ¶ Moreover Amaziah gathered Judah together, and made them captains over thousands, and captains over hundreds, according to the houses of their fathers, throughout all Judah and Benjamin: and he numbered them from twenty years old and above, and found them three hundred thousand choice men, able to go forth to war, that could handle spear and shield.

6 He hired also an hundred thousand mighty men of valour out of Israel for an hundred talents of silver.

7 But there came a man of God to him, saying, O king, let not the army of Israel go with thee; for the LORD is not with Israel, to wit, with all the children of Ephraim.

8 But if thou wilt go, do it, be strong for the battle: God shall make thee fall before the enemy: for God hath power to help, and to cast down.

5. — three hundred thousand choice men.] We here discern how much the iniquities of the people had now diminished their numbers since the days of Jehoshaphat, that is, in the space of about seventy years; for this king could bring only 300,000 men to the field, and Jehoshaphat brought nearly four times as many; see chap. xvii. Bp. Patrick.

6. He hired also — out of Israel] In hiring these Israelites, the king acted rashly and presumptuously. For, in the first place, he “enquired not of the Lord” upon the occasion: see Judges xx. 27; 1 Sam. xxiii. 2, 4; 2 Sam. ii. 1; v. 19, 23; 2 Kings xvi. 15; 1 Chron. x. 14, &c. He sought not, as, upon concerns of importance, David and the other religious kings of Judah had constantly sought, those special directions from God, which, under the existing dispensation, a dispensation, into the texture of which miracles were interwoven, were always to be obtained by an immediate reference to the Most High before His altar. And, in the next place, he knew that the people of Israel had long been open idolaters; and that the heaviest calamities had fallen upon his own ancestors, in consequence of connexions which they had formed with idolatrous Israel. He could not then look for the Divine blessing upon this proceeding: but he had reason to expect that his sinful misconduct would be made the instrument of his punishment. Gisborne.

7. — for the Lord is not with Israel, &c.] The Prophet here reprimands them sharply for entering into an alliance with the Israelites, a people debauched by the wicked house of Jeroboam, which was of the tribe of Ephraim. Pyle.

At the same time God, in great mercy, affords Amaziah both opportunity and encouragement to stop short in the evil course on which he had entered. Gisborne.

8. But if thou wilt go, &c.] If thou wilt go to fight against Edom, do it only with thine own men; for, though they are not a numerous army, yet God will make them to be strong enough for the battle, so as to conquer the Edomites; but, if thou take the forces of Israel with thee, “God will make thee fall before the enemy:” for God hath power to help or give thee victory by a small army, and to cast thee down or cause thee to be conquered, even with the greatest army. Dr. Wells.

9. — But what shall we do for the hundred talents &c.] Ama-

Before
CHRIST
839.

† Heb.
band.

9 And Amaziah said to the man of God, But what shall we do for the hundred talents which I have given to the † army of Israel? And the man of God answered, The LORD is able to give thee much more than this.

10 Then Amaziah separated them, to wit, the army that was come to him out of Ephraim, to go † home again: wherefore their anger was greatly kindled against Judah, and they returned home † in great anger.

† Heb. to their place.

† Heb.
in heat of anger.
about 827.

11 ¶ And Amaziah strengthened himself, and led forth his people, and went to the valley of salt, and smote of the children of Seir ten thousand.

12 And other ten thousand left alive did the children of Judah carry away captive, and brought them unto the top of the rock, and cast them down from the top of the rock, that they all were broken in pieces.

13 ¶ But † the soldiers of the army which Amaziah sent back, that they should not go with him to battle, fell upon the cities of Judah, from Samaria even unto Beth-horon, and smote three thousand of them, and took much spoil.¹

† Heb.
the sons of the band.

ziah was confounded at the message of the Prophet. He could not venture to retain the Israelites to go with him to the war, when he was assured that his own destruction would be the consequence. But he was far from possessing that singleness of heart, that true and lively faith, which would have taught him to obey the command of God instantly and cheerfully, whatever present sacrifice might be inseparable from obedience. His heart hankered after the money which he had advanced. Was that to be relinquished? If not, how was it to be recovered? If compliance with the Divine will would not have cost him any thing, he would readily have obeyed. But an expensive proof of obedience was required. He pondered therefore and hesitated; and “said to the man of God, But what shall we do for the hundred talents which I have given to the army of Israel?” Gisborne.

— The Lord is able to give thee much more than this.] God, who is the Lord of the whole earth, has the earth, and every thing which it contains, at His disposal. “Every beast of the forest is His, and the cattle upon a thousand hills.” “The silver is Mine, and the gold is Mine, saith the Lord of hosts,” Ps. l. 10; Hag. ii. 8. He could have at once extended the dominions of Amaziah to the widest bounds promised to the children of Israel; from Lebanon to the confines of Egypt; from the Western sea to the great river Euphrates. He could have rendered this king an object of respect, of admiration, and of dread, to all the surrounding nations. At the present hour, all the kingdoms of the earth, and the glory of them, are at the disposal of the Son of God, our Lord and Saviour. All power in heaven and in earth is given unto Him. Every article, in which worldly prosperity consists; every event, which contributes to worldly greatness; every outward circumstance in any respect advantageous to men, is in His hands. Well therefore may we be assured, that whatever we lend to the Lord, by resigning it for His sake, He is able beyond measure to repay to us again. Gisborne.

13. — the soldiers of the army] That is, the Israelite army. — and smote three thousand of them.] Thus Amaziah was punished for having entered into an alliance with idolaters, although at the Prophet’s reproof he broke it off: and God, it is

Before
CHRIST
about 927.

14 ¶ Now it came to pass, after that Amaziah was come from the slaughter of the Edomites, that he brought the gods of the children of Seir, and set them up to be his gods, and bowed down himself before them, and burned incense unto them.

15 Wherefore the anger of the Lord was kindled against Amaziah, and he sent unto him a prophet, which said unto him, Why hast thou sought after the gods of the people, which could not deliver their own people out of thine hand?

† Heb.
counselled.

16 And it came to pass, as he talked with him, that the king said unto him, Art thou made of the king's counsel? forbear; why shouldest thou be smitten? Then the prophet forbore, and said, I know that God hath † determined to destroy thee, because thou hast done this, and hast not hearkened unto my counsel.

R26.
2 Kings
14. 8, 9.

17 ¶ Then Amaziah king of Judah took advice, and sent to Joash, the son of Jehoahaz, the son of Jehu, king of Israel, saying, Come, let us see one another in the face.

¶ Or, furze bush,
or, thorn.

18 And Joash king of Israel sent to Amaziah king of Judah, saying, The † thistle that was in Lebanon sent to the cedar that was in Lebanon, saying, Give thy daughter to my son to wife: and there passed by † a wild beast that was in Lebanon, and trode down the thistle.

† Heb.
a beast of the field.

19 Thou sayest, Lo, thou hast smitten the Edomites; and thine heart lifteth thee up to boast: abide now at home; why shouldest thou meddle to thine hurt, that thou shouldest fall, even thou, and Judah with thee?

20 But Amaziah would not hear; for it came of God, that he might deliver them into the hand of their enemies, because they sought after the gods of Edom. Before 826.

CHRIST

21 So Joash the king of Israel went up; and they saw one another in the face, both he and Amaziah king of Judah, at Beth-shemesh, which belongeth to Judah.

22 And Judah was † put to the worse before Israel, and they fled every man to his tent. † Heb.
smitten.

23 And Joash the king of Israel took Amaziah king of Judah, the son of Joash, the son of Jehoahaz, at Beth-shemesh, and brought him to Jerusalem, and brake down the wall of Jerusalem from the gate of Ephraim to † the corner gate, four hundred cubits. † Heb.
the gate of it that looketh.

24 And he took all the gold and the silver, and all the vessels that were found in the house of God with Obed-edom, and the treasures of the king's house, the hostages also, and returned to Samaria.

25 ¶ And Amaziah the son of Joash king of Judah lived after the death of Joash son of Jehoahaz king of Israel fifteen years.

26 Now the rest of the acts of Amaziah, first and last, behold, are they not written in the book of the kings of Judah and Israel?

27 ¶ Now after the time that Amaziah did turn away † from following the Lord they † made a conspiracy against him in Jerusalem; and he fled to Lachish: but they sent to Lachish after him, and slew him there. 810.
† Heb.
from after.
† Heb. conspired a conspiracy.

28 And they brought him upon horses, and buried him with his fathers in the city of † Judah. ¶ That is, the city of David,
as it is
2 Kings 14.
20.

probable, also suffered this calamity to fall upon him, because he used his victory over the Edomites with too much cruelty. Bp. Patrick.

17. Then Amaziah — took advice,] Although he would not be advised by the Prophet, it appears that he consulted others, who led him to destruction; for he proceeded, without first desiring to have satisfaction made for the injury done to him, to make war on Joash king of Israel, and provoke him to battle. Bp. Patrick.

24. — with Obed-edom,] Who had the chief care of the treasures in the temple. Dr. Wells.

27. — after the time that Amaziah did turn away &c.] He survived Joash several years; but it appears he grew more and more hated by his subjects, and at enmity with God; so that at last a conspiracy was formed against him, under which he fell. Pyle.

In obedience to the command of God, Amaziah resigned the hundred talents; yet he lived in calamity, and died by violence and treason. Did the Lord God, the God of goodness and truth, forsake His servant? No: the Lord forsook Amaziah, because Amaziah drew back from being His servant. Amaziah, when he had destroyed the Edomites, brought with him to Jerusalem their idols; and with the infatuation, which belongs to presumptuous wickedness, set them up to be his gods, and burned incense to them, and worshipped them: yet the sword of Divine justice passed in its scabbard. "Where sin abounded, grace did much more abound." The Lord, instead of immediately cutting off the king in the midst of his ingratitude and impiety, was mercifully pleased to send a Prophet, to rebuke him and call him to repentance, ver. 15. How did the king receive the message from God? When the former Prophet had delivered his message, Amaziah obeyed his command. But he now refused to humble himself before his Maker. His heart was obstinately fixed in apostasy. He charged the Prophet with insolent obtrusiveness for daring to reprove him; and ordered him to be silent on pain of punishment, ver. 16. Then the Prophet, perceiving him not to be reclaimed, pronounced his doom, "I know that God hath determined to destroy thee, because thou hast done this, and hast not hearkened unto my counsel." Hence followed the disastrous residue of his life, and his miserable end. And we may learn from his example, that no former acts of righteousness, no former sacrifices of present interest for conscience sake, will avail us as an excuse for indulging afterwards in sin. Gisborne.

28. — in the city of Judah.] In Jerusalem, "the city of David," as it is stated at 2 Kings xiv. 20. Bp. Patrick. And as the old versions read in this place. Dr. Wells.

Before
CHRIST
810.

CHAP. XXVI.

1 Uzziah succeeding, and reigning well in the days of Zechariah, prospereth. 16 Waring proud, he invadeth the priest's office, and is smitten with leprosy. 22 He dieth, and Jotham succeedeth him.

810.
2 Kings
24. 21. &
15. 1.
|| Or,
Azariah.

THEN all the people of Judah took ^a || Uzziah, who was sixteen years old, and made him king in the room of his father Amaziah.

2 He built Eloth, and restored it to Judah, after that the king slept with his fathers.

3 Sixteen years old was Uzziah when he began to reign, and he reigned fifty and two years in Jerusalem. His mother's name also was Jecoliah of Jerusalem.

4 And he did that which was right in the sight of the LORD, according to all that his father Amaziah did.

† Heb.
in the seeing of God.

5 And he sought God in the days of Zechariah, who had understanding † in the visions of God: and as long as he sought the LORD, God made him to prosper.

|| Or, in the country of Ashdod.
about 800.

6 And he went forth and warred against the Philistines, and brake down the wall of Gath, and the wall of Jabneh, and the wall of Ashdod, and built cities || about Ashdod, and among the Philistines.

7 And God helped him against the Philistines, and against the Arabians that dwelt in Gur-baal, and the Mehunims.

† Heb.
went.

8 And the Ammonites gave gifts to Uzziah: and his name † spread abroad even to Chap. XXVI. ver. 5. — in the days of Zechariah,] This is not the Zechariah, whose book of prophecies is extant in the Bible, for he lived 300 years afterwards; nor Zechariah the son of Jehoiada, who was slain some years before; but probably the son of the latter Zechariah, who was called after his father's name, and was eminent for his divine wisdom. It is not here said that he was a Prophet, but that he "had understanding in the visions of God," by which is probably meant, that he was skilful in expounding the ancient prophecies, and giving instruction out of them. Bp. Patrick.

6. And he went forth and warred &c.] From this verse to the 15th, the sacred writer shews by several instances how excellent a prince this was, and what prosperity God gave him while he was truly religious: for he shewed extreme solicitude for the welfare of his people; he was skilful in husbandry, but at the same time extremely active in warlike affairs, inasmuch as he prudently demolished the fortifications of his enemies on the frontiers, and provided his own frontiers with works, garrisons, arms, and engines of war. Thus his power became so formidable, that the Ammonites "gave gifts," ver. 8, to preserve his friendship, and "his name spread abroad," not only to the Philistines on the west, but to the Arabians and others on the east, and to the borders of Egypt on the south. Bp. Patrick.

10. Also he built towers] It has commonly been supposed that these towers were made for sheltering the shepherds from the bad weather, or for defending them from the incursions of the enemies. It may also be conjectured, that they were designed to keep the inhabitants who pastured there in subjection, and to induce them to pay quietly their tribute. William of Tyre mentions parts of the Eastern countries, inhabited by Armenian and the entering in of Egypt; for he strengthened himself exceedingly.

Before
CHRIST
800.

9 Moreover Uzziah built towers in Jerusalem at the corner gate, and at the valley gate, and at the turning of the wall, and || fortified them.

|| Or,
repaired.

10 Also he built towers in the desert, and || digged many wells: for he had much cattle, both in the low country, and in the plains: husbandmen also, and vine dressers in the mountains, and in || Carmel: for he loved † husbandry.

|| Or, cut out many cisterns.

|| Or, fruitful fields.

† Heb.
ground.

11 Moreover Uzziah had an host of fighting men, that went out to war by bands, according to the number of their account by the hand of Jeiel the scribe and Maaseiah the ruler, under the hand of Hananiah, one of the king's captains.

12 The whole number of the chief of the fathers of the mighty men of valour were two thousand and six hundred.

13 And under their hand was † an army, three hundred thousand and seven thousand and five hundred, that made war with mighty power, to help the king against the enemy.

† Heb.
the power of an army.

14 And Uzziah prepared for them throughout all the host shields, and spears, and helmets, and habergeons, and bows, and † slings to cast stones.

† Heb. stones of slings.

15 And he made in Jerusalem engines, invented by cunning men, to be on the towers and upon the bulwarks, to shoot arrows and great stones withal. And his

Syrian Christians, who fed there prodigious flocks and herds, but were in subjection to the Turks, who, though few in number, yet lived in strong places, and thus kept the peasants in entire subjection. Harmer.

14. And Uzziah prepared for them throughout all the host shields, &c.] It deserves notice, that here seems to be the earliest mention on record of a magazine of military stores. Script. illust. Expos. Ind.

15. — engines, — to shoot arrows and great stones] It appears from this passage that those authors must be mistaken who attribute the invention of the engine called the Balista, and other such, to the Greeks and Romans; since we have here an instance of their being employed in the East, before the Greeks had brought the military art to any great perfection. Perhaps Uzziah was the inventor of them, and on this account it is stated that "his name" was "spread abroad." It appears that from this time they began to be used in besieging and attacking towns; and therefore Ezekiel, when describing the future sieges of Jerusalem and Tyre, makes mention of engines of war. Calmct.

This is probably the earliest description on record of those engines, named by the Greeks and Romans Balistæ and Catapultæ; together with their use and application. Fragments to Calmet.

It appears that some of these engines were employed to shoot arrows, and others to cast great stones. The powers of various engines of this sort, as described by the ancients, were very great. Nonnius speaks of instruments, which threw stones of 100 or 120 pounds weight: Diodorus mentions a machine which threw stones of 360 pounds. The distance, to which they threw, is also surprising, since they reached to three stadia, or furlongs; perhaps even

Before
CHRIST
about 765.
+ Heb. want first name † spread far abroad; for he was marvellously helped, till he was strong.

16 ¶ But when he was strong, his heart was lifted up to his destruction: for he transgressed against the Lord his God, and went into the temple of the Lord to burn incense upon the altar of incense.

17 And Azariah the priest went in after him, and with him fourscore priests of the Lord, that were valiant men:

Numb.
18. 7.

Exod. 30.
7

18 And they withstood Uzziah the king, and said unto him, It ^b appertaineth not unto thee, Uzziah, to burn incense unto the Lord, but to the ^c priests the sons of Aaron, that are consecrated to burn incense: go out of the sanctuary; for thou hast trespassed; neither shall it be for thine honour from the Lord God.

19 Then Uzziah was wroth, and had a censer in his hand to burn incense: and while he was wroth with the priests, the leprosy even rose up in his forehead before the priests in the house of the Lord, from beside the incense altar.

20 And Azariah the chief priest, and all the priests, looked upon him, and, behold, he was leprous in his forehead, and to a mile distant: they could throw in one night 500 stones, and by day a 1000. They were employed likewise in battle. Tacitus mentions a battalion of the enemy, overthrown by a volley of great stones. These machines had no need of stores of iron, powder, sulphur, pitch, &c. but for the most part could find ammunition, wherever a fort was to be attacked, or a city besieged. Script. illust. Expos. Ind.

16. But when he was strong, &c.] When the grandeur to which he was raised dazzled his eyes, and his pride in earthly glories made him forgetful of the laws of his infinite Benefactor. Pyle. How hard it is to bear great prosperity with moderation and humble thankfulness! Bp. Patrick.

How easy is it for the best of men to be swoln with admiration of their own strength and glory: to be lifted up so high, as to lose the sight both of the ground whence they rose, and of the hand that advanced them! Bp. Hall.

— and went into the temple] What could tempt him to this folly, it is hard to explain: perhaps he had a vain ambition of imitating heathen princes, who in many places executed the priesthood. Bp. Patrick.

18. — It appertaineth not unto thee, &c.] What religious heart would not have relented at so faithful and just an expostulation of the priests! But how hard is it for great persons to yield to those whom they have offended: Uzziah will not allow himself to be faulty; that which was done rashly, must be borne out with power. Bp. Hall.

19. — and while he was wroth, — the leprosy even rose up] While Uzziah yet speaks, God strikes. Ere the words of fury come out of his mouth, the leprosy appears in his forehead. Had it broken forth on his hand, or foot, or breast, it might have been hid from the eyes of men; but now his forehead is smitten with this judgment, that God may proclaim to all beholders, 'Thus shall it be done to the man whose arrogance hath thrust him upon a sacred charge.' The hand of God hath now done in an instant what the tongues of men had attempted in vain. Bp. Hall.

It is a rule established beyond all controversy concerning the office of the ministry, that "no man taketh it unto himself," Heb. v. 4. Internal gifts and graces may qualify a person for an office, but they cannot put him into one. No man, however righteous they thrust him out from thence; yea, himself ^d hasted also to go out, because the Lord had smitten him.

Before
CHRIST
about 765.
^d As Esther
6. 12.
^e 2 Kings
15. 5.
^f Lev. 12.
46.
^g Heb.
fre.

21 ^e And Uzziah the king was a leper unto the day of his death, and dwelt in a ^f † several house, being a leper; for he was cut off from the house of the Lord: and Jotham his son was over the king's house, ^g fre. judging the people of the land.

22 ¶ Now the rest of the acts of Uzziah, first and last, did Isaiah the prophet, the son of Amoz, write.

23 So Uzziah slept with his fathers, and they buried him with his fathers in the field of the burial which belonged to the kings; for they said, He is a leper: and Jotham his son reigned in his stead.

CHAP. XXVII.

1 Jotham reigning well prospereth. 5 He subdueth the Ammonites. 7 His reign. 9 Ahaz succeedeth him.

JOTHAM ^a was twenty and five years ^{75a.} old when he began to reign, and he ^a reigned sixteen years in Jerusalem. His mother's name also was Jerushah, the daughter of Zadok. ^{2 Kings 15. 32.}

and holy through faith and the sanctifying grace of the Holy Spirit, can have authority to act in the name of Christ, till Christ gives him that authority. Before that is done, let his life and character be what they will, his ministrations can have no validity. Whatever he may be in other respects, in this particular he is a grievous offender, and will be found guilty before God of sacrilegiously intruding into an office, to which he can have no pretensions: a crime, for which "the leprosy" once "rose up in the forehead" of a monarch; and Korah and all his company, holy as they said they all were, "went down alive into the pit." And that none in the Christian church might imitate the presumption of Uzziah, or "go in the gainsaying of Korah," even Christ "took not this honour unto Himself, nor glorified Himself to be made an high priest," (for a glory it was to Him,) till He was "called of God," by the visible descent of the Holy Ghost upon Him in the presence of the people, and by the voice from heaven, saying, "This is My beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased.—From that time Jesus began to preach," Matth. iii. 17; iv. 17. Who then is that follower of Jesus, that shall offer to begin before? Bp. Horne.

21. — dwelt in a several house, &c.] He dwelt in a separate house by himself, being excluded from all conversation with others, and from all management of publick affairs; thus "he was cut off from the house of the Lord," that is, precluded from entering it for religious worship, as a just punishment for his daring entrance into the most holy place, and his attempt to perform there what belonged to the high priest exclusively. Dr. Wells. Uzziah withdraws with a dejected countenance and heavy heart; and wishes to be hid no less from himself, than from others. How easy is it for the God of heaven to bring down the highest pitch of earthly greatness, and to humble the most stubborn pride! Bp. Hall.

23. — in the field of the burial] He was buried in a sepulchre by himself, and not in one where any former king had been buried; (Dr. Wells;) for it was not deemed proper or lawful to defile the royal sepulchres with a leprous body. Pyle.

The year of Uzziah's death was distinguished by the remarkable vision of Isaiah, on his designation to the prophetic office, Isai. vi. 1. Dr. Hales.

Before
CHRIST
758.

2 And he did that which was right in the sight of the LORD, according to all that his father Uzziah did: howbeit he entered not into the temple of the LORD. And the people did yet corruptly.

|| Or,
the tower.

3 He built the high gate of the house of the LORD, and on the wall of || Ophel he built much.

4 Moreover he built cities in the mountains of Judah, and in the forests he built castles and towers.

† Heb.
This.

5 ¶ He fought also with the king of the Ammonites, and prevailed against them. And the children of Ammon gave him the same year an hundred talents of silver, and ten thousand measures of wheat, and ten thousand of barley. † So much did the children of Ammon pay unto him, both the second year, and the third.

|| Or,
established.

6 So Jotham became mighty, because he || prepared his ways before the LORD his God.

7 ¶ Now the rest of the acts of Jotham, and all his wars, and his ways, lo, they are written in the book of the kings of Israel and Judah.

about 742.

8 He was five and twenty years old when he began to reign, and reigned sixteen years in Jerusalem.

9 ¶ And Jotham slept with his fathers, and they buried him in the city of David: and Ahaz his son reigned in his stead.

CHAP. XXVIII.

1 Ahaz reigning very wickedly is greatly afflicted by the Syrians. 6 Judah being captivated by the Israelites is sent home by the counsel of Oded the prophet. 16 Ahaz sending for aid to Assyria is not helped thereby. 22 In his distress he groweth more idolatrous. 26 He dying, Hezekiah succeedeth him.

741.
2 2 Kings
16. 2.

A HAZ ^a was twenty years old when he began to reign, and he reigned six-

Chap. XXVII. ver. 2. — howbeit he entered not into the temple] It is the opinion of some, that he was so alarmed by the punishment which had befallen his father, that he did not so much as enter into the court of the temple, or that he never offered sacrifices there, but only in high places. But a preferable meaning seems to be, that he imitated his father in all that was good, but did not profanely enter the temple to offer incense as he had done. Bp. Patrick.

— And the people did yet corruptly.] A better translation may be, “Yet still the people did corruptly;” that is, the generality of the nation could not be weaned from their old custom of worshipping at their private altars in a superstitious manner. Pyle.

3. — the wall of Ophel] The meaning of this is uncertain; some understand by Ophel, “a palace;” others, “a high place or cliff, where there was a tower;” and others again understand from this expression, that he beautified and repaired the porch of the house of the Lord. Bp. Patrick.

6. — because he prepared his ways before the Lord] Because he teen years in Jerusalem: but he did not that which was right in the sight of the LORD, like David his father:

VOL. I.

Before
CHRIST
741.

2 For he walked in the ways of the kings of Israel, and made also molten images for Baalim.

3 Moreover he || burnt incense in the valley of the son of Hinnom, and burnt ^b his children in the fire, after the abominations of the heathen whom the LORD had cast out before the children of Israel.

|| Or, offered sacrifice.

^b Lev. 16.
21.

4 He sacrificed also and burnt incense in the high places, and on the hills, and under every green tree.

5 Wherefore the LORD his God delivered him into the hand of the king of Syria; and they smote him, and carried away a great multitude of them captives, and brought them to † Damascus. And he was also delivered into the hand of the king of Israel, who smote him with a great slaughter.

about 741.

† Heb.
Darmesek.

6 ¶ For Pekah the son of Remaliah slew in Judah an hundred and twenty thousand in one day, which were all † valiant men; because they had forsaken the LORD God of their fathers.

† Heb. sons of va-
lour.

7 And Zichri, a mighty man of Ephraim, slew Maaseiah the king's son, and Azrikam the governor of the house, and Elkanah that was † next to the king.

† Heb.
the second to the king.

8 And the children of Israel carried away captive of their brethren two hundred thousand, women, sons, and daughters, and took also away much spoil from them, and brought the spoil to Samaria.

9 But a prophet of the LORD was there, whose name was Oded: and he went out before the host that came to Samaria, and said unto them, Behold, because the LORD God of your fathers was wroth with Judah, he hath delivered them into your hand, and directed his counsels and actions according to the rule of God's word. It has been observed, that Jotham is the only one of the kings of Judah who has not some evil laid to his charge. David, Solomon, Rehoboam, Abijah, Jehoshaphat, &c. all committed some trespass of greater or less magnitude; but of Jotham no fault or error is recorded. Bp. Patrick.

Chap. XXVIII. ver. 3. — of the son of Hinnom,] That is, of Molech, who was so called as being worshipped in the valley of Hinnom, close to Jerusalem. See note on 2 Kings xxiii. 10.

5. — the Lord his God] The Lord is called his God, from the peculiar dominion which He exercised over the Israelite kings and people, and from the kindness which He shewed to him for his father's sake. Bp. Patrick.

9. — because the Lord — was wroth with Judah,] He thus warns the Israelites not to be too much elated with the victory, which was not to be ascribed to their valour and means of strength, but to the anger of God against the people of Judah, which induced Him to abandon them to the fury of their enemies.

Before
CHRIST
about 741.

ye have slain them in a rage that reacheth up unto heaven.

10 And now ye purpose to keep under the children of Judah and Jerusalem for bondmen and bondwomen unto you: but are there not with you, even with you, sins against the LORD your God?

11 Now hear me therefore, and deliver the captives again, which ye have taken captive of your brethren: for the fierce wrath of the LORD is upon you.

12 Then certain of the heads of the children of Ephraim, Azariah the son of Johanan, Berechiah the son of Meshillemoth, and Jehizkiah the son of Shallum, and Amasa the son of Hadlai, stood up against them that came from the war,

13 And said unto them, Ye shall not bring in the captives hither: for whereas we have offended against the LORD already, ye intend to add more to our sins and to our trespass: for our trespass is great, and there is fierce wrath against Israel.

14 So the armed men left the captives and the spoil before the princes and all the congregation.

15 And the men which were expressed by name rose up, and took the captives, and with the spoil clothed all that were naked among them, and arrayed them, and shod them, and gave them to eat and to drink, and anointed them, and carried all

— a rage that reacheth up unto heaven.] Meaning, a rage that hath no measure, and that crieth to heaven for vengeance. Bp. Patrick.

10. — but are there not with you — sins] He desires them to consider, that they, who thought themselves God's favourites because He had made them victorious, had sins enough to answer for; for which, if He punished them as they deserved, they might be soon reduced to the same condition with their brethren of Judah. Bp. Patrick.

11. — the fierce wrath of the Lord is upon you.] It hence appears, that, though God uses one nation as the instrument of another's punishment, yet He does not approve of the inhumanities committed by an enemy. Bp. Wilson.

14. So the armed men &c.] Here was a wonderful instance of obedience, in restoring not only the captives which were valuable, but all the spoil also which was no doubt considerable; and a remarkable proof of the great power of the Prophet, that he turned the barbarous cruelty of the Israelites to the tenderest humanity. How lamentable it is, that they were not to be so easily converted from idolatry, to which their inclination was so strong, that nothing could persuade them to forsake it. Bp. Patrick. Thus compassionate was God towards the people of Judah, who so little deserved mercy at His hands. Pyle.

19. — because of Ahaz king of Israel;] King of Judah, which was a part of Israel. See note at chap. xxi. 2. We read six times "the king of Israel" thus put for "the king of Judah."—"For he made Judah naked," that is, deprived it of the Divine protection by his foul transgressions. Bp. Patrick.

20. — distressed him, but strengthened him not.] At 2 Kings xvi. 9, it is said that Tiglath-pileser did help him; how then did he distress him? Both these are true; for, as he came to his the feeble of them upon asses, and brought them to Jericho, 'the city of palm trees, to their brethren: then they returned to Samaria.

Before
CHRIST
about 741.
Deut. 31.
3.

16 ¶ At that time did king Ahaz send unto the kings of Assyria to help him.

about 741.

17 For again the Edomites had come and smitten Judah, and carried away † captives.

† Heb.
a captivity.

18 The Philistines also had invaded the cities of the low country, and of the south of Judah, and had taken Beth-shemesh, and Ajalon, and Gedereth, and Shochoh with the villages thereof, and Timnah with the villages thereof, Gimzo also and the villages thereof: and they dwelt there.

19 For the LORD brought Judah low because of Ahaz king of Israel; for he made Judah naked, and transgressed sore against the LORD.

20 And Tilgath-pilneser king of Assyria came unto him, and distressed him, but strengthened him not.

740.

21 For Ahaz took away a portion out of the house of the LORD, and out of the house of the king, and of the princes, and gave it unto the king of Assyria: but he helped him not.

22 ¶ And in the time of his distress did he trespass yet more against the LORD: this is that king Ahaz.

assistance against the king of Syria, so he took Damascus, carried the people captive, and delivered Ahaz from the power of the Syrians, 2 Kings xvi. 7, &c. But this was of little real avail to Ahaz, for he assisted him not in recovering the cities taken from him by the Philistines, nor did he lend him any forces, or enable him to recruit his strength, but rather weakened him by exhausting his treasures, and by destroying Samaria, by which the way was opened for the more easy invasion of his country in the next reign. Thus, in all ages of history, instances have occurred in which the nations which have called in the assistance of foreign princes, have been overrun and conquered by those who came for purposes of friendship. Bp. Patrick.

22. — this is that king Ahaz.] The expression here in the Hebrew is an expression of great contempt, with which Ahaz well deserved to be branded, as the most notorious offender that had ever been among the kings of Judah. Bp. Patrick. In the disastrous condition in which he was, he was guilty of a piece of stupidity, not to be paralleled in any other, except in the weakest and wickedest of men, and took the most effectual steps to inflame the displeasure of God, ver. 24, and hasten the destruction of his kingdom. Pyle. "This is that king Ahaz;" it seems to be a particular brand set upon Ahaz, as a most grievous and notorious sinner, because "in the time of his distress he trespassed yet more," because affliction made him worse instead of better. Abp. Tillotson.

Of all the kings of Judah hitherto, there is no one so dreadful an example either of sin or judgment, as this son of good Jotham. It is horrible to think that such a monster could descend from the loins of David. Where should be the period of this wickedness? He begins with the high places, thence he descends to the calves of Dan and Beth-el, thence he falls to a Syrian altar, to the Syrian

Before
CHRIST
740.

† Heb.
Darmesek.

23 For he sacrificed unto the gods of † Damascus, which smote him: and he said, Because the gods of the kings of Syria help them, therefore will I sacrifice to them, that they may help me. But they were the ruin of him, and of all Israel.

24 And Ahaz gathered together the vessels of the house of God, and cut in pieces the vessels of the house of God, and shut up the doors of the house of the LORD, and he made him altars in every corner of Jerusalem.

|| Or,
to offer.

25 And in every several city of Judah he made high places || to burn incense unto other gods, and provoked to anger the LORD God of his fathers.

26 ¶ Now the rest of his acts and of all his ways, first and last, behold, they are written in the book of the kings of Judah and Israel.

726.

27 And Ahaz slept with his fathers, and they buried him in the city, even in Jerusalem: but they brought him not into the sepulchres of the kings of Israel: and Hezekiah his son reigned in his stead.

CHAP. XXIX.

1 Hezekiah's good reign. 3 He restoreth religion. 5 He exhorteth the Levites. 12 They sanctify themselves, and cleanse the house of God. 20 Hezekiah offereth solemn sacrifices, wherein the Levites were more forward than the priests.

726.
2 Kings
18. 1.

HEZEKIAH ^a began to reign when he was five and twenty years old, and he reigned nine and twenty years in Jerusalem. And his mother's name was Abijah, the daughter of Zechariah.

2 And he did that which was right in the sight of the LORD, according to all that David his father had done.

726.

3 ¶ He in the first year of his reign, in the first month, opened the doors of the house of the LORD, and repaired them.

god; then, from a partnership, he falls to an utter exclusion of the true God, and blocking up of His temple; and at last, as if hell were broken loose upon God's inheritance, every several city, every high place of Judah, hath a new god. No wonder if he be branded by the Spirit of God with, "This is that king Ahaz." Bp. Hall.

27. — they brought him not into the sepulchres of the kings] The Israelites were accustomed to honour, in a peculiar manner, the memory of their good kings; but they inflicted marks of posthumous disgrace on their wicked kings, by not suffering them to be interred in the usual sepulchres of the sovereigns. This custom was singular; the effect must have been powerful and influential; it was doubtless intended to make a suitable impression on the minds of the kings while living. The Egyptians had a custom similar to this of holding an inquest on the bodies of persons when dead. The sovereign himself was not exempt from this inquest: as the publick peace was interested in their lives, it was deemed for the publick welfare that they should suffer an impartial scrutiny

4 And he brought in the priests and the Levites, and gathered them together into the east street,

Before
CHRIST
726.

5 And said unto them, Hear me, ye Levites, sanctify now yourselves, and sanctify the house of the LORD God of your fathers, and carry forth the filthiness out of the holy place.

6 For our fathers have trespassed, and done that which was evil in the eyes of the LORD our God, and have forsaken him, and have turned away their faces from the habitation of the LORD, and † turned their backs.

† Heb.
given the neck.

7 Also they have shut up the doors of the porch, and put out the lamps, and have not burned incense nor offered burnt offerings in the holy place unto the God of Israel.

8 Wherefore the wrath of the LORD was upon Judah and Jerusalem, and he hath delivered them to † trouble, to astonishment, and to hissing, as ye see with your eyes.

† Heb.
commotion.

9 For, lo, our fathers have fallen by the sword, and our sons and our daughters and our wives are in captivity for this.

10 Now it is in mine heart to make a covenant with the LORD God of Israel, that his fierce wrath may turn away from us.

11 My sons, || be not now negligent: for the LORD hath ^b chosen you to stand before him, to serve him, and that ye should minister unto him, and || burn incense.

|| Or,
be not now
deceived.
^b Numb.
8. 14. & 18.
2. 6.

12 ¶ Then the Levites arose, Mahath the son of Amasai, and Joel the son of Azariah, of the sons of the Kohathites: and of the sons of Merari, Kish the son of Abdi, and Azariah the son of Jehalelel: and of the Gershonites; Joah the son of Zimmah, and Eden the son of Joah:

|| Or, offer
sacrifice.

by a publick trial; and some of them were not ranked among the honoured dead, and consequently were deprived of publick burial. The conformity between this practice of the Egyptians, and the practice of the Israelites, incidentally noticed in Scripture, is remarkable. Burder.

Chap. XXIX. ver. 5. — Hear me, ye Levites,] In this religious and pathetick address, Hezekiah exhorts the Levites and priests to set immediately about cleansing the temple, and seeing all its apartments, vessels, and utensils, made fit for use, calling to their minds into what miseries and calamities the profaneness of former times had plunged the whole nation, and how the contempt of God and of holy duties had rendered the kingdom of Judah the very scorn and derision of men; and finally, how highly it became them, who were God's ministers, to be peculiarly zealous to unite all their endeavours with his for procuring a reformation, which was the only means of preventing their destruction. Pyle.

Before
CHRIST
726.

13 And of the sons of Elizaphan; Shimri, and Jeiel: and of the sons of Asaph; Zechariah, and Mattaniah:

14 And of the sons of Heman; Jehiel, and Shimei: and of the sons of Jeduthun; Shemaiah, and Uzziel.

15 And they gathered their brethren, and sanctified themselves, and came, according to the commandment of the king, || by the words of the LORD, to cleanse the house of the LORD.

|| Or,
in the business of the LORD.

16 And the priests went into the inner part of the house of the LORD, to cleanse it, and brought out all the uncleanness that they found in the temple of the LORD into the court of the house of the LORD. And the Levites took it, to carry it out abroad into the brook Kidron.

726.

17 Now they began on the first day of the first month to sanctify, and on the eighth day of the month came they to the porch of the LORD: so they sanctified the house of the LORD in eight days; and in the sixteenth day of the first month they made an end.

18 Then they went in to Hezekiah the king, and said, We have cleansed all the house of the LORD, and the altar of burnt offering, with all the vessels thereof, and the shewbread table, with all the vessels thereof.

19 Moreover all the vessels, which king Ahaz in his reign did cast away in his transgression, have we prepared and sanctified, and, behold, they are before the altar of the LORD.

20 ¶ Then Hezekiah the king rose early, and gathered the rulers of the city, and went up to the house of the LORD.

21 And they brought seven bullocks, and seven rams, and seven lambs, and seven he goats, for a ° sin offering for the kingdom, and for the sanctuary, and for Judah. And he commanded the priests the sons of Aaron to offer them on the altar of the LORD.

° Lev. 4. 14.

22 So they killed the bullocks, and the priests received the blood, and ^d sprinkled it on the altar: likewise, when they had killed the rams, they sprinkled the blood upon the altar: they killed also the lambs, and they sprinkled the blood upon the altar.

Before
CHRIST
726.
^d Lev. 8.
14, 15.
Hebr. 9. 21.

23 And they brought † forth the he goats for the sin offering before the king and the congregation; and they laid their ° hands upon them:

† Heb.
near.

° Lev. 4. 15

24 And the priests killed them, and they made reconciliation with their blood upon the altar, to make an atonement for all Israel: for the king commanded that the burnt offering and the sin offering should be made for all Israel.

25 ^f And he set the Levites in the house of the LORD with cymbals, with psalteries, and with harps, according to the commandment of David, and of Gad the king's seer, and Nathan the prophet: for so was the commandment † of the LORD † by his prophets.

^f 1 Chron.
16. 4. & 25.
6.

26 And the Levites stood with the instruments of David, and the priests with the trumpets.

† Heb. by the hand of the LORD.

† Heb. by
the hand of.

27 And Hezekiah commanded to offer the burnt offering upon the altar. And † when the burnt offering began, the song of the LORD began also with the trumpets, and with the † instruments ordained by David king of Israel.

† Heb.
in the time.

† Heb. hands of instruments.

28 And all the congregation worshipped, and the † singers sang, and the trumpeters sounded: and all this continued until the burnt offering was finished.

† Heb.
song.

29 And when they had made an end of offering, the king and all that were † present with him bowed themselves, and worshipped.

† Heb.
found.

30 Moreover Hezekiah the king and the princes commanded the Levites to sing praise unto the LORD with the words of David, and of Asaph the seer. And they sang praises with gladness, and they bowed their heads and worshipped.

31 Then Hezekiah answered and said,

16. — into the inner part of the house] That is, into the holy place, for into the most holy none but the high priest might enter. By "the court of the house of the Lord" is meant the court of the priests, where the Levites attended upon them and ministered unto them. Bp. Patrick.

21. — to offer them on the altar] There are two laws in the books of Moses, requiring a sacrifice to be offered for the sins of the whole congregation; the one at Lev. iv. 13, 14, where a bullock was required for sins into which they had ignorantly fallen; the other at Numb. xv. 22, where the sacrifice of a goat as a sin offering is commanded; together with that of a bullock as a burnt offering, when they had fallen into error in the practice of external rites. Now Hezekiah, being sensible that the people had not only acted contrary to their religion, but had in fact abolished it, by closing the doors of their temple, and omitting the appointed sacrifices, and every where exercising strange worship, appointed seven bullocks for a burnt offering, and as many goats for a sin offering, (though the law never required more than one,) thinking that these numerous sacrifices (together with the rams and lambs) were, if not necessary, at least very becoming, on account of the great and long neglect of the Divine service, and of the multitude and heinousness of their other sins against the Lord, for which they now required forgiveness. Bp. Patrick.

Before
CHRIST
726.

|| Or, filled your
hand.

Now ye have || consecrated yourselves unto the LORD, come near and bring sacrifices and thank offerings into the house of the LORD. And the congregation brought in sacrifices and thank offerings; and as many as were of a free heart burnt offerings.

32 And the number of the burnt offerings, which the congregation brought, was threescore and ten bullocks, an hundred rams, and two hundred lambs: all these were for a burnt offering to the LORD.

33 And the consecrated things were six hundred oxen and three thousand sheep.

† Heb. strengthened them.

34 But the priests were too few, so that they could not flay all the burnt offerings: wherefore their brethren the Levites † did help them, till the work was ended, and until the other priests had sanctified themselves: for the Levites were more upright in heart to sanctify themselves than the priests.

35 And also the burnt offerings were in abundance, with the fat of the peace offerings, and the drink offerings for every burnt offering. So the service of the house of the LORD was set in order.

36 And Hezekiah rejoiced, and all the people, that God had prepared the people: for the thing was done suddenly.

CHAP. XXX.

1 Hezekiah proclaimeth a solemn passover on the second month for Judah and Israel. 13 The assembly, having destroyed the altars of idolatry, keep the feast fourteen days. 27 The priests and Levites bless the people.

31. — brought in sacrifices and thank offerings;] The sacrifices of expiation being now ended, the king desired the assembly to present such other sacrifices as they had prepared, by way of thanksgiving and acknowledgment to God, or for the entertainment of themselves and their friends. Some of these were burnt offerings, and, as such, were wholly consumed on the altar; but part of them were peace offerings, and feasted upon by the offerers, as the law permitted. Pyle.

33. — the consecrated things] That is, the things otherwise devoted to the service of God. Dr. Wells.

34. — the priests were too few,] The reason of this was, that a great many priests, tainted with the corruptions of the foregoing reign, had neglected the king's order, and did not appear prepared for the service; whereupon, as the Levites were far more zealous for the reformation, they were appointed to supply the defects of the priests, at this time, by assisting in several matters that usually belonged to the priests. Pyle.

Chap. XXX. ver. 1. — to Ephraim and Manasseh,] This expression seems to imply that, while Hezekiah sent messages to all the tribes, he sent more particularly to these two tribes, being the nearest to him, and many of them having settled themselves in the land of Judah, in the reign of Asa, chap. xv. 9. Bp. Patrick.

2. — to keep the passover in the second month.] The late king had caused such confusion in religious matters, and many of the priests and people had been so long unaccustomed to the holy services, that the preparations for the passover could not be made by

Before
CHRIST
726.

AND Hezekiah sent to all Israel and Judah, and wrote letters also to Ephraim and Manasseh, that they should come to the house of the LORD at Jerusalem; to keep the passover unto the LORD God of Israel.

2 For the king had taken counsel, and his princes, and all the congregation in Jerusalem, to keep the passover in the second month.

* Numb. 9.
10, 11.

3 For they could not keep it at that time, because the priests had not sanctified themselves sufficiently, neither had the people gathered themselves together to Jerusalem.

4 And the thing † pleased the king and all the congregation.

† Heb. was right in the eyes of the king.

5 So they established a decree to make proclamation throughout all Israel, from Beer-sheba even to Dan, that they should come to keep the passover unto the LORD God of Israel at Jerusalem: for they had not done it of a long time in such sort as it was written.

6 So the posts went with the letters † from the king and his princes throughout all Israel and Judah, and according to the commandment of the king, saying, Ye children of Israel, turn again unto the LORD God of Abraham, Isaac, and Israel, and he will return to the remnant of you, that are escaped out of the hand of the kings of Assyria.

† Heb. from the
hand.

7 And be not ye like your fathers, and like your brethren, which trespassed against the time appointed by the law, the first month, ver. 3; and accordingly it was resolved to defer it till the second, without the least apprehension of the displeasure of God, who, they knew, had dispensed on like occasions with such ritual observances. See Numb. ix. 11. Pyle.

The ten tribes had never kept the passover, in such a manner as the law prescribed, since the division of the kingdom under Jeroboam; and it appears from ver. 26, that the tribe of Judah had never kept it with such solemnity since the time of Solomon. Bp. Patrick.

5. — proclamation throughout all Israel,] We may reasonably suppose that this took place with the consent of Hoshea king of Israel; for he has the best character given of him of all the kings of Israel: and, though "he did evil in the sight of the Lord," 2 Kings xvii. 2, yet it is added in the next words, "but not as the kings of Israel that were before him;" which probably implies, that he did not prevent his subjects from attending their Divine worship at Jerusalem, as other kings had done. Dr. Wells. We should remark, as an extraordinary instance of God's goodness to His sinful people in the ten tribes, that He raised up at the very last, when they were ripe for destruction, such a king to reign over them, who did not prevent those of his subjects, who were disposed, from going to worship at Jerusalem. Bp. Patrick. The two golden calves which Jeroboam had set up were at this time taken away; that at Dan by Tiglath-pileser, and the other by Shalmaneser: on this account, the Israelites were probably better disposed at this time to go up to Jerusalem for publick worship. Bp. Wilson.

Before
CHRIST
726.

† Heb. harden not your necks.
† Heb. give the
hand.

Exod. 34.
6.

Chap. 28.
24.

† Heb. their standing

the LORD God of their fathers, who therefore gave them up to desolation, as ye see.

8 Now † be ye not stiff necked, as your fathers were, but † yield yourselves unto the LORD, and enter into his sanctuary, which he hath sanctified for ever: and serve the LORD your God, that the fierceness of his wrath may turn away from you.

9 For if ye turn again unto the LORD, your brethren and your children shall find compassion before them that lead them captive, so that they shall come again into this land: for the LORD your God is ^b gracious and merciful, and will not turn away his face from you, if ye return unto him.

10 So the posts passed from city to city through the country of Ephraim and Manasseh even unto Zebulun: but they laughed them to scorn, and mocked them.

11 Nevertheless divers of Asher and Manasseh and of Zebulun humbled themselves, and came to Jerusalem.

12 Also in Judah the hand of God was to give them one heart to do the commandment of the king and of the princes, by the word of the LORD.

13 ¶ And there assembled at Jerusalem much people to keep the feast of unleavened bread in the second month, a very great congregation.

14 And they arose and took away the ^c altars that were in Jerusalem, and all the altars for incense took they away, and cast them into the brook Kidron.

15 Then they killed the passover on the fourteenth day of the second month: and the priests and the Levites were ashamed, and sanctified themselves, and brought in the burnt offerings into the house of the LORD.

16 And they stood in † their place after their manner, according to the law of Moses the man of God: the priests sprinkled the blood, which they received of the hand of the Levites.

17 For there were many in the congregation that were not sanctified: therefore the Levites had the charge of the killing of the passovers for every one that was not clean, to sanctify them unto the LORD. Before

CHRIST
726.

18 For a multitude of the people, even many of Ephraim, and Manasseh, Issachar, and Zebulun, had not cleansed themselves, yet did they eat the passover otherwise than it was written. But Hezekiah prayed for them, saying, The good LORD pardon every one

19 That prepareth his heart to seek God, the LORD God of his fathers, though he be not cleansed according to the purification of the sanctuary.

20 And the LORD hearkened to Hezekiah, and healed the people.

21 And the children of Israel that were † present at Jerusalem kept the feast of unleavened bread seven days with great gladness: and the Levites and the priests praised the LORD day by day, singing with † loud instruments unto the LORD. † Heb.
found.

22 And Hezekiah spake † comfortably unto all the Levites that taught the good knowledge of the LORD: and they did eat throughout the feast seven days, offering peace offerings, and making confession to the LORD God of their fathers. † Heb.
instruments
of strength.
† Heb. to the heart of all, &c.

23 And the whole assembly took counsel to keep other seven days: and they kept other seven days with gladness.

24 For Hezekiah king of Judah † did give to the congregation a thousand bullocks and seven thousand sheep; and the princes gave to the congregation a thousand bullocks and ten thousand sheep: and a great number of priests sanctified themselves. † Heb.
lifted up, or,
offered.

25 And all the congregation of Judah, with the priests and the Levites, and all the congregation that came out of Israel, and the strangers that came out of the land of Israel, and that dwelt in Judah, rejoiced.

26 So there was great joy in Jerusalem: for since the time of Solomon the son of David king of Israel there was not the like in Jerusalem.

27 ¶ Then the priests the Levites arose

12. — by the word of the Lord.] They considered the command of the king and the princes on this occasion to be as a Divine command; and so it appeared to be by the mighty power of God, which wrought their hearts to a cheerful obedience. Bp. Patrick.

14. — took away the altars.] They first destroyed all the superstitious altars and images which were used for purposes of idolatry. Pyle.

17. For there were many in the congregation &c.] It was found that many of the Israelites who came up from the ten tribes to celebrate this festival, had, through long ignorance and disuse, forgotten to prepare themselves for it by certain ceremonial purifications, required by the law; but, as they appeared to come with a sincere disposition of mind towards the service of God, they were admitted to all the services, ver. 18, the king himself putting up his prayers to God, to excuse them in this matter; and accordingly their devotions were accepted, ver. 20. Pyle.

20. — and healed the people.] That is, granted them pardon, and freed them from the guilt of sin. Bp. Patrick.

27. — the priests the Levites.] This expression seems here to mean such of the Levites as were priests.

Before
CHRIST
726.

† Heb.
the habitation of his holiness.

and blessed the people: and their voice was heard, and their prayer came up to † his holy dwelling place, even unto heaven.

CHAP. XXXI.

1 The people is forward in destroying idolatry. 2 Hezekiah ordereth the courses of the priests and Levites, and provideth for their work and maintenance. 5 The people's forwardness in offerings and tithes. 11 Hezekiah appointeth officers to dispose of the tithes. 20 The sincerity of Hezekiah.

† Heb. found.
2 Kings
18. 4.
† Heb. statues.

† Heb. until to make an end.

NOW when all this was finished, all Israel that were † present went out to the cities of Judah, and ^a brake the † images in pieces, and cut down the groves, and threw down the high places and the altars out of all Judah and Benjamin, in Ephraim also and Manasseh, † until they had utterly destroyed them all. Then all the children of Israel returned, every man to his possession, into their own cities.

2 ¶ And Hezekiah appointed the courses of the priests and the Levites after their courses, every man according to his service, the priests and Levites for burnt offerings and for peace offerings, to minister, and to give thanks, and to praise in the gates of the tents of the LORD.

3 He appointed also the king's portion of his substance for the burnt offerings, to wit, for the morning and evening burnt offerings, and the burnt offerings for the sabbaths, and for the new moons, and for the set feasts, as it is written in the ^b law of the LORD.

4 Moreover he commanded the people that dwelt in Jerusalem to give the portion of the priests and the Levites, that they might be encouraged in the law of the LORD.

5 ¶ And as soon as the commandment † came abroad, the children of Israel brought in abundance the firstfruits of corn, wine, and oil, and || honey, and of all the increase of the field; and the tithe of all things brought they in abundantly.

6 And concerning the children of Israel and Judah, that dwelt in the cities of Judah, they also brought in the tithe of oxen and sheep, and the ^c tithe of holy things which were consecrated unto the LORD their God, and laid them † by heaps.

7 In the third month they began to lay the foundation of the heaps, and finished them in the seventh month.

8 And when Hezekiah and the princes came and saw the heaps, they blessed the LORD, and his people Israel.

9 Then Hezekiah questioned with the priests and the Levites concerning the heaps.

10 And Azariah the chief priest of the house of Zadok answered him, and said, Since the people began to bring the offerings into the house of the LORD, we have had enough to eat, and have left plenty: for the LORD hath blessed his people; and that which is left is this great store.

11 ¶ Then Hezekiah commanded to prepare || chambers in the house of the LORD; and they prepared them, storehouses.

|| Or,

12 And brought in the offerings and the tithes and the dedicated things faithfully: over which Cononiah the Levite was ruler, and Shimei his brother was the next.

13 And Jehiel, and Azariah, and Nathath, and Asahel, and Jerimoth, and Jozabad, and Eliel, and Ismachiah, and Mahath, and Benaiah, were overseers † under the hand of Cononiah and Shimei his brother, at the commandment of Hezekiah the king, and Azariah the ruler of the house of God.

† Heb.
at the hand.

14 And Kore the son of Imnah the Levite, the porter toward the east, was over the freewill offerings of God, to distribute the oblations of the LORD, and the most holy things.

15 And † next him were Eden, and Miniamin, and Jeshua, and Shemaiah, Amariah, and Shecaniah, in the cities of the priests, in their || set office, to give to their brethren by courses, as well to the great as to the small:

† Heb.
at his hand.

|| Or,
trust.

Chap. XXXI. ver. 1. — the high places and the altars] Those probably which Ahaz had made in all the fenced cities of Judah, chap. xxviii. 25. By destroying these monuments of idolatry, the Israelites shewed the good effects of the instruction they had received at the celebration of the passover. Pyle.

2. — in the gates of the tents of the Lord.] That is, in the Lord's house, which anciently was a tent. Bp. Patrick.

4. — to give the portion of the priests &c.] To pay punctually the dues allotted to the support of the ministers at the temple, "that they might be encouraged in the law of the Lord;" that is, that they might not grow negligent in their holy duties, through want and poverty. Pyle.

7. — they began to lay the foundation of the heaps,] They began to bring in their offerings of firstfruits in the third month, when their harvest began, and finished the tithing in the seventh month, when the harvest was ended, Exod. xxiii. 16. Bp. Patrick.

15. — to give to their brethren by courses, &c.] The persons, here mentioned, were appointed to give their due portion to their brethren, who staid in their cities "by courses," while the others came to officiate at the temple, and that, as well to "the great" or elder, as to "the small" or younger. Except (as it proceeds ver. 16) such children as, by the genealogies of the males, which were carefully kept, appeared to be three years old and upwards; for to their males "from three years old and upward," "even

Before
CHRIST
726.

16 Beside their genealogy of males, from three years old and upward, even unto every one that entereth into the house of the Lord, his daily portion for their service in their charges according to their courses;

17 Both to the genealogy of the priests by the house of their fathers, and the Levites from twenty years old and upward, in their charges by their courses;

18 And to the genealogy of all their little ones, their wives, and their sons, and their daughters, through all the congregation: for in their || set office they sanctified themselves in holiness:

|| Or,
Numb.

19 Also of the sons of Aaron the priests, which were in the fields of the suburbs of their cities, in every several city, the men that were expressed by name, to give portions to all the males among the priests, and to all that were reckoned by genealogies among the Levites.

20 ¶ And thus did Hezekiah throughout all Judah, and wrought that which was good and right and truth before the Lord his God.

21 And in every work that he began in the service of the house of God, and in the law, and in the commandments, to seek his God, he did it with all his heart, and prospered.

CHAP. XXXII.

1 Sennacherib invading Judah, Hezekiah fortifieth himself, and encourageth his people. 9 Against the blasphemies of Sennacherib, by message and letters, Hezekiah and Isaiah pray. 21 An angel destroyeth the host of the Assyrians, to the glory of Hezekiah. 24 Hezekiah praying in his sickness, God giveth him a sign of recovery. 25 He waxing proud is humbled by God. 27 His wealth and works. 31 His error in the embassy of Babylon. 32 He dying, Manasseh succeedeth him.

713.
2 Kings
18. 13, &c.
Isai. 36. 1,
&c.

AFTER ^a these things, and the establishment thereof, Sennacherib king unto every one that entereth (that is, that might enter) into the house of the Lord" with their fathers, when they came to wait in their courses, there was allowed in the temple a due portion to each priest and Levite, with his male children that came with him. Dr. Wells. Those males, that were three years old and upwards, were allowed to come into the temple with their parents, and in the distribution these were provided for, the others being passed over. Bp Patrick.

17. — from twenty years old &c.] These words relate not to the priests, but to the Levites only, who, according to the law of Moses, were not obliged to enter on their functions till they were thirty years old, Numb. iv. 3. But David, in the latter end of his reign, a little before the building of the temple, admitted them to officiate at the age of twenty years, 1 Chron. xxiii. 27. Bp. Patrick.

18. And to the genealogy of all their little ones, &c.] The above-mentioned officers gave to every family their portion; not only to of Assyria came, and entered into Judah, and encamped against the fenced cities, and thought † to win them for himself.

2 And when Hezekiah saw that Sennacherib was come, and that † he was purposed to fight against Jerusalem,

3 He took counsel with his princes and his mighty men to stop the waters of the fountains which were without the city: and they did help him.

4 So there was gathered much people together, who stopped all the fountains, and the brook that † ran through the midst of the land, saying, Why should the kings of Assyria come, and find much water?

5 Also he strengthened himself, and built up all the wall that was broken, and raised it up to the towers, and another wall without, and repaired Millo in the city of David, and made || darts and shields in abundance.

† Heb. to break
them up.
† Heb. his face was to war.

6 And he set captains of war over the people, and gathered them together to him in the street of the gate of the city, and † spake comfortably to them, saying,

7 Be strong and courageous, be not afraid nor dismayed for the king of Assyria, nor for all the multitude that is with him: for there be more with us than with him:

† Heb.
he spake to their heart.

8 With him is an ^b arm of flesh; but with us is the Lord our God to help us, and to fight our battles. And the people † rested themselves upon the words of Hezekiah king of Judah.

† Heb.
leaned.

9 ¶ ^c After this did Sennacherib king of Assyria send his servants to Jerusalem, (but he himself laid siege against Lachish, and all his † power with him,) unto Hezekiah king of Judah, and unto all Judah that were at Jerusalem, saying,

710.
^c 2 Kings
18. 17.

10 Thus saith Sennacherib king of Assyria, Whereon do ye trust, that ye abide || in the siege in Jerusalem?

† Heb.
dominion.

|| Or, in the strong hold.

the priests, but to their wives and children, of whom (as it here appears) an exact register was kept, according to which the distribution was made.

— for in their set office they sanctified themselves &c.] Rather, according to the Hebrew, "in faith," or "with fidelity, they sanctified themselves in holiness;" that is, they attended on their ministry in the house of God, not doubting but that a good and sufficient maintenance would be provided for them and their families. Bp. Patrick.

Chap. XXXII. ver. 3. — to stop the waters of the fountains] To fill up the wells and fountains with earth, so that the enemy might not know where water was to be found. Bp. Patrick.

9. — this did Sennacherib &c.] As is related at 2 Kings xviii. Hezekiah bought his peace with Sennacherib in the first instance; but the faithless Assyrian afterwards returned with his whole army against the land of Judah, and sent the insulting message following, ver. 10—16, which is there given more at length.

Before
CHRIST
710.

11 Doth not Hezekiah persuade you to give over yourselves to die by famine and by thirst, saying, The LORD our God shall deliver us out of the hand of the king of Assyria?

12 Hath not the same Hezekiah taken away his high places and his altars, and commanded Judah and Jerusalem, saying, Ye shall worship before one altar, and burn incense upon it?

13 Know ye not what I and my fathers have done unto all the people of other lands? were the gods of the nations of those lands any ways able to deliver their lands out of mine hand?

14 Who was there among all the gods of those nations that my fathers utterly destroyed, that could deliver his people out of mine hand; that your God should be able to deliver you out of mine hand?

15 Now therefore let not Hezekiah deceive you, nor persuade you on this manner, neither yet believe him: for no god of any nation or kingdom was able to deliver his people out of mine hand, and out of the hand of my fathers: how much less shall your God deliver you out of mine hand?

16 And his servants spake yet more against the LORD God, and against his servant Hezekiah.

17 He wrote also letters to rail on the LORD God of Israel, and to speak against him, saying, As the gods of the nations of other lands have not delivered their people out of mine hand, so shall not the God of Hezekiah deliver his people out of mine hand.

18 Then they cried with a loud voice in the Jews' speech unto the people of Jerusalem that were on the wall, to affright them, and to trouble them; that they might take the city.

19 And they spake against the God of Jerusalem, as against the gods of the people of the earth, which were the work of the hands of man.

20 And for this cause Hezekiah the king, and the prophet Isaiah the son of Amoz, prayed and cried to heaven.

21 ¶ And the LORD sent an angel, which cut off all the mighty men of valour, and the leaders and captains in the camp of the king of Assyria. So he returned with shame of face to his own land. And when he was come into the house of his god, they that came forth of his own bowels † slew him there with the sword.

22 Thus the LORD saved Hezekiah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem from the hand of Sennacherib the king of Assyria, and from the hand of all other, and guided them on every side.

23 And many brought gifts unto the LORD to Jerusalem, and † presents to Hezekiah king of Judah: so that he was magnified in the sight of all nations from thenceforth.

24 ¶ In those days Hezekiah was sick to the death, and prayed unto the LORD: and he spake unto him, and he † gave him a sign.

25 But Hezekiah rendered not again according to the benefit done unto him; for his heart was lifted up: therefore there was wrath upon him, and upon Judah and Jerusalem.

26 Notwithstanding Hezekiah humbled himself for † the pride of his heart, both he and the inhabitants of Jerusalem, so that the wrath of the LORD came not upon them in the days of Hezekiah.

27 ¶ And Hezekiah had exceeding much riches and honour: and he made himself treasuries for silver, and for gold, and for precious stones, and for spices, and for shields, and for all manner of † pleasant jewels;

28 Storehouses also for the increase of corn, and wine, and oil; and stalls for all manner of beasts, and cotes for flocks.

29 Moreover he provided him cities, and possessions of flocks and herds in abundance: for God had given him substance very much.

30 This same Hezekiah also stopped the upper watercourse of Gihon, and brought

Before
CHRIST
710.

2 Kings
19. 35, &c.

† Heb. made him
fall.

710.
† Heb. precious things.

715.
2 Kings
20. 1.
Isai. 38. 1.
Or, wrought a miracle for him.

† Heb.
the lifting up.

† Heb. instruments
of desire.

17. He wrote also letters] One of these is detailed at 2 Kings xix. 9—14.

21. — the Lord sent an angel,] See note at 2 Kings xix. 35.

25. But Hezekiah rendered not again &c.] Hezekiah, though relieved from his dangerous sickness in a very extraordinary manner, and with miraculous evidences of the hand of God in his behalf, was not so humble, or so grateful for the Divine mercies as he ought to have been; but imprudently boasted of his wealth, and prided himself in the compliments of the king of Babylon. Being however made sensible of the evil consequences of his folly by a severe reproof from the Prophet, he repented heartily of it, and died in peace. These particulars are more largely related at 2 Kings xx, and Isai. xxxviii, xxxix. Pyle.

This is here particularly noticed as a great blot in the character of Hezekiah. God takes very severe notice of all the unkind and unworthy returns that are made to Him for His goodness. Abp. Tillotson.

30. — stopped the upper watercourse of Gihon,] The sacred writer perhaps speaks here of the same circumstance which had been mentioned at ver. 4; which, being a work of great labour and art, he thinks fit again to notice among Hezekiah's memorable works. It is not known whether Gihon was a hill, or a

Before
CHRIST
713.

it straight down to the west side of the city of David. And Hezekiah prospered in all his works.

712.
† Heb. interpreters.
2 Kings
20. 12.
Isai. 39. 1.

31 ¶ Howbeit in the business of the ambassadors of the princes of Babylon, who sent unto him to enquire of the wonder that was done in the land, God left him, to try him, that he might know all that was in his heart.

† Heb.
kindnesses.

32 ¶ Now the rest of the acts of Hezekiah, and his goodness, behold, they are written in the vision of Isaiah the prophet, the son of Amoz, and in the book of the kings of Judah and Israel.

¶ Or, highest.

33 And Hezekiah slept with his fathers, and they buried him in the chiefest of the sepulchres of the sons of David: and all Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem did him honour at his death. And Manasseh his son reigned in his stead.

699.

CHAP. XXXIII.

1 Manasseh's wicked reign. 3 He setteth up idolatry, and would not be admonished. 11 He is carried into Babylon. 12 Upon his prayer to God he is released, and putteth down idolatry. 18 His acts. 20 He dying, Amon succeedeth him. 21 Amon reigning wickedly is slain by his servants. 25 The murderers being slain, Josiah succeedeth him.

2 Kings
21. 1, &c.

MANASSEH ^a was twelve years old when he began to reign, and he reigned fifty and five years in Jerusalem:

Deut. 18.
9.

2 But did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD, like unto the abominations of the heathen, whom the LORD had cast out before the children of Israel.

† Heb.
he returned and built.
2 Kings
13. 4.

3 ¶ For he built again the high places which Hezekiah his father had broken down, and he reared up altars for Baalim, fountain, the head of a stream. Some think it was the name, not only of a fountain, but also of an adjoining hill; the situation of which is, from the passage now before us, generally assigned to be near mount Zion, and on the west side of it. Dr. Wells.

31. Howbeit in the business &c.] Which is mentioned at large, 2 Kings xx. 12; Isai. xxxix. 1.

God left him, to try him, &c.] God left him wholly to the inclinations of his own heart, that he might have a trial of its corruption when left to itself, that so he might be led to entertain a humble opinion of his own piety, and to behave himself in a lowly and thankful manner towards God, for all the good he was enabled to do. Dr. Wells. In this circumstance of his life was the most remarkable instance of Hezekiah's miscarriage; a case which tried his heart to the bottom, and may well serve to shew us how apt the greatest men are to be dazzled by temporal grandeur, without the utmost care and watchfulness over themselves. Pyle.

to try him,] That is, to shew him to himself, that he might see his own weakness, and be more humbled. Bp. Wilson.

Chap. XXXIII. ver. 9. — and to do worse than the heathen,] A and made groves, and worshipped all the host of heaven, and served them.

Before
CHRIST
698.

4 Also he built altars in the house of the LORD, whereof the LORD had said, ^d In Jerusalem shall my name be for ever.

^d Deut. 12.
11.

5 And he built altars for all the host of heaven in the two courts of the house of the LORD.

1 Kings 8.
29. & 9. 3.
chap. 6. 6.
& 7. 16.

6 And he caused his children to pass through the fire in the valley of the son of Hinnom: also he observed times, and used enchantments, and used witchcraft, and dealt with a familiar spirit, and with wizards: he wrought much evil in the sight of the LORD, to provoke him to anger.

7 And he set a carved image, the idol which he had made, in the house of God, of which God had said to David and to Solomon his son, In ^e this house, and in Jerusalem, which I have chosen before all the tribes of Israel, will I put my name for ever:

^e Psal. 132.
14.

8 ^f Neither will I any more remove the foot of Israel from out of the land which I have appointed for your fathers; so that they will take heed to do all that I have commanded them, according to the whole law and the statutes and the ordinances by the hand of Moses.

^f 2 Sam. 7.
10.

9 So Manasseh made Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem to err, and to do worse than the heathen, whom the LORD had destroyed before the children of Israel.

10 And the LORD spake to Manasseh, and to his people: but they would not hearken.

11 ¶ Wherefore the LORD brought upon them the captains of the host [†] of the king of Assyria, which took Manasseh among 677.

† Heb. which were the king's.

most prodigious and unhappy change is this, from the height of piety in the father's time, to the worst and most degrading impiety. Bp. Patrick.

11. Wherefore the Lord brought upon them] These remarkable circumstances in the life of Manasseh were not mentioned in the book of Kings. In what year of his reign his captivity took place, and what were the circumstances and duration of it, is not related. Thus much we find here recorded, that his adversity opened his eyes to his miscarriages and impieties, and in the bitterness of his soul he sent up so many deep sighs and earnest prayers to heaven, that he at length obtained his pardon, and a happy deliverance out of captivity. After this, (see ver. 12, &c.) from the greatest sinner he became the greatest penitent; and from the bloodiest tyrant, one of the best of monarchs; so that, after his return, he bestowed his whole time and application in repairing the damages which his impiety had caused, both in religion and in his government. Universal History.

took Manasseh among the thorns,] Took him in a thicket, where he had hid himself after his defeat. Bp. Patrick. Some old translations give the sense, "Took Manasseh in chains, and bound him with fetters, and carried him to Babylon." This sense is by

^{Before}
^{CHRIST}
677. the thorns, and bound him with || fetters,
and carried him to Babylon.

|| Or, chains. 12 And when he was in affliction, he besought the LORD his God, and humbled himself greatly before the God of his fathers,

13 And prayed unto him : and he was intreated of him, and heard his supplication, and brought him again to Jerusalem into his kingdom. Then Manasseh knew that the LORD he was God.

14 Now after this he built a wall without the city of David, on the west side of Gihon, in the valley, even to the entering in at the fish gate, and compassed about || Ophel, and raised it up a very great height, and put captains of war in all the fenced cities of Judah.

15 And he took away the strange gods, and the idol out of the house of the LORD, and all the altars that he had built in the mount of the house of the LORD, and in Jerusalem, and cast them out of the city.

16 And he repaired the altar of the LORD, and sacrificed thereon peace offerings and thank offerings, and commanded Judah to serve the LORD God of Israel.

many supposed to be the true sense, from its being deemed improbable that such a circumstance as his being taken by his enemies "among the thorns" should be mentioned in Scripture. Dr. Wall.

12. — when he was in affliction, he besought the Lord] Manasseh might now say with his grandfather David, "It is good for me that I have been afflicted." His prison was now a more happy place for him than his palace; Babylon a better school than Jerusalem. What fools are we to frown on our afflictions! These, how severe soever, are our best friends. They are not indeed for our present pleasure, but they are for our lasting profit. Bp. Hall.

13. — and he was intreated of him,] We wonder not at Manasseh sinning or repenting; we wonder at the goodness of God, who thus graciously called him to repent, and so received him repenting; that, as he had before been a most loathsome and monstrous spectacle of wickedness, he now became a pleasing and useful pattern of conversion. Who can despair of the mercy of God that sees the tears of a Manasseh accepted? The wickedness of men can never equal the goodness of God. Bp. Hall.

— Then Manasseh knew that the Lord he was God.] Foolish sinners pay dear for their knowledge. Till his own smart and cure, Manasseh knew not that the Lord was God. The Almighty will be sure to be known for what He is, if not by His kindness, at least by His severity. If our prosperity and peace and sweet experience of His mercy can win us to acknowledge Him, it is more for our ease; but if we will needs be taught by stripes, it is more for His glory. Bp. Hall.

The repentance of Manasseh should be well considered, as it represents on one hand the necessity and advantage of afflictions, and on the other affords us an extraordinary instance of God's mercy to the greatest sinners, when they humble themselves and make a good use of their corrections. Let us likewise seriously attend to Manasseh's behaviour after his restoration, which was directly opposite to his former conduct; for during a long reign he remedied the faults he had committed in his youth. True repentance consists in removing and remedying, as much as possible, the evil we have done, and in amending our lives. That we 17 Nevertheless the people did sacrifice still in the high places, yet unto the LORD their God only.

18 ¶ Now the rest of the acts of Manasseh, and his prayer unto his God, and the words of the seers that spake to him in the name of the LORD God of Israel, behold, they are written in the book of the kings of Israel.

19 His prayer also, and how God was intreated of him, and all his sins, and his trespass, and the places wherein he built high places, and set up groves and graven images, before he was humbled : behold, they are written among the sayings of || the seers.

20 ¶ So Manasseh slept with his fathers, and they buried him in his own house : and Amon his son reigned in his stead.

21 ¶ ² Amon was two and twenty years old when he began to reign, and reigned two years in Jerusalem.

22 But he did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD, as did Manasseh his father : for Amon sacrificed unto all the carved images which Manasseh his father had made, and served them;

^{Before}
^{CHRIST}
677.

|| Or,
Hosai.

² Kings
21. 19, &c.

may the better enter into these reflections, we should add to the reading of this chapter, the prayer which Manasseh made while a captive in Babylon, which we find in the Apocryphal books. Ostervald.

15. — he took away the strange gods, &c.] He had profaned the house of the Lord, but had not shut the doors, as Ahaz did; therefore he is said only to have purged it from idols, and not to have opened it. "The idol" is that which he is related at ver. 7. to have made. Bp. Patrick.

16. — commanded Judah to serve the Lord] This was a proof of the sincerity of his repentance, that he endeavoured to bring his people back to the service of God, whom he himself had misled to the service of idols. But, unhappily, he was unable wholly to undo the mischief he had caused: for the people still continued their evil inclinations, and were not perfect in their obedience to the Divine law, ver. 17. Bp. Patrick.

19. His prayer also,] This evidently alludes to some prayer of his composing, which was kept on record. Accordingly, we have among the Apocryphal books of the Old Testament, "the Prayer of Manasseh," which perhaps is that to which allusion is made; it expresses in the strongest possible terms the greatness of his guilt, misery, and repentance. Universal History.

— the sayings of the seers.] Bruce informs us, that in Abyssinia "the king has near his person an officer, who is meant to be his historiographer. He is also keeper of his seal; and is obliged to make a journal of the king's actions, good or bad, without comment of his own upon them. This, when the king dies, or at least soon after, is delivered to the council, who read it over, and erase every thing false in it, whilst they supply every material fact that may have been omitted, whether purposely or not." It is not improbable that "the king's seer," 1 Chron. xxi 9; xxv. 5; 2 Chron. xxv. 15, &c. may have been the person who occupied the post of regal historiographer; whence other writers of memoirs might also be called "seers:" this opinion is corroborated by what is here said of Manasseh. It is remarkable that the title "seer" occurs principally, if not altogether, under the regal government of Israel. Fragments to Calmet.

Before
CHRIST
677.
† Heb. multiplied
trespass.

23 And humbled not himself before the LORD, as Manasseh his father had humbled himself; but Amon † trespassed more and more.

24 And his servants conspired against him, and slew him in his own house.

641.

25 ¶ But the people of the land slew all them that had conspired against king Amon; and the people of the land made Josiah his son king in his stead.

CHAP. XXXIV.

1 Josiah's good reign. 3 He destroyeth idolatry. 8 He taketh order for the repair of the temple. 14 Hilkiah having found a book of the law, Josiah sendeth to Huldah to enquire of the Lord. 23 Huldah prophesieth the destruction of Jerusalem, but respites thereof in Josiah's time. 29 Josiah, causing it to be read in a solemn assembly, reneweth the covenant with God.

* 2 Kings:
22. 1, &c.

JOSIAH ^a was eight years old when he began to reign, and he reigned in Jerusalem one and thirty years.

2 And he did that which was right in the sight of the LORD, and walked in the ways of David his father, and declined neither to the right hand, nor to the left.

634.

3 ¶ For in the eighth year of his reign, while he was yet young, he began to seek after the God of David his father: and in the twelfth year he began ^b to purge Judah and Jerusalem from the high places, and the groves, and the carved images, and the molten images.

* 1 Kings
13. 2.
630.

* Lev. 26.
30.
¶ Or,
sun images.

4 ^c And they brake down the altars of Baalim in his presence; and the ^d images, that were on high above them, he cut down; and the groves, and the carved images, and the molten images, he brake in pieces, and made dust of them, and strowed it upon the ^e graves of them that had sacrificed unto them.

† Heb. face of the graves.

5 And he burnt the bones of the priests upon their altars, and cleansed Judah and Jerusalem.

6 And so did he in the cities of Manasseh, and Ephraim, and Simeon, even unto Naphtali, with their ^f mattocks round about.

¶ Or,
mounds.

7 And when he had broken down the altars and the groves, and had beaten the graven images ^g into powder, and cut down all the idols throughout all the land of Israel, he returned to Jerusalem.

† Heb. to make powder.

624.

8 ¶ Now in the eighteenth year of his reign, when he had purged the land, and

Before
CHRIST
621.

the house, he sent Shaphan the son of Azariah, and Maaseiah the governor of the city, and Joah the son of Joahaz the recorder, to repair the house of the LORD his God.

9 And when they came to Hilkiah the high priest, they delivered the money that was brought into the house of God, which the Levites that kept the doors had gathered of the hand of Manasseh and Ephraim, and of all the remnant of Israel, and of all Judah and Benjamin; and they returned to Jerusalem.

10 And they put it in the hand of the workmen that had the oversight of the house of the LORD, and they gave it to the workmen that wrought in the house of the LORD, to repair and amend the house:

11 Even to the artificers and builders gave they it, to buy hewn stone, and timber for couplings, and ^h to floor the houses which the kings of Judah had destroyed.

¶ Or,
to raster.

12 And the men did the work faithfully: and the overseers of them were Jathath and Obadiah, the Levites, of the sons of Merari; and Zechariah and Meshullam, of the sons of the Kohathites, to set it forward; and other of the Levites, all that could skill of instruments of musick.

13 Also they were over the bearers of burdens, and were overseers of all that wrought the work in any manner of service: and of the Levites there were scribes, and officers, and porters.

14 ¶ And when they brought out the money that was brought into the house of the LORD, Hilkiah the priest ⁱ found a book of the law of the LORD given ^j by Moses.

* 2 Kings
22. 8, &c.
† Heb. by
the hand of,

15 And Hilkiah answered and said to Shaphan the scribe, I have found the book of the law in the house of the LORD. And Hilkiah delivered the book to Shaphan.

16 And Shaphan carried the book to the king, and brought the king word back again, saying, All that was committed ^k to thy servants, they do it.

† Heb. to
the hand of.

17 And they have ^l gathered together the money that was found in the house of the LORD, and have delivered it into the hand of the overseers, and to the hand of the workmen.

† Heb. poured out,
or, melted.

18 Then Shaphan the scribe told the king, saying, Hilkiah the priest hath given

Chap. XXXIV. ver. 4. — the altars — and the images, that were on high above them,] Among the Gentiles, the altars frequently served as footstools to the idols themselves, which were placed upon or above them. Jos. Mede.

Before
CHRIST
624. me a book. And Shaphan read † it before the king.

† Heb. in it. 19 And it came to pass, when the king had heard the words of the law, that he rent his clothes.

‖ Or, Achbor, 2 Kings 22. 12. 20 And the king commanded Hilkiah, and Abikam the son of Shaphan, and ‖ Abdon the son of Micah, and Shaphan the scribe, and Asaiah a servant of the king's, saying,

21 Go, enquire of the LORD for me, and for them that are left in Israel and in Judah, concerning the words of the book that is found: for great is the wrath of the LORD that is poured out upon us, because our fathers have not kept the word of the LORD, to do after all that is written in this book.

‖ Or, Harhas, 2 Kings 22. 14. † Heb. garments. ‖ Or, in the school, or, in the second part. 22 And Hilkiah, and they that the king had appointed, went to Huldah the prophetess, the wife of Shallum the son of Tikvath, the son of ‖ Hasrah, keeper of the † wardrobe; (now she dwelt in Jerusalem ‖ in the college:) and they spake to her to that effect.

23 ¶ And she answered them, Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, Tell ye the man that sent you to me,

24 Thus saith the LORD, Behold, I will bring evil upon this place, and upon the inhabitants thereof, even all the curses that are written in the book which they have read before the king of Judah:

25 Because they have forsaken me, and have burned incense unto other gods, that they might provoke me to anger with all the works of their hands; therefore my wrath shall be poured out upon this place, and shall not be quenched.

26 And as for the king of Judah, who sent you to enquire of the LORD, so shall ye say unto him, Thus saith the LORD God of Israel concerning the words which thou hast heard;

27 Because thine heart was tender, and thou didst humble thyself before God, when thou heardest his words against this place, and against the inhabitants thereof, and humbledst thyself before me, and didst rend thy clothes, and weep before me; I have even heard thee also, saith the LORD.

Before
CHRIST
624. 28 Behold, I will gather thee to thy fathers, and thou shalt be gathered to thy grave in peace, neither shall thine eyes see all the evil that I will bring upon this place, and upon the inhabitants of the same. So they brought the king word again.

29 ¶ ^c Then the king sent and gathered together all the elders of Judah and Jerusalem. ^c 2 Kings 23. 1.

30 And the king went up into the house of the LORD, and all the men of Judah, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem, and the priests, and the Levites, and all the people, † great and small: and he read in their ears all the words of the book of the covenant that was found in the house of the LORD. ^{† Heb. from great even to small.}

31 And the king stood in his place, and made a covenant before the LORD, to walk after the LORD, and to keep his commandments, and his testimonies, and his statutes, with all his heart, and with all his soul, to perform the words of the covenant which are written in this book.

32 And he caused all that were † present in Jerusalem and Benjamin to stand to it. And the inhabitants of Jerusalem did according to the covenant of God, the God of their fathers. ^{† Heb. found.}

33 And Josiah took away all the abominations out of all the countries that per-tained to the children of Israel, and made all that were present in Israel to serve, even to serve the LORD their God. And all his days they departed not † from following the LORD, the God of their fathers. ^{† Heb. from after.}

CHAP. XXXV.

1 Josiah keepeth a most solemn passover. 20 He, provoking Pharaoh-necho, is slain at Megiddo. 25 Lamentations for Josiah.

MOREOVER ^a Josiah kept a passover ^{about 623.} unto the LORD in Jerusalem: and ^a 2 Kings 23. 21, 22. they killed the passover on the ^b fourteenth ^b Exod. 12. 6. day of the first month.

2 And he set the priests in their charges, and encouraged them to the service of the house of the LORD,

3 And said unto the Levites that taught all Israel, which were holy unto the LORD, Put the holy ark in the house which Solo-

30. — the priests, and the Levites,] At 2 Kings xxiii. 2, it is said, "the priests and the Prophets;" probably it is meant, that all the priests and Levites went, amongst whom were some Prophets. Bp. Patrick.

32. And he caused] He induced by his example and authority. Dr. Wells.

Chap. XXXV. ver. 1. — Josiah kept a passover] This celebration of the passover is here detailed at some length, which was briefly mentioned at 2 Kings xxiii. 21, 22.

3. — Put the holy ark in the house] It is the opinion of some, that Manasseh or his son Amon had removed the ark from its place, among other enormities of which they were guilty; and

Before
CHRIST
about 623.

mon the son of David king of Israel did build; it shall not be a burden upon your shoulders: serve now the LORD your God, and his people Israel,

^c 1 Chron.
9. 10. &
1 Chron.
2. & 24. &
25. & 26.
^d Chap. 8.
14.

4 And prepare yourselves by the ^c houses of your fathers, after your courses, according to the writing of David king of Israel, and according to the ^d writing of Solomon his son.

† Heb.
the house of the fathers.
† Heb.
the sons of the people.

5 And stand in the holy place according to the divisions of † the families of the fathers of your brethren † the people, and after the division of the families of the Levites.

6 So kill the passover, and sanctify yourselves, and prepare your brethren, that they may do according to the word of the LORD by the hand of Moses.

† Heb.
offered.

7 And Josiah † gave to the people, of the flock, lambs and kids, all for the passover offerings, for all that were present, to the number of thirty thousand, and three thousand bullocks: these were of the king's substance.

† Heb.
offered.

8 And his princes † gave willingly unto the people, to the priests, and to the Levites: Hilkiah and Zechariah and Jehiel, rulers of the house of God, gave unto the priests for the passover offerings two thousand and six hundred small cattle, and three hundred oxen.

† Heb.
offered.

9 Conaniah also, and Shemaiah and Nethaneel, his brethren, and Hashabiah and Jeiel and Jozabad, chief of the Levites, † gave unto the Levites for passover offerings five thousand small cattle, and five hundred oxen.

10 So the service was prepared, and the priests stood in their place, and the Levites in their courses, according to the king's commandment.

^c See chap.
29. 31.

11 And they killed the passover, and the priests sprinkled the blood from their hands, and the Levites ^c flayed them.

12 And they removed the burnt offerings, that they might give according to the divisions of the families of the people, to offer unto the LORD, as it is written in the book of Moses. And so did they with the oxen.

Before
CHRIST
about 623.

13 And they ^f roasted the passover with fire according to the ordinance: but the other holy offerings sod they in pots, and in caldrons, and in pans, and † divided them speedily among all the people.

^f Exod. 12.
3. 9.

† Heb. made them run.

14 And afterward they made ready for themselves, and for the priests: because the priests the sons of Aaron were busied in offering of burnt offerings and the fat until night; therefore the Levites prepared for themselves, and for the priests the sons of Aaron.

15 And the singers the sons of Asaph were in their † place, according to the ^e commandment of David, and Asaph, and Heman, and Jeduthun the king's seer; and the porters ^b waited at every gate; they might not depart from their service; for their brethren the Levites prepared for them.

† Heb. station.
^e 1 Chron.
25. 1. &c.

^b 1 Chron.
9. 17. &
26. 14.

16 So all the service of the LORD was prepared the same day, to keep the passover, and to offer burnt offerings upon the altar of the LORD, according to the commandment of king Josiah.

17 And the children of Israel that were † present kept the passover at that time, and the feast of unleavened bread seven days.

† Heb.
found.

18 And there was no passover like to that kept in Israel from the days of Samuel the prophet; neither did all the kings of Israel keep such a passover as Josiah kept, and the priests, and the Levites, and all Judah and Israel that were present, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem.

19 In the eighteenth year of the reign of Josiah was this passover kept.

610.

20 ¶ After all this, when Josiah had prepared the † temple, Necho king of Egypt came up to fight against Charchemish by Euphrates: and Josiah went out against him.

ⁱ 2 Kings
23. 29.
† Heb.
house.

21 But he sent ambassadors to him, say-this may be the meaning of the words at 2 Chron. xxxiii. 23, "Amon trespassed more and more." But it is perhaps a more probable supposition, that Hilkiah himself had removed the ark while the temple was repairing, as the most holy place, as well as other parts, might require reparation, and it was not fit to suffer the ark to be exposed to the workmen. Bp. Patrick.

18. — there was no passover like to that] This was the largest passover feast, if we consider it with respect to the king's generosity, that ever was celebrated, from the first beginning of the Israelitish monarchy, in the days of the famous Samuel the Prophet, to this time. For, although such wealthier monarchs as David and Solomon might keep greater festivals as to numbers of people and sacrifices, yet none of them treated the people at their own cost, in so liberal and zealous a manner, as this prince did, nor had the whole nation so unanimously concurring in the measure. Pyle.

20. After all this, &c.] Some time after this, when the temple was repaired and made fit for the service of God, and the people had a reasonable expectation of great happiness to ensue after such pious works, there came a most unforeseen change, which is here perhaps noted particularly to teach us, never to be too confident, nor rashly to engage in any enterprise, bearing in mind the uncertainty of all earthly affairs. Bp. Patrick.

— Charchemish] This is thought to be a place known to the Greeks and Romans under the name of Circesium. Dr. Wells.

Before
CHRIST
about 610.
† Heb.
the house of my war.

ing, What have I to do with thee, thou king of Judah? I come not against thee this day, but against † the house wherewith I have war: for God commanded me to make haste: forbear thee from meddling with God, who is with me, that he destroy thee not.

22 Nevertheless Josiah would not turn his face from him, but disguised himself, that he might fight with him, and hearkened not unto the words of Necho from the mouth of God, and came to fight in the valley of Megiddo.

23 And the archers shot at king Josiah; and the king said to his servants, Have me away; for I am sore † wounded.

† Heb.
made sick.

24 His servants therefore took him out of that chariot, and put him in the second chariot that he had; and they brought him to Jerusalem, and he died, and was buried || in one of the sepulchres of his fathers. And ^k all Judah and Jerusalem mourned for Josiah.

|| Or, among the sepulchres.
^k Zech. 12.
11.

25 ¶ And Jeremiah lamented for Josiah: and all the singing men and the singing women spake of Josiah in their lamentations to this day, and made them an ordinance in Israel: and, behold, they are written in the lamentations.

26 Now the rest of the acts of Josiah, and his † goodness, according to that which was written in the law of the LORD,

† Heb.
kindnesses.

27 And his deeds, first and last, behold, they are written in the book of the kings of Israel and Judah.

CHAP. XXXVI.

1 Jehoahaz succeeding is deposed by Pharaoh, and carried into Egypt. 5 Jehoiakim reigning ill is carried bound into Babylon. 9 Jehoiachin succeeding reigneth ill, and is brought into Babylon. 11 Zedekiah succeeding reigneth ill, and despiseth the prophets, and rebelleth against Nebuchadnezzar. 14 Jerusalem, for the sins of the priests and people, is wholly destroyed. 22 The proclamation of Cyrus.

610.
^a 2 Kings
23, 30, &c.

THEN ^a the people of the land took Jehoahaz the son of Josiah, and made him king in his father's stead in Jerusalem.

Before
CHRIST
610.

2 Jehoahaz was twenty and three years old when he began to reign, and he reigned three months in Jerusalem.

3 And the king of Egypt † put him down at Jerusalem, and † condemned the land in an hundred talents of silver and a talent of gold.

† Heb. removed
him.
† Heb.
multitud.

4 And the king of Egypt made Eliakim his brother king over Judah and Jerusalem, and turned his name to Jehoiakim. And Necho took Jehoahaz his brother, and carried him to Egypt.

5 ¶ Jehoiakim was twenty and five years old when he began to reign, and he reigned eleven years in Jerusalem: and he did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD his God.

610.

6 Against him came up Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon, and bound him in || fetters, to carry him to Babylon.

607.
|| Or,
chains.
606.

7 ^b Nebuchadnezzar also carried of the vessels of the house of the LORD to Babylon, and put them in his temple at Babylon.

^b 2 Kings
24, 13.
Dan. 1, 1, 2.

8 Now the rest of the acts of Jehoiakim, and his abominations which he did, and that which was found in him, behold, they are written in the book of the kings of Israel and Judah: and || Jehoiachin his son reigned in his stead.

599.
|| Or,
Jechoniah,
1 Chron. 3.
16, or,
Coniah,
Jer. 22, 24.
^c 2 Kings
24, 8.

9 ¶ ^c Jehoiachin was eight years old when he began to reign, and he reigned three months and ten days in Jerusalem: and he did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD.

10 And † when the year was expired, king Nebuchadnezzar sent, and brought him to Babylon, with the † goodly vessels of the house of the LORD, and made || Zedekiah his brother king over Judah and Jerusalem.

† Heb. at the return of the year.
† Heb. vessels of desire.
599.

11 ¶ ^d Zedekiah was one and twenty years old when he began to reign, and reigned eleven years in Jerusalem.

|| Or,
Mattaniah,
2 Kings 24.
17.
Jer. 37, 1.
^d Jer. 52, 1,
&c.
2 Kings 24.
18.

12 And he did that which was evil in the

21. — for God commanded me to make haste:] Some think that the king of Egypt made this pretence because he knew that Josiah had a great reverence towards God; and, in obedience to Him, might desist from his purpose. Or perhaps he meant, that he felt a strong impulse to the undertaking, which he took to be from God. Bp. Patrick. Or, by "God" he means the oracles which he himself consulted as divine. Bp. Wilson.

25. — they are written in the lamentations.] The lamentations here mentioned, written immediately after the death of Josiah, are now lost. They are certainly not those which we now have under the name of the "Lamentations of Jeremiah;" for these plainly refer to the destruction of Jerusalem, and to Zedekiah, not to Josiah. Bp. Patrick.

Chap. XXXVI. ver. 7. — carried of the vessels &c.] He carried away a great many in the next king's reign, (2 Kings xxiv. 13, 14,) but he began to do it in this. The people, it appears, were so hardened, as to believe those false prophets, who assured them these vessels would soon be brought again from Babylon, and to give no credit to Jeremiah, who, warning them of the falsehood of what these prophets foretold, said, that so far would it be from happening that these vessels would be brought back from Babylon, that the remaining vessels should be carried after them, and there remain till the day when God visited His people. See Jerem. xxvii. 16, 17, 21, 22. Bp. Patrick.

9. — was eight years old] See note at 2 Kings xxiv. 8.

^{Before} CH R I S T 592. sight of the LORD his God, and humbled not himself before Jeremiah the prophet speaking from the mouth of the LORD.

593. 13 And he also rebelled against king Nebuchadnezzar, who had made him swear by God: but he stiffened his neck, and hardened his heart from turning unto the LORD God of Israel.

14 ¶ Moreover all the chief of the priests, and the people, transgressed very much after all the abominations of the heathen; and polluted the house of the LORD which he had hallowed in Jerusalem.

^{c Jer. 25. 3. & 36. 15. † Heb. by the hand of his messengers. † That is, continually and carefully.} 15 ^e And the LORD God of their fathers sent to them † by his messengers, rising up ^{betimes}, and sending; because he had compassion on his people, and on his dwelling place:

16 But they mocked the messengers of God, and despised his words, and misused his prophets, until the wrath of the LORD arose against his people, till there was no † remedy.

^{† Heb. healing. 594. 1 2 Kings 25. 1, &c. 588.} 17 ^f Therefore he brought upon them the king of the Chaldees, who slew their young men with the sword in the house of their sanctuary, and had no compassion upon young man or maiden, old man, or him that stooped for age: he gave them all ^{Before} CH R I S T 588. into his hand.

18 And all the vessels of the house of God, great and small, and the treasures of the house of the LORD, and the treasures of the king, and of his princes; all these he brought to Babylon.

19 And they burnt the house of God, and brake down the wall of Jerusalem, and burnt all the palaces thereof with fire, and destroyed all the goodly vessels thereof.

20 And † them that had escaped from the sword carried he away to Babylon; where they were servants to him and his sons until the reign of the kingdom of Persia: ^{† Heb. the remainder from the sword.}

21 To fulfil the word of the LORD by the mouth of ^e Jeremiah, until the land ^g had enjoyed her sabbaths: for as long as she lay desolate she kept sabbath, to fulfil threescore and ten years. ^{g Jer. 25. 9, 12, & 29. 10. h Lev. 26. 34, 35, 43.}

22 ¶ ⁱ Now in the first year of Cyrus king of Persia, that the word of the LORD ^j spoken by the mouth of ^k Jeremiah might be accomplished, the LORD stirred up the ^{i 536. † Ezra 1. 1. j Jer. 25. 12, 13, & 29. 10.}

15. — rising up betimes.] To “rise betimes” signifies in Scripture to do a thing with care, diligence, and affection: for good fathers of families, from whom this expression is taken, were wont to get up early to look after their business, and to quicken and encourage their servants to their duty. Such was the compassion and care of God for His people, that He gave them seasonable and timely admonitions to their duty, and notice of their danger, before it was too late. To this compassion and care of God it was owing that they were blessed with a succession of Prophets in the reign of every king, who most earnestly called upon them to reform. Yet, so strange was their unhappy propensity to idolatry, that, even when, under a good king, they became a little better, they soon relapsed, on the succession of a wicked king, into their former evil courses. Bp. Patrick.

16. But they mocked the messengers of God, &c.] That which made the calamities of the Israelites incurable, was their continual mocking or despising the messengers of their peace, which God sent from time to time to heal them. So that the calamities which ensued were not the end intended by God, in sending His messengers to them, but the fruit and effect of their mocking and despising both physicians and medicines. Dr. Jackson.

21. — until the land had enjoyed her sabbaths:] During this period, the land of Judah, together with that of Israel, whose inhabitants had so grossly neglected to observe the sabbaths, and other ordinances of their happy religion and constitution, was left to keep sabbaths in the melancholy sense of the word, that is, to lie uncultivated in rest and silent desolation, as the Prophet Jeremiah foretold, (Jer. xxv. 9, 12, &c.) and as Moses had long ago foretold, Levit. xxvi. 33—35. Pyle.

It should be observed, that in this very expression of the land enjoying her sabbaths, the promise of a restoration is conveyed. For the expression implies merely a temporary rest, and not a total dereliction. Dr. Berriman.

— she kept sabbath.] Thus was the land left desolate, that it might enjoy its sabbatical years of rest, of which it had been defrauded by the avarice and disobedience of the Jews, fulfilling the early denunciation of Moses, Levit. xxvi. 34, and the later of Jeremiah, 2 Chron. xxxvi. 21; and it is truly remarkable, that Nebuchadnezzar left it in that state, and did not attempt again to people it, as the policy of the kings of Assyria had led them to do in Samaria. The land therefore lay still vacant for their reception against their return; the providence of the God of Judah insensibly overruling the counsels and decrees of that haughty and arrogant conqueror, whom He had raised up to be the scourge of His chosen people, when their apostasies and abominations rendered them unworthy of His tutelar care and protection; and they were transported into captivity “for their good,” Jer. xxiv. 5. There they were cured of the idolatrous infection they had imbibed in Egypt, and renewed in Canaan, in the course of seventy years; when the remnant that returned were purified in the furnace of affliction, and had purged away a part of their dross, Isai. i. 25. Dr. Hales.

— to fulfil threescore and ten years.] This calamitous punishment was to continue for the space of seventy years, till the period when the Babylonian empire was to end, and the Persian to begin. Accordingly, on the very first year of the conquest of Babylon (where the Jews remained captive) by the great Cyrus, and of his residing in that city, ver. 22, 23, the just and merciful Providence of Heaven so ordered it, from many concurring circumstances, that this emperour, being well inclined to favour this captive people, issued a proclamation of licence and authority for them all to return to their own country; declaring himself obliged by the same great good-will of Heaven which had bestowed the universal empire on him, to assist this nation, restore them to their ancient habitation, and by his protection enable them to rebuild their famous temple at Jerusalem. Accordingly, he not only permitted, but encouraged the Jews of all descriptions to return home and set about that work, with all hearty wishes for their prosperity therein. Pyle.

22. Now in the first year of Cyrus &c.] These last verses of Chronicles are the same as those which begin the ensuing book of Ezra. It seems probable that Ezra, having some years before written the book that bears his name, and afterwards writing these books of Chronicles, which contain the genealogies and history ending at the time when the other began, annexed to the end of these books the first paragraph of that. Dr. Wall.

Before
CHRIST
536. spirit of Cyrus king of Persia, that he made a proclamation throughout all his kingdom, and put it also in writing, saying,

23 Thus saith Cyrus king of Persia, All the kingdoms of the earth hath the LORD

God of heaven given me; and he hath charged me to build him an house in Jerusalem, which is in Judah. Who is there among you of all his people? The LORD his God be with him, and let him go up.

Before
CHRIST
536.

The following is a list of the Kings of Israel and Judah, with the dates when they respectively began to reign. As has been stated in the notes, there are some doubts with respect to the beginning and end of some of the reigns, principally owing to the circumstance of the succeeding king being frequently associated in the kingdom before the death of his predecessor.

Years before Christ.		KINGS OF THE TWELVE TRIBES.
	1095	-	-	-	Saul.
	1055	-	-	-	David.
	1015	-	-	-	Solomon.
Years before Christ.		KINGS OF JUDAH.		KINGS OF ISRAEL.
975	Rehoboam.	—		Jeroboam.
958	Abijam.	—
955	Asa.	—
954	—		Nadab.
953	—		Baasha.
930	—		Elah.
929	—		Zimri.
929	—		Omri.
918	—		Ahab.
914	Jehoshaphat.	—
898	—		Ahaziah.
896	—		Jehoram (or Joram.)
892	Jehoram (or Joram.)	—
885	Ahaziah.	—
884	Athaliah.	—		Jehu.
878	Joash.	—
856	—		Jehoahaz.
841	—		Jehoash (or Joash.)
839	Amaziah.	—
825	—		Jeroboam II.
810	Azariah (or Uzziah.)	—
773	—		Zachariah.
772	—		Shallum.
772	—		Menahem.
761	—		Pekahiah.
759	—		Pekah.
758	Jotham.	—
742	Ahaz.	—
740	—		First Captivity of Israel by Tiglath-pileser.
—	—		An Interregnum.
730	—		Hoshea.
726	Hezekiah.	—
721	—		Second Captivity of Israel by Shalmaneser.
698	Manasseh.	—
678	—		Third Captivity of Israel by Esar-haddon.
643	Amon.	—
641	Josiah.	—
610	Jehoahaz.	—
610	Jehoiakim.	—
606	First Captivity of Judah.	—
599	Jehoiachin (otherwise Co-	— niah and Jeconiah.)	—
599	Second Captivity of Judah.	—
599	Zedekiah.	—
588	Third and final Captivity	—
	of Judah and of the re-	— mains of Israel.	—

E Z R A.

INTRODUCTION.

THIS book derives its name from Ezra, the author of it. It begins with the repetition of the last two verses of the second book of Chronicles, and carries the Jewish history through a period of seventy-nine years, commencing from the edict of Cyrus. The first six chapters contain an account of the return of the Jews under Zerubbabel, after the captivity of seventy years; of their reestablishment in Judea, and of the building and dedication of the temple at Jerusalem. In the last four chapters Ezra relates his own appointment to the government of Judea by Artaxerxes Longimanus; his journey thither from Babylon; the disobedience of the Jews; and the reform which he immediately effected among them. It is to be observed, that between the dedication of the temple and the departure of Ezra, that is, between the 6th and 7th chapters of this book, there was an interval of about fifty-eight years, during which nothing is here related concerning the Jews, except that, contrary to God's command, they intermarried with Gentiles.

This book is written in Chaldee from the 8th verse of the 4th chapter to the 27th verse of the 7th chapter. It is probable that the sacred historian used the Chaldee language in this part of his work, because it contains chiefly letters and decrees written in that language, the original words of which he might think it right to record; and indeed the people, who were recently returned from the Babylonian captivity, were at least as familiar with the Chaldee, as they were with the Hebrew tongue.

This book is written with all the spirit and fidelity that could be displayed by a writer of contemporary events. The sacred writers pass over the time of the captivity as a sad period of affliction and punishment: during which, if the people were indulged in the exercise of their religion, they had few historical events to record; and therefore we have no general history of their circumstances; and must have recourse to the books of those illustrious Prophets who flourished among them in Assyria, for the only particulars that can be obtained concerning their condition.

Ezra was of the sacerdotal family, a descendant of Seraiah in a right line from Aaron. He succeeded Zerubbabel in the government of Judea, by a commission which lasted twelve years, to the year of the world 3558; at the expiration of which term, he either returned to Babylon to give an account of the state of the province of Judea, or else retired into a private station in his own country; cooperating, doubtless, in the pious designs of Nehemiah his successor, by whom he is related soon after to have produced and read the law of Moses to the people. Ezra indeed appears to have been particularly well skilled in the law, to have given much attention to the study of the Scriptures, and to have been well versed in the interpretation of them. He styles himself a ready scribe, and professes to have prepared himself to instruct the people in the statutes of God: the tradition, therefore, of his having made a collection of the sacred writings is extremely probable. We know indeed from Josephus, that the Jewish priests after every important war were accustomed, on the establishment of peace, both at home and abroad publicly to ascertain, recognise, and copy out the registers of the priesthood, by which we must either understand the Scriptures, or believe that the same practice prevailed as to them.

Ezra was a most useful person to the Jews, who reverence his memory with a regard almost equal to that which they entertain for Moses. He is not particularly styled a Prophet in Scripture; but our Saviour makes no distinction between the authors of the sacred books, except that of "Moses and the Prophets." He was undoubtedly an appointed minister of God; and he wrote under the influence of the Holy Spirit, or his book would not have been admitted into the Hebrew canon, or received as sacred from the earliest ages of the Christian church. He is reported by some traditory accounts to have died in the 120th year of his age, and to have been buried at Jerusalem; though others say that he died in Persia, and was buried on the banks of the river Semura; where his tomb is shewn. Bp. Tomline, Dr. Gray.

It was during the captivity of the Jews, and their consequent dispersion among the inhabitants of the most illustrious empire in the civilized world, that God principally employed them as the means of exciting the attention of the heathen to His majesty and His providence. By the prophetick denunciations of Jeremiah, which were so publick and decided as to attract the notice of the Assyrian army and their mighty monarch, Jer. xxxix, xl, the captivity of Judah glorified God amongst the heathen, even at its commencement. But, during its continuance, God employed various means to convince the Gentiles of His universal providence, and his resistless power. He raised up Daniel, whose prophetick spirit exalted him to the highest distinction under Nebuchadnezzar, and Darius the Mede: He rescued the three illustrious friends of Daniel from the burning fiery furnace, into which they were plunged as martyrs for the worship of Jehovah, in opposition to the profanations of idolatry. He preserved Daniel himself from the den of lions, to which he was condemned for the same glorious cause, and punished the proud impiety of Nebuchadnezzar by a seven years' insanity and degradation from his throne, to which he was restored, only when with the return of his reason he became pious, and submitted to pay solemn and publick homage to the God of Israel. Thus also, at the moment when Belshazzar was insulting Jehovah, by bringing forth the consecrated vessels of His temple to be polluted by his profanation, the miraculous hand-writing on the wall mixed with horror his impious revelling, and announced his own impending destruction, and the downfall of his empire. These were not obscure or doubtful transactions; but, attested by the authentick decrees of the most distinguished monarchs, were solemnly proclaimed through their wide extended dominions: particularly in the instances of Nebuchadnezzar, Dan. iii. 29; iv. 1, 37; and of Darius, Dan. vi. 25. And, to crown this series of miraculous interpositions on the one hand, and of publick homage to the majesty of Jehovah on the other, from the most distinguished monarchs of the Eastern world, the great Cyrus, founder of the Persian empire, was so fully persuaded of that Divine Providence, whose Spirit had dictated the prophecies, pointing out so clearly the progress, nay the particular mode of his successes, that he became the active assistant in the restoration of the chosen people to their country. These solemn and publick testimonies to the majesty of the God of Israel, must have contributed materially to check error and idolatry, in a country where the form of the government rendered the examples and opinions of the monarchs so powerful and operative. They must have gained to the Jews, even in their captive and degraded state, much consideration and attention: and, as such a state led them to take pride in their religious superiority, the only superiority now left to them, and to exalt the Divine original and the wisdom of their religion, so these events must have given weight and credibility to these representations. Dr. Graves.

Before
CHRIST

CHAP. I.

536. 1 The proclamation of Cyrus for the building of the temple. 5 The people provide for the return. 7 Cyrus restoreth the vessels of the temple to Sheshbazzar.

536. NOW in the first year of Cyrus king of Persia, that the word of the LORD ^a by the mouth of Jeremiah might be fulfilled, the LORD stirred up the spirit of Cyrus king of Persia, that he [†] made a proclamation throughout all his kingdom, and put it also in writing, saying,

^a 2 Chron. 36. 22.
Jer. 25. 12.
& 29. 10.
[†] Heb. caused a voice to pass.

2 Thus saith Cyrus king of Persia, The LORD God of heaven hath given me all the kingdoms of the earth; and he hath ^b charged me to build him an house at Jerusalem, which is in Judah.

^b Is. 44. 28.
& 45. 1, 13.

3 Who is there among you of all his people? his God be with him, and let him go up to Jerusalem, which is in Judah, and Chap. I. ver. 1. Now in the first year of Cyrus &c.] This is that famous Cyrus, who, 140 years before the temple was destroyed, and 200 years before he was born, was mentioned by name in the prophecy of Isaiah, as designed by God for the restoration of His people, Isai. xlv. 28; xlv. 1—4. Bp. Patrick.

The period of seventy years, the determined time of the Jewish captivity under the Assyrian monarchy, being now expired, the deliverance of that nation began to be wrought, agreeably to the manner foretold by the Prophet Jeremiah, Jer. xxv. 12; xxix. 10. For Cyrus the Great, having now subdued Babylon, and erected the Persian empire on the destruction of that of Assyria, and, upon the first year of his settlement in Babylon conversing with Daniel, and being by his means acquainted with those prophecies of Isaiah, in which he saw himself, by name, described as the instrument of God for pulling down the Assyrian power, and restoring the Jewish nation to their temple and to their ancient land again, was so affected with the discovery, and so well disposed to the captive people, that, the very same year, he issued a proclamation in their favour. Pyle.

There are four decrees given by the kings of Persia in favour of the Jews: The first by Cyrus in the year B. C. 536, Ezra i. 1: the second by Darius, Ezra vi. 8: the third by Artaxerxes in the seventh year of his reign, Ezra vii. 11: the fourth by the same Artaxerxes to Nehemiah, chap. ii. in the twentieth year of his reign. Bp. Wilson.

— the Lord stirred up the spirit of Cyrus] God, who had so long designed him for this work, suggested these thoughts to him, and excited him to prosecute them. Bp. Patrick.

We may well conceive that Cyrus, having in his late expedition into Syria and Palestine seen so large and good a country as Judea lying wholly desolate, might justly be moved with the desire of having it again inhabited. And who could be more proper to plant again this desolated country, than its former inhabitants? But, whatever second causes worked to this event, God's overruling power, which turns the hearts of princes as He pleases, brought it thus to pass, that, in the first year of Cyrus's monarchy over the East, he issued his royal decree. Dean Prideaux.

It is said that God "stirred up the spirit of Cyrus" to issue this decree: we may conclude He did this by the wise counsel of Daniel; first, to fulfil the prophecy of Jeremiah, ch. xxv. 11, this being the year of the expiration of the captivity, which Daniel had computed before, Dan. ix. 2; and secondly, to fulfil the prophecy of Isaiah respecting the rebuilding of the temple, ch. xlv. 28, to which Cyrus in his decree manifestly alludes. Dr. Hales. We have here a remarkable account of a heathen prince performing 536.

Before
CHRIST

build the house of the LORD God of Israel, (he is the God,) which is in Jerusalem.

4 And whosoever remaineth in any place where he sojourneth, let the men of his place [†] help him with silver, and with gold, and with goods, and with beasts, beside the freewill offering for the house of God that is in Jerusalem. ^{† Heb. lift him up.}

5 ¶ Then rose up the chief of the fathers of Judah and Benjamin, and the priests, and the Levites, with all them whose spirit God had raised, to go up to build the house of the LORD which is in Jerusalem.

6 And all they that were about them ^{||} strengthened their hands with vessels of silver, with gold, with goods, and with beasts, and with precious things, beside all that was willingly offered. ^{|| That is, helped them.}

7 ¶ Also Cyrus the king brought forth

God's will and decrees; which should make us evermore depend on His goodness, and on His promises of help to those who seek Him in their distress. Bp. Wilson.

2. — The Lord God of heaven] It is observable, that whereas before the captivity we find God usually styled in Scripture by the name of "the Lord of hosts;" so the constant style of the holy books after the captivity is "the God of heaven," as here, and chap. vi. 10; vii. 21. Jos. Mede.

It has been made a question, whether Cyrus himself wrote this proclamation, in which the God of the Jews is acknowledged to be "the Lord God of heaven," or whether it was drawn up by some of the Jews who attended upon him. It seems by far the most probable, that God, who raised up the spirit of Cyrus to be a peculiar instrument in freeing his people from slavery, enlightened his mind to understand that there was but one only God, whom the Jews worshipped, and who spake in those holy books which were shewn to him. Bp. Patrick.

— he hath charged me to build him an house] So he understood from Isaiah's prophecies; and, most distinctly, from chap. xlv. 28, "He shall say to Jerusalem, Thou shalt be built; and to the temple, Thy foundation shall be laid." Bp. Patrick.

Since Daniel was at Babylon when Cyrus took possession of that city, and is said to have prospered there, not only in the reign of Darius, but also in that of Cyrus the Persian, Dan. i. 21; vi. 28; it is hardly possible to believe that the prophecies of Isaiah here referred to were not shewn by him to the new monarch. Bp. Horne.

4. — let the men of his place] "Let my officers there &c." Dr. Wells.

5. Then rose up the chief of &c.] On the proclamation of Cyrus, a considerable number of the Israelites resolved to venture back into the land of their fathers, out of love to their country, and zeal for the true worship of God; though the far greater part, being settled in the Babylonish territories with their wives and families, had not courage to venture on a journey into a land which had so long lain waste and desolate. The principal heads of those who now returned were of the tribes of Judah and Benjamin, though there were some of the other tribes mixed with them. Pyle.

7. Also Cyrus — brought forth the vessels] It had been expressly foretold at Jer. xxvii. 22, that the sacred vessels should be restored to the house of God. It happened by a singular providence that these vessels had been preserved to this time; they were looked upon by Nebuchadnezzar as sacred things, which he would not turn to his own private use, but dedicated to his gods; and this was the means of their preservation. Bp. Patrick.

^{Before} CHRIST
596.
* 2 Kings
24. 13.
2 Chron.
36. 7.

the vessels of the house of the LORD, which Nebuchadnezzar had brought forth out of Jerusalem, and had put them in the house of his gods;

8 Even those did Cyrus king of Persia bring forth by the hand of Mithredath the treasurer, and numbered them unto ^d Sheshbazzar, the prince of Judah.

9 And this is the number of them: thirty chargers of gold, a thousand chargers of silver, nine and twenty knives,

10 Thirty basons of gold, silver basons of a second sort four hundred and ten, and other vessels a thousand.

11 All the vessels of gold and of silver were five thousand and four hundred. All these did Sheshbazzar bring up with them of [†] the captivity that were brought up from Babylon unto Jerusalem.

† Heb.
the transportation.

CHAP. II.

1 The number that return, of the people, 36 of the priests, 40 of the Levites, 43 of the Nethinims, 55 of Solomon's servants, 62 of the priests which could not shew their pedigree. 64 The whole number of them, with their substance. 68 Their oblations.

about 536.
* Neh. 7. 6,
&c.

NOW ^a these are the children of the province that went up out of the captivity, of those which had been carried away, whom Nebuchadnezzar the king of Babylon had carried away unto Babylon, and came again unto Jerusalem and Judah, every one unto his city;

2 Which came with Zerubbabel: Jeshua,
Nehemiah, || Seraiah, Reelaiah, Mordecai,
Bilshan, Mizpar, Bigvai, Rehum, Baanah.
The number of the men of the people of Israel:

|| Or,
Azariah,
Neh. 7. 7.

3 The children of Parosh, two thousand an hundred seventy and two.

4 The children of Shephatiah, three hundred seventy and two.

8. — Sheshbazzar,] The Babylonish name of Zerubbabel; which is found by comparing Ezra v. 16, with Zech. iv. 9. It was common during the captivity for the principal Jews to bear two names, the one Jewish, the other Babylonian. Daniel was thus called Belteshazzar; and Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah received the names of Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, Dan. i. 7. Bp.
Patrick.

11. All the vessels — five thousand and four hundred.] Not so many as this number have been mentioned. It seems that only those of greater size and price have been specified; but here is given the gross sum of the whole. Bp. Patrick.

Chap. II. ver. 1. — the children of the province] The Jews are here called the “children of the province,” either because they had been for a long time part of the province of Babylon, in common with the other subjects of Assyria; or, as originally belonging to Judea, which had been made an Assyrian province ever since the captivity. Pyle.

— of those which had been carried away,] Of those whose parents and ancestors had been carried away. Bp. Patrick.

5 The children of Arah, seven hundred seventy and five.

6 The children of ^b Pahath-moab, of the children of Jeshua and Joab, two thousand eight hundred and twelve.

7 The children of Elam, a thousand two hundred fifty and four.

8 The children of Zattu, nine hundred forty and five.

9 The children of Zaccai, seven hundred and threescore.

10 The children of || Bani, six hundred forty and two.

|| Or,
Binnui,
Neh. 7. 15.

11 The children of Bebai, six hundred twenty and three.

12 The children of Azgad, a thousand two hundred twenty and two.

13 The children of Adonikam, six hundred sixty and six.

14 The children of Bigvai, two thousand fifty and six.

15 The children of Adin, four hundred fifty and four.

16 The children of Ater of Hezekiah, ninety and eight.

17 The children of Bezai, three hundred twenty and three.

18 The children of || Jorah, an hundred and twelve.

|| Or,
Hariph,
Neh. 7. 24.

19 The children of Hashum, two hundred twenty and three.

20 The children of || Gibbar, ninety and five.

|| Or,
Gibeon,
Neh. 7. 25.

21 The children of Beth-lehem, an hundred twenty and three.

22 The men of Netophah, fifty and six.

23 The men of Anathoth, an hundred twenty and eight.

24 The children of || Azmaveth, forty and two.

|| Or,
Beth-azma-veth, Neh.
7. 28.

25 The children of Kirjath-arim, Che-

2. — Jeshua, Nehemiah, &c.] Jeshua was the high priest, and, as such, is mentioned before the rest; he held the office by lineal descent, being grandson of Seraiah, who was high priest when Jerusalem was destroyed, and was put to death by Nebuchadnezzar.
It is to be observed, that Nehemiah and Mordecai, here mentioned, were not the Nehemiah and Mordecai of whom we read so much in the books of Nehemiah and Esther, but others of the same names. Dean Prideaux.

3. The children of Parosh, &c.] The numbers mentioned in the ensuing catalogue belonged chiefly to the tribes of Judah and Benjamin; some of them being denominated from the chief ancestors of their families, and others from the places or great towns which they formerly inhabited in those two tribes. It is probable that all who are here set down gave in their names as intending to return to Judea, though some of them might change their intentions, or die by the way; and others, who are not in this register, might afterwards join themselves to the number; which is the most probable reason of the differences in the numbers here given by Ezra, and those given by Nehemiah, Neh. vii. Pyle.

Before
CHRIST
about 536.

phirah, and Beeroth, seven hundred and forty and three.

26 The children of Ramah and Gaba, six hundred twenty and one.

27 The men of Michmas, an hundred twenty and two.

28 The men of Beth-el and Ai, two hundred twenty and three.

29 The children of Nebo, fifty and two.

30 The children of Magbish, an hundred fifty and six.

^c See ver. 7.

31 The children of the other ^c Elam, a thousand two hundred fifty and four.

32 The children of Harim, three hundred and twenty.

|| Or,
Harid,
as it is in some copies.

33 The children of Lod, || Hadid, and Ono, seven hundred twenty and five.

34 The children of Jericho, three hundred forty and five.

35 The children of Senaah, three thousand and six hundred and thirty.

^d 1 Chron.
24. 7.

36 ¶ The priests: the children of ^d Jedaiah, of the house of Jeshua, nine hundred seventy and three.

^e 1 Chron.
24. 14.

37 The children of ^e Immer, a thousand fifty and two.

^f 1 Chron.
9. 12.

38 The children of ^f Pashur, a thousand two hundred forty and seven.

^g 1 Chron.
24. 8.

39 The children of ^g Harim, a thousand and seventeen.

|| Or,
Judah,
chap. 3. 9.
called also Hodevah,
Neh. 7. 43.

40 ¶ The Levites: the children of Jeshua and Kadmiel, of the children of || Hodaviah, seventy and four.

41 ¶ The singers: the children of Asaph, an hundred twenty and eight.

42 ¶ The children of the porters: the children of Shallum, the children of Ater, the children of Talmon, the children of Akkub, the children of Hatita, the children of Shobai, in all an hundred thirty and nine.

43 ¶ The Nethinims: the children of Ziha, the children of Hasupha, the children of Tabbaoth, 44 The children of Keros, the children of Siaha, the children of Padon,

Before
CHRIST
about 536.

45 The children of Lebanah, the children of Hagabah, the children of Akkub, 46 The children of Hagab, the children of || Shalmal, the children of Hanan,

|| Or,
Shalmal.

47 The children of Giddel, the children of Gahar, the children of Reaiah, 48 The children of Rezin, the children of Nekoda, the children of Gazzam, 49 The children of Uzza, the children of Paseah, the children of Besai,

50 The children of Asnah, the children of Mehunim, the children of Nephusim,

51 The children of Bakbuk, the children of Hakupha, the children of Harhur,

52 The children of || Bazluth, the children of Mehida, the children of Harsha,

|| Or,
Bazluth,
Neh. 7. 54.

53 The children of Barkos, the children of Sisera, the children of Thamah, 54 The children of Neziah, the children of Hatipha.

55 ¶ The children of Solomon's servants: the children of Sotai, the children of Sophereth, the children of || Peruda,

|| Or,
Perida,
Neh. 7. 57.

56 The children of Jaalah, the children of Darkon, the children of Giddel, 57 The children of Shephatiah, the children of Hattil, the children of Pochereth of Zebaim, the children of || Ami.

|| Or,
Amon,
Neh. 7. 59.
^h Josh. 9.
21. 27.
1 Chron. 9.
2.

58 All the ^h Nethinims, and the children of ⁱ Solomon's servants, were three hundred ninety and two.

59 And these were they which went up from Tel-melah, Tel-harsa, Cherub, Addan, and Immer: but they could not shew their father's house, and their || seed, whether they were of Israel:

ⁱ 1 Kings 9.
21.

60 The children of Delaiah, the children of Tobiah, the children of Nekoda, six hundred fifty and two.

61 ¶ And of the children of the priests: the children of Habaiah, the children of Koz, the children of Barzillai: which took a wife of the daughters of ^k Barzillai the Gileadite, and was called after their name:

^k 2 Sam.
17. 27.

62 These sought their register among

36. The priests: the children of Jedaiah, &c.] It hence appears, that, of the twenty-four courses of the priests that were carried away to Babylon, only four returned, making a number of about 4289 persons; the rest being either extinct, or staying behind. But, of these four which now returned, each subdivided themselves in such a manner, that the twenty-four courses were made up again, and retained the same titles which were held before. Dean Prideaux, Pyle.

43. The Nethinims.] See note at 1 Chron. ix. 2.

55. The children of Solomon's servants.] These are supposed to have been descendants of artificers, who were employed in the building of Solomon's temple; and who, becoming proselytes, were, with their children and posterity, appointed by Solomon for its perpetual conservation and reparation. Bp. Patrick.

59. And these were they &c.] The persons here mentioned, as coming out from several towns of Chaldaea or Mesopotamia, were probably Israelites, descendants of some of the ten tribes, who, having been carried away captive long before the captivity of Judah, had by length of time, or by some other misfortune, lost the genealogy of their families, and so could not claim a settlement and particular possessions in the land, as the other Israelites did; but still were desirous of living amongst them, and of seeing the worship of God restored. Pyle.

61. — and was called after their name.] This person, it appears, thought it so great an honour to be descended from so noble a family as that of Barzillai, that he chose to be called by that name, which he preferred to his own in the family of the priests; by which vain ambition he lost his title to the priesthood, because he could not regularly make out his descent from the line of the priests. Bp. Patrick.

Before
CHRIST
about 500.

† It is they were polluted from the priesthood.

† Or, governor.

1 Exod. 28.
30.

those that were reckoned by genealogy, but they were not found: therefore † were they, as polluted, put from the priesthood.

63 And the || Tirshatha said unto them, that they should not eat of the most holy things, till there stood up a priest with Urim and with Thummim.

64 ¶ The whole congregation together was forty and two thousand three hundred and threescore, 65 Beside their servants and their maids, of whom there were seven thousand three hundred thirty and seven: and there were among them two hundred singing men and singing women.

66 Their horses were seven hundred thirty and six; their mules, two hundred forty and five;

67 Their camels, four hundred thirty and five; their asses, six thousand seven hundred and twenty.

68 ¶ And some of the chief of the fathers, when they came to the house of the LORD which is at Jerusalem, offered freely

63. — the Tirshatha] Meaning Zerubbabel, whose title in the Persian language was Tirshatha, that is, governour or judge. See the margin. Pyle. According to some opinions, the meaning of the word is “cupbearer:” it is applied to Nehemiah, at Neh. vii. 70; x. 1, &c. Calmet.

— that they should not eat of the most holy things,] That is, that they should not partake of the sacrifices offered for sin, nor of the right shoulder of the peace offerings, nor of the shewbread, which were all most holy, and the portion of the priests alone. This shews that “the Tirshatha” possessed great power and authority over them, being able to impose such a restraint on those who had been reputed priests. Bp. Patrick.

— till there stood up a priest with Urim and with Thummim.] Till there might stand up a priest who could pronounce whether these persons were of the line of Aaron or not, from the revelation of the Divine will by Urim and Thummim. Bp. Patrick.

It is evident from this passage, that the Urim and Thummim of the former temple were either burnt with it, or at least lost before this time: whether they were ever afterwards restored, that is, whether God ever raised up a priest after the captivity to whom He declared His will by Urim and Thummim, we are no where informed in holy writ. It is the general tradition of the Jews, that God never did declare His will in this way to any priest after the Babylonish captivity. Dr. Wells.

64. The whole congregation together was &c.] The numbers before expressly detailed are considerably smaller than the general sum here mentioned. The difference is probably to be explained by the addition of those mentioned at ver. 61, 62, and others of the common people of the twelve tribes, who could not make out their pedigree. Dr. Wells.

It should be observed, how small the sum total here mentioned is, in comparison with the vast multitude which came out from Egypt: yet this number is more than the double of that which was carried away captive by Nebuchadnezzar. Bp. Patrick.

It is most certain, that, notwithstanding the decree of Cyrus, and others by subsequent Persian kings, for the return of the Jews into their own land, there were a great many who waved the taking advantage of them, and continued still in Chaldea, Assyria, and other Eastern provinces. It is probable too that those who remained were the most affluent and wealthy, as it is natural to suppose that such would be least willing to remove into a desolate for the house of God to set it up in his place:

69 They gave after their ability unto the ^m treasure of the work threescore and one thousand drams of gold, and five thousand pound of silver, and one hundred priests' garments.

70 So the priests, and the Levites, and some of the people, and the singers, and the porters, and the Nethinims, dwelt in their cities, and all Israel in their cities.

CHAP. III.

1 The altar is set up. 4 Offerings frequented. 7 Workmen prepared. 8 The foundations of the temple are laid in great joy and mourning.

AND when the seventh month was ^{||} Or, Joshua, Hag. 1. 1. ^{||} Called, Zerobabel, Matt. 1. 12. & Luke 3. 27. ² Matth. 1. 12. & Luke 3. 27, called Salathiel.

2 Then stood up || Jeshua the son of Jozadak, and his brethren the priests, and || Zerubbabel the son of ^a Shealtiel, and his country. If we may guess by the example of the family of Aaron, we must conclude that those who staid were much more numerous than those who removed to Judea; for, of the twenty-four courses of the sons of Aaron, it is related at ver. 36, that four only returned. Dean Prideaux.

69. — threescore and one thousand drams of gold,] The richness of these donations, and of those mentioned at chap. viii. 25, shews that the captivity of the Jews in Babylon was not a state of slavery, and that worldly prosperity continued within their reach. The same appears also from the history of Daniel, Nehemiah, and other Jews, who were promoted to great honour in the Assyrian and Persian courts. Bp. Patrick.

— drams of gold, — pound of silver,] The “drams of gold” being mentioned together with “pounds of silver,” seem to convey the idea of weight: whereas in fact these daraconim, drams, were a Median coin, struck by one of the elder Darius's, and named after him Daricks. The Scholiast on Aristophanes says, “The stateras of gold are the Daricks; so called, not from Darius father of Xerxes, but from a more ancient king.” This agrees with the older account, 1 Chron. xxix. 6, 7, “the princes of Israel gave — ten thousand drams of gold.” These then were golden Daricks, obtained from Persia by commerce. The word, rendered “pound” of silver, is mina, worth sixty shekels, Ezek. xlv. 12; about £7. Script. illust. Expos. Ind.

— and one hundred priests' garments.] Such presents of garments would appear singular to us; but, in the East, where to give is to honour, such a present of garments, or of any other usable commodities, is in perfect compliance with established customs. Fragments to Calmet.

Chap. III. ver. 1. And when the seventh month was come,] We are no where informed in what month they began their journey from Babylon; but, from chap. vii. 9, we understand it was a journey of four months from thence to Jerusalem; so that we may conclude they began their journey in the first or second month; and, after they had spent some time in settling themselves in their several cities, the seventh month approached or drew nigh, (so the expression here may be rendered,) in which was the season of the first great feast, that occurred after they came to Judea: accordingly they assembled themselves to celebrate it at Jerusalem. Bp. Patrick.

Before
CHRIST
about 536.

^m 1 Chron.
26. 20.

Engraved by H. Moser.

THE REBUILDING OF THE TEMPLE.

From Ex. xiv. 10. n. 12.

Published by the Society for promoting Christian Knowledge, March 1, 1851.

Before
CHRIST
about 536.

^b Deut. 12. 5. brethren, and builded the altar of the God of Israel, to offer burnt offerings thereon, as it is ^b written in the law of Moses the man of God.

3 And they set the altar upon his bases; for fear was upon them because of the people of those countries: and they offered burnt offerings thereon unto the LORD, even burnt offerings morning and evening.

^c Numb. 29. 12.
^d Exod. 23. 16.

[†] Heb. the matter of the day in his day.

4 They kept also the feast of tabernacles, ^c as it is written, and ^d offered the daily burnt offerings by number, according to the custom, [†] as the duty of every day required;

5 And afterward offered the continual burnt offering, both of the new moons, and of all the set feasts of the LORD that were consecrated, and of every one that willingly offered a freewill offering unto the LORD.

6 From the first day of the seventh month began they to offer burnt offerings unto the LORD. But [†] the foundation of the temple of the LORD was not yet laid.

[†] Heb. the temple of the LORD was not yet founded.
[‖] Or, workmen.

7 They gave money also unto the masons, and to the [‖] carpenters; and meat, and drink, and oil, unto them of Zidon, and to them of Tyre, to bring cedar trees from Lebanon to the sea of ^e Joppa, according to the grant that they had of Cyrus king of Persia.

^e Acts 9. 36.

535.

8 ¶ Now in the second year of their coming unto the house of God at Jerusalem, in the second month, began Zerubabel the son of Shealtiel, and Jeshua the son of Jozadak, and the remnant of their brethren the priests and the Levites, and all they that were come out of the captivity unto Jerusalem; and appointed the Levites, from twenty years old and upward, to set forward the work of the house of the LORD.

Before
CHRIST
535.

9 Then stood Jeshua with his sons and his brethren, Kadmiel and his sons, the sons of [‖] Judah, [†] together, to set forward the workmen in the house of God: the sons of Henadad, with their sons and their brethren the Levites.

[‖] Or, Hodaviah, chap. 2. 40.
[†] Heb. as one.

10 And when the builders laid the foundation of the temple of the LORD, they set the priests in their apparel with trumpets, and the Levites the sons of Asaph with cymbals, to praise the LORD, after the ^f ordinance of David king of Israel.

^f 1 Chron. 6. 31. & 16. 7. & 25. 1.

11 And they sang together by course in praising and giving thanks unto the LORD; because he is good, for his mercy endureth for ever toward Israel. And all the people shouted with a great shout, when they praised the LORD, because the foundation of the house of the LORD was laid.

12 But many of the priests and Levites and chief of the fathers, who were ancient men, that had seen the first house, when the foundation of this house was laid before their eyes, wept with a loud voice; and many shouted aloud for joy:

2. — builded the altar —, to offer burnt offerings] Thus the first thing they did was to restore the altar of burnt offerings, (of which see the description at 2 Chron. iv. 1.) By the expression of the next verse, "they set the altar upon his bases," it seems certain that they rebuilt it on the spot where it formerly stood; and it appears that they daily offered sacrifices upon it, even before any of the rest of the temple was built. Dean Prideaux.

The first care of the Jews on their return is their publick sacrifice. That school of captivity in which they had been trained had taught them to begin with God. A forced discontinuance makes devotion more savoury and more sweet to religious hearts; whereas, in an open freedom, piety does too often languish. Bp. Hall.

We should well observe, that, as soon as the Jews were returned from Babylon, they set about rebuilding their altars and the temple, in order to perform Divine service. This was the effect of their piety, and especially of the zeal of their rulers. Christians ought to display on all occasions a similar zeal; the care of God's worship should above all things possess their minds, and their greatest joy should be, to see the kingdom of God established and confirmed. Ostervald.

We have here a remarkable proof, that when God suffers His children to be persecuted, it is not for their destruction, but for their amendment, and to the end that He may establish them again in His true worship. Bp. Wilson.

3. — for fear was upon them] The Hebrew particle, which we translate for, has also the sense of although; and this seems to be the meaning here; implying that, although they were in great fear of their evil neighbours, still they were unwilling to desist from restoring the worship of God. Bp. Patrick.

4. They kept also the feast of tabernacles,] This seventh month, being a month of many solemnities of worship appointed by the Mosaic law, (Numb. xxix,) they began it by the feast of trumpets; then the great day of expiation on the tenth, and the feast of tabernacles on the fifteenth, till the whole was concluded; the morning and evening sacrifices ushering in every day's solemnity, and being constantly offered up from this time forward, and every other festival of the year being punctually observed agreeably to the law. Pyle.

7. — to bring cedar trees from Lebanon &c.] See notes at 1 Kings v. 6.

— according to the grant that they had of Cyrus] Cyrus, we may suppose, had specially commanded the inhabitants of Tyre and Sidon to afford them their assistance. Bp. Patrick.

8. — of their coming unto the house of God] To the place where the house of God formerly stood. They laid the foundation of the temple, it appears, in the second month of the second year, having of course employed the previous time in preparing the ground and collecting their materials. Bp. Patrick.

9. — Jeshua] Not the high priest, but the Levite mentioned at chap. ii. 40.

12. But many of the priests and Levites — wept with a loud voice;] What different affections do we see produced in men by the same occasion! The younger Jews shouted at this sight, the elder wept. The younger shouted to see a new foundation, the elder wept to remember the old. They who had seen no better,

Before
CHRIST
535.

13 So that the people could not discern the noise of the shout of joy from the noise of the weeping of the people: for the people shouted with a loud shout, and the noise was heard afar off.

CHAP. IV.

1 The adversaries, being not accepted in the building of the temple with the Jews, endeavour to hinder it. 7 Their letter to Artaxerxes. 17 The decree of Artaxerxes. 23 The building is hindered.

† Heb.
the sons of the transportation.

NOW when the adversaries of Judah and Benjamin heard that † the children of the captivity builded the temple unto the LORD God of Israel;

2 Then they came to Zerubbabel, and to the chief of the fathers, and said unto them, Let us build with you: for we seek your thought this goodly; they who had seen the former, thought this mean and homely, more sorrowing at what they had lost, than rejoicing at so unequal a reparation. Bp. Hall.

The old men, who had seen the glory of the first temple, and had no expectation that this, which was now building by a few poor exiles lately returned into their country, could ever equal the former, which had all the riches of David and Solomon, two of the wealthiest princes of the East, expended in its erection, wept at the remembrance of that which was gone, while others rejoiced at the foundation of the new one. Indeed the difference between the former temple and this which was now beginning was so great, that God Himself tells the Prophet Haggai, (chap. ii. 3,) that the latter was as nothing in comparison with the former. It is true that the dimensions of the two temples were the same; but in its ornaments, materials, and workmanship, Solomon's temple was far superiour to the second temple; and, what was far more important, the second temple entirely wanted that which constituted the main glory of Solomon's temple, the extraordinary marks of the Divine favour; consisting especially in the holy ark of the covenant, and the merey seat which was upon it, in the Shechinah or symbol of the Divine presence, in the Urim and Thummim, and in the holy fire on the altar: but all these wants and defects were afterwards abundantly supplied in the second temple, when the Desire of all nations came to this temple, when Christ our Saviour, who was the most true Shechinah of the Divine Majesty, honoured it with His presence; in this respect the glory of the latter house did far exceed the glory of the former; and the prophecies of Haggai, who foretold that it should be so, had a full completion. Dean Prideaux.

Chap. IV. ver. 1. — the adversaries of Judah and Benjamin] The Samaritans: the people whom Shalmaneser and Esar-haddon, kings of Assyria, had brought from Babylon, Cuthah, Ava, and other places, and had settled in parts of the country formerly inhabited by the ten tribes of Israel; see ver. 2 and 10. They were called Samaritans, from having occupied the city of Samaria and its neighbourhood, and were also called Cutheans, from the country which some of them had formerly inhabited. See the history of the captivity of the ten tribes, and of the settlement of these strangers in their inheritance, in 2 Kings xvii. Bp. Patrick, Collyer.

2. — we seek your God,] This people had worshipped the true God since the time of Esar-haddon, when lions were sent to infest their country as a chastisement for their idolatry: they had moreover received instruction at that time, by their own desire, from an Israelite priest: but they nevertheless continued to worship images, joining the service of God with idolatry; and thus did their children's children; see 2 Kings xvii. When therefore they pretended to be of the same religion with the Jews, they spoke deceitfully. Bp. Patrick, Collyer.

3. — Ye have nothing to do with us] You have no just claim

God, as ye do; and we do sacrifice unto him since the days of Esar-haddon king of Assur, which brought us up hither. Before
CHRIST
about 678.

3 But Zerubbabel, and Jeshua, and the rest of the chief of the fathers of Israel, said unto them, Ye have nothing to do with us to build an house unto our God; but we ourselves together will build unto the LORD God of Israel, as king Cyrus the king of Persia hath commanded us.

4 Then the people of the land weakened the hands of the people of Judah, and troubled them in building, 534.

5 And hired counsellors against them, to frustrate their purpose, all the days of Cyrus king of Persia, even until the reign of Darius king of Persia.

to join with us in building a house to our God, nor can we by our religion admit you so to do, as being worshippers of other gods as well as of our God. Dr. Wells.

The Jews steadily rejected the proposal made by the Samaritans, to join with them in rebuilding the temple of the God of Israel, and celebrating His worship; and we can discern important reasons, in consequence of which this rejection appears to have been subservient to the purposes of the Divine economy. The intermixture of the Samaritans with the Jews might have rendered the accomplishment of the prophecies concerning the family and birth of the Messiah less clear; might have introduced again idolatry among the restored Jews, now completely abhorrent from it, and in various ways defeated the grand objects of Providence in selecting and preserving a peculiar people. In consequence of this rejection, and the alienation it produced, the Jews probably became more vigilant in preserving the strictness, and the Samaritans more zealous in emulating the purity, of the Mosaic ritual. They became hostile and therefore unsuspected guardians and vouchers of the integrity of the sacred text, particularly of the Pentateuch. And while the Jews, in general blinded by their national prejudices, could see in the promised Messiah only a national and temporal deliverer; the Samaritans appear to have judged of His pretensions with more justice and success. And though our Lord visited them only as it were incidentally, yet he was able to declare to them His character, and avow His dignity, without that mysterious reserve and jealous caution, which the proneness of the Jewish multitude "to take Him by force and make Him a king" constantly required. And it seems evident, that the Samaritans were predisposed and prepared to receive and diffuse the light of the Gospel more than any other description of men, the pious and reflecting part of the Jewish nation only excepted. And thus this circumstance, in the progress of the Jewish dispensation, which at first view might seem to prove it was peculiarly partial or confined, appears in its final result to have materially facilitated the diffusion of true religion in the world, and thus to have been subservient to the general advantage of mankind. Dr. Graves.

5. — all the days of Cyrus &c.] Since by these underhand and subtle dealings of the adversaries of the Jews, the work of the temple was much retarded, and the effect of Cyrus's decree defeated in many particulars; this seems to have been the cause why, in the third year of Cyrus, Daniel gave himself up to mourning and fasting for three weeks together. Daniel died not long afterwards; and in him the Jews lost a powerful advocate at the Persian court. Still, though their enemies derived from this circumstance greater advantage in their designs against them, and though they prevailed to divert those encouragements which Cyrus had ordered for the carrying on of the work, yet in his reign they never were able to put a total stop to it. Dean Prideaux.

Before
CHRIST
529.

† Heb.
Ahashve-rosh.

522.

|| Or,
in peace.
† Heb.
societies.

6 And in the reign of † Ahasuerus, in the beginning of his reign, wrote they unto him an accusation against the inhabitants of Judah and Jerusalem.

7 ¶ And in the days of Artaxerxes wrote || Bishlam, Mithredath, Tabeel, and the rest of their † companions, unto Artaxerxes king of Persia; and the writing of the letter was written in the Syrian tongue, and interpreted in the Syrian tongue.

8 Rehum the chancellor and Shimshai the || scribe wrote a letter against Jerusalem to Artaxerxes the king in this sort:

9 Then wrote Rehum the chancellor, and Shimshai the scribe, and the rest of their † companions; the Dinaites, the Apharsathchites, the Tarpelites, the Apharsites, the Archevites, the Babylonians, the Susanchites, the Dehavites, and the Elamites,

10 And the rest of the nations whom the great and noble Asnapper brought over, and set in the cities of Samaria, and the rest that are on this side the river, and † at such a time.

† Chald.
Cheeneth.

522.

11 ¶ This is the copy of the letter that they sent unto him, even unto Artaxerxes the king; Thy servants the men on this side the river, and at such a time.

12 Be it known unto the king, that the Jews which came up from thee to us are come unto Jerusalem, building the rebellious and the bad city, and have || set up finished.

|| Or,

6. — in the reign of Ahasuerus.] This Ahasuerus is known in profane history by the name of Cambyses: he began to reign B. C. 529. The name Ahasuerus seems rather to have been a title common to several kings of Media and Persia, than a proper name of any of them. It is evidently compounded of two Persick words, which signify the great chief or prince. Dr. Jennings.

7. — in the days of Artaxerxes.] Otherwise called Smerdis, one of the magi who was made king, and reigned for a few months only. Univ. Hist.

— interpreted in the Syrian tongue.] There have been various conjectures of learned men respecting this passage. A probable meaning of the words, “was interpreted in the Syrian tongue,” is, that it was translated out of the Syrian tongue into the Persian, or that which was at this time used at the Persian court: the Hebrew words admit of this sense. Pyle.

10. — whom the great and noble Asnapper.] Some understand Asnapper to be another name for Shalmaneser, or Esar-haddon, who sent these colonies hither; but perhaps it is more reasonable to suppose he was some great commander, who was entrusted by one or both of those kings to conduct them, and bring them over the river, (Euphrates,) and see them settled in these countries. Bp. Patrick.

11. — Thy servants — on this side the river, and at such a time.] This is the title of the letter—the letter itself follows. “At such a time.” The time was expressed, no doubt, in the original letter; but here it is only noted in general, that the day and year were mentioned when the letter was written. Bp. Patrick.

12. — building the rebellious and the bad city, &c.] The opposition of the Samaritans on this occasion was well-timed. Egypt the walls thereof, and † joined the foundations.

13 Be it known now unto the king, that, if this city be builded, and the walls set up again, then will they not † pay toll, tribute, and custom, and so thou shalt endamage the || revenue of the kings.

14 Now because † we have maintenance from the king's palace, and it was not meet for us to see the king's dishonour, therefore have we sent and certified the king;

15 That search may be made in the book of the records of thy fathers: so shalt thou find in the book of the records, and know that this city is a rebellious city, and hurtful unto kings and provinces, and that they have † moved sedition † within the same of old time: for which cause was this city destroyed.

16 We certify the king that, if this city be builded again, and the walls thereof set up, by this means thou shalt have no portion on this side the river.

17 ¶ Then sent the king an answer unto Rehum the chancellor, and to Shimshai the scribe, and to the rest of their † companions that dwell in Samaria, and unto the rest beyond the river, Peace, and at such a time.

18 The letter which ye sent unto us hath been plainly read before me.

19 And † I commanded, and search hath been made, and it is found that this city

Before
CHRIST
about 522.

† Chald. sewed together.
† Chald.
give.

|| Or,
strength.
† Chald.
we are salted with the salt of the palace.

† Chald. made.
† Chald.
in the midst
thereof.

† Chald. societies.

† Chald.
by me a decree is set.

had revolted from the Persian yoke immediately on hearing of the death of Xerxes. The Samaritans therefore could not have chosen a fairer opportunity to carry their point, or a stronger argument to work upon the king's fears, than the danger, which might result from permitting the Jews to fortify their city, not only of their following the rebellious example of Egypt in refusing to pay tribute, but also of their obstructing the passage of the Persian army to be employed in the reduction of Egypt, either going or returning through Palestine. Dr. Hales.

13. — toll, tribute, and custom.] The distinction between these words has been variously conjectured. One opinion is, that the first word signifies the part which every man paid out of his estate, according to the valuation; the second, that which was paid for every head; and the third, that which was paid for merchandise on the highway. Witsius.

14. — because we have maintenance from the king's palace.] Literally in the original, “Because we are salted with the salt of the palace.” As salt is reckoned among the principal necessities of life, hence, by a very natural figure, it is used for food or maintenance in general. It is said to be still a common expression in the East, to say, “I have eaten the salt of such a person;” meaning, “I have been fed by him.” Parkhurst.

A modern Persian monarch said in a tone of indignation, respecting one of his servants who had attempted to deceive him, “I have then such ungrateful servants and traitors to eat my salt.” Sir J. Chardin. Tamerlane, in his Institutes, speaking of a person who had quitted his service, joined the enemy, and fought against him, says, “At length my salt which he had eaten overwhelmed him with remorse; he again threw himself at my feet, and humbled himself before me.” Harmer.

Before
CHRIST
522.

† Chald. lifted up itself.

† Chald.
Make a decree.

† Chald.
by arm and power.
520.

of old time hath † made insurrection against kings, and that rebellion and sedition have been made therein.

20 There have been mighty kings also over Jerusalem, which have ruled over all countries beyond the river; and toll, tribute, and custom, was paid unto them.

21 † Give ye now commandment to cause these men to cease, and that this city be not builded, until another commandment shall be given from me.

22 Take heed now that ye fail not to do this: why should damage grow to the hurt of the kings?

23 ¶ Now when the copy of king Artaxerxes' letter was read before Rehum, and Shimshai the scribe, and their companions, they went up in haste to Jerusalem unto the Jews, and made them to cease † by force and power.

24 Then ceased the work of the house of God which is at Jerusalem. So it ceased unto the second year of the reign of Darius king of Persia.

21. Give ye now commandment &c.] Artaxerxes, the king who now reigned, had been a chief leader of the sect of the Magians, to whom the religion of the Jews was in the utmost degree opposed; and the aversion, which he had to them on this account, no doubt contributed to induce him to issue this decree against them. Dean Prideaux.

23. — and made them to cease by force and power.] We learn from hence, that God sometimes permits the most holy undertakings to be retarded, and that His church has often had to contend with artifice and violence. But the sequel will shew us, that He does at length confound the crafty designs of the wicked, that He makes manifest the innocence of His children, and that, after He has tried them, He makes those, who had been their greatest enemies, become their friends. Ostervald.

As we see, from this part of Scripture, that God sometimes permits the best undertakings to be opposed, and the best men to be slandered; we discover that it is no new thing to meet with such conduct, and that good men should always bear it with patience. Bp. Wilson.

24. Then ceased the work &c.] Artaxerxes, by whose decree the work of the temple was thus stopt, reigned in all but seven months, and was succeeded by Darius, in whose second year the building was resumed: the work therefore ceased not longer than two years and seven months. Dean Prideaux.

Chap. V. ver. 1. — Zechariah the son of Iddo,] The grandson of Iddo; for his father's name was Berachiah. Bp. Patrick.

— prophesied unto the Jews] Rather, "prophesied against" them, as the words of the original may be interpreted; for these Prophets reproved them because they did not build the temple. They both prophesied in the second year of Darius, as appears from the beginning of their prophecies; one in the sixth, the other in the eighth month. Bp. Patrick. We should here take notice, that, while the building of the temple was interrupted, God sent His Prophets to encourage the Jews, and to engage them to renew their application to that pious design. Thus it is that God never forsakes His church; He always, when He judges it necessary, commissions faithful ministers to labour in its edification; and we ought on no occasion to be disheartened when our enterprises are just and conformable to the will of God, for His

CHAP. V.

Before
CHRIST
520.

1 Zerubbabel and Jeshua, incited by Haggai and Zechariah, set forward the building of the temple. 3 Tatnai and Shethar-boznai could not hinder the Jews. 6 Their letter to Darius against the Jews.

THEN the prophets, ^a Haggai the pro- ^a Hag. 1. 1. phet, and ^b Zechariah the son of Iddo, ^b Zech. 1. 1. prophesied unto the Jews that were in Judah and Jerusalem in the name of the God of Israel, even unto them.

2 Then rose up Zerubbabel the son of Shealtiel, and Jeshua the son of Jozadak, and began to build the house of God which is at Jerusalem: and with them were the prophets of God helping them.

3 ¶ At the same time came to them Tatnai, governor on this side the river, and Shethar-boznai, and their companions, and said thus unto them, Who hath commanded you to build this house, and to make up this wall?

4 Then said we unto them after this manner, What are the names of the men † that make this building?

5 But the eye of their God was upon

† Chald. that build this building?

providence will give them a happy issue, though it seem contrary to all appearance. Ostervald.

By the death of Artaxerxes, his edict prohibiting the building of the temple became of no effect: still the Jews neglected to resume the work, and on this account God smote their land with barrenness, so that both the vintage and harvest failed them; Hagg. i. 6, 11, &c. Haggai informed them of the cause of this judgment, and exhorted them to perform their duty, which would be the means of averting it: accordingly they again set about the work, and applied themselves with all diligence to provide the materials necessary for the purpose, Hagg. i. 14, 15. To encourage them further in the prosecution of the work, another message (Hagg. ii. 1, &c.) came to them from God by the same Prophet, not only assuring them of His presence therein to make it prosper in their hands, but also promising that the glory of the latter house, when built, should be greater than that of the former; which was accordingly accomplished when Christ our Saviour came to this temple and honoured it with His presence. The word of the Lord came also to them by Zechariah the Prophet, exhorting them to repentance, and promising them mercy and favour on their obedience, Zech. i. 1, &c. Dean Prideaux.

2. — began to build the house of God] The work had been begun before, but made little progress, till these great men, encouraged by the Prophets, again set it in forwardness. Bp. Patrick.

3. — Tatnai, governor on this side the river,] That is, governor of the provinces of Syria and Palestine. Pyle.

4. Then said we unto them &c.] In the Greek, Syriack, and Arabick translations, the words are, "Then said they unto them;" that is, Tatnai and those with him said to the Jews. Dr. Wells. If the word we be the true reading, there should be no interrogation; but the sense must be, "We (the Jews) said or told unto them after this manner, what were the names, &c." Bp. Patrick.

5. But the eye of their God] By the favour and good providence of God, the king's ministers in these parts became their friends so far as not to prohibit their proceeding with their work, but referred the matter to the consideration of Darius himself, to whom they made a fair and honest report of the case. Bp. Patrick.

Before
CHRIST
520.

the elders of the Jews, that they could not cause them to cease, till the matter came to Darius: and then they returned answer by letter concerning this matter.

519.

6 ¶ The copy of the letter that Tatnai, governor on this side the river, and Shethar-boznai, and his companions the Apharsachites, which were on this side the river, sent unto Darius the king:

† Chald.
in the midst
whereof.

7 They sent a letter unto him, † wherein was written thus; Unto Darius the king, all peace.

8 Be it known unto the king, that we went into the province of Judea, to the house of the great God, which is builded with † great stones, and timber is laid in the walls, and this work goeth fast on, and prospereth in their hands.

† Chald. stones of rolling.

9 Then asked we those elders, and said unto them thus, Who commanded you to build this house, and to make up these walls?

10 We asked their names also, to certify thee, that we might write the names of the men that were the chief of them.

11 And thus they returned us answer, saying, We are the servants of the God of heaven and earth, and build the house that was builded these many years ago, which a great king of Israel builded ^c and set up.

^c 1 Kings
6. 1.

12 But after that our fathers had provoked the God of heaven unto wrath, he gave them into the hand of ^d Nebuchadnezzar the king of Babylon, the Chaldean, who destroyed this house, and carried the people away into Babylon.

^d 2 Kings
24. 2. &
25. 8.

536.
^e Chap. 1. 1.

13 But in the first year of ^e Cyrus the king of Babylon the same king Cyrus made a decree to build this house of God.

^f Chap. 1.
8. & 6. 5.

14 And ^f the vessels also of gold and silver of the house of God, which Nebuchadnezzar took out of the temple that was in Jerusalem, and brought them into the temple of Babylon, those did Cyrus

the king take out of the temple of Babylon, and they were delivered unto one, whose name was Sheshbazzar, whom he had made || governor;

Before
CHRIST
536.

|| Or,
deputy.

15 And said unto him, Take these vessels, go, carry them into the temple that is in Jerusalem, and let the house of God be builded in his place.

16 Then came the same Sheshbazzar, and laid the foundation of the house of God which is in Jerusalem: and since that time even until now hath it been in building, and yet it is not finished.

17 Now therefore, if it seem good to the king, let there be search made in the king's treasure house, which is there at Babylon, whether it be so, that a decree was made of Cyrus the king to build this house of God at Jerusalem, and let the king send his pleasure to us concerning this matter.

CHAP. VI.

1 Darius, finding the decree of Cyrus, maketh a new decree for the advancement of the building. 13 By the help of the enemies, and the directions of the prophets, the temple is finished. 16 The feast of the dedication is kept, 19 and the passover.

THEN Darius the king made a decree, and search was made in the house of the † rolls, where the treasures were † laid up in Babylon.

519.

† Chald. books.
† Chald.
made to descend.
|| Or,
Ecbaiana, or, in a ceffir.

2 And there was found at || Achmetha, in the palace that is in the province of the Medes, a roll, and therein was a record thus written:

3 In the first year of Cyrus the king the same Cyrus the king made a decree concerning the house of God at Jerusalem, Let the house be builded, the place where they offered sacrifices, and let the foundations thereof be strongly laid; the height thereof threescore cubits, and the breadth thereof threescore cubits;

4 With three rows of great stones, and — returned answer] As follows at chap. vi.

8. — the house of the great God,] Such was the expression of the Jews, to distinguish their God from all idols, who were supposed to be the gods of particular countries. Bp. Patrick.

Chap. VI. ver. 2. — was found at Achmetha,] It would seem that they searched in vain at Babylon, and therefore searched at this place, afterwards called Ecbaiana, where the kings of Persia sometimes held their court. Bp. Patrick.

3. — the breadth thereof threescore cubits;] It has been before stated at note on chap. iii. 12, that the dimensions of the new temple were the same as those of Solomon's temple; for the latter seems to have been built on the very same foundations with the former. Still it may seem that Cyrus's commission makes the new temple broader, as it allows it sixty cubits in breadth, whereas Solomon's temple had only twenty cubits in breadth. It should be observed, however, that these measures seem to be applied to different parts of the two temples. The twenty cubits breadth of Solomon's temple was only the breadth of the temple proper, measuring from the inside of the walls. The sixty cubits breadth, on the other hand, mentioned in Cyrus's commission, was the breadth, not of the temple proper, but of the whole building enclosing it, containing different apartments and galleries. The outward breadth of this whole building was seventy cubits; and thus, if we allow five cubits respectively for the breadth of the outer walls, we obtain the breadth measured from the inside of the walls to be such as is here described. Dean Prideaux.

4. With three rows of great stones,] This agrees with the description of Solomon's building his temple at 1 Kings vi. 36, &c. for there seems no doubt that Cyrus gave his commission after a row of new timber: and let the expences be given out of the king's house:

Before
CHRIST
519.

† Chald.
†

5 And also let the golden and silver vessels of the house of God, which Nebuchadnezzar took forth out of the temple which is at Jerusalem, and brought unto Babylon, be restored, and † brought again unto the temple which is at Jerusalem, every one to his place, and place them in the house of God.

† Chald.
their society

6 Now therefore, Tatnai, governor beyond the river, Shethar-boznai, and † your companions the Apharsachites, which are beyond the river, be ye far from thence:

7 Let the work of this house of God alone; let the governor of the Jews and the elders of the Jews build this house of God in this place.

† Chald.
by me a decree is made.

8 Moreover † I make a decree what ye shall do to the elders of these Jews for the building of this house of God: that of the king's goods, even of the tribute beyond the river, forthwith expences be given unto these men, that they be not † hindered.

† Chald. made to cense.

9 And that which they have need of, both young bullocks, and rams, and lambs, for the burnt offerings of the God of heaven, wheat, salt, wine, and oil, according to the appointment of the priests which are at Jerusalem, let it be given them day by day without fail:

† Chald.
of rest.

10 That they may offer sacrifices † of sweet savours unto the God of heaven, and pray for the life of the king, and of his sons.

11 Also I have made a decree, that whosoever shall alter this word, let timber be pulled down from his house, and being set up, † let him be hanged thereon; and let his house be made a dunghill for this.

Before
CHRIST
519.

† Chald. let him be destroyed.

12 And the God that hath caused his name to dwell there destroy all kings and people, that shall put to their hand to alter and to destroy this house of God which is at Jerusalem. I Darius have made a decree; let it be done with speed.

13 ¶ Then Tatnai, governor on this side the river, Shethar-boznai, and their companions, according to that which Darius the king had sent, so they did speedily.

14 And the elders of the Jews builded, and they prospered through the prophesying of Haggai the prophet and Zechariah the son of Iddo. And they builded, and finished it, according to the commandment of the God of Israel, and according to the † commandment of Cyrus, and Darius, and Artaxerxes king of Persia.

† Chald.
decree.

15 And this house was finished on the third day of the month Adar, which was in the sixth year of the reign of Darius the king.

515.

16 ¶ And the children of Israel, the priests, and the Levites, and the rest of † the children of the captivity, kept the dedication of this house of God with joy,

† Chald.
the sons of the transportation.

17 And offered at the dedication of this house of God an hundred bullocks, two hundred rams, four hundred lambs; and for a sin offering for all Israel, twelve he goats, according to the number of the tribes of Israel.

18 And they set the priests in their divisions, and the Levites in their courses, that pattern, having probably consulted the Jews that were about him for that express purpose. Dr. Lightfoot.

11. — and being set up, let him be hanged thereon;] It is the opinion of some, that these words should be translated, agreeably to the sense of the Greek version, “and standing let him be beat upon it,” that is, according to the modern expression, “whipped at the post,” as was the manner among the Persians and other nations. In the subsequent words it is ordered, that his house when pulled down should not be built up again, but the place where it stood be made a dunghill. Thus it was customary among the Romans to pull down the houses of very wicked persons, for their greater disgrace. Bp. Patrick.

12. — I Darius have made a decree;] By virtue of this decree, the Jews were not only fully authorized to go on with the building, but were also furnished with the expenses of it out of the taxes of the province. This had been granted by Cyrus in the former decree; but, by the underhand dealings of the Samaritans and other enemies, in bribing those through whose hands the administration of publick affairs and the publick revenues passed, this part of Cyrus's decree was rendered ineffectual. For a long time, therefore, the Jews, being forced to carry on the work at their own charges, and being in a state of great poverty so soon after their return from captivity, made a very slow progress. Now, however, being largely assisted by the king's bounty, they engaged in the building with such diligence, that they soon brought it to a conclusion. The publication of this decree at Jerusalem may be reckoned the complete restoration of the Jewish state. Dean Prideaux. We here see the happy issue which God gives to those who wait on Him with patience and resignation. Bp. Wilson.

14. — they prospered through the prophesying &c.] That is, the Prophets directed and encouraged them in the work. Bp. Patrick.

15. — the month Adar,] Adar was the twelfth month of the ecclesiastical year among the Jews, answering to part of February and part of March. Lewis.

17. — twelve he goats, according to the number of the tribes] We are here supplied with an additional proof that, on the return of the tribes of Judah and Benjamin from the Babylonish captivity, many also of each of the other tribes returned with them from Assyria, Babylonia, and Media, whither they had been carried; and, joining with them in the rebuilding of the temple, partook in the solemnity of the dedication; otherwise, there is no reason why the sin offering should now be offered in behalf of all the twelve tribes. Since, however, the greater part of those who returned consisted of the tribe of Judah, their name swallowed up the names of all the rest; for, from this time, the whole people of Israel, of what tribe soever they were, began to be called Jews, and by that name they have been known ever since all the world over. Dean Prideaux.

Before
CHRIST
515.

† Chald.
according to the writing.
² Numb. 3.
6. & 8. 9.

for the service of God, which is at Jerusalem; †^a as it is written in the book of Moses.

19 And the children of the captivity kept the passover upon the fourteenth day of the first month.

20 For the priests and the Levites were purified together, all of them were pure, and killed the passover for all the children of the captivity, and for their brethren the priests, and for themselves.

21 And the children of Israel, which were come again out of captivity, and all such as had separated themselves unto them from the filthiness of the heathen of the land, to seek the LORD God of Israel, did eat,

22 And kept the feast of unleavened bread seven days with joy: for the LORD had made them joyful, and turned the heart of the king of Assyria unto them, to strengthen their hands in the work of the house of God, the God of Israel.

CHAP. VII.

1 Ezra goeth up to Jerusalem. 11 The gracious commission of Artaxerxes to Ezra. 27 Ezra blesseth God for his favour.

457. NOW after these things, in the reign of Artaxerxes king of Persia, Ezra the son of Seraiah, the son of Azariah, the son of Hilkiah,

Before
CHRIST
457.

2 The son of Shallum, the son of Zadok, the son of Ahitub,

3 The son of Amariah, the son of Azariah, the son of Meraioth,

4 The son of Zerahiah, the son of Uzzi, the son of Bukki,

5 The son of Abishua, the son of Phinehas, the son of Eleazar, the son of Aaron the chief priest:

6 This Ezra went up from Babylon; and he was a ready scribe in the law of Moses, which the LORD God of Israel had given: and the king granted him all his request, according to the hand of the LORD his God upon him.

7 And there went up some of the children of Israel, and of the priests, and the Levites, and the singers, and the porters, and the Nethinims, unto Jerusalem, in the seventh year of Artaxerxes the king.

457.

8 And he came to Jerusalem in the fifth month, which was in the seventh year of the king.

9 For upon the first day of the first month † began he to go up from Babylon, and on the first day of the fifth month came he to Jerusalem, according to the good hand of his God upon him.

about 457.
† Heb. was the foundation of the going up.

10 For Ezra had prepared his heart to

21. — all such as had separated themselves unto them] That is, proselytes who had forsaken their heathenish religion, and made themselves entirely subject to the law of Moses; for such might eat of the passover, Exod. xii. 48, 49. Bp. Patrick.

22. — the king of Assyria] The king of Persia; (Darius;) being here called king of Assyria, as having conquered those countries which formerly belonged to the kings of Assyria. Bp. Patrick. Darius was a prince of great wisdom, clemency, and justice; and has the honour to be recorded in Holy Writ as a favourer of God's people, a restorer of His temple at Jerusalem, and a promoter of His worship therein. God was pleased to make him His instrument in all this work; and with respect to this it was, no doubt, that He blessed him with a numerous issue, a long reign, and great prosperity. Dean Prideaux.

In the change in the state of the Jews here related, we cannot sufficiently admire the providence of God, and the care He takes of His people: we see that God watches over the church, and finds means to support it, even by idolatrous princes, and in places where it has been most persecuted. Ostervald.

Chap. VII. ver. 1. Now after these things, in the reign of Artaxerxes] The temple worship at Jerusalem, and the free enjoyment of the Jewish religion, having now continued without any considerable interruption for nearly threescore years, (fifty-eight years, see the dates in the margin,) through the reigns of the Persian monarchs, Xerxes and Darius; in the seventh year of the next successor, Artaxerxes Longimanus, the Jews, as is here related, obtained further favour and privileges from the Persian crown, by means of Ezra, who was of the line of Aaron, descended from the heads of that line who are mentioned in the following verses. Pyle.

— son of Seraiah.] He was not immediately the son of Seraiah, but descended from him; perhaps his grandson, or great grandson. Seraiah perished when Jerusalem was taken by the Chaldeans, 2 Kings xxv. 18, 21. Bp. Patrick. Ezra could not be the immediate son of Seraiah; for, if he had been only one year old at his death, he would now have been aged 132; and we find him alive in the time of Nehemiah, fifteen years afterwards.

3. — the son of Azariah, the son of Meraioth.] In this genealogy six generations are omitted between Azariah and Meraioth, which are to be supplied from 1 Chron. vi. 7, &c. These are probably omitted for the sake of brevity. Bp. Patrick.

6. — he was a ready scribe] He calls himself a scribe, from his declaring and explaining the things contained in the Scriptures. The word in the original signifies one skilled and learned in that which was the Book by way of eminence, a teacher and expounder of it: and he was a ready scribe, because he was peculiarly expert and understanding in the law, both in matters which related to the priesthood, and to the civil authority. Bp. Patrick.

— the king granted him all his request.] It is scarcely probable that this uncommon favour was obtained by ordinary means; and it seems to have been granted at the solicitation of Esther. It was usual for the kings of Persia to allow, on some particular occasions, their favourites to ask what boons they pleased; and it is probable that, by the direction of Mordecai, she embraced some favourable opportunity of asking this of the king. Dean Prideaux. This observation supposes the history of the book of Esther to refer to this period: respecting which see the Introduction to that book.

— according to the hand of the Lord his God] Meaning, that God was so favourable to him as to incline the king to give a favourable answer to his petition. Bp. Patrick.

9. — upon the first day of the first month] On the first day of the first month he went from Babylon to the river Ahava, where he spent three days in taking a view of the people that accompanied him, chap. viii. 15. After eight days more, part of

Before
CHRIST
about 457.

seek the law of the LORD, and to do it, and to teach in Israel statutes and judgments.

11 ¶ Now this is the copy of the letter that the king Artaxerxes gave unto Ezra the priest, the scribe, even a scribe of the words of the commandments of the LORD, and of his statutes to Israel.

¶ Or, to Ezra the priest, a perfect scribe of the law of the God of heaven, peace,
&c.

12 Artaxerxes, king of kings, ¶ unto Ezra the priest, a scribe of the law of the God of heaven, perfect peace, and at such a time.

13 I make a decree, that all they of the people of Israel, and of his priests and Levites, in my realm, which are minded of their own freewill to go up to Jerusalem, go with thee.

† Chald.
from before
the king.
* Esther 1.
14.

14 Forasmuch as thou art sent † of the king, and of his ^a seven counsellors, to enquire concerning Judah and Jerusalem, according to the law of thy God which is in thine hand;

15 And to carry the silver and gold, which the king and his counsellors have freely offered unto the God of Israel, whose habitation is in Jerusalem,

* Chap. 8.
25.

16 ^b And all the silver and gold that thou canst find in all the province of Babylon, with the freewill offering of the people, and of the priests, offering willingly for the house of their God which is in Jerusalem:

17 That thou mayest buy speedily with this money bullocks, rams, lambs, with their meat offerings and their drink offerings, and offer them upon the altar of the house of your God which is in Jerusalem.

18 And whatsoever shall seem good to thee, and to thy brethren, to do with the rest of the silver and the gold, that do after the will of your God.

19 The vessels also that are given thee which they spent in prayer and fasting, they proceeded on their journey, chap. viii. 21, 22, 31. Bp. Patrick.

12. Artaxerxes, king of kings,] Artaxerxes had several kings subject to him. Bp. Patrick.

— at such a time.] Here, as at chap. iv. 10, the time, we must suppose, was specified in the original instrument, although it is expressed generally.

14. — and of his seven counsellors,] This decree had the greater authority, as being by the advice of his seven counsellors; for these were the principal men of the kingdom, as appears from Esth. i. 14. Bp. Patrick.

— which is in thine hand;] In which thou art so well versed. Dr. Wells.

22. Unto an hundred talents of silver,] Amounting to the sum of about £35,350, according to Bishop Cumberland's computation of the Hebrew silver talents; but, whether these or any other talents were meant, cannot be ascertained. Pyle.

23. Whatsoever is commanded by the God of heaven, &c.] Jacobus Capellus says of these words, that they ought to be written on the palaces of kings in letters of gold, and engraven on the hearts of all the faithful with a pen of adamant. So strong a for the service of the house of thy God, ^{Before} those deliver thou before the God of Jeru- ^{CHRIST} salem. ^{about 457.}

20 And whatsoever more shall be needful for the house of thy God, which thou shalt have occasion to bestow, bestow it out of the king's treasure house.

21 And I, even I Artaxerxes the king, do make a decree to all the treasurers which are beyond the river, that whatsoever Ezra the priest, the scribe of the law of the God of heaven, shall require of you, it be done speedily, 22 Unto an hundred talents of silver, and to an hundred † measures of wheat, † Chald. and to an hundred baths of wine, and to cors. an hundred baths of oil, and salt without prescribing how much.

23 † Whatsoever is commanded by the God of heaven, let it be diligently done for the house of the God of heaven: for why should there be wrath against the realm of the king and his sons? † Heb. Whatsoever is of the decree.

24 Also we certify you, that touching any of the priests and Levites, singers, porters, Nethinims, or ministers of this house of God, it shall not be lawful to impose toll, tribute, or custom, upon them.

25 And thou, Ezra, after the wisdom of thy God, that is in thine hand, set magistrates and judges, which may judge all the people that are beyond the river, all such as know the laws of thy God; and teach ye them that know them not.

26 And whosoever will not do the law of thy God, and the law of the king, let judgment be executed speedily upon him, whether it be unto death, or † to banish- † Chald. to ment, or to confiscation of goods, or to rooting out. imprisonment.

27 ¶ Blessed be the LORD God of our sense of God's supreme authority do they express, and so clearly do they mark out the regard that is due from the greatest kings and potentates to His most sacred commands. Bp. Patrick.

26. And whosoever will not do &c.] It appears from this verse that Artaxerxes gave the Jews liberty to live by their own laws, and to judge all causes according to them: also, that he gave their magistrates the power of life and death over their own nation. Dr. Wells.

— and the law of the king,] By the law of the king is here meant this decree, which was now made in favour of the Jews, giving them authority to exercise their own laws again. When matters could not be determined by the Divine laws, they were to be judged by the king's law. Bp. Patrick.

27. Blessed be the Lord God] Ezra, having recorded the gracious edict which has just been given, was so penetrated with the goodness of God in inspiring the Persian king with such a favourable disposition, that he could not refrain from breaking forth in the expressions of thankfulness to God which here follow. Dr. Wells. Ezra's thanksgiving to God for putting it into the heart of the king and his counsellors to favour the Jews, shews how full of piety and zeal was this worthy minister of religion.

Before
CHRIST
about 457.

fathers, which hath put such a thing as this in the king's heart, to beautify the house of the LORD which is in Jerusalem :

28 And hath extended mercy unto me before the king, and his counsellors, and before all the king's mighty princes. And I was strengthened as the hand of the LORD my God was upon me, and I gathered together out of Israel chief men to go up with me.

CHAP. VIII.

1 The companions of Ezra, who returned from Babylon.
15 He sendeth to Iddo for ministers for the temple.
21 He keepeth a fast. 24 He committeth the treasures to the custody of the priests. 31 From Ahava they come to Jerusalem. 33 The treasure is weighed in the temple. 36 The commission is delivered.

about 457.

THESE are now the chief of their fathers, and this is the genealogy of them that went up with me from Babylon, in the reign of Artaxerxes the king.

2 Of the sons of Phinehas ; Gershom : of the sons of Ithamar ; Daniel : of the sons of David ; Hattush.

3 Of the sons of Shechaniah, of the sons of Pharosh ; Zechariah : and with him were reckoned by genealogy of the males an hundred and fifty.

4 Of the sons of Pahath-moab ; Elihoenai the son of Zerahiah, and with him two hundred males.

5 Of the sons of Shechaniah ; the son of Jahaziel, and with him three hundred males.

6 Of the sons also of Adin ; Ebed the son of Jonathan, and with him fifty males.

Thus pious men give to God all the glory of the good which befalls them, and put their whole trust in Him, both in prosperity and in adversity. Ostervald.

Chap. VIII. ver. 2. — Daniel :] Not the celebrated Prophet of this name, but some eminent person of Ithamar's family. Bp. Patrick.

3. — by genealogy of the males] The males only are here numbered, and no notice taken of the women and children, ver. 21, which, without doubt, greatly increased the number. Pyle.

13. And of the last sons of Adonikam,] By "the last sons of Adonikam" seem to be meant those of the descendants of Adonikam who went up with Ezra, to distinguish them from others of the same family who had before gone to Jerusalem. Bp. Patrick.

15. — the river that runneth to Ahava ;] There seems to have been a river of this name, ver. 21, as well as a town. The river probably ran into the Euphrates, and the town stood where the union of the two rivers took place. Bp. Patrick.

According to another opinion, the river Ahava is that which ran along the Adiabene, where the river Diava or Adiava is known to be, on which Ptolemy places the city of Abane or Aavane. This is probably the country called at 2 Kings xvii. 24, Ava, from which the kings of Assyria transferred the people called Avites into Palestine. Ezra, intending to pick up as many

Before
CHRIST
about 457.

7 And of the sons of Elam ; Jeshaiiah the son of Athaliah, and with him seventy males.

8 And of the sons of Shephatiah ; Zebadiah the son of Michael, and with him fourscore males.

9 Of the sons of Joab ; Obadiah the son of Jehiel, and with him two hundred and eighteen males.

10 And of the sons of Shelomith ; the son of Josiphiah, and with him an hundred and threescore males.

11 And of the sons of Bebai ; Zechariah the son of Bebai, and with him twenty and eight males.

12 And of the sons of Azgad ; Johanan the son of Hakkatan, and with him an hundred and ten males.

|| Or,
the youngest son.

13 And of the last sons of Adonikam, whose names are these, Eliphelet, Jeiel, and Shemaiah, and with them threescore males.

14 Of the sons also of Bigvai ; Uthai, and || Zabbud, and with them seventy males.

|| Or,
Zaccur, as some read.

15 ¶ And I gathered them together to the river that runneth to Ahava ; and there || abode we in tents three days : and I viewed the people, and the priests, and found there none of the sons of Levi.

|| Or,
pitched.

16 Then sent I for Eliezer, for Ariel, for Shemaiah, and for Elnathan, and for Jarib, and for Elnathan, and for Nathan, and for Zechariah, and for Meshullam, chief men ; also for Joiarib, and for Elnathan, men of understanding.

17 And I sent them with commandment

Israelites as he could to carry back to Judea, made a halt in the country of Ava or Ahava, whence he sent emissaries into the Caspian mountains, to invite such Jews as might there be found to come and join him. Calmet.

— and there abode we in tents three days :] In a similar manner the caravans are wont to encamp four or five leagues from Bagdad, upon an arm of the Tigris, for some days, to see whether they have got all things necessary for so long a journey, and whether nobody is left behind. Sir J. Chardin.

— found there none of the sons of Levi.] No Levites, properly so called ; none of the sons of Levi who were not priests : the want of these to attend upon the priests was likely to prove a great defect in the temple service. Pyle.

16. Then sent I for Eliezer, &c.] Accordingly, he sends eleven of the principal persons of his company to Iddo, a very considerable man at Casiphia, a place of the Babylonish province, where he knew there were a great number of the families of the Levites residing, desiring him to use all his influence to send a number of them, and the inferior officers called Nethinim, to go with him to Jerusalem. Pyle.

Or, by "the place Casiphia," ver. 17, may be meant, mount Caspius, near the Caspian sea, between Media and Hyrcania, where were many captives. Calmet.

The Greek translators render it, "a place of silver ;" which the Hebrew word signifies. Grotius.

Before
CHRIST
about 457.
† Heb. I put words in their mouth.

unto Iddo the chief at the place Casiphia, and † I told them what they should say unto Iddo, and to his brethren the Nethinims, at the place Casiphia, that they should bring unto us ministers for the house of our God.

18 And by the good hand of our God upon us they brought us a man of understanding, of the sons of Mahli, the son of Levi, the son of Israel; and Sherebiah, with his sons and his brethren, eighteen;

19 And Hashabiah, and with him Jeshaiiah of the sons of Merari, his brethren and their sons, twenty;

* See chap.
2. 43.

20 ^a Also of the Nethinims, whom David and the princes had appointed for the service of the Levites, two hundred and twenty Nethinims: all of them were expressed by name.

21 ¶ Then I proclaimed a fast there, at the river of Ahava, that we might afflict ourselves before our God, to seek of him a right way for us, and for our little ones, and for all our substance.

22 For I was ashamed to require of the king a band of soldiers and horsemen to help us against the enemy in the way: because we had spoken unto the king, saying, The hand of our God is upon all them for good that seek him; but his power and his wrath is against all them that forsake him.

23 So we fasted and besought our God for this: and he was intreated of us.

24 ¶ Then I separated twelve of the chief of the priests, Sherebiah, Hashabiah, and ten of their brethren with them,

25 And weighed unto them the silver, and the gold, and the vessels, even the offering of the house of our God, which the king, and his counsellors, and his lords, and all-Israel there present, had offered: Before

CHRIST
about 457.

26 I even weighed unto their hand six hundred and fifty talents of silver, and silver vessels an hundred talents, and of gold an hundred talents;

27 Also twenty basons of gold, of a thousand drams; and two vessels of † fine copper, † precious as gold. † Heb.
yellow, or, shining brass.
† Heb.
desirable.

28 And I said unto them, Ye are holy unto the LORD; the vessels are holy also; and the silver and the gold are a freewill offering unto the LORD God of your fathers.

29 Watch ye, and keep them, until ye weigh them before the chief of the priests and the Levites, and chief of the fathers of Israel, at Jerusalem, in the chambers of the house of the LORD.

30 So took the priests and the Levites the weight of the silver, and the gold, and the vessels, to bring them to Jerusalem unto the house of our God.

31 ¶ Then we departed from the river of Ahava on the twelfth day of the first month, to go unto Jerusalem: and the hand of our God was upon us, and he delivered us from the hand of the enemy, and of such as lay in wait by the way.

32 And we came to Jerusalem, and abode there three days.

33 ¶ Now on the fourth day was the silver and the gold and the vessels weighed in the house of our God by the hand of Meremoth the son of Uriah the priest; and with him was Eleazar the son of Phinehas; and with them was Jozabad the son of Jeshua, and Noadiah the son of Binnui, Levites;

34 By number and by weight of every

20. Also of the Nethinims, whom &c.] This is a clear account who the Nethinims were; not Levites, and probably not natural Israelites, but some whom the kings and nobles had given to the Levites for slaves. Dr. Wall.

22. For I was ashamed &c.] Ezra had so openly declared his dependence on God for safe conduct on his journey, that he was ashamed to ask a guard of protection from the king, who, being little instructed in Divine matters, might have imagined that the Jews only made vain boasts of the favour of God towards them, and of the prophecies respecting their restoration. Thus, had Ezra petitioned for protection and defence from the king, his motives would have been probably mistaken, as if he distrusted the power and favour of God. This then made it the more necessary that he should appoint a solemn fast, in which they might "afflict themselves before their God," ver. 21; that is, humbly and sorrowfully acknowledge their offences towards Him, and "seek of Him a right way;" that is, implore Him to prosper them on their journey. Bp. Patrick.

23. So we fasted and besought &c.] This behaviour of Ezra and his associates, in imploring the blessing of the Almighty by fasting and prayer, might well serve to convince the idolatrous people among whom they lived, that they had a perfect confidence in the Divine protection. Thus good men ever trust in God rather than in man; they seek their principal security in prayer, and God on His part hears their prayers and blesses them, as He did Ezra. Ostervald.

26. — six hundred and fifty talents &c.] Making together a million sterling of our money. Bp. Wilson.

28. — Ye are holy unto the Lord; &c.] On delivering the treasures into their custody, he solemnly charges them, that they must remember they were God's priests and stewards, and the treasures committed to them His peculiar right and property; and therefore, that no care, courage, pains, or hazard, could be too great for keeping them safe, and delivering them justly and punctually into the temple treasury at Jerusalem, where both priests and Levites, and the whole council of the nation, would be witnesses, either of their fidelity, or of their dishonesty, in discharging this important trust. Pyle.

32. And we came to Jerusalem, &c.] It appears from chap. vii. 9, that they came to Jerusalem on the first day of the fifth month, having spent four months in the journey.

Before
CHRIST
about 457.

one: and all the weight was written at that time.

35 Also the children of those that had been carried away, which were come out of the captivity, offered burnt offerings unto the God of Israel, twelve bullocks for all Israel, ninety and six rams, seventy and seven lambs, twelve he goats for a sin offering: all this was a burnt offering unto the LORD.

36 ¶ And they delivered the king's commissions unto the king's lieutenants, and to the governors on this side the river: and they furthered the people, and the house of God.

CHAP. IX.

1 Ezra mourneth for the affinity of the people with strangers. 5 He prayeth unto God with confession of sins.

457.

NOW when these things were done, the princes came to me, saying, The people of Israel, and the priests, and the Levites, have not separated themselves from the people of the lands, doing according to their abominations, even of the Canaanites, the Hittites, the Perizzites, the Jebusites, the Ammonites, the Moabites, the Egyptians, and the Amorites.

2 For they have taken of their daughters for themselves, and for their sons: so that the holy seed have mingled themselves with the people of those lands: yea, the hand of the princes and rulers hath been chief in this trespass.

36. — and they furthered the people,] The king's lieutenants and governours fully obeyed the orders of the king, and contributed every thing requisite for the temple and its services. Pyle.

Chap. IX. ver. 1. — doing according to their abominations, &c.] This expression is commonly used in Scripture to signify the worshipping of idols; but here signifies, in general, imitation of the heathen in promiscuous marriages with any nation whatever, which would soon lead to the commission of idolatry. The marriages of the Jews with the seven nations had been expressly forbidden at Deut. vii. 2, 3; and the same law extended to all nations not proselyted to the Jewish religion. Even before the law of Moses it seems to have been deemed unlawful, after they had received the covenant of circumcision, to intermarry with other nations that were uncircumcised, Gen. xxxiv. 14. Bp. Patrick.

All the nations then in the world, except the Jews, were idolaters. Therefore, to forbid marriage with idolaters was the same to the Jews, as to forbid marriage with any who were not of their communion. That the prohibition to the Jews of marrying with the heathens was not on account of their nation, but their religion, is proved by the fact, that this is the reason given for the command, in almost every place where the command is repeated. Leslie.

2. — the holy seed] The Jews are called "the holy seed," on account of God's covenant with them, making them a peculiar people separate from all other nations. Bp. Patrick.

3. — I rent my garment and my mantle,] I rent both my upper

3 And when I heard this thing, I rent my garment and my mantle, and plucked off the hair of my head and of my beard, and sat down astonished.

Before
CHRIST
457.

4 Then were assembled unto me every one that trembled at the words of the God of Israel, because of the transgression of those that had been carried away; and I sat astonished until the evening sacrifice.

5 ¶ And at the evening sacrifice I arose up from my || heaviness; and having rent my garment and my mantle, I fell upon my knees, and spread out my hands unto the LORD my God, Or, affliction.

6 And said, O my God, I am ashamed and blush to lift up my face to thee, my God: for our iniquities are increased over our head, and our || trespass is grown up unto the heavens. Or, guiltiness.

7 Since the days of our fathers have we been in a great trespass unto this day; and for our iniquities have we, our kings, and our priests, been delivered into the hand of the kings of the lands, to the sword, to captivity, and to a spoil, and to confusion of face, as it is this day.

8 And now for a † little space grace hath been shewed from the LORD our God, to leave us a remnant to escape, and to give us || a nail in his holy place, that our God may lighten our eyes, and give us a little reviving in our bondage. † Heb. moment. Or, a pin: that is, a constant and sure abode.

9 For we were bondmen; yet our God hath not forsaken us in our bondage, but hath extended mercy unto us in the sight and my inner garment, in token of my great grief and fear of God's displeasure for such a sin; "and plucked off the hair &c." as a still stronger token of my grief and alarm; "and sat down astonished" that the people could have been guilty of such a flagrant sin, so shortly after their return from that captivity which had been occasioned by similar sins in their ancestors. Dr. Wells.

After the example of Ezra, all good men do confess and lament, not only their own miscarriages, but those of others, and implore God's pardon for them. Bp. Wilson.

4. — of those that had been carried away;] Of those who had been carried in captivity to Babylon, and had now returned so little amended; he speaks of those who had returned some years ago with Zerubbabel. Bp. Patrick.

6. — O my God, I am ashamed and blush &c.] With what trouble and confusion does Ezra here acknowledge and bewail the sins of his offending people! and, in a similar manner, should the people of all sinful nations, at the solemn appointed seasons of fasting and humiliation, set their sins in order before them with all their heinous aggravations; and lament and bewail with bitterness of soul their offences against the Most High. Abp. Tillotson.

8. — to give us a nail] To give us a fixed or settled abode, as it is explained in the margin. Since the tents in which the Hebrews once lived were fastened down by nails or pins, therefore "a nail" came to signify in their language "a settled abode." Bp. Patrick. See the note from Bp. Lowth on Isai. xxii. 23.

^{Before} CHRIST
457.
† Heb.
to set up.

of the kings of Persia, to give us a reviving, to set up the house of our God, and † to repair the desolations thereof, and to give us a wall in Judah and in Jerusalem.

10 And now, O our God, what shall we say after this? for we have forsaken thy commandments,

† Heb.
by the hand of thy servants.
* Exod. 25.
92.
Deut. 7. 9.
† Heb. from mouth to mouth.

11 Which thou hast commanded † by thy servants the prophets, saying, ^a The land, unto which ye go to possess it, is an unclean land with the filthiness of the people of the lands, with their abominations, which have filled it † from one end to another with their uncleanness.

12 Now therefore give not your daughters unto their sons, neither take their daughters unto your sons, nor seek their peace or their wealth for ever: that ye may be strong, and eat the good of the land, and leave it for an inheritance to your children for ever.

† Heb.
hast withheld beneath our iniquities.

13 And after all that is come upon us for our evil deeds, and for our great trespass, seeing that thou our God † hast punished us less than our iniquities deserve, and hast given us such deliverance as this;

14 Should we again break thy commandments, and join in affinity with the people of these abominations? wouldest not thou be angry with us till thou hadst consumed us, so that there should be no remnant nor escaping? ^{Before}

CHRIST
457.

15 O LORD God of Israel, thou art righteous: for we remain yet escaped, as it is this day: behold, we are before thee in our trespasses: for we cannot stand before thee because of this.

CHAP. X.

1 Shechaniah encourageth Ezra to reform the strange marriages. 6 Ezra mourning assembleth the people. 9 The people, at the exhortation of Ezra, repent, and promise amendment. 15 The care to perform it. 18 The names of them which had married strange wives.

NOW when Ezra had prayed, and when he had confessed, weeping and casting himself down before the house of God, there assembled unto him out of Israel a very great congregation of men and women and children: for the people † wept very sore. <sup>† Heb.
wept a great weeping.</sup>

2 And Shechaniah the son of Jehiel, one of the sons of Elam, answered and said unto Ezra, We have trespassed against our God, and have taken strange wives of the people of the land: yet now there is hope in Israel concerning this thing.

3 Now therefore let us make a covenant with our God † to put away all the wives, <sup>† Heb. to bring forth.</sup>

9. — to give us a reviving.] The restoration of the Jews is here called “a reviving.” In a similar manner Ezekiel compares them, when they were captive in Babylon, to the dry bones of dead men, Ezek. xxxvii. 1. Bp. Patrick.

— and to give us a wall in Judah and in Jerusalem.] This expression is not to be understood literally: the original word, translated “wall,” signifies “the fence of a shepherd’s fold;” it is here figuratively taken to express the establishment of the Jews in their former land of Judah, and in their city Jerusalem. Dr. Hales.

13. — hast punished us less than our iniquities deserve.] The Greek translation expresses it very emphatically, “Thou hast eased us of our sins;” that is, Thou hast not let the whole weight of them fall on us. It is here only said with reference to the Jews, that the punishment of a long captivity, which God had inflicted on them, was beneath the desert of their sins; but it is universally true, that all temporal punishments inflicted on men are far less than their iniquities deserve. Were it not for the merciful mitigations of God’s righteous displeasure, the sinner would not be able to bear it, but would utterly sink under it. Abp. Tillotson.

— and hast given us such deliverance as this;] We here find that, on the most solemn occasions of humiliation, good men have always testified a thankful sense of the goodness of God to them. Indeed the mercy of God does then appear above measure merciful, when the sinner is most deeply sensible of his own vileness and unworthiness. In this passage, Ezra has so strong a sense of the greatness of their deliverance, that he hardly knows how to express it. Abp. Tillotson.

14. — wouldest not thou be angry &c.] These words, in the form of a question, convey a strong and peremptory affirmation; as if he had said, After such a provocation there is great reason to conclude that God would be angry with us till He had consumed us. And the inference to be drawn from the expression is, that it is a fearful aggravation of sin, and a sad presage of ruin to a people after great judgments and deliverances, to return to sin, and especially to the same sins again. Abp. Tillotson.

15. — thou art righteous: for we remain &c.] It is of Thy long-suffering that we are here permitted to live and to approach Thy sacred presence; and it can be nothing less than a wonderful measure of compassion which can pardon our present guilt, and save us from the punishment we deserve. Pyle.

The prayer which Ezra made on this occasion is very instructive. He herein acknowledges, with profound humility, that the sins of the Jews had obliged the Lord to chastise them, and had reduced them to the servile condition in which they were. This shews us that in the evils which we suffer we should always give glory to God, and acknowledge the righteousness of His judgments. And as Ezra, after he had confessed the sins of the Jews, promised they should no more break the law of God, we must acknowledge that the method of obtaining the return of God’s grace and the remission of our past sins, is to forsake those sins by a speedy and sincere conversion, and to take care not to fall into them again. Ostervald.

Chap. X. ver. 1. — there assembled unto him &c.] This prayer being made at the time of evening sacrifice, when many assembled for public worship; and being uttered with great passion, and the highest expressions of grief and sorrow; those who were present were very much moved to see such a person as Ezra, a priest of God, and a great ruler under the king of Persia, so dejected with fear, confusion, and astonishment. The report of the circumstance, it appears, was presently carried through Jerusalem, and the neighbouring places, which brought together a great number of persons of all descriptions, making great lamentations, and considering themselves to be under the heavy displeasure of the Almighty. Bp. Patrick.

2. — yet now there is hope in Israel.] There is hope in God’s mercy that He will pardon us in this thing, provided we truly repent. Dr. Wells.

3. — let us make a covenant &c.] Let us, as a token of sincere

^{Before}
CHRIST
457. and such as are born of them, according to the counsel of my lord, and of those that tremble at the commandment of our God; and let it be done according to the law.

4 Arise; for this matter belongeth unto thee: we also will be with thee: be of good courage, and do it.

5 Then arose Ezra, and made the chief priests, the Levites, and all Israel, to swear that they should do according to this word. And they swear.

6 ¶ Then Ezra rose up from before the house of God, and went into the chamber of Johanan the son of Eliashib: and when he came thither, he did eat no bread, nor drink water: for he mourned because of the transgression of them that had been carried away.

7 And they made proclamation throughout Judah and Jerusalem unto all the children of the captivity, that they should gather themselves together unto Jerusalem;

8 And that whosoever would not come within three days, according to the counsel of the princes and the elders, all his substance should be † forfeited, and himself separated from the congregation of those that had been carried away.

† Heb.
devoted.

9 ¶ Then all the men of Judah and Benjamin gathered themselves together unto Jerusalem within three days. It was the ninth month, and the twentieth day of the month; and all the people sat in the street of the house of God, trembling because of this matter, and for † the great rain.

† Heb.
the showers.

10 And Ezra the priest stood up, and said unto them, Ye have transgressed, and † have taken strange wives, to increase the trespass of Israel.

^{Before} CHRIST
457.

† Heb.
have caused to dwell, or, have brought back.

11 Now therefore make confession unto the LORD God of your fathers, and do his pleasure: and separate yourselves from the people of the land, and from the strange wives.

12 Then all the congregation answered and said with a loud voice, As thou hast said, so must we do.

13 But the people are many, and it is a time of much rain, and we are not able to stand without, neither is this a work of one day or two: for || we are many that have transgressed in this thing.

|| Or,
we have greatly offended in this thing.

14 Let now our rulers of all the congregation stand, and let all them which have taken strange wives in our cities come at appointed times, and with them the elders of every city, and the judges thereof, until the fierce wrath of our God || for this matter be turned from us.

|| Or,
till this matter be dispatched.

15 ¶ Only Jonathan the son of Asahel and Jahaziah the son of Tikvah † were employed about this matter: and Meshullam and Shabbethai the Levite helped them.

† Heb.
stood.

16 And the children of the captivity did so. And Ezra the priest, with certain chief of the fathers, after the house of their fathers, and all of them by their names, were separated, and sat down in the first day of the tenth month to examine the matter.

17 And they made an end with all the men that had taken strange wives by the first day of the first month.

18 ¶ And among the sons of the priests repentance, take a solemn oath in the name of God to put away our wives, &c. Dr. Wells.

456.

4. Arise; for this matter belongeth unto thee:] “Arise” from the ground on which thou liest prostrate; for the management of this matter belongeth unto thee in chief, as not only best skilled in the law, but also, as having full power from the king of Persia to rectify every thing according to the law. Dr. Wells.

6. — and when he came thither,] The word “when” is not in the Hebrew: the passage had perhaps better be translated, “till he came thither, he had eaten no bread, &c.” Bp. Patrick.

8. — all his substance should be forfeited,] In the Hebrew, “should be devoted.” It signifies that his goods were to be so forfeited, as to become sacred to God, and thus incapable of being restored to the former owner, being placed in the treasury of God’s house. Bp. Patrick.

9. — sat in the street of the house of God,] They sat probably in the court of the people, where they worshipped; which lying open to the air, and being not yet perhaps girt about with a wall, as we may gather from Neh. ii. 8, is called “a street.” They were “trembling” because of the offence they had committed, and their dread of its consequences; “and for the great rain,” which fell at the time, and which they believed to be a token of God’s anger against them, on account of their transgression. Bp. Patrick. The rains of December are sometimes extremely cold in the Holy Land. Harmer.

12. — As thou hast said, so must we do.] We should take especial notice, with what readiness the Jews on this occasion obeyed Ezra and the priests, by putting away the strange wives they had married contrary to the command of God. As this obedience must have been very grievous to them, especially since several amongst them had children by these wives, (see ver. 44,) it afforded a strong proof of their submissive disposition, and of the sincerity of their repentance. Thus sinners, who are truly affected by their faults, and desire to obtain forgiveness of them, scrupulously perform all that God commands, and are ever ready to renounce all that is most dear to them. Ostervald.

Magistrates should never be discouraged, however numerous the offenders may be. Let them do their duty, and God will be with them. Bp. Wilson.

15. — were employed about this matter:] These words will admit of being translated, “stood against this matter;” according to which the sense of the passage is, that the four persons here mentioned opposed the business of reformation on which they were proceeding. Dr. Lightfoot.

17. — the first day of the first month.] Of the ensuing year, three months being spent in the investigation.

Before
CHRIST
456.

there were found that had taken strange wives: namely, of the sons of Jeshua the son of Jozadak, and his brethren; Maaseiah, and Eliezer, and Jarib, and Gedaliah.

19 And they gave their hands that they would put away their wives; and being guilty, they offered a ram of the flock for their trespass.

20 And of the sons of Immer; Hanani, and Zebadiah.

21 And of the sons of Harim; Maaseiah, and Elijah, and Shemaiah, and Jehiel, and Uziah.

22 And of the sons of Pashur; Elioenai, Maaseiah, Ishmael, Nethaneel, Jozabad, and Elasah.

23 Also of the Levites; Jozabad, and Shimei, and Kelaiah, (the same is Kelita,) Pethahiah, Judah, and Eliezer.

24 Of the singers also; Eliashib: and of the porters; Shallum, and Telem, and Uri.

25 Moreover of Israel: of the sons of Parosh; Ramiah, and Jeziah, and Malchiah, and Miamin, and Eleazar, and Malchijah, and Benaiah.

26 And of the sons of Elam; Mattaniah, Zechariah, and Jehiel, and Abdi, and Jeremoth, and Eliah.

27 And of the sons of Zattu; Elioenai, Eliashib, Mattaniah, and Jeremoth, and Zabad, and Aziza.

28 Of the sons also of Bebai; Jehohanan, Hananiah, Zabbai, and Athlai. Before
CHRIST
456.

29 And of the sons of Bani; Meshullam, Malluch, and Adaiah, Jashub, and Sheal, and Ramoth.

30 And of the sons of Pahath-moab; Adna, and Chelal, Benaiah, Maaseiah, Mattaniah, Bezaleel, and Binnui, and Manasseh.

31 And of the sons of Harim; Eliezer, Ishijah, Malchiah, Shemaiah, Shimeon, 32 Benjamin, Malluch, and Shemariah.

33 Of the sons of Hashum; Mattenai, Mattathah, Zabad, Eliphelet, Jeremai, Manasseh, and Shimei.

34 Of the sons of Bani; Maadai, Amram, and Uel,

35 Benaiah, Bedeiah, Chelluh,

36 Vaniah, Meremoth, Eliashib,

37 Mattaniah, Mattenai, and Jaasau,

38 And Bani, and Binnui, Shimei,

39 And Shelemiah, and Nathan, and Adaiah,

40 || Machnadebai, Shashai, Sharai,

41 Azarcel, and Shelemiah, Shemariah, 42 Shallum, Amariah, and Joseph.

43 Of the sons of Nebo; Jeiel, Mattithiah, Zabad, Zebina, Jadau, and Joel, Benaiah.

44 All these had taken strange wives: and some of them had wives by whom they had children.

|| Or,
Mabnade-bai, according to some copies.

19. — they gave their hands &c.] They solemnly engaged to divorce their wives, openly acknowledged their crime, and offered a sacrifice of atonement for it at the temple. Pyle.

25. Moreover of Israel:] That is, of the rest of the people, those who were not Levites. Bp. Patrick.

44. All these had taken &c.] The most remarkable of those who had committed this offence are here set down. Whether there might be more, whose names are not recorded, is uncertain. Thus this reformation was concluded, without which the priestly line would have been in a short time corrupted and confounded, and the generality of the nation debauched into lewdness and idolatry, to the entire loss of all the merciful ends and designs of the late happy restoration. Pyle.

Ezra continued in the government of Judea till he was succeeded by Nehemiah, B. C. 446; and, by virtue of the commission he had from the king, he reformed the whole state of the Jewish church, according to the law of Moses, in which he was excellently learned, and settled it upon that foundation, on which it afterwards stood till the time of our Saviour. But, after his government ceased, his labour to serve the church of God did not also cease, for he still went on, as a preacher of righteousness, and a skilful scribe of the law of God, to perfect the reformation which he had begun, both in preparing for the people correct editions of the Scriptures, and also in bringing all things in church and state to a conformity with the rules therein contained. This he continued to do as long as he lived, and herein he was thoroughly assisted and supported by the next governor, who, coming to Jerusalem with the same intention, and the same zeal for promoting the honour of God and the welfare of His people in Judah and Jerusalem, as Ezra did, concurred with him heartily in the work, so that Ezra continued still to pursue the same measures by the authority of the new government, which he before did by his own. And by their thus joining together in the same holy undertaking, and their mutual assisting of each other therein, it exceedingly prospered in their hands, till at length, notwithstanding all oppositions both from within and from without, it was brought to full perfection forty-nine years after it had been begun by Ezra.

The great business effected by Ezra was his collecting and setting forth a correct edition of the holy Scriptures, in which he laboured much, and which he brought to considerable perfection. Of this, both Jews and Christians allow him the honour. The principal services, which he performed in this important work, were these: 1. He corrected all the errors which had crept into these copies, through the negligence or mistakes of transcribers. 2. He collected together all the books, of which the holy Scriptures then consisted, and disposed them in their proper order, thus settling the canon of Scripture. 3. He added in several places throughout the books of this edition, what appeared necessary for their illustration, connexion, or completion, in which he was assisted by the same Spirit, by which they were at first written. 4. He changed the old names of several places, that were grown out of use, putting in their stead the new names by which the places were then known, that the people might the better understand them. In conducting this great work, and in restoring the observance of the Jewish law according to the ancient usages before the captivity, he had the assistance of the principal elders who lived in his time: but the main conduct of the work, and the glory of accomplishing it, was by the Jews chiefly attributed to him, under whose presidency, as they inform us, it was done: Dean Prideaux.

THE BOOK OF NEHEMIAH.

INTRODUCTION.

THE book of Nehemiah being subjoined in the Hebrew canon to that of Ezra as a continuation of his history, was often considered as his work: and in the Latin and Greek Bibles it is called the second book of Ezra; but it undoubtedly was written by Nehemiah, for he professes himself the author of it in the beginning, and uniformly speaks in the first person.

Ezra appears to have continued near ten years in the government of Judea, after the reform which he mentions in the last chapter of his book; persisting probably in his endeavours to restore religion, and to promote the prosperity of his country. Circumstances were however so unfavourable and adverse to his designs, that in the twentieth year of Artaxerxes Longimanus, about the year of the world 3558, we find, from Nehemiah, that representations were made to him at Babylon of the afflicted state of the Jews, and of the ruinous condition of their city, of which the walls were yet unrepaired.

This book begins with an account of Nehemiah's grief at this report; of his application to Artaxerxes for permission to visit and rebuild Jerusalem, "the place of his fathers' sepulchres." Nehemiah then relates his departure and arrival at Jerusalem with authority; feelingly describes the desolate state of Jerusalem, and his exertions to repair its dismantled walls. He records the names of those patriotick men who assisted him on this occasion; the conspiracy of the Ammonites, and other enemies, against the work, and the defeat of their designs. After the finishing of the walls and fortifications, Nehemiah applied himself to other publick objects. The scarcity of the inhabitants in the large city of Jerusalem first excited his attention. He fortunately at this time found a register of those persons who returned from the captivity under Zerubbabel; which he repeats in the 7th chapter, in order to complete the restoration of their possessions to the respective tribes, and to provide that none but the Levites and descendants of Aaron might officiate in the service of the temple, and of the priesthood. Nehemiah then describes the publick reading of the law to the people; the celebration of the feast of tabernacles, and other religious appointments, observed with a pathetick commemoration and thanksgiving for God's former mercies, as described in preceding books of Scripture. Then follows an account of the renewal of the covenant of obedience and respect to God's law, recorded as a memorial, with the names of those who signed it; also a catalogue of those who were appointed by lot, or consented to live at Jerusalem, which was surrounded by hostile neighbours; and the book concludes with a description of the reformation both civil and religious, which Nehemiah effected. Dr. Gray.

It hath been commonly said, that virtues are better taught, and better enforced, by example than by precept. If so, we have in the person of Nehemiah an instance of publick spirit, or the love of our country, which may be set against any thing that history can produce, and which will suffer by no comparison: nor can Greece or Rome boast of a hero superiour to him in this great and good quality. Dr. Jortin.

Before
CHRIST
about 446.

CHAP. I.

1 Nehemiah, understanding by Hanani the misery of Jerusalem, mourneth, fasteth, and prayeth. 5 His prayer.

Chap. I. ver. 1. — Nehemiah the son of Hachaliah.] We are no where told of what tribe or family Nehemiah was. His father Hachaliah seems to have been one of those Jews who, having obtained a good settlement in the land of their captivity, chose rather to remain there, than to return to their own country when leave was given. It is probable that he was an inhabitant of the city of Shushan, which circumstance gave him the opportunity of procuring the advancement of his son to the office of king's cupbearer, ver. 11. Dean Prideaux.

The name Nehemiah signifies "consolation." Dr. Gray.

THE words of Nehemiah the son of ^{Before} Hachaliah. And it came to pass in ^{CHRIST} the month Chisleu, in the twentieth year, as I was in Shushan the palace, — in the month Chisleu.] Answering to part of our November, and part of December. "In the twentieth year" means the twentieth year of the reign of Artaxerxes Longimanus. Dean Prideaux.

— in Shushan the palace.] Shushan, Susan, or Suses was the capital city of Susiana, or of the country of Elam, that is, of Persia. The kings of Persia had a royal palace here; and from the time of Cyrus they adopted the custom of passing the winter here, and the summer at Ecbatana. It was in this city that Daniel had his vision, Dan. viii. 1, 2, and that the events related in the history of

Before
CHRIST
about 145

2 That Hanani, one of my brethren, came, he and certain men of Judah; and I asked them concerning the Jews that had escaped, which were left of the captivity, and concerning Jerusalem.

3 And they said unto me, The remnant that are left of the captivity there in the province are in great affliction and reproach: the wall of Jerusalem also ^a is broken down, and the gates thereof are burned with fire.

^a 2 Kings
25. 10.

4 ¶ And it came to pass, when I heard these words, that I sat down and wept, and mourned certain days, and fasted, and prayed before the God of heaven,

^b Dan. 9.

5 And said, I beseech thee, ^b O LORD God of heaven, the great and terrible God, that keepeth covenant and mercy for them that love him and observe his commandments:

6 Let thine ear now be attentive, and thine eyes open, that thou mayest hear the prayer of thy servant, which I pray before thee now, day and night, for the children of Israel thy servants, and confess the sins of the children of Israel, which we have sinned against thee: both I and my father's house have sinned.

Esther took place. It is known in profane history by the name of Susa. At this day it goes among the Persians by the name of Sousther or Schouster, and is the capital of Kusistan. Calmet. The outward gate of the eastern wall of the temple at Jerusalem was called the gate of Shushan, and on this gate was carved the figure of the city of Shushan, in acknowledgment of the decree granted there by Darius, permitting the rebuilding of the temple. Dr. Lightfoot.

3. — in the province] So Judea had been before called, Ezra v. 8. — the wall of Jerusalem also is broken down,] They mean, that the walls and gates of the city lay as the Chaldeans had left them when they destroyed the city, and had not been repaired, although the temple was rebuilt. Bp. Patrick. They inform him that, the walls being still in many instances broken down, and the gates in the same demolished state as when burnt by the Chaldeans, those children of the captivity who dwelt there lay open, not only to the incursions and insults of their enemies, but also to the reproach and contempt of their neighbours, as a weak and despicable people, and that, on both these accounts, they were in great affliction and grief of heart. Dean Prideaux.

It is supposed that the commissions hitherto to the Jews extended no farther than to the rebuilding of the temple, and their own private houses; and therefore the walls and gates of the city continued in their ruinous condition. Stackhouse.

4. — I sat down and wept,] How many had seen these ruins and were little affected! Nehemiah hears of them afar off, and is thus deeply afflicted. How many were upon this sight affected with a fruitless sorrow! Nehemiah's mourning is joined with the endeavours at redress. In vain is that grief which has no other end than itself. Bp. Hall.

— and prayed before the God of heaven,] From the very beginning of the book of Nehemiah, we meet with marks of the ardent piety of this holy man. This appears in his grief, to hear of the deplorable state which the city of Jerusalem and all the Jews were in; and in that excellent and fervent prayer which he made, to implore the mercy of God on their behalf, to obtain pardon for their sins, and their complete restoration. All those who fear

Before
CHRIST
about 446.

7 We have dealt very corruptly against thee, and have not kept the commandments, nor the statutes, nor the judgments, which thou commandedst thy servant Moses.

8 Remember, I beseech thee, the word that thou commandedst thy servant Moses, saying, ^c If ye transgress, I will scatter you abroad among the nations: ^c Deut. 4. 25, &c.

9 But if ye turn unto me, and keep my commandments, and do them; ^d though there were of you cast out unto the uttermost part of the heaven, yet will I gather them from thence, and will bring them unto the place that I have chosen to set my name there. ^d Deut. 30. 4.

10 Now these are thy servants and thy people, whom thou hast redeemed by thy great power, and by thy strong hand.

11 O LORD, I beseech thee, let now thine ear be attentive to the prayer of thy servant, and to the prayer of thy servants, who desire to fear thy name: and prosper, I pray thee, thy servant this day, and grant him mercy in the sight of this man. For I was the king's cupbearer.

God, and especially those who are in an exalted station, should, like Nehemiah, be more concerned for the church of God than for any other thing; should sympathize in the evils that befall it, pray continually for it, and labour as much as possible to promote its happiness and prosperity. Ostervald.

8. — the word that thou commandedst thy servant Moses,] See Deut. iv. 25, &c.; xxx. 1—4. It is observable that Nehemiah here frames his prayer to God, and directs his enterprise for the restoration of Jerusalem according to the rule delivered by Moses. He saw the truth of that prediction confirmed by the king's disposition to grant his petition, and the speedy restoration of Jerusalem, although one who professed to be a prophet, chap. vi. 10, 11, dissuaded him from the enterprise, as likely to prove dangerous to his person. Dr. Jackson.

Nehemiah is resolved to kneel to the king his master for the repair of his Jerusalem; but he dares not attempt his suit, till he has begun with God. This good courtier knew well that the hearts of these earthly kings are in the overruling hand of the King of heaven, to incline whithersoever He pleaseth. Our prayers are the only true means of making way for our success. Bp. Hall.

11. — For I was the king's cupbearer,] This was a place of great honour and advantage in the Persian court, on account of the privilege it afforded of being daily in the king's presence, and the opportunity it thereby gave of preferring a petition, and obtaining a favour. It was no doubt from the emoluments connected with this place that he gained those immense riches, which enabled him (see chap. v. 14, &c.) to live in his government with great splendour and expense, without burdening the people. Dean Prideaux.

Nehemiah was cupbearer to the Persian king, which was a place of great honour, and of no less profit. He was highly in the favour of that prince, and very rich, and, as to this world, had all that he could hope and wish. It was scarcely to be expected, that one in his situation would bestow a thought upon his remote, and poor, and desolate country; and not one of ten thousand in his circumstances would have concerned himself about it. If at about 445.

Before
CHRIST

CHAP. II.

1 Artaxerxes understanding the cause of Nehemiah's sadness sendeth him with letters and commission to Jerusalem. 9 Nehemiah, to the grief of the enemies, cometh to Jerusalem. 12 He vieweth secretly the ruins of the walls. 17 He inciteth the Jews to build in despite of the enemies.

AND it came to pass in the month Nisan, in the twentieth year of Artaxerxes the king, that wine was before him: and I took up the wine, and gave it unto the king. Now I had not been beforetime sad in his presence.

2 Wherefore the king said unto me, Why is thy countenance sad, seeing thou art not sick? this is nothing else but sorrow of heart. Then I was very sore afraid,

3 And said unto the king, Let the king live for ever: why should not my countenance be sad, when the city, the place of my fathers' sepulchres, lieth waste, and the gates thereof are consumed with fire?

4 Then the king said unto me, For what dost thou make request? So I prayed to the God of heaven.

5 And I said unto the king, If it please the king, and if thy servant have found favour in thy sight, that thou wouldest that distance he had sent a generous relief to his brethren in Judea, and performed such kind offices towards them, as he conveniently could, even this would have been a friendly and liberal behaviour; but he proposed to himself to do much more than this. Dr. Jortin.

Chap. II. ver. 1. — in the month Nisan,] Four months after he had heard of the desolate state in which Jerusalem lay; probably, during this interval, his turn of waiting did not come, or he had no favourable opportunity of speaking to the king. Bp. Patrick.

2. — Why is thy countenance sad,] When we see a heathen master so tender of his servant's grief, how sensible, do we think, the great Father of mercies must be of our sorrowful thoughts; and how ready should our tongues be, to lay open our cares to the God of all comfort, when we see Nehemiah so quick in the expressions of his sorrow to an uncertain ear. Bp. Hall.

3. — Let the king live for ever:] A common form of wishing the king long life and happiness. Bp. Patrick. See the note on Dan. ii. 4.

— why should not my countenance be sad,] There is a pious affection due to one's country, which cannot be extinguished by the pleasure or plenty of any other. It is no weakness to be deeply affected with the misfortunes, or for the death of our nearest friends or relations, by whatever distance we may be separated from them. Nor can any prosperity in another country hinder or excuse a man for not being deeply afflicted for any calamity that befalls his own. Nehemiah was in no mean station when he was cupbearer to Artaxerxes, and probably had the honours and preferments of that great empire at his command; yet, when the king discerned that there was sorrow of heart expressed in his countenance, and demanded the reason of it, he made no other excuse than "the place of my fathers' sepulchres lieth waste:" and, when the king so graciously invited him to ask some favour worthy of his royal bounty, he would ask nothing further than "Send me unto Judah, unto the city of my fathers' sepulchres, that I may build it." A generous spirit can think of nothing but send me unto Judah, unto the city of my fathers' sepulchres, that I may build it.

Before
CHRIST
about 445.

6 And the king said unto me, (the † queen also sitting by him,) For how long shall thy journey be? and when wilt thou return? So it pleased the king to send me; and I set him a time.

† Heb.
wife.

7 Moreover I said unto the king, If it please the king, let letters be given me to the governors beyond the river, that they may convey me over till I come into Judah;

8 And a letter unto Asaph the keeper of the king's forest, that he may give me timber to make beams for the gates of the palace which appertained to the house, and for the wall of the city, and for the house that I shall enter into. And the king granted me, according to the good hand of my God upon me.

9 ¶ Then I came to the governors beyond the river, and gave them the king's letters. Now the king had sent captains of the army and horsemen with me.

445.

10 When Sanballat the Horonite, and Tobiah the servant, the Ammonite, heard of it, it grieved them exceedingly that there relieving his country, while it is under a general misery or calamity. Lord Clarendon.

4. — So I prayed to the God of heaven.] Meaning, that he paused for a short time, so as to put up a short ejaculation to heaven for a favourable answer. Pyle.

6. — (the queen also sitting by)] Probably, the queen Esther. As it is here particularly remarked, that the queen was sitting by the king when Nehemiah obtained the grant, it is sufficiently implied that her favour assisted him in the business. Dean Pridcaur.

8. — of the king's forest,] Perhaps of the forest of Lebanon, from which the materials for publick buildings at Jerusalem were brought. Bp. Patrick.

— which appertained to the house,] Which appertained to the house of the Lord. Houbigant.

— and for the house that I shall enter into.] For the building of a house, which might be the residence of himself and of future governors.

10. — Sanballat the Horonite, &c.] Horonaim was an eminent city in the country of Moab, (Is. xv. 5; Jer. xlviii. 3, 5, 34,) so that Sanballat was probably a petty prince in that country. From the mention of this person and Tobiah the Ammonite, it is shewn that the nations of Moab and Ammon were restored, as well as the Jews, according to the Divine oracles, and were well known; to the end that their destruction by the people of God might be more observable, which was in the time of the Maccabees, who subdued those nations, according to the predictions of the several Prophets. Tobiah is called "the servant, the Ammonite." It is probable that he had been a slave from that country, but was now advanced to some authority in these parts. Bp. Patrick.

— it grieved them exceedingly] The people of these neighbouring nations were excited to their opposition, not only by the ancient and bitter enmity which they bore to the whole Jewish nation, on account of their difference in manners and religion, but, more especially, at this time, on account of their lands. It is related by Josephus, that these nations, having seized the lands of the Jews during their captivity, had been forced to restore them on their return: thus they naturally endeavoured by all

Before
CHRIST
445.

was come a man to seek the welfare of the children of Israel.

11 So I came to Jerusalem, and was there three days.

12 ¶ And I arose in the night, I and some few men with me; neither told I any man what my God had put in my heart to do at Jerusalem: neither was there any beast with me, save the beast that I rode upon.

13 And I went out by night by the gate of the valley, even before the dragon well, and to the dung port, and viewed the walls of Jerusalem, which were broken down, and the gates thereof were consumed with fire.

14 Then I went on to the gate of the fountain, and to the king's pool: but there was no place for the beast that was under me to pass.

15 Then went I up in the night by the brook, and viewed the wall, and turned back, and entered by the gate of the valley, and so returned.

16 And the rulers knew not whither I went, or what I did; neither had I as yet told it to the Jews, nor to the priests, nor to the nobles, nor to the rulers, nor to the rest that did the work.

17 ¶ Then said I unto them, Ye see the distress that we are in, how Jerusalem lieth waste, and the gates thereof are burned with fire: come, and let us build up the wall of Jerusalem, that we be no more a reproach.

18 Then I told them of the hand of my God which was good upon me; as also the king's words that he had spoken unto me.

means to prevent their complete settlement, hoping that, if they were kept in a depressed state, they might have an opportunity of recovering at some future time the prey they had lost. Dean Prideaux.

14. — the gate of the fountain,] The fountain either of Siloah or of Gihon. Though the wall was broken down, the places where the gates were, were probably known, and the names retained. Bp. Patrick. The position of the other places here mentioned is only known by conjecture.

18. Then I told them of the hand of my God &c.] He told them how favourable God had been to him, in disposing the king to assist him in his project.

20. — The God of heaven, he will prosper us;] Professing his confidence in the God of heaven, in whose work he was now engaged, he shakes off the impotent malice of his adversaries, and goes on cheerfully to build. Bp. Hall.

Nehemiah's whole behaviour on this occasion shews his sincere piety, joined with great prudence and courage; and the success which he obtained teaches us that God blesses designs which are formed for good ends, and that those who labour to promote His glory, should never be discouraged when they are opposed by the wicked. Ostervald.

— ye have no portion, &c.] You have no property, no right

And they said, Let us rise up and build. So they strengthened their hands for this good work. Before
CHRIST
445.

19 But when Sanballat the Horonite, and Tobiah the servant, the Ammonite, and Geshem the Arabian, heard it, they laughed us to scorn, and despised us, and said, What is this thing that ye do? will ye rebel against the king?

20 Then answered I them, and said unto them, The God of heaven, he will prosper us; therefore we his servants will arise and build: but ye have no portion, nor right, nor memorial, in Jerusalem.

CHAP. III.

The names and order of them that builded the wall.

THEN Eliashib the high priest rose up with his brethren the priests, and they builded the sheep gate; they sanctified it, and set up the doors of it; even unto the tower of Meah they sanctified it, unto the tower of ^a Hananeel.

^a Jer. 31.

38.
† Heb.
at his hand.

2 And † next unto him builded the men of Jericho. And next to them builded Zaccur the son of Imri.

3 But the fish gate did the sons of Hasenaah build, who also laid the beams thereof, and set up the doors thereof, the locks thereof, and the bars thereof.

4 And next unto them repaired Meremoth the son of Urijah, the son of Koz. And next unto them repaired Meshullam the son of Berechiah, the son of Meshezabeel. And next unto them repaired Zadok the son of Baana.

5 And next unto them the Tekoites reof any kind, your names are not even registered, in Jerusalem; you have therefore no right to interfere in a concern exclusively ours.

Chap. III. ver. 1. Then Eliashib the high priest &c.] The names of the persons and families, who repaired and finished the different gates and parts of the wall mentioned in this chapter, are here especially detailed, to the end that they, whose zeal for their country and for the true honour and worship of God was so eminent and commendable, might have their names transmitted to posterity, for honourable examples to all generations. Pyle.

— and they builded the sheep gate;] The sheep gate is thought to have been on the south side of the city, in that part of the valley which looked towards the city of David and the temple; and to have been named from the circumstance of the sheep which were intended for the sacrifices being led in at this gate, on which account, it may be presumed, the priests undertook this part of the work, as most proper for them. We read that after they had completed it, “they sanctified it,” that is, blessed it with solemn prayers, and perhaps with sacrifices. This is the only part of the work which is said to have been thus “sanctified,” probably on account of its being the priests’ work, and of the relation which it had to sacred uses. Bp. Patrick.

Before
CHRIST
445.

paired; but their nobles put not their necks to the work of their Lord.

6 Moreover the old gate repaired Jehoiada the son of Paseah, and Meshullam the son of Besodeiah; they laid the beams thereof, and set up the doors thereof, and the locks thereof, and the bars thereof.

7 And next unto them repaired Melatiah the Gibeonite, and Jadon the Meronothite, the men of Gibeon, and of Mizpah, unto the throne of the governor on this side the river.

8 Next unto him repaired Uzziel the son of Harhaiah, of the goldsmiths. Next unto him also repaired Hananiah the son of one of the apothecaries, and they || fortified Jerusalem unto the broad wall.

† Or, left Jerusalem unto the broad wall.

9 And next unto them repaired Rephaiah the son of Hur, the ruler of the half part of Jerusalem.

10 And next unto them repaired Jedaiah the son of Harumaph, even over against his house. And next unto him repaired Hattush the son of Hashabniah.

† Heb.
second measure.

11 Malchijah the son of Harim, and Hashub the son of Pahath-moab, repaired the † other piece, and the tower of the furnaces.

12 And next unto him repaired Shalun the son of Halohesh, the ruler of the half part of Jerusalem, he and his daughters.

13 The valley gate repaired Hanun, and the inhabitants of Zanoah; they built it, and set up the doors thereof, the locks thereof, and the bars thereof, and a thousand cubits on the wall unto the dung gate.

14 But the dung gate repaired Malchiah the son of Rechab, the ruler of part of Beth-haccerem; he built it, and set up the doors thereof, the locks thereof, and the bars thereof.

John 9. 7.

15 But the gate of the fountain repaired Shallun the son of Col-hozeh, the ruler of part of Mizpah; he built it, and covered it, and set up the doors thereof, the locks thereof, and the bars thereof, and the wall of the pool of ^b Siloah by the king's garden, and unto the stairs that go down from the city of David.

16 After him repaired Nehemiah the son of Azbuk, the ruler of the half part of Beth-zur, unto the place over against the sepulchres of David, and to the ^c pool that was made, and unto the house of the mighty.

Before
CHRIST
445.

^c 2 Kings
20. 20.

17 And after him repaired the Levites, Rehum the son of Bani. Next unto him repaired Hashabiah, the ruler of the half part of Keilah, in his part.

18 After him repaired their brethren, Bavai the son of Henadad, the ruler of the half part of Keilah.

19 And next to him repaired Ezer the son of Jeshua, the ruler of Mizpah, another piece over against the going up to the armoury at the turning of the wall.

20 After him Baruch the son of || Zabbai earnestly repaired the other piece, from the turning of the wall unto the door of the house of Eliashib the high priest.

† Or, Zucani.

21 After him repaired Meremoth the son of Urijah the son of Koz another piece, from the door of the house of Eliashib even to the end of the house of Eliashib.

22 And after him repaired the priests, the men of the plain.

23 After him repaired Benjamin and Hashub over against their house. After him repaired Azariah the son of Maaseiah the son of Ananiah by his house.

24 After him repaired Binnui the son of Henadad another piece, from the house of Azariah unto the turning of the wall, even unto the corner.

25 Palal the son of Uzai, over against the turning of the wall, and the tower which lieth out from the king's high house, that was by the ^d court of the prison. After him Pedaiah the son of Parosh.

^d Jer. 32. 2.

26 Moreover the Nethinims dwelt in ^e || Ophel, unto the place over against the water gate toward the east, and the tower that lieth out.

^e 2 Chron.
27. 3.
† Or,
the tower.

27 After them the Tekoites repaired another piece, over against the great tower that lieth out, even unto the wall of Ophel.

28 From above the horse gate repaired the priests, every one over against his house.

29 After them repaired Zadok the son of Immer over against his house. After him repaired also Shemaiah the son of Shechaniah, the keeper of the east gate.

30 After him repaired Hananiah the son of Shelemiah, and Hanun the sixth son of Zalaph, another piece. After him repaired

7. — unto the throne of the governor] Unto the palace of the governour; the word "throne" being used to signify any royal abode. Harmer.

16. — the house of the mighty.] Perhaps where the king's guard were lodged, who were all mighty men of valour. Bp. Patrick.

^{Before CHRIST 445.} Meshullam the son of Berechiah over against his chamber.

31 After him repaired Malchiah the goldsmith's son unto the place of the Nethinims, and of the merchants, over against the gate Miphkad, and to the || going up of the corner.

Or, corner chamber.

32 And between the going up of the corner unto the sheep gate repaired the goldsmiths and the merchants.

CHAP. IV.

1 While the enemies scoff, Nehemiah prayeth and continueth the work. 7 Understanding the wrath and secrets of the enemy, he setteth a watch. 13 He armeth the labourers, 19 and giveth military precepts.

BUT it came to pass, that when Sanballat heard that we builded the wall, he was wroth, and took great indignation, and mocked the Jews.

2 And he spake before his brethren and the army of Samaria, and said, What do these feeble Jews? will they † fortify themselves? will they sacrifice? will they make an end in a day? will they revive the stones out of the heaps of the rubbish which are burned?

† Heb. leave to themselves.

3 Now Tobiah the Ammonite was by him, and he said, Even that which they build, if a fox go up, he shall even break down their stone wall.

† Heb. desire.

4 Hear, O our God; for we are † despised: and turn their reproach upon their own head, and give them for a prey in the land of captivity:

5 And cover not their iniquity, and let not their sin be blotted out from before thee: for they have provoked thee to anger before the builders. ^{Before CHRIST 445.}

6 So built we the wall; and all the wall was joined together unto the half thereof: for the people had a mind to work.

7 ¶ But it came to pass, that when Sanballat, and Tobiah, and the Arabians, and the Ammonites, and the Ashdodites, heard that the walls of Jerusalem † were made up, and that the breaches began to be stopped, then they were very wroth, ^{† Heb. ascended.}

8 And conspired all of them together to come and to fight against Jerusalem, and † to hinder it. ^{† Heb. to make an error to it.}

9 Nevertheless we made our prayer unto our God, and set a watch against them day and night, because of them.

10 And Judah said, The strength of the bearers of burdens is decayed, and there is much rubbish; so that we are not able to build the wall.

11 And our adversaries said, They shall not know, neither see, till we come in the midst among them, and slay them, and cause the work to cease.

12 And it came to pass, that when the Jews which dwelt by them came, they said unto us ten times, || From all places whence ye shall return unto us they will be upon you. ^{Or, That from all places ye must return to us.}

13 ¶ Therefore set I † in the lower places behind the wall, and on the higher places, I even set the people after their families with their swords, their spears, and their bows. ^{† Heb. from the lower parts of the place, &c.}

14 And I looked, and rose up, and said unto the nobles, and to the rulers, and to

32. — the going up of the corner unto the sheep gate.] This account had begun from the sheep gate, ver. 1. Thus the relation respecting the whole circuit of the walls is now completed. Dr. Wells.

Chap. IV. ver. 2. — will they revive the stones &c.] In his expressions of derision, he represents it to be impossible that they should repair the wall, unless they could make the broken pieces of stone which had mouldered become whole stones again. Bp. Patrick.

3. — if a fox go up, &c.] If a fox (jackall) should endeavour to force his way through, he would break down their stone wall, designed to defend their capital city; a sarcastick expression, implying that it was not so strong as the wall of a vineyard or garden. Harmer.

5. And cover not their iniquity.] There is a seeming harshness in this prayer; but Nehemiah should rather be considered, as speaking by the spirit of prophecy, as David did in the 109th Psalm; and we should understand that, on account of the malicious and implacable spirit which they shewed towards God and His people, he foresaw they would never be capable of God's mercy, but would be utterly destroyed by Him. There are several prophecies on which this prayer was founded; and it was confirmed by the destruction of these nations under the Maccabees and their successors. Bp. Patrick.

9. — we made our prayer unto our God, and set a watch.] We are here supplied with a striking example that in all our dangers we should have recourse to the Lord, without neglecting our own labours and application, and all lawful means of warding off the evils which threaten us. Nehemiah, in the instance before us, made his prayer to God, exhorted the people to fear nothing, and shewed by all he said that he put his whole confidence in God; but at the same time he gave necessary orders to prevent being surprised by his enemies, and used every precaution which prudence required. Ostervald.

Nehemiah did not order the people to go to prayers only, and to confess their sins, and to commit their cause to Heaven; but, like a pious and brave man, he exhorted them to join with him in supplication to God, and at the same time to put themselves in a posture of defence. Dr. Jortin.

10. And Judah said,] That is, some of the Jews represented to him, that, from the length and severity of the work, the labourers were quite exhausted; and that, from the quantity of rubbish remaining, more than they were able to remove, it would be necessary to desist, for the present at least, from building the wall: they professed besides to have intelligence that their enemies were meditating a secret attack, so that there would be no notice of their approach till they were actually in the midst of them. Bp. Patrick.

12. — they said unto us ten times,] "Ten times" used for a great many times.

Before
CHRIST
445.

the rest of the people, Be not ye afraid of them: remember the LORD, which is great and terrible, and fight for your brethren, your sons, and your daughters, your wives, and your houses.

15 And it came to pass, when our enemies heard that it was known unto us, and God had brought their counsel to nought, that we returned all of us to the wall, every one unto his work.

16 And it came to pass from that time forth, that the half of my servants wrought in the work, and the other half of them held both the spears, the shields, and the bows, and the habergeons; and the rulers were behind all the house of Judah.

17 They which builded on the wall, and they that bare burdens, with those that laded, every one with one of his hands wrought in the work, and with the other hand held a weapon.

† Heb.
on his loins.

18 For the builders, every one had his sword girded † by his side, and so builded. And he that sounded the trumpet was by me.

19 ¶ And I said unto the nobles, and to the rulers, and to the rest of the people, The work is great and large, and we are separated upon the wall, one far from another.

20 In what place therefore ye hear the sound of the trumpet, resort ye thither unto us: our God shall fight for us.

21 So we laboured in the work: and half of them held the spears from the rising of the morning till the stars appeared.

22 Likewise at the same time said I unto the people, Let every one with his servant lodge within Jerusalem, that in the night they may be a guard to us, and labour on the day.

Before
CHRIST
445.

23 So neither I, nor my brethren, nor my servants, nor the men of the guard which followed me, none of us put off our clothes, || saving that every one put them off for washing.

|| Or,
every one went with his weapon for water.

CHAP. V.

1 The Jews complain of their debt, mortgage, and bondage. 6 Nehemiah rebuketh the usurers, and causeth them to make a covenant of restitution. 14 He forbearth his own allowance, and keepeth hospitality.

AND there was a great cry of the people and of their wives against their brethren the Jews.

2 For there were that said, We, our sons, and our daughters, are many: therefore we take up corn for them, that we may eat, and live.

3 Some also there were that said, We have mortgaged our lands, vineyards, and houses, that we might buy corn, because of the dearth.

4 There were also that said, We have borrowed money for the king's tribute, and that upon our lands and vineyards.

5 Yet now our flesh is as the flesh of our brethren, our children as their children: and, lo, we bring into bondage our sons and our daughters to be servants, and some of our daughters are brought unto bondage already: neither is it in our power to redeem them; for other men have our lands and vineyards.

6 ¶ And I was very angry when I heard their cry and these words.

7 Then † I consulted with myself, and I rebuked the nobles, and the rulers, and † Heb.

my heart consulted in me.

14. — remember the Lord, &c.] Nothing can so hearten us to the encountering of any evil, as the remembrance of that infinite power and wisdom, which can either avert it, or mitigate it, or turn it to our good. We could never faint under calamity, if we were not forgetful of God. Bp. Hall.

17. — every one with one of his hands &c.] Meaning, that every workman was prepared to work or to fight, as occasion might serve. Pyle.

23. — none of us put off our clothes, &c.] The description here given affords a striking picture of the calamitous and unsettled state of the country, and of their continual apprehension of immediate attack, arising from the ill will of their neighbours.

Chap. V. ver. 1. — there was a great cry of the people] That is, of the poor people and their wives, against their rich brethren, the Jews. It appears that they were by no means cured of all their sins by their long captivity; for they married strange women, as we read in the book of Ezra, chap. ix, x, and, as is here related, they oppressed the poor and needy, and that at a time when their enemies were threatening the destruction of them all. Bp. Patrick.

5. Yet now our flesh is as the flesh of our brethren,] There is no difference in nature, in flesh or blood, between us and the rest of Israel; why then should we, without any fault on our part, be placed in a condition so much worse than they? Bp. Hall. They represent very pathetically that no difference subsisted between them and their brethren, except that the one were poor, the other rich; for all were Jews of the same stock, the same by nature and the favour of God, and therefore entitled to the enjoyment of the same freedom. Bp. Patrick.

— we bring into bondage our sons &c.] It was lawful so to do in cases of extreme necessity, Exod. xxi. 1, &c. but those persons were very destitute of compassion who forced their brethren to do what was so much against nature. Thus the condition of these poor Jews was truly lamentable: none would lend them money freely; and to pay their usury they were forced to sell their children, whom they had not power to redeem because their lands were mortgaged to their oppressors. Bp. Patrick.

7. — and I rebuked the nobles, &c.] Good Nehemiah could not but be moved at the barbarous extortion practised on the people: and now, like an impartial governour, he rebukes the rulers and nobles, whose hands were thus bloody with oppression. It is indeed an ill use of power when the weight of it serves only said unto them, Ye exact usury, every one of his brother. And I set a great assembly against them.

Before
CHRIST
445.

8 And I said unto them, We after our ability have ²redeemed our brethren the Jews, which were sold unto the heathen; and will ye even sell your brethren? or shall they be sold unto us? Then held they their peace, and found nothing to answer.

9 Also I said, It is not good that ye do: ought ye not to walk in the fear of our God because of the reproach of the heathen our enemies?

10 I likewise, and my brethren, and my servants, might exact of them money and corn: I pray you, let us leave off this usury.

11 Restore, I pray you, to them, even this day, their lands, their vineyards, their oliveyards, and their houses, also the hundredth part of the money, and of the corn, to crush the weak; but, when nobility does debase itself by any foul act, it is so much more worthy of rebuke, as the person is of higher rank, and more extensive example. Bp. Hall.

— Ye exact usury.] This was a manifest breach of the law of God, given by Moses, which forbade all the race of Israel to take usury of their brethren, Exod. xxii. 25; Levit. xxv. 36, 37; Deut. xviii. 19. Dean Prideaux.

— I set a great assembly against them.] I resolved to shame them out of their scandalous proceeding in an open assembly of magistrates and people, which I immediately called for that purpose. Pyle.

8. — We after our ability &c.] He speaks either of himself in the plural number, which is a form often used by governors and great men, or of himself together with Ezra and other lovers of their country, and says, that they had redeemed their brethren the Jews; that is, had done their utmost to deliver them out of the captivity of Babylon, by which they were restored to their country and their liberty. Bp. Patrick.

9. — ought ye not to walk &c.] He means to say, If we had been dwelling alone on the earth, yet the fear of God ought to overawe our ways; but, now that we dwell in the midst of our enemies, whose eyes are bent on all our actions, whose tongues are as ready to blaspheme God, as we unhappily are to offend Him, how carefully should we avoid those sins which may draw shame upon our profession! Bp. Hall.

Nehemiah set the people an example of piety, and endeavoured above all things to make them religious, and thereby to secure to them the favour and protection of God. In this we should imitate him, and without this in vain do we pretend to love our country. A patriot is a religious man, who employs himself in serving the publick: and a good citizen is one, who loves God and his neighbour. Whosoever neglects his duty to God, cannot perform his duty to the publick in a complete and effectual manner. There are, as there ever have been, men who have little religion, and yet some share of what we commonly call honour and publick spirit, who would not injure their nation for private advantage, and would risk their fortunes or their lives for their country. Yet these persons often do more harm another way, by their immoralities, by setting a bad example, and corrupting the minds of men, than they can compensate by intrepidity, generosity, and honour. But in reality, a patriot without religion, and an honest man without the fear of God, is one of the most uncommon creatures upon earth; and unhappy are the people, who have nothing better to trust to, than the honour of such counsellors and magistrates. Dr. Jortin.

11. — also the hundredth part of the money.] By the “hunthe wine, and the oil, that ye exact of them. Before CHRIST

445.

12 Then said they, We will restore them, and will require nothing of them; so will we do as thou sayest. Then I called the priests, and took an oath of them, that they should do according to this promise.

13 Also I shook my lap, and said, So God shake out every man from his house, and from his labour, that performeth not this promise, even thus be he shaken out, and [†]emptied. And all the congregation said, Amen, and praised the LORD. And the people did according to this promise. † Heb.
empty, or,
void.

14 ¶ Moreover from the time that I was appointed to be their governor in the land of Judah, from the twentieth year even unto the two and thirtieth year of Artaxerxes the king, that is, twelve years, I and my brethren have not eaten the bread of the governor.

dredth part” is meant a particular sort of usury practised in those countries, and afterwards among the Romans. It signifies, that the hundredth part of the sum lent was to be paid as interest, every month; that is, in modern expression, an interest of one per cent. every month, or of twelve per cent. every year. Bp. Patrick, Dean Prideaux.

Respecting these same countries in modern times, we are informed, that “nothing is more destructive to Syria than the shameful and excessive usury customary there. When the peasants are in want of money to purchase grain, cattle, &c. they can find none but by mortgaging the whole or part of their future crop greatly under its value. The danger of suffering money to appear, closes the hand of all by whom it is possessed; and if it be parted with, it must be from the hope of a rapid and exorbitant gain: the most moderate interest is twelve per cent.; the usual rate is twenty, and it frequently rises even as high as thirty.” Folney's Travels.

13. Also I shook my lap, and said, &c.] I made use of the common ceremony of ruffling and shaking the lap of my garment, in detestation of the crimes I had been representing to them; at the same time declaring, denouncing, and even praying to God that He would in like manner punish and confound every one of them in his fortune and estate, who did not perform his word in forsaking such practices. Pyle.

14. — I and my brethren have not eaten the bread of the governor.] I and my family have not taken that allowance which was appointed for the governor: so that, though I held the office, I forbore to take the maintenance allotted to it, both of money and provision, in favour of the people, and from respect to the common good. Bp. Hall.

This conduct of Nehemiah deserves our most serious attention. During the twelve years that he was governor of Jerusalem, he would not insist upon the rights of his office, nor suffer his servants, and those that were under him, to oppress any, but gave up his own dues, that he might not bring a burden upon the people in that troublesome time; he gave even part of his own substance to supply the necessities of the publick, and relieve private persons: all which he did, as he himself observed, because he feared God. This was a noble example of equity, piety, and disinterestedness, well worthy to be imitated; and this shews, how averse we ought to be from oppression and injustice, since, in case of necessity, we ought to give of our own, and even to dispense with our right. The faithful discharge of these duties fills the mind with great confidence towards God, and enables a man to say, as Nehemiah said, with so much faith and piety, “Think upon me, my God, for good.” Ostervald.

Before
CHRIST
445.

15 But the former governors that had been before me were chargeable unto the people, and had taken of them bread and wine, beside forty shekels of silver; yea, even their servants bare rule over the people: but so did not I, because of the fear of God.

16 Yea, also I continued in the work of this wall, neither bought we any land: and all my servants were gathered thither unto the work.

17 Moreover there were at my table an hundred and fifty of the Jews and rulers, beside those that came unto us from among the heathen that are about us.

18 Now that which was prepared for me daily was one ox and six choice sheep; also fowls were prepared for me, and once in ten days store of all sorts of wine: yet for all this required not I the bread of the governor, because the bondage was heavy upon this people.

19 ^b Think upon me, my God, for good, according to all that I have done for this people.

^b Chap. 13.
22.

CHAP. VI.

1 Sanballat practiseth by craft, by rumours, by hired prophecies, to terrify Nehemiah. 15 The work is finished to the terror of the enemies. 17 Secret intelligence passeth between the enemies and the nobles of Judah.

15. — beside forty shekels of silver;] He probably means forty shekels of silver every day, to make provision of other things at his table. Bp. Patrick. The words will admit of being translated, "And had taken from each of them, for bread and wine, forty shekels of silver." Houbigant.

19. Think upon me, my God,] There is no reason for us to think that Nehemiah extols himself and his own worthy acts too much; for what he says is nothing more than was necessary in such a state of things, that posterity might be furnished with an excellent example of extraordinary virtue. Bp. Patrick.

Nehemiah, it will be seen, frequently in this book (chap. xiii. 14, 22, 31) prays to God not to wipe out the good deeds which he had done; this he does, rather in pious supplication to be remembered on that account, than in any arrogance of heart. To have concealed the actions of his government, would have been inconsistent with the office of a faithful historian, and would have deprived posterity of an excellent example. The sacred writers, conscious of their own dignity, are equally superiour to disguise or vanity. They record their own virtues and their own failings with equal sincerity. Dr. Gray. Nehemiah, having happily delivered his people from a domestick captivity, commends his service to the gracious remuneration of the Almighty. Had he taken a temporary recompense, both he and it would have been forgotten: now he has made a happy change for eternity, not that he pleads his merit, but sues for mercy; neither does he pray to be remembered for his work, but according to his work. Our good deeds, as they are well accepted of God, so they shall not go unrewarded; and what God will give, why may not we ask? Doubtless, as we may offer up our honest obedience to God, so we may expect and beg his promised retributions; not out of a proud conceit of the worth of our earnings, since we are at the best but unprofitable

Before
CHRIST
445.

NOW it came to pass, when Sanballat, and Tobiah, and Geshem the Arabian, and the rest of our enemies, heard that I had builded the wall, and that there was no breach left therein; (though at that time I had not set up the doors upon the gates;)

2 That Sanballat and Geshem sent unto me, saying, Come, let us meet together in some one of the villages in the plain of Ono. But they thought to do me mischief.

3 And I sent messengers unto them, saying, I am doing a great work, so that I cannot come down: why should the work cease, whilst I leave it, and come down to you?

4 Yet they sent unto me four times after this sort; and I answered them after the same manner.

5 Then sent Sanballat his servant unto me in like manner the fifth time with an open letter in his hand;

6 Wherein was written, It is reported among the heathen, and || Gashmu saith it, ^{|| Or, Geshem, ver. 2.} that thou and the Jews think to rebel: for which cause thou buildest the wall, that thou mayest be their king, according to these words.

7 And thou hast also appointed prophets to preach of thee at Jerusalem, saying, There is a king in Judah: and now shall it be reported to the king according servants, but from a faithful dependence on Him, who cannot be less than His word. O God, if we do aught that is good, it is Thine act and not ours; crown Thine own work in us, and take Thou the glory of Thine own mercies! Bp. Hall.

Chap. VI. ver. 2. — in the plain of Ono.] A place in the tribe of Benjamin, chap. xi. 35; 1 Chron. viii. 12. Bp. Patrick.

5. — with an open letter in his hand;] As if the contents were known to every body, and required no sort of secrecy. Pyle. Or perhaps the circumstance of the letter being sent "open" is mentioned as having been an affront offered to Nehemiah by Sanballat; being an omission of good manners, since letters in the East are always sent carefully enclosed; having also a tendency to influence the populace against him, by attributing treason to him as governor; and being perhaps also a mode of avoiding the addressing Nehemiah as governor, and thereby acknowledging his dignity and office. Fragments to Calmet.

It appears from Norden, that it is customary in modern times in those countries to send letters to common people open: but it is not according to their usage to send them so to persons of distinction. Bishop Pococke gives us in one of his plates the figure of a Turkish letter, put into a satin bag, to be sent to a great man, with a paper tied to it directed and sealed, and an ivory button tied on the wax. Nehemiah, being a person of distinction in the Persian court, and then governor of Judea, had reason to expect this ceremony from Sanballat: and the omission of it was perhaps the greater insult, as insinuating that, though Nehemiah was, according to him, preparing to assume the royal dignity, he should be so far from acknowledging him in that character, that he would not even pay him the compliment due to every person of distinction. Sir John Chardin gives a like account of the Eastern letters. Script. illust.

Before
CHRIST
44

to these words. Come now therefore, and let us take counsel together.

8 Then I sent unto him, saying, There are no such things done as thou sayest, but thou feignest them out of thine own heart.

9 For they all made us afraid, saying, Their hands shall be weakened from the work, that it be not done. Now therefore, O God, strengthen my hands.

10 Afterward I came unto the house of Shemaiah the son of Delaiah the son of Mehetabeel, who was shut up; and he said, Let us meet together in the house of God, within the temple, and let us shut the doors of the temple: for they will come to slay thee; yea, in the night will they come to slay thee.

11 And I said, Should such a man as I flee? and who is there, that, being as I am, would go into the temple to save his life? I will not go in.

12 And, lo, I perceived that God had not sent him; but that he pronounced this prophecy against me: for Tobiah and Sanballat had hired him.

13 Therefore was he hired, that I should

7. — Come now —, let us take counsel] “Let us take counsel how we may wipe off these suspicions, in case they should be put into the king’s mind;” as according to his representation they probably would. Bp. Patrick.

10. — unto the house of Shemaiah] Shemaiah was a prophet by profession, (as appears from ver. 12,) and probably one whom Nehemiah took to be his friend; on which account he went to consult with him at his house. Bp. Patrick. I came, Nehemiah says, to Shemaiah, who was, under pretence of devout humiliation and prayer, “shut up” in his house; and he, pretending a tender care of my person, advised that we should shut ourselves up in the temple. Bp. Hall.

— in the house of God, within the temple,] There seems to be no reason to doubt that Shemaiah means to advise Nehemiah to retreat into the sanctuary, or most holy part of the temple, for which he had good pretence, as the place was strong, being defended by a guard of Levites, and privileged from all rude approaches. But his real design appears to have been, not only to disgrace Nehemiah and dishearten the people, when they saw the cowardice of their governor, ver. 13, but also to prepare the way for an assault of the enemy on the city, when there was no leader to oppose them. Stackhouse.

11. And I said, Should such a man as I flee?] The words of Nehemiah on this occasion are very significant as well as magnanimous. “Should such a man as I flee?” I, the chief governor, upon whose presence, and counsel, and conduct, the very life and being of the whole city and nation in great measure depend; I, who have professed such resolution, courage, and confidence in God; I, who have had such eminent experience of God’s gracious and powerful assistances, of His calling me to this employment, and carrying me through it, when the danger was greater than now; shall I dishonour God and religion, and betray the people and city of God by my cowardice? Stackhouse.

This steadiness of mind should be imitated by all who are engaged in good works, since God is able to protect them, or will certainly reward their good intentions. Bp. Wilson.

What if Nehemiah had hearkened to this counsel? Sin and shame would have followed. That holy place was for none but be afraid, and do so, and sin, and that they might have matter for an evil report, that they might reproach me. Before 445.

CHRIST

14 My God, think thou upon Tobiah and Sanballat according to these their works, and on the prophetess Noadiah, and the rest of the prophets, that would have put me in fear.

15 ¶ So the wall was finished in the twenty and fifth day of the month Elul, in fifty and two days. about 445.

16 And it came to pass, that when all our enemies heard thereof, and all the heathen that were about us saw these things, they were much cast down in their own eyes: for they perceived that this work was wrought of our God.

17 ¶ Moreover in those days the nobles of Judah † sent many letters unto Tobiah, and the letters of Tobiah came unto them. † Heb.
multiplied their letters passing to Tobiah.

18 For there were many in Judah sworn unto him, because he was the son in law of Shechaniah the son of Arah; and his son Johanan had taken the daughter of Meshullam the son of Berechiah.

persons sacred, such as were privileged by blood and function. And now what would the people say? What would become of us while our governor hides his head for fear? Where shall we find a temple to secure us, or how shall we depend on so cowardly a leader? Well did Nehemiah forecast these circumstances; and, resolving to distrust a prophet that persuaded him to the violation of a law, reject the proposition with scorn. Bp. Hall.

14. My God, think thou &c.] Nehemiah takes not upon himself to judge them for their treacherous proceedings, but leaves them to the just judgments of God. Pyle.

15. So the wall was finished — in fifty and two days.] This short space of time, employed in the completion, eminently shews the zeal of the people employed upon it, the number of whom, however, we must suppose to have been very great. It should be remembered too, that the foundations of the wall had been left by the Chaldeans: and probably many parts of the wall itself remained standing. Bp. Patrick.

17. Moreover in those days &c.] During all this time, Nehemiah adds, the stratagems of our professed enemies were not so dangerous or so mortifying as the treachery and baseness of many of our own citizens. Some of the best quality having married into Tobiah’s family, (chap. xiii. 4—9,) espoused his interests both secretly and openly, and informed him of all we said and did; so that well might that haughty heathen threaten me with his letters, when he knew there were people within our own bowels who would second him in all his designs. Pyle.

In the account which Nehemiah gives of what happened to him during his government, we may take notice, that good people, and especially those who labour for the glory of God, are exposed to many troubles, not only from their declared enemies, who attack them with open force, or by craft and calumny, but also from those whom they consider as their brethren; and that even sometimes unworthy ministers of the Lord stir up those troubles against them. It appears likewise, from the wise, steady, and pious behaviour of Nehemiah, that those who labour for the publick good should never be staggered by the threats and slanders of the wicked; and that, with the help of the Lord who watches over them, they may happily overcome all opposition. Ostervald.

Before
CHRIST
about 445.

|| Or,
matters.

19 Also they reported his good deeds before me, and uttered my || words to him. And Tobiah sent letters to put me in fear.

CHAP. VII.

1 Nehemiah committeth the charge of Jerusalem to Hanani and Hananiah. 5 A register of the genealogy of them which came at the first out of Babylon, 9 of the people, 39 of the priests, 43 of the Levites, 46 of the Nethinims, 57 of Solomon's servants, 63 and of the priests which could not find their pedigree. 66 The whole number of them, with their substance. 70 Their oblations.

NOW it came to pass, when the wall was built, and I had set up the doors, and the porters and the singers and the Levites were appointed,

2 That I gave my brother Hanani, and Hananiah the ruler of the palace, charge over Jerusalem: for he was a faithful man, and feared God above many.

3 And I said unto them, Let not the gates of Jerusalem be opened until the sun be hot; and while they stand by, let them shut the doors, and bar them: and appoint watches of the inhabitants of Jerusalem, every one in his watch, and every one to be over against his house.

4 Now the city was † large and great: but the people were few therein, and the houses were not builded.

5 ¶ And my God put into mine heart to gather together the nobles, and the rulers, and the people, that they might be reckoned by genealogy. And I found a register of the genealogy of them which came up at the first, and found written therein,

6 ^a These are the children of the province, that went up out of the captivity, of those that had been carried away, whom Nebuchadnezzar the king of Babylon had carried away, and came again to Jerusalem and to Judah, every one unto his city;

7 Who came with Zerubbabel, Jeshua, Nehemiah, || Azariah, Raamiah, Nahamani, Mordecai, Bilshan, Mispereth, Bigvai, Nehum, Baanah. The number, I say, of the men of the people of Israel was this;

8 The children of Parosh, two thousand an hundred seventy and two.

9 The children of Shephatiah, three hundred seventy and two.

10 The children of Arah, six hundred fifty and two.

11 The children of Pahath-moab, of the children of Jeshua and Joab, two thousand and eight hundred and eighteen.

12 The children of Elam, a thousand two hundred fifty and four.

13 The children of Zattu, eight hundred forty and five.

14 The children of Zaccai, seven hundred and threescore.

15 The children of || Binnui, six hundred forty and eight.

16 The children of Bebai, six hundred twenty and eight.

17 The children of Azgad, two thousand three hundred twenty and two.

18 The children of Adonikam, six hundred threescore and seven.

19 The children of Bigvai, two thousand threescore and seven.

20 The children of Adin, six hundred fifty and five.

21 The children of Ater of Hezekiah, ninety and eight.

22 The children of Hashum, three hundred twenty and eight.

23 The children of Bezai, three hundred twenty and four.

24 The children of || Hariph, an hundred and twelve.

Before
CHRIST
about 536.

|| Or,
Seraiah.

|| Or,
Bani.

|| Or,
Jora.

† Heb. broad in spaces.

about 536.
^a Ezra 2. 1,
&c.

Chap. VII. ver. 2. That I gave my brother Hanani, &c.] The fact of Nehemiah's appointing governors of Jerusalem as soon as the walls were built, seems evidently to imply, that he went away from thence at this time; and, as a set time of absence from Persia appears to have been allowed him at his departure, (chap. ii. 6,) it is most probable that he returned to Persia at this time. Besides, as the building of the walls was all that he required in his first commission, fresh authorities were necessary to enable him to engage in other proceedings which were required for the well settling of the affairs of the country. It is probable that, on his coming to the king, and giving an account how matters stood in the province, he soon obtained permission to return there; and the shortness of his absence seems to be the reason that no notice is taken of it in the text, although the circumstances detailed sufficiently imply it. Dean Prideaux.

3. — until the sun be hot;] Till some time after sunrise, when the approach of an enemy might be clearly discerned, and all the people might be prepared in case of danger. Bp. Patrick.

6. These are the children of the province,] These are the very words which we read at Ezra ii. 1: Nehemiah seems to have transcribed them from thence. Thus the register of which he speaks, ver. 5, is the register first made in Babylon, which he now caused to be exactly revised, and in which he made such alterations as he was enabled to do by the advantage of time and new accessions of people to Judea. He took this care to settle the genealogies of the several tribes and families, now returned to Judea, in order to prevent that mixture and confusion which would have defeated one of the great purposes for which their nation was chosen to be the separate and peculiar people of God. Pyle.

In the second chapter of Ezra we have the old register made by Zerubbabel; and in this seventh of Nehemiah, we have a copy of it as settled by Nehemiah, with some additions and alterations. Dean Prideaux.

Before
CHRIST about 536.Or,
Gazarr.Or,
Azmaveth.Or,
Kirjath-
arim.See ver.
12.1 Chron.
24. 7.Or,
Hulaviah,
Ezra 2. 40.
or, Judah,
Ezra 3. 9.

25 The children of || Gibcon, ninety and five.

26 The men of Beth-lehem and Netophah, an hundred fourscore and eight.

27 The men of Anathoth, an hundred twenty and eight.

28 The men of || Beth-azmaveth, forty and two.

29 The men of || Kirjath-jearim, Chephirah, and Beeroth, seven hundred forty and three.

30 The men of Ramah and Gaba, six hundred twenty and one.

31 The men of Michmas, an hundred and twenty and two.

32 The men of Beth-el and Ai, an hundred twenty and three.

33 The men of the other Nebo, fifty and two.

34 The children of the other ^b Elam, a thousand two hundred fifty and four.

35 The children of Harim, three hundred and twenty.

36 The children of Jericho, three hundred forty and five.

37 The children of Lod, Hadid, and Ono, seven hundred twenty and one.

38 The children of Senaah, three thousand nine hundred and thirty.

39 ¶ The priests: the children of ^c Jedaiah, of the house of Jeshua, nine hundred seventy and three.

40 The children of Immer, a thousand fifty and two.

41 The children of Pashur, a thousand two hundred forty and seven.

42 The children of Harim, a thousand and seventeen.

43 ¶ The Levites: the children of Jeshua, of Kadmiel, and of the children of || Hodevah, seventy and four.

44 ¶ The singers: the children of Asaph, an hundred forty and eight.

45 ¶ The porters: the children of Shalum, the children of Ater, the children of Talmon, the children of Akkub, the children of Hatita, the children of Shobai, an hundred thirty and eight.

46 ¶ The Nethinims: the children of Ziha, the children of Hashupha, the children of Tabbaoth, 47 The children of Keros, the children of Sia, the children of Padon, 48 The children of Lebana, the children of Hagaba, the children of Shalmai, 49 The children of Hanan, the children of Giddel, the children of Gahar,

50 The children of Reaiah, the children of Rezin, the children of Nekoda, 51 The children of Gazzam, the children of Uzza, the children of Phaseah, 52 The children of Besai, the children of Mennim, the children of Nephishesim,

53 The children of Bakbuk, the children of Hakupha, the children of Harhur,

54 The children of Bazlith, the children of Mehida, the children of Harsha, 55 The children of Barkos, the children of Sisera, the children of Tamah, 56 The children of Neziah, the children of Hatipha.

57 ¶ The children of Solomon's servants: the children of Sotai, the children of Sophereth, the children of Perida,

58 The children of Jaala, the children of Darkon, the children of Giddel, 59 The children of Shephatiah, the children of Hattil, the children of Pochereth of Zebaim, the children of || Amon.

60 All the Nethinims, and the children of Solomon's servants, were three hundred ninety and two.

61 ^d And these were they which went up also from Tel-melah, Tel-haresha, Cherub, Addon, and Immer: but they could not shew their father's house, nor their || seed, whether they were of Israel.

62 The children of Delaiah, the children of Tobiah, the children of Nekoda, six hundred forty and two.

63 ¶ And of the priests: the children of Habaiah, the children of Koz, the children of Barzillai, which took one of the daughters of Barzillai the Gileadite to wife, and was called after their name.

64 These sought their register among those that were reckoned by genealogy, but it was not found: therefore were they, as polluted, put from the priesthood.

65 And || the Tirshatha said unto them, that they should not eat of the most holy things, till there stood up a priest with Urim and Thummim.

66 ¶ The whole congregation together was forty and two thousand three hundred and threescore,

65. — till there stood up a priest with Urim and Thummim.] From this passage the Jews conclude, that such a priest will hereafter stand up, and restore and complete the genealogies of their families; though others understand these words to import, that they should never exercise the priesthood any more; and that the expression, "till there shall stand up a priest with Urim and Thummim," amounts to the same as "never," since the Urim and Thummim were now absolutely and for ever lost. Dr. Jennings.

Before
CHRIST
536.

67 Beside their manservants and their maidservants, of whom there were seven thousand three hundred thirty and seven: and they had two hundred forty and five singing men and singing women.

68 Their horses, seven hundred thirty and six: their mules, two hundred forty and five:

69 Their camels, four hundred thirty and five: six thousand seven hundred and twenty asses.

† Heb.
part.

70 ¶ And † some of the chief of the fathers gave unto the work. The Tirshatha gave to the treasure a thousand drams of gold, fifty basons, five hundred and thirty priests' garments.

71 And some of the chief of the fathers gave to the treasure of the work twenty thousand drams of gold, and two thousand and two hundred pound of silver.

72 And that which the rest of the people gave was twenty thousand drams of gold, and two thousand pound of silver, and threescore and seven priests' garments.

73 So the priests, and the Levites, and the porters, and the singers, and some of the people, and the Nethinims, and all Israel, dwelt in their cities; and when the seventh month came, the children of Israel were in their cities.

CHAP. VIII.

1 The religious manner of reading and hearing the law. 9 They comfort the people. 13 The forwardness of them to hear and be instructed. 16 They keep the feast of tabernacles.

about 445.

AND all the people gathered themselves together as one man into the

70. — The Tirshatha gave to the treasure &c.] We have a beautiful example of piety and liberality in the voluntary contribution of Nehemiah, of some of the chief men, and of several private persons, towards the temple of the Divine worship; and this example is the more instructive, as the Jews, generally speaking, were then in a state of poverty, and the number of rich men amongst them was comparatively few. Ostervald.

73. — when the seventh month came, &c.] When all the business before mentioned was finished, the people were sent back, by Nehemiah's direction, to the several cities to which they belonged, where they remained till the seventh month, which was five days after the wall was finished, chap. vi. 15. Bp. Patrick.

Chap. VIII. ver. 1. — Ezra the scribe] It is thought that Ezra had been at Babylon since his first coming to Judea, and was now returned, beholding with great joy the wall of Jerusalem built, as he had before seen the temple. Bp. Patrick.

— to bring the book of the law of Moses,] The people, it appears, called to mind that passage in Deut. xxxi. 10, 11, &c. where God requires the law to be publicly read every seventh year at the feast of tabernacles, which was appointed to be kept in this month. This, no doubt, Ezra was ready to perform; but such was the forward zeal of the people at this time, that they street that was before the water gate; * and they spake unto Ezra the scribe to bring the book of the law of Moses, which the LORD had commanded to Israel.

VOL. I.

Before
CHRIST
about 445.
* Ezra 3. 1.
& 7. 6.

2 And Ezra the priest brought the law before the congregation both of men and women, and all † that could hear with understanding, upon the first day of the seventh month.

† Heb. that understood in hearing.

3 And he read therein before the street that was before the water gate † from the morning until midday, before the men and the women, and those that could understand; and the ears of all the people were attentive unto the book of the law.

† Heb.
from the light.

4 And Ezra the scribe stood upon a † pulpit of wood, which they had made for the purpose; and beside him stood Mattithiah, and Shema, and Anaiah, and Urijah, and Hilkiah, and Maaseiah, on his right hand; and on his left hand, Pedaiah, and Mishael, and Malchiah, and Hashum, and Hashbaddana, Zechariah, and Meshullam.

† Heb.
tower of wood.

5 And Ezra opened the book in the † sight of all the people; (for he was † above all the people;) and when he opened it, all the people stood up:

† Heb.
eyes.

6 And Ezra blessed the LORD, the great God. And all the people answered, Amen, Amen, with lifting up their hands: and they bowed their heads, and worshipped the LORD with their faces to the ground.

7 Also Jeshua, and Bani, and Sherebiah, Jamin, Akkub, Shabbethai, Hodijah, Maaseiah, Kelita, Azariah, Jozabad, Hanan, Pelaiah, and the Levites, caused the people to understand the law: and the people stood in their place.

8 So they read in the book in the law anticipated him by their pious entreaties. This took place on the first day of the seventh month, which was not indeed the time of the feast of tabernacles; but this whole month was in a manner devoted to holy exercises. Bp. Patrick.

2. — upon the first day of the seventh month.] The seventh month of the ecclesiastical year, which was the first month of the civil year used by the Hebrews. The ecclesiastical year began in the month Nisan, answering to the time of the vernal equinox; and the seventh month of this, which was the first of the civil year, took place about the time of the autumnal equinox. The first day therefore of this seventh month was, in a manner, their new year's day, and was celebrated by a festival proclaimed by the sound of trumpets, and thence called the feast of trumpets, Levit. xxv. 9. It was when the people were assembled for this festival that the events now related took place. Dean Prideaux.

6. And Ezra blessed the Lord,] Ezra first began with offering up praises to God for the blessing of His revealed word, and for all His mercies to the Israelite nation, in which the whole assembly joined with strong expressions of devotion and reverence. Pyle.

7. — caused the people to understand the law:] The most probable meaning is, they translated or interpreted it out of the old Hebrew, in which it was first written, into the Chaldee, which was now the vulgar language of the people. Pyle.

Before
CHRIST
about 445.

Or,
the cover-nunt.

of God distinctly, and gave the sense, and caused them to understand the reading.

9 ¶ And Nehemiah, which is || the Tirshatha, and Ezra the priest the scribe, and the Levites that taught the people, said unto all the people, This day is holy unto the Lord your God; mourn not, nor weep. For all the people wept, when they heard the words of the law.

10 Then he said unto them, Go your way, eat the fat, and drink the sweet, and send portions unto them for whom nothing is prepared: for this day is holy unto our Lord: neither be ye sorry; for the joy of the Lord is your strength.

11 So the Levites stilled all the people, saying, Hold your peace, for the day is holy; neither be ye grieved.

12 And all the people went their way to eat, and to drink, and to send portions, and to make great mirth, because they had understood the words that were declared unto them.

13 ¶ And on the second day were gathered together the chief of the fathers of all the people, the priests, and the Levites, unto Ezra the scribe, even || to understand the words of the law.

14 And they found written in the law which the Lord had commanded † by Moses, that the children of Israel should dwell in ^b booths in the feast of the seventh month:

15 And that they should publish and proclaim in all their cities, and in Jerusalem, saying, Go forth unto the mount, and fetch olive branches, and pine branches, and myrtle branches, and palm branches, and branches of thick trees, to make booths, as it is written.

16 ¶ So the people went forth, and brought them, and made themselves booths, every one upon the roof of his house, and

Before
CHRIST
about 445.

Or,
that they might instruct in the words of the law.

† Heb. by
the hand of.
b Lev. 23.

34.
Deut. 16.
13.

9. — For all the people wept, &c.] The people bewailed the ignorance in which they had lived, and the many violations of the law of which they had been guilty; just as Josiah did when he heard the words of the law read out of a book which he found unexpectedly, 2 Kings xxii. Bp. Patrick.

The tears which the Jews shed, and their being sensibly affected at the hearing of the law, shew the effect which the word of God produces on well-disposed minds. Ostervald.

It is impossible for any person to read this remarkable passage concerning the bringing out of the book of the law, and reading it in the ears of all the people, without being greatly moved and affected by it; as it shews the religious affection and regard, which the Jews had for the Holy Scriptures. The devout manner of reading it, and the religious attention and becoming reverence with which it was heard, are excellently described in the following words: "And Ezra the scribe &c." ver. 4, 5, &c. But the most moving circumstance of all is that which follows, that "all the people wept, when they heard the words of the law." Happy were it for us, if we could persuade the generality of Christians to have the same pious regard for the book of God; that they would be often mindful to take it up, and read therein with all devout attention, and lay up the words thereof in their hearts and in their souls! And may we not only lay up the word of God in our memories, but labour to bring forth the happy fruits thereof in our lives and conversation; that so that sacred Book, which was given to make us wise unto salvation, may never rise up against us, and condemn us at the last day; when "the books shall be opened, and the dead, both small and great, shall be judged out of those things, which are written in the books, according to their works," Rev. xx. 12. Peters.

10. Then he said unto them, Go your way, &c.] It appears, ver. 3, that the holy scribe with his assistants continued from morning till midday to read and explain to the people the law of God in such a manner, as might best make them know and understand it; but at midday they dismissed them to eat and drink and rejoice before the Lord during the remainder of the day, because, being a festival, it was consecrated to be thus kept holy to Him. Dean Prideaux. He desires them to "eat the fat, and drink the sweet;" that is, to make a feast, and provide as good cheer as they were able, according to their manner on festival days, and to "send portions, &c." that is, as became religious people, to give of their abundance to feast their poorer brethren, that they also might rejoice. Bp. Patrick.

14. And they found written in the law &c.] Ezra and his associates proceeding farther to read and explain to the people the law of God, came to the twenty-third chapter of Leviticus, in which is written the law of the feast of tabernacles; and having explained to them from thence the obligation under which they were to observe this festival, and shewn that the fifteenth day of the month was the day appointed for the beginning of it, an eager desire was excited in all the people to fulfil the law of God in this particular. Dean Prideaux.

15. — fetch olive branches, &c.] Josephus calls the feast of tabernacles "the most holy of all." In Lev. xxiii. 40, are mentioned "boughs of goodly trees, branches of palm trees, boughs of thick trees, and willows of the brook." We see by comparing these passages, that, though the general purport of them is the same, yet the particulars differ. Nehemiah was more attentive to the spirit and meaning of the precept, than to its strict verbal construction. Script. illust. Expos. Ind.

— branches of thick trees,] These words seem to include all handsome-looking trees, capable of forming a cool recess, or of casting a salutary and grateful shade. Script. illust. Expos. Ind.

16. — made themselves booths, every one upon the roof of his house, &c.] Dr. Russell, speaking of the religious ceremonies of the Jews at Aleppo, gives a description of the feast of tabernacles, which illustrates the narrative in the text. "The tabernacles are variously constructed, and disposed in different situations, according to the size and other circumstances of the house. They are placed sometimes upon the small terraces in front of the upper rooms; most commonly in the court yards; and, where several families live in the same house, after every other place is occupied below, they erect the tabernacles on the flat tops of the houses: for each family, however poor, must have its own tabernacle. The ordinary method of building them is, by fastening to the corners of a wooden divan four slender erect posts, which serve to support on all sides a reticulated work of green reeds, a space only in front being left for the entrance. This on the outside is covered with fresh myrtle, and is hung on the inside with chintz hangings; the roof is thatched with reeds not stripped of their leaves, and their best cushions and carpets are employed to dress the divan.... In some of the principal houses a permanent wooden kiosk, built upon a stone mustaby or platform in the middle of the court, is made to serve the purpose, which, being already latticed, is easily covered with reeds and myrtle branches. The divan and hangings are here richer.... This festival in the eyes of strangers appears more splendid than any of the others kept by the Jews. They entertain hospitably at their houses; send presents of various sorts of sweetmeats to their friends; and all business is suspended." Dr. Russell.

Before
CHRIST
about 445.

in their courts, and in the courts of the house of God, and in the street of the water gate, and in the street of the gate of Ephraim.

17 And all the congregation of them that were come again out of the captivity made booths, and sat under the booths: for since the days of Jeshua the son of Nun unto that day had not the children of Israel done so. And there was very great gladness.

18 Also day by day, from the first day unto the last day, he read in the book of the law of God. And they kept the feast seven days; and on the eighth day was ^{† Heb.} a solemn assembly, according unto the manner. ^{a restraint.}

CHAP. IX.

¹ A solemn fast, and repentance of the people. ⁴ The Levites make a religious confession of God's goodness, and their wickedness.

445.

* Chap. 8. 2.

NOW in the twenty and fourth day of ^a this month the children of Israel were assembled with fasting, and with sackclothes, and earth upon them.

2 And the seed of Israel separated

17. — for since the days of Jeshua &c.] It can hardly be thought that the feast of tabernacles had never been observed since the time of Joshua, because, in fact, we read in the book of Ezra that it was kept at the return of the Jews from Babylon; but the meaning is, that the joy with which it was celebrated had never since that time been so great as upon this occasion: for which the Jews assign this reason, that, in the days of Joshua, they rejoiced because they had got possession of the land of Canaan, and now they equally rejoiced, because they were restored and quietly settled in it, after they had been so long cast out. Bp. Patrick. We should remark, that the long captivity of the Jews, and the afflictions which attended it, did more towards effecting their reformation than all which their Prophets and priests could do for a long series of years. Bp. Wilson.

18. Also day by day, &c.] Although the law did not expressly appoint that the book of the law should be openly read on every day of this festival, Deut. xxxi. 10—12, yet now their zeal was so warm, that they did it every day during the whole week's celebration. Pyle.

Chap. IX. ver. 1. Now in the twenty and fourth day &c.] As the people, on perceiving in how many things they had transgressed the commands of God, expressed great trouble and grief of heart, chap. viii. 9, 12, Nehemiah and Ezra, finding them in so good a temper, applied themselves to make the best improvement of it they could, for the honour of God and the interest of religion. Accordingly, they proclaimed a fast to be held the next day but one after the close of the festival, that is, on the 24th of the month, to which, having called all the people, while the sense of these things was fresh and warm in their minds, they excited them to make a publick and solemn confession before God of all their sins, and also to enter into a solemn vow and covenant to avoid them for the future, and to hold themselves to a strict observance of all the Divine laws. Dean Prideaux.

2. And the seed of Israel separated themselves &c.] Those who had been guilty of taking strange women to be their wives, and who in some instances seem to have taken them back, although themselves from all [†] strangers, and stood and confessed their sins, and the iniquities of their fathers.

Before
CHRIST
445.

† Heb. strange children.

3 And they stood up in their place, and read in the book of the law of the LORD their God one fourth part of the day; and another fourth part they confessed, and worshipped the LORD their God.

4 ¶ Then stood up upon the || stairs, of the Levites, Jeshua, and Bani, Kadmiel, Shebaniah, Bunni, Sherebiah, Bani, and Chenani, and cried with a loud voice unto the LORD their God. <sup>|| Or, scuffold.</sup>

5 Then the Levites, Jeshua, and Kadmiel, Bani, Hashabniah, Sherebiah, Hodi-jah, Shebaniah, and Pethahiah, said, Stand up and bless the LORD your God for ever and ever: and blessed be thy glorious name, which is exalted above all blessing and praise.

6 Thou, even thou, art LORD alone; ^b thou hast made heaven, the heaven of ^b Gen. 1. 1. heavens, with all their host, the earth, and all things that are therein, the seas, and all that is therein, and thou preservest them all; and the host of heaven worshippeth thee.

they had been forced by Ezra to put them away, now in token of their true repentance "separated themselves" from them; that is, stood or remained at a distance from them, to shew that they renounced them. Bp. Patrick.

5. Then the Levites, &c.] After the Levites before mentioned had cried to God for mercy, the people, as is probable, suing for it on their knees, another company of Levites commanded them to stand up and praise the Lord and give thanks. Bp. Patrick.

6. Thou, even thou, art Lord alone;] The whole succeeding part of this chapter contains a beautiful epitome of the history of the Jews, raised and animated by a spirit of devotion, which appears in all that moving eloquence so well suited to the occasion, and, at the same time, with all that chasteness and correctness of thought and expression which so eminently distinguishes the sacred writings of this sort. Peters.

The prayer which here follows is one of the finest in all the Scriptures. What is chiefly to be observed in this prayer is as follows: The Jews adore the power and majesty of the most high God; solemnly acknowledge the mercies their nation had received from Him in Egypt, in the wilderness, and in the land of Canaan, and His forbearance and longsuffering towards them; they confess their sins and rebellions, and their abuse of His favours; they own too that God had justly chastised them, by sending them into captivity, and subjecting them to strange princes. Lastly, they enter into a solemn engagement never more to return to their old sins, but to keep inviolably the covenant which they then renewed with the Lord. We should make a useful application to ourselves of all the parts of this excellent prayer; we should frequently read it, and learn from it to praise and adore God, to acknowledge the favours He bestows upon us all in general, and upon every one in particular: they especially whose circumstances somewhat resemble those of the Jews at that time, and who have been made to pass through divers trials and afflictions, ought from hence to learn to confess their sins and ingratitude, to celebrate His forbearance, to be more faithful to Him for the time to come, and religiously to perform the conditions of His covenant. Ostervald.

Before
CHRIST
445.* Gen. 11.
1. & 12. 1.
& 17. 5.
* Gen. 15. 6.* Gen. 12.
7. & 15. 18.
& 17. 7, 8.† Exod. 3.
7. & 14. 10.* Exod. 7.
8, 9, 10, 12,
& 14, chapters.* Exod. 14.
22.† Exod. 15.
10.
* Exod. 13.
21.† Exod. 20.
1. & 19. 20.† Heb.
laws of truth.* Exod. 16.
15. & 17. 6.
Numb. 20.
9.* Deut. 1.
8.† Heb.
which thou hast lift up thine hand
to give them.* Numb. 14.
4.† Heb.
a God of pardon.* Exod. 32.
4.

7 Thou art the LORD the God, who didst choose ^c Abram, and broughtest him forth out of Ur of the Chaldees, and gavest him the name of Abraham;

8 And foundest his heart ^d faithful before thee, and madest a ^e covenant with him to give the land of the Canaanites, the Hittites, the Amorites, and the Perizzites, and the Jebusites, and the Girgashites, to give it, I say, to his seed, and hast performed thy words; for thou art righteous:

9 ^f And didst see the affliction of our fathers in Egypt, and heardest their cry by the Red sea;

10 And ^g shewedst signs and wonders upon Pharaoh, and on all his servants, and on all the people of his land: for thou knewest that they dealt proudly against them. So didst thou get thee a name, as it is this day.

11 ^h And thou didst divide the sea before them, so that they went through the midst of the sea on the dry land; and their persecutors thou threwest into the deeps, as a stone into the ⁱ mighty waters.

12 Moreover thou ^k leddest them in the day by a cloudy pillar; and in the night by a pillar of fire, to give them light in the way wherein they should go.

13 ^l Thou camest down also upon mount Sinai, and spakest with them from heaven, and gavest them right judgments, and [†] true laws, good statutes and commandments:

14 And madest known unto them thy holy sabbath, and commandedst them precepts, statutes, and laws, by the hand of Moses thy servant:

15 And ^m gavest them bread from heaven for their hunger, and broughtest forth water for them out of the rock for their thirst, and promisedst them that they should ⁿ go in to possess the land [†] which thou hadst sworn to give them.

16 But they and our fathers dealt proudly, and hardened their necks, and hearkened not to thy commandments,

17 And refused to obey, neither were mindful of thy wonders that thou didst among them; but hardened their necks, and in their rebellion appointed ^o a captain to return to their bondage: but thou art [†] a God ready to pardon, gracious and merciful, slow to anger, and of great kindness, and forsookest them not.

18 Yea, ^p when they had made them a molten calf, and said, This is thy God that brought thee up out of Egypt, and had wrought great provocations;

19 Yet thou in thy manifold mercies forsookest them not in the wilderness: the ^q pillar of the cloud departed not from them by day, to lead them in the way; neither the pillar of fire by night, to shew them light, and the way wherein they should go.

20 Thou gavest also thy ^r good spirit to instruct them, and withheldest not thy ^s mamma from their mouth, and gavest them water for their thirst.

21 Yea, forty years didst thou sustain them in the wilderness, so that they lacked nothing; their ^t clothes waxed not old, and their feet swelled not.

22 Moreover thou gavest them kingdoms and nations, and didst divide them into corners: so they possessed the land of ^u Sihon, and the land of the king of Heshbon, and the land of Og king of Bashan.

23 Their children also multipliedst thou as the stars of heaven, and broughtest them into the land, concerning which thou hadst promised to their fathers, that they should go in to possess it.

24 So the children went in and possessed the land, and thou subduedst before them the inhabitants of the land, the Canaanites, and gavest them into their hands, with their kings, and the people of the land, that they might do with them [†] as they would.

25 And they took strong cities, and a fat land, and possessed houses full of all goods, ^{||} wells digged, vineyards, and oliveyards, and [†] fruit trees in abundance: so they did eat, and were filled, and became fat, and delighted themselves in thy great goodness.

26 Nevertheless they were disobedient, and rebelled against thee, and cast thy law behind their backs, and slew thy ^a prophets which testified against them to turn them to thee, and they wrought great provocations.

27 Therefore thou deliveredst them into the hand of their enemies, who vexed them: and in the time of their trouble, when they cried unto thee, thou heardest them from heaven; and according to thy manifold mercies thou gavest them saviours, who saved them out of the hand of their enemies.

28 But after they had rest, [†] they did evil again before thee: therefore leftest thou them in the hand of their enemies, so that they had the dominion over them: yet when they returned, and cried unto thee, thou heardest them from heaven; and many times didst thou deliver them according to thy mercies;

29 And testifiedst against them, that

Before
CHRIST
445.* Exod. 13.
22.
Numb. 14.
11.
1 Cor. 10. 1.† Numb. 11.
17.* Exod. 16.
15. & 17. 6.
Josh. 5. 12.

† Deut. 8. 4.

* Numb. 21.
21, &c.† Heb.
according to their will.|| Or,
cisterns.
† Heb. tree of food.* 1 Kings
19. 10.† Heb.
they returned to do evil.

Before
CHRIST
445.

thou mightest bring them again unto thy law: yet they dealt proudly, and hearkened not unto thy commandments, but sinned against thy judgments, (which if a man do, he shall live in them;) and † withdrew the shoulder, and hardened their neck, and would not hear.

† Heb.
they gave a withdrawing shoulder.† Heb. protract over them.
b 2 Kings
17. 13.
2 Chron.
36. 15.† Heb.
in the hand of thy prophets.

30 Yet many years didst thou † forbear them, and testifiedst ^b against them by thy spirit † in thy prophets: yet would they not give ear: therefore gavest thou them into the hand of the people of the lands.

31 Nevertheless for thy great mercies' sake thou didst not utterly consume them, nor forsake them; for thou art a gracious and merciful God.

c Exod. 34.
G.† Heb.
weariness.
† Heb. that hath found us.

32 Now therefore, our God, the great, the ^c mighty, and the terrible God, who keepest covenant and mercy, let not all the † trouble seem little before thee, † that hath come upon us, on our kings, on our princes, and on our priests, and on our prophets, and on our fathers, and on all thy people, since the time of the kings of Assyria unto this day.

33 Howbeit thou art just in all that is brought upon us; for thou hast done right, but we have done wickedly:

34 Neither have our kings, our princes, our priests, nor our fathers, kept thy law, nor hearkened unto thy commandments and thy testimonies, wherewith thou didst testify against them.

35 For they have not served thee in their kingdom, and in thy great goodness that thou gavest them, and in the large and fat land which thou gavest before them, neither turned they from their wicked works.

36 Behold, we are servants this day, and for the land that thou gavest unto our fathers to eat the fruit thereof and the good thereof, behold, we are servants in it:

Before
CHRIST
445.

37 And it yieldeth much increase unto the kings whom thou hast set over us because of our sins: also they have dominion over our bodies, and over our cattle, at their pleasure, and we are in great distress.

38 And because of all this we make a sure covenant, and write it; and our princes, Levites, and priests, † seal unto it.

† Heb. are at the sealing, or,
sealed.

CHAP. X.

1 The names of them that sealed the covenant. 29 The points of the covenant.

NOW † those that sealed were, Nehemiah, ‖ the Tirshatha, the son of Hachaliah, and Zidkijah, † Heb.

at the seal-
ings.
‖ Or, the governor.

2 Seraiah, Azariah, Jeremiah,

3 Pashur, Amariah, Malchijah,

4 Hattush, Shebaniah, Malluch,

5 Harim, Meremoth, Obadiah,

6 Daniel, Ginnethon, Baruch,

7 Meshullam, Abijah, Mijamin,

8 Maaziah, Bilgai, Shemaiah: these were the priests.

9 And the Levites: both Jeshua the son of Azaniah, Binnui of the sons of Henadad, Kadmiel;

10 And their brethren, Shebaniah, Hodijah, Kelita, Pelaiah, Hanan, 11 Micha, Rehob, Hashabiah,

12 Zaccur, Sherebiah, Shebaniah,

13 Hodijah, Bani, Beninu.

14 The chief of the people; Parosh, Pahath-moab, Elam, Zatthu, Bani, 15 Bunni, Azgad, Bebai,

16 Adonijah, Bigvai, Adin,

17 Ater, Hizkijah, Azzur,

18 Hodijah, Hashum, Bezai,

30. — testifiedst against them by thy spirit in thy prophets:] "Prophecy," as St. Peter observes, "came not in old time by the will of man: but holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost," 2 Peter i. 21. Accordingly we find in multitudes of places, from the earliest book of Scripture to the latest, supernatural impulses and illuminations ascribed to the Spirit of God: Gen. vi. 3; xli. 38; Numb. xi. 25, 26; xxiv. 2; 1 Sam. x. 10; 2 Kings ii. 9, &c.; 1 Chron. xii. 18; 2 Chron. xv. 1; Nehem. ix. 30; Ezek. ii. 2; Zech. vii. 12; Rev. i. 10; ii. 7; iv. 2, &c.: nor can we doubt, therefore, but they proceeded from Him always, though sometimes it is not expressly affirmed. So that we are to honour the third Person as the immediate inward instructor of men from the foundation of the world; as Him, who hath admonished, reprov'd, and striven with the wicked; who hath warmed and cheered the hearts of the pious in all times with manifestations of God's will, with declarations of His favour, with precautions against unseen dangers, with promises of deliverance from the heaviest afflictions, with His presence and guidance in the most intricate difficulties. Abp. Secker.

37. — they have dominion over our bodies, &c.] Though the Jews were permitted to live by their own laws, as we read in the book of Ezra, which was a great privilege, yet they lay under heavy publick burdens, and were compelled to bear them; in particular, their persons were liable to be pressed to serve in the king's wars, or in his works, and their cattle to be employed on his business, whenever he had occasion. Bp. Patrick.

38. — we make a sure covenant, and write it;] In consideration of all which they had stated, they resolved to renew their covenant of better obedience, which they promised under their hands and seals, as the only remedy to procure perfect deliverance; and this they declare in the presence of God at the close of the foregoing confession and prayer. Bp. Patrick. This renewal of the covenant was a very interesting and important transaction. It was in fact the solemn assent of the whole nation to the covenant which made them the chosen people of God, and secured to them the possession of the promised land. And it was their observance, however imperfect, of this covenant, which maintained them in possession, till their outrageous violence rejected the Messiah their lawful king.

Chap. X. ver. 1. — Nehemiah, the Tirshatha,] Nehemiah, the governor under the king of Persia, and therefore the principal person in the country, who led the way to the rest.

Before
CHRIST
445.

19 Hariiph, Anathoth, Nebai,
20 Magpiash, Meshullam, Hezir,
21 Meshezabeel, Zadok, Jaddua,
22 Pelatiah, Hanan, Anaiah,
23 Hoshia, Hananiah, Hashub,
24 Hallohesh, Pileha, Shobek,
25 Rehum, Hashabnah, Maasciah,
26 And Ahijah, Hanan, Anan,
27 Malluch, Harim, Baanah.

* Ezra 2.
13.

28 ¶ And the rest of the people, the priests, the Levites, the porters, the singers, the Nethinims, and all they that had separated themselves from the people of the lands unto the law of God, their wives, their sons, and their daughters, every one having knowledge, and having understanding;

29 They clave to their brethren, their nobles, and entered into a curse, and into an oath, to walk in God's law, which was given † by Moses the servant of God, and to observe and do all the commandments of the LORD our Lord, and his judgments and his statutes;

† Heb.
by the hand
of.

* Exod. 34.
16.
Deut. 7. 3.

30 And that we would not give ^b our daughters unto the people of the land, nor take their daughters for our sons:

* Exod. 20.
10.
Lev. 23. 9.
Deut. 5. 12.
chap. 13.
15, &c.

31 ^c And if the people of the land bring ware or any victuals on the sabbath day to sell, that we would not buy it of them on the sabbath, or on the holy day: and that we would leave the seventh year, and the ^d exaction of † every debt.

* Deut. 15.
2.
Lev. 25. 4.
† Heb.
every hand.

32 Also we made ordinances for us, to charge ourselves yearly with the third part of a shekel for the service of the house of our God;

29. They clave to their brethren, &c.] They, the bulk of the people, took a solemn oath to do the same as those who had written their names had agreed to do, that is, to live in careful obedience to the laws of Moses, and particularly not to intermarry with any heathen families, promising to oblige all that belonged to them, that were of age of discretion, to do the same; and entering into "a curse," that is, wishing that all the curses written in the law might fall upon them, if they did not perform all that the law required in these matters. Pyle, Bp. Patrick.

The observances to which they chiefly obliged themselves in this covenant were, first, Not to make intermarriages with the Gentiles, either by giving their daughters to them, or by taking any of their daughters to themselves; secondly, to observe the sabbaths and sabbatical years; thirdly, to pay their annual tribute to the temple for the reparation of it, and for the procurement of all the necessities for its publick service; and, fourthly, to pay the tithes and firstfruits to the priests and Levites. As these particulars are specially named in the covenant, we hence learn what those divine laws are, of which they had been most neglectful since their return from captivity. Dean Prideaux.

Nehemiah was ruler of a nation; and, as such, can be no example to private persons, though he be an excellent one to princes and governors, who, if they would be esteemed as he was, must act as he did. For, though wealth and power may be obtained by many ways, yet respect and reputation can only be acquired by deserving them. But the submission, which the sober and reli-

33 For the shewbread, and for the continual meat offering, and for the continual burnt offering, of the sabbaths, of the new moons, for the set feasts, and for the holy things, and for the sin offerings to make an atonement for Israel, and for all the work of the house of our God.

Before
CHRIST
445.

34 And we cast the lots among the priests, the Levites, and the people, for the wood offering, to bring it into the house of our God, after the houses of our fathers, at times appointed year by year, to burn upon the altar of the LORD our God, as it is written in the ^e law:

* See
Numb. 28.
& 29.
Exod. 23.
19.
Lev. 19. 23.

35 And to bring the firstfruits of our ground, and the firstfruits of all fruit of all trees, year by year, unto the house of the LORD:

36 Also the firstborn of our sons, and of our cattle, as it is written ^f in the law, and the firstlings of our herds and of our flocks, to bring to the house of our God, unto the priests that minister in the house of our God:

* Exod. 13.
2.
Lev. 23. 17.
Numb. 15.
19. & 18.
12, &c.

37 And that we should bring the firstfruits of our dough, and our offerings, and the fruit of all manner of trees, of wine and of oil, unto the priests, to the chambers of the house of our God; and the tithes of our ground unto the Levites, that the same Levites might have the tithes in all the cities of our tillage.

38 And the priest the son of Aaron shall be with the Levites, ^g when the Levites take tithes: and the Levites shall bring up the tithe of the tithes unto the gious part of the Jews paid to Nehemiah, is an example to us how we should behave ourselves to good kings and rulers, and indeed to all who have authority over us. We should willingly obey and assist them, shew them the respect due to their station, neither say nor do any thing that may lessen their character and weaken their authority, and pray for their peace and prosperity, upon which indeed our own depends, and with which it is connected. Dr. Jortin.

* Numb. 18.
26.

34. — for the wood offering,] It seems that till this time, or at least till the time of the Babylonish captivity, it was the office of the Nethinim, or the servants of the temple, to furnish the wood necessary for maintaining the sacred fire on the altar, and generally for the uses of the temple. But, since the return from the captivity, the number of servants being small, the priests, Levites, and rest of the people cast lots for supplying and preparing the wood. The people, divided into portions, provided it and brought it every year by lot. The Nethinim, aided by the Levites, received it, placed it in the temple, and prepared it for use. The priests put it on the altar, and took care to maintain the perpetual fire, according to the law, Levit. vi. 9. All these different functions were regulated by lot. In later times the Jews had a festival, called Xylophoria, or "carrying of wood," because on it they carried with some solemnity the wood for the use of the temple. It appears from Josephus, that the time of celebrating it was the month of August. Calmel.

38. And the priest — shall be with the Levites, &c.] As the people gave the tithes of their land to the Levites, so the Levites

Before
CHRIST
445.

house of our God, to the chambers, into the treasure house.

39 For the children of Israel and the children of Levi shall bring the offering of the corn, of the new wine, and the oil, unto the chambers, where are the vessels of the sanctuary, and the priests that minister, and the porters, and the singers: and we will not forsake the house of our God.

CHAP. XI.

1 The rulers, voluntary men, and the tenth man chosen by lot, dwell at Jerusalem. 3 A catalogue of their names. 20 The residue dwell in other cities.

AND the rulers of the people dwelt at Jerusalem: the rest of the people also cast lots, to bring one of ten to dwell in Jerusalem the holy city, and nine parts to dwell in other cities.

2 And the people blessed all the men, that willingly offered themselves to dwell at Jerusalem.

3 ¶ Now these are the chief of the province that dwelt in Jerusalem: but in the cities of Judah dwelt every one in his possession in their cities, to wit, Israel, the priests, and the Levites, and the Nethinims, and the children of Solomon's servants.

4 And at Jerusalem dwelt certain of the children of Judah, and of the children of Benjamin. Of the children of Judah; Athaiah the son of Uzziah, the son of Zechariah, the son of Amariah, the son of Shephatiah, the son of Mahalaleel, of the children of Perez;

5 And Maaseiah the son of Baruch, the son of Col-hozeh, the son of Hazaiah, the son of Adaiah, the son of Joiarib, the son of Zechariah, the son of Shiloni.

6 All the sons of Perez that dwelt at Jerusalem were four hundred threescore and eight valiant men.

gave a tithe of the tithes to the priests. And when the people brought them to the Levites, one of the priests was appointed to be present to inspect them, and to see that they justly allotted to the priest the tenth of what they had received: this portion belonging to the priests was brought and deposited in the chambers of the temple. Bp. Patrick.

Chap. XI. ver. 1. And the rulers of the people &c. Although the city was now fortified by a wall, yet it was very thinly inhabited; and the neighbouring nations continuing restless in their designs of demolishing the works again, so as to terrify many of the Jews from residing there, it was necessary to take measures for the better security of the place. Accordingly the chief magistrates of the other towns, who were eminent for valour and discretion, agreed to come and dwell at Jerusalem, and the common people consented to send one out of ten for the same purpose. But, besides those whose lot it was to remove thither, there were others (ver. 2) who "willingly offered themselves;" whom 7 And these are the sons of Benjamin; Sallu the son of Meshullam, the son of Joed, the son of Pedaiah, the son of Kolaiah, the son of Maaseiah, the son of Ithiel, the son of Jesaiah.

8 And after him Gabbai, Sallai, nine hundred twenty and eight.

9 And Joel the son of Zichri was their overseer: and Judah the son of Senuah was second over the city.

10 Of the priests: Jedaiah the son of Joiarib, Jachin.

11 Seraiah the son of Hilkiah, the son of Meshullam, the son of Zadok, the son of Meraioth, the son of Ahitub, was the ruler of the house of God.

12 And their brethren that did the work of the house were eight hundred twenty and two: and Adaiah the son of Jeroham, the son of Pelaliah, the son of Amzi, the son of Zechariah, the son of Pashur, the son of Malchiah,

13 And his brethren, chief of the fathers, two hundred forty and two: and Amashai the son of Azareel, the son of Ahasai, the son of Meshillemoth, the son of Immer,

14 And their brethren, mighty men of valour, an hundred twenty and eight: and their overseer was Zabdiel, ¶ the son of one of the great men.

15 Also of the Levites: Shemaiah the son of Hashub, the son of Azrikam, the son of Hashabiah, the son of Bunni;

16 And Shabbethai and Jozabad, of the chief of the Levites, † had the oversight of the outward business of the house of God.

17 And Mattaniah the son of Micha, the son of Zabdi, the son of Asaph, was the principal to begin the thanksgiving in prayer: and Bakbukiah the second among his brethren, and Abda the son of Sham-mua, the son of Galal, the son of Jeduthun.

"the people blessed," that is, highly commended and favoured with their good wishes, for their seasonable zeal for the safety of the chief city and the temple of God. Pyle.

3. Now these are the chief of the province &c. Now these are the chief of the Israelites who came from Babylon, &c. into "the province" of Judea, that dwelt at Jerusalem, namely, those who are mentioned at ver. 4, and the following. As to the rest, the writer says, it is enough to state in general, that they dwelt every one in his possession in their cities, who may be distinguished into the following sorts; that is, Israel, or the common people of all the tribes, the priests, the Levites, the Nethinim, and the children of Solomon's servants. Dr. Wells. For the last, see note at Ezra ii. 55.

6. — were four hundred &c.] It is uncertain whether the numbers here specified be meant of those only who voluntarily came and resided at Jerusalem, or of all those who came by lot and otherwise. Pyle.

Before
CHRIST
445.

¶ Or, the son of Haggeldun.

† Heb. were over.

Before
CHRIST
445.

18 All the Levites in the holy city were two hundred fourscore and four.

† Heb.
at the gates.

19 Moreover the porters, Akkub, Talmon, and their brethren that kept † the gates, were an hundred seventy and two.

20 ¶ And the residue of Israel, of the priests, and the Levites, were in all the cities of Judah, every one in his inheritance.

* See chap.
5. 26.
† Or,
the tower.

21 ^a But the Nethinims dwelt in † Ophel: and Ziha and Gispah were over the Nethinims.

22 The overseer also of the Levites at Jerusalem was Uzzi the son of Bani, the son of Hashabiah, the son of Mattaniah, the son of Micha. Of the sons of Asaph, the singers were over the business of the house of God.

† Or,
a sure ordinance.

23 For it was the king's commandment concerning them, that † a certain portion should be for the singers, due for every day.

24 And Pethahiah the son of Mesheza-beel, of the children of Zerah the son of Judah, was at the king's hand in all matters concerning the people.

25 And for the villages, with their fields, some of the children of Judah dwelt at Kirjath-arba, and in the villages thereof, and at Dibon, and in the villages thereof, and at Jekabzeel, and in the villages thereof;

26 And at Jeshua, and at Moladah, and at Beth-pheret,

27 And at Hazar-shual, and at Beer-sheba, and in the villages thereof,

28 And at Ziklag, and at Mekonah, and in the villages thereof,

29 And at En-rimmon, and at Zareah, and at Jarmuth,

30 Zanoah, Adullam, and in their villages, at Lachish, and the fields thereof, at Azekah, and in the villages thereof. And they dwelt from Beer-sheba unto the valley of Hinnom. Before CHRIST 445.

31 The children also of Benjamin † from Geba dwelt † at Michmash, and Aija, and Beth-el, and in their villages, † Or, of Geba. † Or, to Michmash.

32 And at Anathoth, Nob, Ananiah,

33 Hazor, Ramah, Gittaim,

34 Hadid, Zeboim, Neballat,

35 Lod, and Ono, the valley of craftsmen.

36 And of the Levites were divisions in Judah, and in Benjamin.

CHAP. XII.

1 The priests, 8 and the Levites, which came up with Zerubbabel. 10 The succession of high priests. 22 Certain chief Levites. 27 The solemnity of the dedication of the walls. 44 The offices of priests and Levites appointed in the temple.

NOW these are the ^a priests and the Levites that went up with Zerubbabel the son of Shealtiel, and Jeshua: Seraiah, Jeremiah, Ezra, about 536. ^a Ezra 2. 1.

2 Amariah, † Malluch, Hattush,

† Or, Melicu, ver. 14.

3 † Shechaniah, † Rehum, † Meremoth,

† Or, Shebaniah, ver. 14.

4 Iddo, † Ginetho, Abijah,

† Or, Harim, ver. 15.

5 † Miamin, † Maadiah, Bilgah,

† Or, Meremoth, ver. 15.

6 Shemaiah, and Joiarib, Jedaiah,

† Or, Ginethon, ver. 16.

7 † Sallu, Amok, Hilkiah, Jedaiah. These were the chief of the priests and of their brethren in the days of Jeshua.

† Or, Meremoth, ver. 16.

8 Moreover the Levites: Jeshua, Binnui, Kadmiel, Sherebiah, Judah, and Mattaniah, which was over † the thanksgiving, he and his brethren.

† Or, Meremoth, ver. 17.

9 Also Bakbukiah and Unni, their brethren, were over against them in the watches.

† Or, Meremoth, ver. 17.

10 ¶ And Jeshua begat Joiakim, Joiakim also begat Eliashib, and Eliashib begat Joiada,

† Or, Meremoth, ver. 17.

† Or, Meremoth, ver. 17.

† Or, Meremoth, ver. 17.

† Or, Meremoth, ver. 17.

11 And Joiada begat Jonathan, and Jonathan begat Jaddua.

† Or, Meremoth, ver. 17.

† Or, Meremoth, ver. 17.

† Or, Meremoth, ver. 17.

† Or, Meremoth, ver. 17.

† Or, Meremoth, ver. 17.

† Or, Meremoth, ver. 17.

† Or, Meremoth, ver. 17.

† Or, Meremoth, ver. 17.

† Or, Meremoth, ver. 17.

† Or, Meremoth, ver. 17.

† Or, Meremoth, ver. 17.

† Or, Meremoth, ver. 17.

† Or, Meremoth, ver. 17.

† Or, Meremoth, ver. 17.

† Or, Meremoth, ver. 17.

† Or, Meremoth, ver. 17.

† Or, Meremoth, ver. 17.

21. — dwell in Ophel: See note at 2 Chron. xxvii. 3.

23. For it was the king's commandment] Some suppose this to refer to king David, who first appointed the singers to attend in a settled course. But it is more probable the king of Persia is meant, who munificently made them a daily allowance for their better support. Bp. Patrick.

24. — was at the king's hand — concerning the people.] Or, "was on the king's part concerning him and the people." The expression is ambiguous. The plainest meaning seems to be, that he was appointed to see justice done to the interests of the crown, and the rights of the people. Pyle.

Chap. XII. ver. 1. Now these are the priests &c.] As the writer is now about to give an account of the solemn procession, by way of religious dedication of the city wall, or thanksgiving for the happiness of seeing it rebuilt; and as the tribe of Levi, being the ministers of the temple, bore the principal part of the service of this solemnity, he thinks proper to insert a fresh register of that tribe, comprising the chief heads of their several courses who returned from captivity with Zerubbabel. At the first return, these persons, to the number of twenty-three, were the chief heads of the priests, Jeshua being at that time high priest in succession. Pyle.

8. — which was over the thanksgiving,] Was appointed to see the psalm of thanksgiving sung every morning and evening at the burnt sacrifice. Bp. Patrick.

9. — were over against them in the watches.] That is, ministered in their courses, as did the others, and kept their stations over against them in their turns of attendance, which are called their watches or wards. Bp. Patrick.

10, 11. — Joiakim — Jaddua.] In these two verses is an account of the succession of the high priests, from the return from captivity, till the time when they began to bear the greatest sway in the Jewish nation.

11. — Jaddua.] It is commonly supposed that this is the same person as Jaddus the high priest mentioned in profane history, who went out in his pontifical habit to meet Alexander the Great when he came from the conquest of Tyre and Gaza, and who procured from him great privileges for the Jewish nation. Bp. Patrick. If this be the case, that Jaddua is the same as Jaddus in the time of Alexander, then what is related here and at verse 22, must have been added to this book by some later hand than that of Nehemiah, as it is highly improbable that Nehemiah can have lived so long as the time of Alexander's coming into Asia. Dr. Wells.

Before
CHRIST
about 536.

12 And in the days of Joiakim were priests, the chief of the fathers: of Seraiah, Meraiah; of Jeremiah, Hananiah;

13 Of Ezra, Meshullam; of Amariah, Jehohanan;

14 Of Melicu, Jonathan; of Shebaniah, Joseph;

15 Of Harim, Adna; of Meraioth, Helkai;

16 Of Iddo, Zechariah; of Ginnethon, Meshullam;

17 Of Abijah, Zichri; of Miniamin; of Moadiah, Piltai;

18 Of Bilgah, Shammua; of Shemaiah, Jehonathan;

19 And of Joiarib, Mattenai; of Jedaiah, Uzzi;

20 Of Sallai, Kallai; of Amok, Eber;

21 Of Hilkiah, Hashabiah; of Jedaiah, Nethaneel.

22 ¶ The Levites in the days of Eliashib, Joiada, and Johanan, and Jaddua, were recorded chief of the fathers: also the priests, to the reign of Darius the Persian.

23 The sons of Levi, the chief of the fathers, were written in the book of the ^b chronicles, even until the days of Johanan the son of Eliashib.

24 And the chief of the Levites: Hashabiah, Sherebiah, and Jeshua the son of Kadmiel, with their brethren over against them, to praise and to give thanks, according to the commandment of David the man of God, ward over against ward.

25 Mattaniah, and Bakbukiah, Obadiah, Meshullam, Talmon, Akkub, were porters keeping the ward at the || thresholds of the gates.

26 These were in the days of Joiakim the son of Jeshua, the son of Jozadak, and in the days of Nehemiah the governor, and of Ezra the priest, the scribe.

27 ¶ And at the dedication of the wall of Jerusalem they sought the Levites out of all their places, to bring them to Jerusalem, to keep the dedication with gladness, both with thanksgivings, and with singing, with cymbals, psalteries, and with harps.

28 And the sons of the singers gathered themselves together, both out of the plain country round about Jerusalem, and from the villages of Netophathi;

29 Also from the house of Gilgal, and out of the fields of Geba and Azmaveth: for the singers had builded them villages round about Jerusalem.

30 And the priests and the Levites purified themselves, and purified the people, and the gates, and the wall.

31 Then I brought up the princes of Judah upon the wall, and appointed two great companies of them that gave thanks, whereof one went on the right hand upon the wall toward the dung gate:

32 And after them went Hoshaiah, and half of the princes of Judah,

33 And Azariah, Ezra, and Meshullam,

34 Judah, and Benjamin, and Shemaiah, and Jeremiah,

35 And certain of the priests' sons with trumpets; namely, Zechariah the son of Jonathan, the son of Shemaiah, the son of Mattaniah, the son of Michaiiah, the son of Zaccur, the son of Asaph:

36 And his brethren, Shemaiah, and Azarael, Milalai, Gilalai, Maai, Nethaneel, and Judah, Hanani, with the musical instruments of David the man of God, and Ezra the scribe before them.

37 And at the fountain gate, which was over against them, they went up by the stairs of the city of David, at the going up of the wall, above the house of David, even unto the water gate eastward.

38 And the other company of them that gave thanks went over against them, and I after them, and the half of the people up-

Before
CHRIST
445.

^b 1 Chron.
9. 14, &c.

|| Or,
treasuries,
or, assemblies.

445.

22. — also the priests, to the reign of Darius] This is understood to mean Darius Codomannus; and this verse, together with ver. 11, affords a proof that Nehemiah did not put a finishing hand to this book; for, to be able to speak of this Darius, he must have lived at least 131 years, and at that age must have written or enlarged this book, which is highly improbable. Le Clerc. Or the Darius meant may be Darius Nothus, who reigned B. C. 423, much earlier than Darius Codomannus, who began to reign B. C. 335. It is probable, that the whole, or at least the latter part of the register contained in the twenty-six first verses of this chapter, was a subsequent addition to the book, made by those who superintended the forming of the canon of the Scriptures. Dr. Gray.

24. — with their brethren over against them, &c.] Though we are somewhat at a loss for information respecting the usual manner and ceremony of chanting the Hebrew poems, and though the subject of the Hebrew sacred musick in general is involved in doubt and obscurity, thus far at least is evident from many examples, that the sacred hymns were alternately sung by opposite choirs, and that the one choir usually performed the hymn itself, while the other sang a particular distich, which interposed regularly at stated intervals: see Exod. xv. 20, 21; Ezra iii. 11; 1 Sam. xviii. 7. Bp. Lowth.

VOL. I.

27. And at the dedication of the wall &c.] As Solomon and all Israel dedicated the house of God when it was built, (see 1 Kings viii; 2 Chron. vii;) so now Nehemiah, having set things in good order, thought fit to dedicate the city, whose wall was rebuilt and gates set up, as a place in which God had chosen to place His name. Accordingly he assembled the people to beseech His blessing and protection on the city, in which, being now provided with proper defences, they hoped to be permitted long to serve Him in quiet and security. Bp. Patrick.

By this ceremony of dedicating of the walls, they acknowledged that their hope and confidence were placed in God, and not in the strength of their walls and bulwarks. Bishop Wilson.

Before
CHRIST
445.

on the wall, from beyond the tower of the furnaces even unto the broad wall;

39 And from above the gate of Ephraim, and above the old gate, and above the fish gate, and the tower of Hananeel, and the tower of Meah, even unto the sheep gate: and they stood still in the prison gate.

40 So stood the two companies of them that gave thanks in the house of God, and I, and the half of the rulers with me:

41 And the priests; Eliakim, Maaseiah, Miniamin, Michaiiah, Elioenai, Zechariah, and Hananiah, with trumpets;

42 And Maaseiah, and Shemaiah, and Eleazar, and Uzzi, and Jehohanan, and Malchijah, and Elam, and Ezer. And the singers † sang loud, with Jezrahiah their overseer.

† Heb. made their voice to be heard.

43 Also that day they offered great sacrifices, and rejoiced: for God had made them rejoice with great joy: the wives also and the children rejoiced: so that the joy of Jerusalem was heard even afar off.

44 ¶ And at that time were some appointed over the chambers for the treasures, for the offerings, for the firstfruits, and for the tithes, to gather into them out of the fields of the cities the portions || of the law for the priests and Levites: † for Judah rejoiced for the priests and for the Levites † that waited.

|| That is, appointed by the law.
† Heb. for the joy
of Judah.
† Heb.
that stood.

45 And both the singers and the porters kept the ward of their God, and the ward

43. Also that day they offered great sacrifices.] The dedication of the walls of Jerusalem was an instance of the piety of Nehemiah, and of the rest of the Jews. By this ceremony, by the sacrifices they offered, and by the hymns of praise which they sung upon the occasion, they meant to ascribe to God's mercy the restoration of their city and nation, and to secure His protection for the future. Zealous persons take occasion from every thing to express their piety and gratitude, to render homage to the Lord for all the temporal advantages they enjoy; and wise and pious magistrates look upon His protection as the fountain of all the happiness, and of all the security both of cities and states. Christians ought to imitate the zeal of Nehemiah and his people, and like them promote the good of religion, provide for the support of the Divine service, and the advancement of God's glory, every one according to his power and abilities. Ostervald.

— the joy of Jerusalem &c.] The emperor Augustus boasted, that he had found Rome built with bricks, and left it built with marble. Nehemiah found Jerusalem a heap of rubbish, and left it so well inhabited, adorned, and fortified, that it soon became a city of note, and recovered in a great measure its former lustre. Dr. Jortin.

45. And both the singers &c.] That is, the singers sung orderly in their courses to the praise of God, and the porters "kept the ward of purification;" that is, duly observed the orders about purification, in not suffering any unclean person or thing to come into the sacred house. Thus they did "according to the commandment of David, &c." who had regulated all things belonging to the duties of these persons; see 1 Chron. xxv, xxvi. Bp. Patrick.

Chap. XIII. ver. 1. On that day] It seems not on the day of the of the purification, ^c according to the commandment of David, and of Solomon his son.

Before
CHRIST
445.

46 For in the days of David ^d and Asaph of old there were chief of the singers, and songs of praise and thanksgiving unto God.

^c 1 Chron.
25. & 26.
^d 1 Chron.
25. 1, &c.

47 And all Israel in the days of Zerubbabel, and in the days of Nehemiah, gave the portions of the singers and the porters, every day his portion: and they || sanctified holy things unto the Levites; ^e and the Levites sanctified them unto the children of Aaron.

|| That is,
set apart.
^e Numb.
18. 26.

CHAP. XIII.

1 Upon the reading of the law separation is made from the mixed multitude. 4 Nehemiah at his return caused the chambers to be cleansed. 10 He reformeth the offices in the house of God. 15 The violation of the sabbath, 23 and the marriages with strange wives.

ON that day † they read in the ^a book of Moses in the † audience of the people; and therein was found written, that the Ammonite and the Moabite should not come into the congregation of God for ever; 2 ^b Because they met not the children of Israel with bread and with water, but hired Balaam against them, that he should curse them: howbeit our God turned the curse into a blessing.

† Heb.
there was read.
^a Numb. 22.
5.
Deut. 23. 3.
† Heb. ears.
^b Numb. 22.
5.
Josh. 24. 9.

3 Now it came to pass, when they had heard the law, that they separated from Israel all the mixed multitude.

4 ¶ And before this, Eliashib the priest, † having the oversight of the chamber of † Heb. being set over.

dedication of the city wall, related in the last chapter, but on some day after Nehemiah had returned to Jerusalem from Persia, where, as is related at ver. 6, he had gone to wait upon the king: as soon as he returned, all the abuses which had crept in were corrected. It is probable, that he continued the public reading of the law at stated times, on the great festivals especially; and, on one of these days that portion of Scripture was read at Deut. xxiii. 3, which forbids the admission of the Ammonites and Moabites into "the congregation of God." Bp. Patrick.

— into the congregation of God] See note at Deut. xxiii. 3. The expression there is to be understood as a prohibition of intermarriages with these nations; and so all the Jewish doctors expound it. It did not exclude any one, of any nation whatever, from entering into the congregation as a proselyte, nor did the Jews so interpret it, for they freely admitted into their religion all that would embrace it, and treated them in all respects as true Israelites, except in the case of marriage. Dean Prideaux.

3. — they separated from Israel all the mixed multitude.] They separated from the true Israelites those who were born of strangers, whom the law would not allow to partake of the rites of marriage with Israelites. Bp. Patrick.

4. — Eliashib the priest, having the oversight of the chamber] It has been doubted, whether he was only a common priest, or whether the high priest of this name is meant, mentioned at chap. iii. 1. It is most probable, that the high priest is meant, and that the expression, "having the oversight of the chamber," (or chambers, the singular put for the plural,) implies his having the whole government of the temple, especially since it is not to be conceived how any one, less than the chief governor of the temple, could make so great an innovation as that here described. Dean Prideaux.

Before
CHRIST
445.

the house of our God, was allied unto Tobiah:

5 And he had prepared for him a great chamber, where aforetime they laid the meat offerings, the frankincense, and the vessels, and the tithes of the corn, the new wine, and the oil, † which was commanded to be given to the Levites, and the singers, and the porters; and the offerings of the priests.

† Heb. the commandment of the Levites.

about 434.

6 But in all this time was not I at Jerusalem: for in the two and thirtieth year of Artaxerxes king of Babylon came I unto the king, and † after certain days || obtained I leave of the king:

† Heb. at the end of days.
|| Or, I earnestly requested.

7 And I came to Jerusalem, and understood of the evil that Eliashib did for Tobiah, in preparing him a chamber in the courts of the house of God.

8 And it grieved me sore: therefore I cast forth all the household stuff of Tobiah out of the chamber.

9 Then I commanded, and they cleansed the chambers: and thither brought I again the vessels of the house of God, with the meat offering and the frankincense.

10 ¶ And I perceived that the portions of the Levites had not been given them: for the Levites and the singers, that did the work, were fled every one to his field.

11 Then contended I with the rulers, and said, Why is the house of God forsaken? And I gathered them together, and set them in their † place.

† Heb. standing.

12 Then brought all Judah the tithe of the corn and the new wine and the oil unto the || treasuries.

|| Or, storehouses.

13 And I made treasurers over the treasures, Shelemiah the priest, and Zadok the scribe, and of the Levites, Pedaiah: and † next to them was Hanan the son of Zaccur, the son of Mattaniah: for they were † Heb. as their hand.

— was allied unto Tobiah:] He had married his grandson to the daughter of Sanballat the Horonite, who was the firm friend of this Tobiah, chief of the Ammonites, ver. 28. Pyle.

5. And he had prepared for him a great chamber, &c.] It seems he had pulled down the partitions of several of the temple chambers, where the tithes, offerings, and other sacred things used to be laid up, to make large and spacious lodgings for this heathen, to the scandal of his religion, and the great damage of the country. Pyle.

6. — and after certain days] In the Hebrew the words are, “at the end of days,” meaning perhaps “the end of the year.” It has been the prevailing opinion, that Nehemiah returned to Jerusalem in the same year, and this is adopted in the dates given in the margin of our Bible, according to Archbishop Usher. On the other hand, Dean Prideaux is of opinion, that he was absent for not less a space than five years: he grounds his opinion principally on the idea, that a considerable time was required for those great abuses to grow to such a height, as is described in this chapter; and he observes, that the word translated counted faithful, and † their office was to distribute unto their brethren.

Before
CHRIST
about 434.

14 ^c Remember me, O my God, concerning this, and wipe not out my † good deeds that I have done for the house of my God, and for the || offices thereof.

† Heb. it was upon them.
^c Ver. 22.
† Heb. kindnesses.
|| Or, observations.

15 ¶ In those days saw I in Judah some treading wine presses on the sabbath, and bringing in sheaves, and lading asses; as also wine, grapes, and figs, and all manner of burdens, which they brought into Jerusalem on the sabbath day: and I testified against them in the day wherein they sold victuals.

16 There dwelt men of Tyre also therein, which brought fish, and all manner of ware, and sold on the sabbath unto the children of Judah, and in Jerusalem.

17 Then I contended with the nobles of Judah, and said unto them, What evil thing is this that ye do, and profane the sabbath day?

18 Did not your fathers thus, and did not our God bring all this evil upon us, and upon this city? yet ye bring more wrath upon Israel by profaning the sabbath.

19 And it came to pass, that when the gates of Jerusalem began to be dark before the sabbath, I commanded that the gates should be shut, and charged that they should not be opened till after the sabbath: and some of my servants set I at the gates, that there should no burden be brought in on the sabbath day.

20 So the merchants and sellers of all kind of ware lodged without Jerusalem once or twice.

21 Then I testified against them, and said unto them, Why lodge ye † about the wall? if ye do so again, I will lay hands on you. From that time forth came they no more on the sabbath.

† Heb. before the wall?

“days” very frequently signifies a number of years in Scripture.

10. — the portions of the Levites had not been given] The tithes which had been assigned to maintain the ministers of the temple in their offices and stations, had been either embezzled by the high priest and other rulers of the temple under him, or else withdrawn by the people, and not paid at all; and, for want of these, the Levites and singers were driven from the temple, each to his home, to seek subsistence in some other way; a circumstance which had occasioned the neglect of the daily service in the house of God. Dean Prideaux.

15. In those days &c.] Although these things are all related in one chapter, yet it does not follow that all the reformations took place at one time; but Nehemiah probably brought them about as occasions called for them, and as he saw opportunities for effecting them with success. Dean Prideaux.

— and I testified against them] Some translate these words, “and I contested with them that they should sell provisions on those days when they might be sold,” (and not on the sabbath.) Bp. Patrick.

Before
CHRIST
about 434.

¶ Or, multitude.

about 434.

† Heb. had made to swell with them.

† Heb.
they discerned not to speak.
† Heb. of people
and people.
¶ Or, reviled them.

22 And I commanded the Levites that they should cleanse themselves, and that they should come and keep the gates, to sanctify the sabbath day. Remember me, O my God, concerning this also, and spare me according to the greatness of thy mercy.

23 ¶ In those days also saw I Jews that had married wives of Ashdod, of Ammon, and of Moab:

24 And their children spake half in the speech of Ashdod, and † could not speak in the Jews' language, but according to the language † of each people.

25 And I contended with them, and ¶ cursed them, and smote certain of them, and plucked off their hair, and made them swear by God, saying, Ye shall not give your daughters unto their sons, nor take their daughters unto your sons, or for yourselves.

26 Did not Solomon king of Israel sin

22. — I commanded the Levites that they should cleanse themselves.] He desired the Levites to attend at the gates instead of his own servants, and commanded them to cleanse themselves by some known purification, which might procure for them the greater reverence. Bp. Patrick.

— and spare me according to &c.] He had before besought God to remember his good deeds, ver. 14; but, to shew that he did not think there was any proper merit or worthiness in them, which required a reward, as a debt of justice due to them, he here explains himself, and prays to be rewarded, or rather pardoned, out of God's free goodness, according to the greatness or multitude of His mercies. Bp. Patrick.

25. — and cursed them.] Denounced the curses of God which would fall upon them if they did not reform. Dr. Wells.

— and smote certain of them, &c.] Ordered the publick officers to beat some of the most notorious offenders with rods or scourges, according to Deut. xxv. 2; "and plucked off their hair." This punishment was esteemed a peculiar disgrace in Eastern countries; Is. l. 6; Jerem. xlviii. 37. The hair was reckoned a great ornament, and a distinction of a free man; thus to pluck it off was to brand a person with shame, and to give him the appearance of a slave. Bp. Patrick.

The proper meaning of the Hebrew word is, that they tore off the hair with violence; which punishment was painful as well as disgraceful. This kind of punishment was common in Persia. Calmet.

26. — who was beloved of his God.] See the name given him at his birth, 2 Sam. xii. 25, and the several marks of Divine favour bestowed upon him, 1 Kings ii. 9.

29. Remember them, O my God, &c.] He prays to God to remember to punish them according to their deserts if they remained impenitent, because they had herby defiled the order of the priests, in whom He had required greater purity than in other Israelites. Dr. Wells.

Magistrates and persons in authority would do well seriously to attend to these words which this prudent and religious governor of Jerusalem several times repeats in this book, and which are so full of piety and trust in God. Upright pastors, and in general all who have a true zeal for the house of God, and who labour heartily, and with a sincere affection, in the edification of the church, may use the same words, and be assured, that God will remember them for their good, and be the rewarder of their piety. Nehemiah in all his conduct shewed great zeal for God's glory, and at the same time much prudence, resolution, and confidence in the Divine support. Magistrates and governors should read and meditate in this book with great attention, by these things? yet among many nations was there no king like him, who was beloved of his God, and God made him king over all Israel: ^d nevertheless even him did outlandish women cause to sin.

Before
CHRIST
about 434.

d 1 Kings
11. 1, &c.

27 Shall we then hearken unto you to do all this great evil, to transgress against our God in marrying strange wives?

28 And one of the sons of Joiada, the son of Eliashib the high priest, was son in law to Sanballat the Horonite: therefore I chased him from me.

29 Remember them, O my God, † because they have defiled the priesthood, and the covenant of the priesthood, and of the Levites.

† Heb.
for the defilings.

30 Thus cleansed I them from all strangers, and appointed the wards of the priests and the Levites, every one in his business;

31 And for the wood offering, at times appointed, and for the firstfruits. Remember me, O my God, for good.

and derive improvement from the noble examples of piety and wisdom contained in it. Ostervald. Nehemiah probably continued in his government to the time of his death, which seems to have been in a very old age, when he was full of years and honour. If he had lived in some polite age and country, he would have had statues erected in the publick places, and all the regard paid to him, which a generous and ingenious people can bestow upon true merit. But, as he performed his good works principally for the service of God and of religion, he desired to have his reward rather from God than from men; and therefore he breaks out, once and again, in these words, "Think upon me, my God, for good, and spare me according to the greatness of Thy mercy." He prays that God would accept his good intentions, and forgive his imperfections. He had his recompense in both worlds; happy in the love of his people, happy in seeing his honest labours blest with great success: and his own history, written by himself, and being part of the holy Scriptures, transmits his name and his reputation to all generations, while statues, and pillars, and other frail monuments of human grandeur, moulder away and fall into oblivion.

In the character of Nehemiah we see liberality, disinterestedness, courage, industry, uniformity of conduct, and every social accomplishment. Though our situation and circumstances permit us not to do what he did, yet we may shew the same temper, by acting boldly and honourably in our station, by discountenancing profaneness and immorality, by encouraging virtue, knowledge, learning, and useful arts and sciences, by rejecting all unlawful gain, all private profit which is detrimental to society, by relieving the wants of our brethren, by submitting to the inconveniences and hardships which the publick good may at any time require, by loving our religion and liberties better than the wages of slavery and iniquity, and by acting thus constantly and steadily, whether it be fashionable or unfashionable, whether it be safe or dangerous. This is the general duty of subjects: and, as to the ministers of the Gospel, they are more particularly obliged both to teach and to practise obedience to the government in all things lawful; not for fear of punishment, which is servile; nor for lucre, which is sordid; but, from obedience to the will of God, and for the sake of a good conscience, of their own solemn engagements, and of the publick tranquillity and welfare. Dr. Jortin.

Nehemiah was probably the last governor delegated by the Persian kings; who possibly, after his death, left the government of Judea to the high priest of the Jews, till the Persian empire was destroyed by Alexander the Great. Dr. Gray.

THE BOOK OF ESTHER.

INTRODUCTION.

THIS book is in the Hebrew styled "the Volume of Esther:" it was received into the Jewish canon with particular veneration; and esteemed above many of the prophetick books, probably because therein are described the origin and ceremonies of the feast of Purim. It is called the Book of Esther, because it contains the history of this Jewish captive, who, by her remarkable accomplishments, gained the affections of Ahasuerus; and by a marriage with him was raised to the throne of Persia. The author of the book is not certainly known. Some of the Fathers suppose it to have been written by Ezra; others contend that it was composed by Joachim, high priest of the Jews, and grandson of Josedech. The Talmudists attribute it to the joint labours of the great synagogue, which succeeded Ezra in the superintendence of the canon of Scripture. The 20th verse of the 9th chapter of the book has led others to believe that Mordecai was the author; but what is there related to have been written by him, seems only to refer to the circular letter which he distributed. There are, lastly, other writers, who maintain that the book was the production of Esther's and Mordecai's united industry; and probably they may have communicated an account of events so interesting to the whole nation to the great synagogue at Jerusalem, some of the members of which may, with great reason be supposed to have digested the information thus received into its present form. We have, however, no sufficient evidence to determine, nor is it, perhaps, of much importance to ascertain precisely, who was the author: but that the book contains a genuine and faithful description of what did actually happen, is certain, not only from its admission into the canon, but also from the institution of the feast of Purim, which from its first establishment has been regularly observed as an annual solemnity, on the 14th and 15th of the month Adar, in commemoration of the great deliverance which Esther, by her interest, had procured; and which is even now celebrated among the Jews with many peculiar ceremonies, and with rejoicings even to intoxication. This festival was called Purim, or the feast of lots, (Pur in the Persian language signifying a lot,) from the events mentioned in chap. iii. 7; ix. 24.

The book describes the advancement of Esther; who, by the interest which she conciliated with Ahasuerus, delivered the Jews from a great destruction which had been contrived for them by Haman, an insolent favourite of the king. It presents an interesting description of mortified pride, and of malice baffled to the destruction of its contrivers. It likewise exhibits a very lively representation of the vexations and troubles, of the anxieties, treachery, and dissimulation of a corrupt court. The manners are painted with great force and fidelity; and the vicissitudes and characters are displayed with dramatick effect. The author seems to have been so intimately acquainted with the Persian customs, that some have conceived a notion that he transcribed his work from the Persian chronicles. It has been remarked, that the name of God is not mentioned throughout the book; His superintendent Providence is however frequently illustrated; it is shewn, indeed, in every part of the work, disconcerting evil designs, and producing great events by means seemingly inadequate. Dr. Gray.

Respecting the time when the events recorded in this history took place, there has been great difference of opinion among learned men. We are told, chap. i. 1, that the events happened in the reign of Ahasuerus king of Persia, who "reigned from India even to Ethiopia, over 127 provinces:" and this extent of dominion plainly proves that he was one of the successors of Cyrus; but it is by no means agreed who is the person here meant by Ahasuerus, a name which does not occur in profane history. Archbishop Usher supposes that by Ahasuerus is meant Darius Hystaspes, who began to reign B. C. 521; and agreeably to this supposition, the dates of the several events are given in the margin of our Bibles. Scaliger contends that Xerxes is meant; and various authors of high authority maintain that Artaxerxes Longimanus, who began to reign B. C. 464, is the Ahasuerus here mentioned. "In my judgment Dean Prideaux has very satisfactorily shewn that by Ahasuerus we are to understand Artaxerxes Longimanus. Josephus also considered Ahasuerus and Artaxerxes to be the same person; and we may observe that Ahasuerus is always translated Artaxerxes in the Greek version, and he is called by that name in the Apocryphal part of the book of Esther. Upon these authorities, I place the commencement of this history about the year B. C. 460, and it continues through a space not exceeding twenty years." Bp. Tonline.

Before
CHRIST
about 521.

CHAP. I.

1 Ahasuerus maketh royal feasts. 10 Vashti, sent for, refuseth to come. 13 Ahasuerus, by the counsel of Memucan, maketh the decree of men's sovereignty.

NOW it came to pass in the days of Ahasuerus, (this is Ahasuerus which reigned, from India even unto Ethiopia, Before about 521. over an hundred and seven and twenty provinces:)

CHRIST

2 That in those days, when the king Ahasuerus sat on the throne of his kingdom, which was in Shushan the palace,

Chap. I. ver. 1. — of Ahasuerus,] See the Introduction.
— which reigned, from India even unto Ethiopia,] We are informed by Herodotus, that Darius conquered India; and there might be the number of provinces here mentioned between that country and "Ethiopia," whether we understand by Ethiopia the country near Arabia, or that beyond Egypt. Bp. Patrick. See note at Numb. xii. 1.

2. — sat on the throne of his kingdom,] These words imply that he enjoyed peace and quietness throughout his kingdom. Bp. Patrick.
— in Shushan the palace,] See note at Neh. i. 1.

Before
CHRIST
about 519.

3 In the third year of his reign, he made a feast unto all his princes and his servants; the power of Persia and Media, the nobles and princes of the provinces, being before him:

4 When he shewed the riches of his glorious kingdom and the honour of his excellent majesty many days, even an hundred and fourscore days.

† Heb.
fountl.

5 And when these days were expired, the king made a feast unto all the people that were † present in Shushan the palace, both unto great and small, seven days, in the court of the garden of the king's palace;

† Or, violet.

6 Where were white, green, and ‖ blue, hangings, fastened with cords of fine linen and purple to silver rings and pillars of marble: the beds were of gold and silver, upon a pavement ‖ of red, and blue, and white, and black, marble.

† Or,
of porphyre,
and marble,
and alabaster, and stone of blue colour.

† Heb.
wine of the kingdom.
† Heb.
according to the hand of the king.

7 And they gave them drink in vessels of gold, (the vessels being diverse one from another,) and † royal wine in abundance, † according to the state of the king.

8 And the drinking was according to the law; none did compel: for so the king had appointed to all the officers of his house, that they should do according to every man's pleasure.

Before
CHRIST
about 519.

9 Also Vashti the queen made a feast for the women in the royal house which belonged to king Ahasuerus.

10 ¶ On the seventh day, when the heart of the king was merry with wine, he commanded Mehuman, Biztha, Harbona, Bigtha, and Abagtha, Zethar, and Carcas, the seven ‖ chamberlains that served in the presence of Ahasuerus the king,

† Or,
eunuchs.

11 To bring Vashti the queen before the king with the crown royal, to shew the people and the princes her beauty: for she was † fair to look on.

† Heb. good of countenance.

12 But the queen Vashti refused to come at the king's commandment † by his chamberlains: therefore was the king very wroth, and his anger burned in him.

† Heb. which was
by the hand of his eu-nuchs.

13 ¶ Then the king said to the wise men, which knew the times, (for so was the king's manner toward all that knew law and judgment:

14 And the next unto him was Carshena, Shethar, Admatha, Tarshish, Meres, Marsena, and Memucan, the ^a seven princes of Persia and Media, which saw the king's face, and which sat the first in the kingdom;)

^a Ezra 7.
14.

15 † What shall we do unto the queen † Vashti according to law, because she hath not performed the commandment of the king Ahasuerus by the chamberlains?

† Heb.
What to do.

3. — the power of Persia and Media.] The men in power (as we now speak) of Persia and Media "being before him."

6. Where were white, green, and blue, hangings.] At Aleppo, at present, hangings are never employed, except in the winter on some occasions, to cover the side of a room, when the windows are too much exposed to the cold winds. The hangings mentioned in this passage were probably not the hangings above, but curtains dividing the court of the garden into different booths; for the guests entertained were of different ranks. Harmer.

— upon a pavement of red, and blue, &c. — marble.] Dr. Russell says, that they pave their courts at Aleppo with marble, and oftentimes with a mixture of yellow and white, red and black, by way of ornament. In the middle of the court there is very commonly a fountain, and a kind of little garden about it, which in that climate must be peculiarly agreeable. This may be explanatory of the words "court of the garden" at ver. 5. Harmer.

8. And the drinking was according to the law; &c.] The word "was" is not in the Hebrew; but the true translation seems to be, "The drinking according to custom none did compel," that is, the law or custom was to compel, but this was now superseded. It seems that, whereas it was customary amongst the Persians to urge one another to hard drinking, the emperor, the better to preserve the peace and decorum of this solemnity, ordered that every one should have his full liberty and drink as he pleased. Pyle.

9. — a feast for the women] The women do not eat with the men in the Eastern feasts: it is however usual for them to feast at the same time by themselves. Thus Maillet, after having given an account of the extraordinary feasting at the castle of Grand Cairo, upon the circumcision of the son of the bashaw of Egypt, tells us, that he was assured that the expense which was incurred at the same time in the apartments of the women of the bashaw, was not much less considerable than what appeared in publick;

there being there the same liberalities, the same pleasures, the same abundance, and the same magnificence, that appeared out of those apartments. Harmer.

As in former ages, so at present, it is the custom in the Eastern countries, at all their festivals and entertainments, for the men to be entertained in apartments separate from the women; not the least intercourse or communication being allowed on these occasions between the two sexes. Dr. Shaw.

11. To bring Vashti the queen &c.] We are assured by Herodotus, that the Persians did, on festival occasions, produce their women in publick: he relates a story of seven Persians being sent to Amyntas, a Grecian prince, who received them hospitably, and gave them a splendid entertainment: when after the entertainment they began to drink, one of the Persians thus addressed Amyntas, "Prince of Macedonia, it is a custom with us Persians, whenever we have a publick entertainment, to introduce our concubines and young wives." On this principle Ahasuerus gave command to bring his queen Vashti into the publick assembly. Script. illust. Exp. Ind.

13. — wise men, which knew the times,] Men of judgment and knowledge in affairs, able to give advice for the fittest times and manner of performance of all actions. Bp. Hall.

— (for so was the king's manner &c.)] It was his usual practice to consult with his counsellors who were skilled in the laws of their country, before he resolved on any measure. Dr. Wells.

14. — which saw the king's face, and which sat the first in the kingdom;] Who were his principal ministers, and were admitted into his presence, which was allowed only to the great men of the kingdom. In rank they were the first of all his subjects.

The seven counsellors of the king are spoken of in Ezra vii. 14, as being his advisers in granting Ezra his authority. Bp. Patrick.

Before
CHRIST
about 519.

16 And Memucan answered before the king and the princes, Vashti the queen hath not done wrong to the king only, but also to all the princes, and to all the people that are in all the provinces of the king Ahasuerus.

17 For this deed of the queen shall come abroad unto all women, so that they shall despise their husbands in their eyes, when it shall be reported, The king Ahasuerus commanded Vashti the queen to be brought in before him, but she came not.

18 Likewise shall the ladies of Persia and Media say this day unto all the king's princes, which have heard of the deed of the queen. Thus shall there arise too much contempt and wrath.

† Heb. If it be good with the king.
† Heb. from before him.
† Heb. that it pass not away.
† Heb. unto her companion.
19 † If it please the king, let there go a royal commandment † from him, and let it be written among the laws of the Persians and the Medes, † that it be not altered, That Vashti come no more before king Ahasuerus; and let the king give her royal estate † unto another that is better than she.

20 And when the king's decree which he shall make shall be published throughout all his empire, (for it is great,) all the wives shall give to their husbands honour, both to great and small.

† Heb. was good in the eyes of the king.
21 And the saying † pleased the king and the princes; and the king did according to the word of Memucan:

22 For he sent letters into all the king's provinces, into every province according to the writing thereof, and to every people after their language, that every man should bear rule in his own house, and † that it should be published according to the language of every people.

† Heb. that one should publish it according to the language of his people.

CHAP. II.

1 Out of the choice of virgins a queen is to be chosen.

18. — Thus shall there arise too much contempt and wrath.] Too much contempt in the wives, and wrath in their husbands, which would cause great divisions and contentions in the several families of the kingdom. Bp. Patrick.

21. — and the king did according to the word of Memucan:] The conduct of Ahasuerus with respect to queen Vashti, it must be recollected, was that of an heathen, acting under the influence of anger and intemperance. It is recorded in Scripture, not that it may be imitated or alleged as a pretence for sin, but that we may derive improvement by observing the events to which it led: his violent will, although apparently ungoverned, being nevertheless so directed by Providence, that it brought forward the remarkable preservation of the Jews, which forms the chief subject of this book. Bp. Hall.

Chap. II. ver. 1. — he remembered Vashti,] His former affection for her revived: he nevertheless remembered her undutiful conduct, and the decree irrevocably passed against her, so that he 5 Mordecai the nursing father of Esther. 8 Esther is preferred by Hegai before the rest. 12 The manner of purification, and going in to the king. 15 Esther best pleasing the king is made queen. 21 Mordecai discovering a treason is recorded in the chronicles.

Before
CHRIST
518.

AFTER these things, when the wrath of king Ahasuerus was appeased, he remembered Vashti, and what she had done, and what was decreed against her.

2 Then said the king's servants that ministered unto him, Let there be fair young virgins sought for the king:

3 And let the king appoint officers in all the provinces of his kingdom, that they may gather together all the fair young virgins unto Shushan the palace, to the house of the women, † unto the custody of † Hegai the king's chamberlain, keeper of the women; and let their things for purification be given them:

† Heb. unto the hand.
† Or. Hegai, ver. 8.

4 And let the maiden which pleaseth the king be queen instead of Vashti. And the thing pleased the king; and he did so.

5 ¶ Now in Shushan the palace there was a certain Jew, whose name was Mordecai, the son of Jair, the son of Shimei, the son of Kish, a Benjamite;

6 ^a Who had been carried away from Jerusalem with the captivity which had been carried away with Jeconiah king of Judah, whom Nebuchadnezzar the king of Babylon had carried away.

^a 2 Kings 24. 15.
Jer. 24. 1.
2 Chron. 36. 10.

7 And he † brought up Hadassah, that is, Esther, his uncle's daughter: for she had neither father nor mother, and the maid was † fair and beautiful; whom Mordecai, when her father and mother were dead, took for his own daughter.

† Heb. nourished.

† Heb. fair of form, and good of countenance.

8 ¶ So it came to pass, when the king's commandment and his decree was heard, and when many maidens were gathered was greatly perplexed. Wherefore his counsellors sought to divert his mind toward a new object of attachment. Bp. Patrick.

2. — that ministered unto him,] That ministered unto him in chief; that is, his seven chief counsellors mentioned in chap. i. 14. Dr. Wells.

6. Who had been carried away] Meaning that Kish, the ancestor of Mordecai, had been carried away. Bp. Patrick.

— with the captivity which had been carried away with Jeconiah] Mordecai was a Jew descended from one of those who had been carried away captive with their king Jeconiah. At this time a multitude of Jews were living in the Eastern countries: a number comparatively small had returned to Jerusalem with Zerubbabel. See Ezra ii. Pyle, Bp. Hall.

7. — Hadassah, that is, Esther.] Hadassah was her Jewish name; Esther her Persian name. Pyle. Zerubbabel, Daniel, and other Jews of the captivity, in like manner bore two names. See the note on Ezra i. 8. The derivation of the Persian name Esther, and its meaning, are unknown. Dean Prideaux.

Before
CHRIST
518.

together unto Shushan the palace, to the custody of Hegai, that Esther was brought also unto the king's house, to the custody of Hegai, keeper of the women.

9 And the maiden pleased him, and she obtained the kindness of him ; and he speedily gave her her things for purification, with † such things as belonged to her, and seven maidens, which were meet to be given her, out of the king's house : and † he preferred her and her maids unto the best place of the house of the women.

10 Esther had not shewed her people nor her kindred: for Mordecai had charged her that she should not shew it.

11 And Mordecai walked every day before the court of the women's house, † to know how Esther did, and what should become of her.

12 ¶ Now when every maid's turn was come to go in to king Ahasuerus, after that she had been twelve months, according to the manner of the women, (for so were the days of their purifications accomplished, to wit, six months with oil of myrrh, and six months with sweet odours, and with other things for the purifying of the women ;)

13 Then thus came every maiden unto the king; whatsoever she desired was given her to go with her out of the house of the women unto the king's house.

14 In the evening she went, and on the

10. Esther had not shewed her people nor her kindred:] Esther took care, by the advice of Mordecai, to conceal her country and parentage, that she might not be subject to contempt on that account. Pyle.

11. And Mordecai walked every day before the court of the women's house, &c.] It is evident to every reader that the anxiety of Mordecai for Esther was extreme. But we cannot fully enter into the circumstance of his walking day after day, for a long period of time, probably upwards of a year, without recollecting the extreme vigilance, with which the harems of the East are guarded. Sir J. Chardin says, "The place, where the women are shut up, is sacred, especially among persons of condition; and it is a crime for any person whatever to be inquiring what passes within those walls." "A man may walk an hundred days one after another by the house where the women are, and yet know no more what is done therein, than at the farther end of Tartary." This may account for the conduct of Mordecai, who "walked every day before the court of the women's house," to pick up any intelligence that might chance to come within his cognizance, respecting his niece. Script. illust. Expos. Ind.

17. And the king loved Esther above all &c.] Providence determined the choice of Ahasuerus in favour of one who should be afterward an instrument of preserving His people in a time of imminent danger. The same Divine wisdom had formerly provided for the welfare of His chosen race, by sending Joseph before them into Egypt, and making him lord of all Egypt, that he might save the lives of his brethren in a season of famine, Gen. xlv. 7.
Bp. Hall, Collier.

— so that he set the royal crown upon her head, &c.] It always has been, and still is, the custom of the kings of Abyssinia to marry what number of wives they choose: these are not therefore all morrow she returned into the second house of the women, to the custody of Shaashgaz, the king's chamberlain, which kept the concubines : she came in unto the king no more, except the king delighted in her, and that she were called by name.

15 ¶ Now when the turn of Esther, the daughter of Abihail the uncle of Mordecai, who had taken her for his daughter, was come to go in unto the king, she required nothing but what Hegai the king's chamberlain, the keeper of the women, appointed. And Esther obtained favour in the sight of all them that looked upon her.

16 So Esther was taken unto king Ahasuerus into his house royal in the tenth month, which is the month Tebeth, in the seventh year of his reign.

17 And the king loved Esther above all the women, and she obtained grace and || favour † in his sight more than all the virgins; so that he set the royal crown upon her head, and made her queen instead of Vashti.

18 Then the king made a great feast unto all his princes and his servants, even Esther's feast; and he made a † release to the provinces, and gave gifts, according to the state of the king.

19 And when the virgins were gathered together the second time, then Mordecai sat in the king's gate.

queens ; but among them there is one, who is considered particularly as queen, and upon her head is placed the crown, and she is called the Iteghe. Thus, in Persia, we read that Abasuerus loved Esther, who had found grace in his sight more than the other virgins, and he placed a golden crown upon her head. And Josephus informs us, that when Esther was brought before the king, he was exceedingly delighted with her, and made her his lawful wife, and, when she came into the palace, he put a crown upon her head. Bruce.

18. Then the king made a great feast &c.] The royal marriage was celebrated with magnificent entertainments; all the provinces were released from a certain portion of their taxes, in honour of the new empress, and vast presents were made to her, and to the court favourites. Pyle.

19. — when the virgins were gathered together the second time,] That is, at the time of this present marriage of Ahasuerus with Esther: Vashti having been also before chosen in the same manner from among the virgins gathered together out of different parts of his empire. Pyle, Dr. Wells.

— Mordecai sat in the king's gate.] Mordecai was an officer in the court of Ahasuerus; his service called him daily to attend in the king's gate. Bp. Hall. It appears from several passages of Scripture, that the king's gate was the place in which publick affairs were transacted. Bp. Patrick. The Scripture says of Daniel, (after having stated that Nebuchadnezzar made him a great man, and gave him many great gifts, and made him ruler over the whole province of Babylon, and chief of the governours over all the wise men of Babylon,) that he "sat in the gate of the king," Dan. ii. 48, 49. Of the meaning of these words we have the following illustrations: "If we quit then the streets of these cities, and enter into any of the principal houses, we shall first pass through a porch or

Before
CHRIST
about 515.

about 515.

|| Or,
kindness.
† Heb.
before him.

about 514

† Heb. rcst

Before
CHRIST
about 514.

20 Esther had not yet shewed her kindred nor her people; as Mordecai had charged her: for Esther did the commandment of Mordecai, like as when she was brought up with him.

21 ¶ In those days, while Mordecai sat in the king's gate, two of the king's chamberlains, || Bighthan and Teresh, of those which kept † the door, were wroth, and sought to lay hand on the king Ahasuerus.

22 And the thing was known to Mordecai, who told it unto Esther the queen; and Esther certified the king thereof in Mordecai's name.

23 And when inquisition was made of the matter, it was found out; therefore they were both hanged on a tree: and it was written in the book of the chronicles before the king.

CHAP. III.

1 Haman, advanced by the king, and despised by Mordecai, seeketh revenge upon all the Jews. 7 He casteth lots. 8 He obtaineth by calumny a decree of the king to put the Jews to death.

gateway, with benches on each side, where the master of the family receives visits and despatches his business; few persons, not even the nearest relations, having admission any farther, except upon extraordinary occasions." Dr. Shaw. The square tower forming the principal entrance to the Alhambra, or Red Palace of the Moorish kings in Grenada, from its being the place where justice was summarily administered, was styled the Gate of Judgment. Parkhurst.

20. — for Esther did the commandment of Mordecai, like as when she was brought up with him.] That mind is truly great and noble that is not changed with the highest prosperity: and such was the disposition of queen Esther, whom even the splendour of royalty could not induce to disregard her kinsman and friend, or to depart from a dutiful observance of his directions. Bp. Hall.

22. And the thing was known to Mordecai, who told it unto Esther] Mordecai sets before us the example of a faithful subject, in counteracting the treasonable designs of these men; and it may be remarked, that he shewed this loyalty toward an heathen sovereign, and one under whom he lived as a captive, true religion and loyalty being inseparable; and that herein he exemplified the injunction of the Lord by the Prophet Jeremiah, "Seek the peace of the city whither I have caused you to be carried away captives," Jer. xxix. 7. Bp. Andrewes, Dr. Isaac Barrow.

Mordecai discreetly communicated his discovery, not to indifferent persons; but to the queen: Esther, in laying it before the king, dutifully remembered Mordecai, and commended him to the royal favour, by mentioning him as the author of her information. Bp. Andrewes.

23. — and it was written in the book of the chronicles before the king.] Mordecai was thus registered in the publick annals, as the author of this service done to the crown: the circumstance of his name being so recorded, became afterward the occasion of his advancement, and of great events treated of in the sequel of this book. Pyle.

Chap. III. ver. 1. — the Agagite,] Haman was by descent an Amalekite, of the posterity of Agag, who was king of Amalek in the time of Saul, 1 Sam. xv. Dean Prideaux.

2. — nor did him reverence.] It is probable that he denied Haman this honour on account of the curse under which he lay, as being an Amalekite, Exod. xvii. 14; 1 Sam. xv. 1, 2. It is probable.

AFTER these things did king Ahasuerus promote Haman the son of Hammedatha the Agagite, and advanced him, and set his seat above all the princes that were with him.

2 And all the king's servants, that were in the king's gate, bowed, and revered Haman: for the king had so commanded concerning him. But Mordecai bowed not, nor did him reverence.

3 Then the king's servants, which were in the king's gate, said unto Mordecai, Why transgressest thou the king's commandment?

4 Now it came to pass, when they spake daily unto him, and he hearkened not unto them, that they told Haman, to see whether Mordecai's matters would stand: for he had told them that he was a Jew.

5 And when Haman saw that Mordecai bowed not, nor did him reverence, then was Haman full of wrath.

6 And he thought scorn to lay hands on Mordecai alone; for they had shewed him the people of Mordecai: wherefore Haman

Before
CHRIST
about 510.

bable also that all the Jews did the same; otherwise there would have been no ground, even in the most malicious mind, for such a design of destroying the entire people. Bp. Wilson. Or perhaps the reverence, which it was commanded should be paid to this great man, was a kind of divine honour, such as was sometimes addressed to the Persian monarchs themselves. And this, being a species of idolatry, Mordecai refused to pay on conscientious principles. Perhaps too, it was Haman's understanding that his refusal was the result of his Jewish principles, which was the very thing that determined him to attempt the destruction of the Jews in general, knowing they were all of the same mind. Dr. Jennings.

To bow to all great persons was a common mark of respect; and for this a particular command was not necessary, nor would Mordecai have refused it at the peril of his countrymen as well as himself. In the reverence therefore here commanded, something more than common respect, and bordering on adoration, appears to have been intended. The author of the Apocryphal additions to the book of Esther has thus interpreted the conduct of Mordecai, and represented him as praying in these words: "Thou knowest all things, and Thou knowest, Lord, that it was neither in contempt nor pride, nor for any desire of glory, that I did not bow down to proud Haman. For I could have been content with good will for the salvation of Israel to kiss the soles of his feet. But I did this, that I might not prefer the glory of man above the glory of God: neither will I worship any but Thee, O God," Apocr. Esth. xiii. 12—14. Bp. Patrick.

4. — whether Mordecai's matters would stand:] Whether Mordecai would persist in his conduct, and what would be the event of it. Bp. Patrick.

— for he had told them that he was a Jew.] He had probably been much pressed to give his reason, and he wished to shew that it was not pride, or humour, which made him unwilling to comply with the king's order, but that he was influenced by his religion, which required those of his nation to destroy the Amalekites, and to pay worship to none but God alone. Dr. Wells.

6. — for they had shewed him the people of Mordecai:] That is, Haman had been informed that Mordecai was a Jew. Dr. Wells.

— wherefore Haman sought to destroy all the Jews] Mordecai

Before
CHRIST
about 510.

sought to destroy all the Jews that were throughout the whole kingdom of Ahasuerus, even the people of Mordecai.

510.

7 ¶ In the first month, that is, the month Nisan, in the twelfth year of king Ahasuerus, they cast Pur, that is, the lot, before Haman from day to day, and from month to month, to the twelfth month, that is, the month Adar.

8 ¶ And Haman said unto king Ahasuerus, There is a certain people scattered abroad and dispersed among the people in all the provinces of thy kingdom; and their laws are diverse from all people; neither keep they the king's laws: therefore it is not † for the king's profit to suffer them.

† Heb.
meet, or,
equal.

† Heb. to destroy
them.

9 If it please the king, let it be written † that they may be destroyed: and I will alone had offended him; yet such was his pride or malice, or both, that I know not how many thousands, men, women, and children, must die all, for no other cause but that Mordecai happened to be their countryman. Bp. Andrewes.

From hence we may take occasion to consider the miserable influence of pride and ambition; which intoxicate the mind, making men insolent and outrageous, willing to burst all the bonds of humanity on the slightest and most trivial occasions, and unable to endure any thing which stands in their way, or tends to shew them the falsehood of those arrogant notions which they entertain of themselves. Hence too we may observe the pernicious effects of ungoverned anger, which being once kindled, quickly rises into a raging fire, and spreads destruction far and wide. Dr. J. Balguy.

7. — they cast Pur, that is, the lot.] It was the superstitious manner of the Eastern countries to inquire, by casting lots, what time would be fortunate or unfortunate for the execution of any considerable design. Accordingly Haman gathered together his magicians, and lots were cast before him: and it being first inquired what month would be most favourable, by their rules of divination, they supposed that the month Adar, the last month of the year, would be such; and afterward, by the same rules, the thirteenth day of that month was chosen for Haman's purpose. Pyle, Dr. Wells. This day being full eleven months after the time when the lots were cast, the lot which pointed it out seems to have been directed by the especial providence of God, that, by so long an interval occurring, there might be time enough to take the measures requisite to prevent the intended mischief. Dean Prideaux. And this remarkably exemplifies the words of Solomon in Prov. xvi. 32. "The lot is cast into the lap; but the whole disposing thereof is of the Lord." Bp. Andrewes.

8. And Haman said &c.] Haman's accusation of the Jewish people abounds with malicious insinuations, accompanied by pretences of regard for the publick welfare. Haman conceals his private resentment against Mordecai, as if fearful of exposing the evil motive which actuated him in his application to the king. Bp. Hall.

— dispersed among the people in all the provinces of thy kingdom;] A great number of Jews remained settled in the countries whither they had been carried captive, not accepting the grant of permission to return, offered them by Cyrus. Bp. Patrick. In the midst of idolatry they preserved their religion, and transmitted it to their posterity. And in aftertimes there were Jews so generally dispersed over the habitable world, that in Acts ii. 5, we read, that at the feast of Pentecost "there were dwelling at Jerusalem Jews, devout men, out of every nation under heaven." Bp. Newton.

— and their laws are diverse from all people;] One great pur-

† pay ten thousand talents of silver to the hands of those that have the charge of the business, to bring it into the king's treasures.

Before
CHRIST
510.

† Heb.
weigh.

10 And the king took his ring from his hand, and gave it unto Haman the son of Hammedatha the Agagite, the Jews' || enemy.

|| Or,
oppression.

11 And the king said unto Haman, The silver is given to thee, the people also, to do with them as it seemeth good to thee.

12 Then were the king's || scribes called on the thirteenth day of the first month, and there was written according to all that Haman had commanded unto the king's lieutenants, and to the governors that were over every province, and to the rulers of every people of every province according to the writing thereof, and to every people secretaries.

|| Or,

pose of many peculiar rights and customs enjoined to the Jews evidently was, that they might be kept separate from other nations, and not adopt the manners and practices connected with idolatry. The peculiarity of their customs frequently drew on them the reproaches of heathens: Haman here makes it a ground of accusation against them: Tacitus represents them as a people whose religious rites were contrary to all the world beside; that they accounted profane what to others was most sacred, and, on the contrary, allowed and observed what by others was forbidden. Collyer. Cicero said of the Jewish religion, that it was wholly inconsistent with the splendour and ancient institutions of the Roman empire, and with the dignity of the Roman name. Dr. Jackson.

9. — and I will pay ten thousand talents of silver] A sum of more than two millions one hundred thousand pounds sterling of our money. Dean Prideaux. To compensate for the loss of the tribute paid by the Jews. Bp. Patrick.

If revenge were not very sweet to the malicious man, he could not be content to purchase it at so high a rate. How do we see daily that the thirst hereof carries men to a ruinous prodigality of estate, body, and soul! Bp. Hall.

10. — and gave it unto Haman] Thus placing the royal seal under Haman's discretion. Dr. Wells.

11. — The silver is given to thee,] "I do not require thee to pay the ten thousand talents of silver which thou offerest." See ver. 9. Dr. Wells.

So great was at this time the king's favour towards Haman, that he remitted all the sum which he engaged to give by way of compensation, and granted to him all that he desired without it. Dean Prideaux.

— the people also, to do with them as it seemeth good to thee.] Thus, without any examination into the real state of things, Ahasuerus consented to the destruction of the whole Jewish race: so unwilling are men that love their pleasure to take any pains in distinguishing between truth and falsehood. Bp. Patrick.

In all this behaviour of Ahasuerus, who sees not too much vehemence of headstrong passion? Vashti is cast off for a trifle; the Jews are given to slaughter for nothing: his rage in the one, his favour in the other, is too impotent: as he was a bad husband, so he is an equally bad king. Bp. Hall. Hence also we may take warning not to lend our ear to detractors, or to credit evil reports and unfavourable representations, till we have examined their foundation, and know them to be true. Ostervald.

12. — of every province according to the writing thereof, &c.] That is, it was written in the language of every people, and in the character which they could read. Bp. Patrick. See Apocryphal Esther, chap. xiii, where this decree is given at length.

Before CHRIST 510. after their language; in the name of king Ahasuerus was it written, and sealed with the king's ring.

13 And the letters were sent by posts into all the king's provinces, to destroy, to kill, and to cause to perish, all Jews, both young and old, little children and women, in one day, even upon the thirteenth day of the twelfth month, which is the month Adar, and to take the spoil of them for a prey.

14 The copy of the writing for a commandment to be given in every province was published unto all people, that they should be ready against that day.

15 The posts went out, being hastened by the king's commandment, and the decree was given in Shushan the palace. And the king and Haman sat down to drink; but the city Shushan was perplexed.

CHAP. IV.

1 The great mourning of Mordecai and the Jews. 4 Esther, understanding it, sendeth to Mordecai, who sheweth the cause, and adviseth her to undertake the — sealed with the king's ring.] The very ancient custom of sealing despatches with a seal or signet set in a ring is still retained in the East. Thus in Egypt, Dr. Pococke says, they make the impression of their name with their seal, generally of cornelian, which they wear on their finger, and which is blacked when they have occasion to seal with it. And Mr. Hanway remarks, that the Persian ink serves not only for writing, but for subscribing with a seal: indeed, many of the Persians in high office could not write. In their rings they wear agates, which serve for seals, on which is frequently engraved their name, and some verse from the Koran. So also Dr. Shaw: As few or none of the Arab Shekhs, or of Turkish and Eastern kings, princes, or bashaws, know to write their own names, all their letters and decrees are stamped with their proper rings, seals, or signets, (see 1 Kings xxi. 8; chap. iii. 12,) which are usually of silver or cornelian, with their respective names engraved upon them on one side, and the name of their kingdom or principality, or else some sentence of the Koran, on the other. The art and practice of engraving names on a signet is as old as Moses. See Exod. xxxix. 14, 30. Parkhurst.

13. And the letters were sent by posts into all the king's provinces,] Herodotus thus describes these posts which were in use among the Persians. There is no method of conveyance more expeditious than these messengers. They are ordered in the following way. Men with horses are kept in readiness at stations distant one day's journey from each other. Intelligence is forwarded by the first of these messengers to the second, and by him to the third, and so on to the last. Neither snow, nor rain, nor heat, nor darkness, prevent them from performing their course with the greatest speed. Bp. Patrick.

Xenophon also says of them: I find that Cyrus set on foot another contrivance beneficial to his vast empire, by means of which he gained early information of what was doing in remote parts of his dominions. He formed establishments of stables, horses, and attendants, as far distant from each other as an horse could travel with ease in one day; and at each of these stations he appointed a person to receive and transmit the letters brought by the messengers, and to see that the men and horses were taken care of suit. 10 She excusing herself is threatened by Mordecai. 15 She appointing a fast undertaketh the suit.

Before CHRIST about 510.

WHEN Mordecai perceived all that was done, Mordecai rent his clothes, and put on sackcloth with ashes, and went out into the midst of the city, and cried with a loud and a bitter cry;

2 And came even before the king's gate: for none might enter into the king's gate clothed with sackcloth.

3 And in every province, whithersoever the king's commandment and his decree came, there was great mourning among the Jews, and fasting, and weeping, and wailing; and † many lay in sackcloth and ashes.

4 ¶ So Esther's maids and her † chamberlains came and told it her. Then was the queen exceedingly grieved; and she sent raiment to clothe Mordecai, and to take away his sackcloth from him: but he received it not.

5 Then called Esther for Hatach, one of the king's chamberlains, † whom he had appointed to attend upon her, and gave him a commandment to Mordecai, to know what it was, and why it was.

after their journey, and that fresh ones were sent forward. Sometimes these journeys were not intermitted during the night; the messenger to whose turn it fell to travel at night proceeding as he who had travelled during the day. Parkhurst.

— and to take the spoil of them for a prey.] This permission would act as a strong motive for putting the decree in execution. Bp. Patrick.

15. — And the king and Haman sat down to drink;] They sat down to enjoy themselves after having given orders for the execution of the plan, and despatched the posts. Herodotus assures us, that the Persians were great drinkers of wine, and that, when filled with wine, they were wont to deliberate on the most important affairs of state. Script. illust. Expos. Ind.

— the city Shushan was perplexed.] The Jews at Shushan, getting intelligence of the matter, were reduced to a great degree of perplexity; and the people of other nations, who had been conquered and taken captive as well as they, fell into great apprehensions, not knowing but that they in their turn might experience the same barbarous treatment. Pyle.

Chap. IV. ver. 1. — and went out into the midst of the city, &c.] We may admire the courage of Mordecai in standing forward at this critical juncture, and so strenuously asserting the interest of his countrymen and of his religion, endangered by a sanguinary project for their utter destruction. Dr. Coney.

The Targum states, that when Mordecai had cried aloud in the midst of the city, the Jews gathered round him, and that he caused the book of the law to be brought to the gate of Shushan, and read therein these words of Moses, in Deut. iv. 30, 31, "When thou art in tribulation, and all these things are come upon thee, even in the latter days, if thou turn to the Lord thy God, and shalt be obedient unto His voice; (for the Lord thy God is a merciful God;) He will not forsake thee, neither destroy thee, nor forget the covenant of thy fathers which He swore unto them." After which he exhorted them to fasting, humiliation, and repentance, according to the example of the Ninevites. Bp. Patrick.

5. — and gave him a commandment to Mordecai, &c.] And gave

Before
CHRIST
about 510.

6 So Hatach went forth to Mordecai unto the street of the city, which was before the king's gate.

7 And Mordecai told him of all that had happened unto him, and of the sum of the money that Haman had promised to pay to the king's treasuries for the Jews, to destroy them.

8 Also he gave him the copy of the writing of the decree that was given at Shushan to destroy them, to shew it unto Esther, and to declare it unto her, and to charge her that she should go in unto the king, to make supplication unto him, and to make request before him for her people.

9 And Hatach came and told Esther the words of Mordecai.

10 ¶ Again Esther spake unto Hatach, and gave him commandment unto Mordecai;

11 All the king's servants, and the people of the king's provinces, do know, that whosoever, whether man or woman, shall come unto the king into the inner court, who is not called, there is one law of his to put him to death, except such to whom the

Before
CHRIST
about 510.

king shall hold out the golden sceptre, that he may live: but I have not been called to come in unto the king these thirty days.

12 And they told to Mordecai Esther's words.

13 Then Mordecai commanded to answer Esther, Think not with thyself that thou shalt escape in the king's house, more than all the Jews.

14 For if thou altogether holdest thy peace at this time, then shall there [†]enlargement and deliverance arise to the Jews from another place; but thou and thy father's house shall be destroyed: and who knoweth whether thou art come to the kingdom for such a time as this?

† Heb.
respiration.

15 ¶ Then Esther bade them return Mordecai this answer,

16 Go, gather together all the Jews that are [†]present in Shushan, and fast. ye for [†]me, and neither eat nor drink three days, night or day: I also and my maidens will fast likewise; and so will I go in unto the king, which is not according to the law: and if I perish, I perish.

† Heb.
found.

him a commandment to go to Mordecai, and "to know what it was" for which he thus grieved. Dr. Wells.

11. — there is one law of his to put him to death.] One law extending to all that were so presumptuous, whatever might be their rank. This seems to be an ancient law of the country, for it is mentioned by Herodotus; although, according to some, it was procured by Haman, in order that none might come into the king's presence without introduction from him. Bp. Patrick.

— but I have not been called &c.] This might justly make her fearful that the king's affection toward her was diminished, and that her petition would not be favourably received. Bp. Patrick.

14. — from another place.] He knew not whence, but he confided in God, that by some means or other He would preserve them. Bp. Patrick.

Mordecai tells her, that the decree extended universally to all of her nation, and that, if it came to execution, she must not expect to escape more than any other of the people; that Providence seemed to have advanced her on purpose for this work; but that, if she refused to act her part in it, then deliverance would come in some other way, and she and her father's house would perish. Dean Prideaux.

The faith of Mordecai desires amid all these clouds a cheerful prospect of deliverance. He saw the day of their common destruction fixed, he knew the Persian decrees to be unalterable; but withal he knew there was a Messiah to come. Supported by the remembrance of God's covenant to His church, he can foresee Israel's safety, in spite of the sanguinary purposes of its adversaries; trusting the promises of God rather than the threatenings of men. Bp. Hall.

— but thou and thy father's house shall be destroyed.] Deliverance shall certainly come to the people of God; but if thou refuse to act thy part as an instrument of their preservation, thou shalt surely perish, and thy father's house with thee, for thy self-love and want of zeal for thy country and religion. Dean Prideaux, Pyle.

— and who knoweth whether thou art come to the kingdom for such a time as this?] Which is as if he had said, Consider the wonderful and gracious providence of God, in raising thee from among a despised people to be the consort of the greatest monarch upon earth. Think not but the Lord therein certainly intended that some great work should be accomplished by thy hand in favour of His afflicted church. And now the hour is come for thee to make use of the advancement given thee by the Lord; and to try, by that power and interest which thou hast with the king, to reverse the decree of our adversary, and effect the deliverance of our whole nation.

The argument used by Mordecai to Esther is one of general application and use, namely, that one great purpose for which men are entrusted by Providence with power or riches, is that they may therewith do good, and succour those who require their assistance; that they may help those to right who suffer wrong, may stand by their poorer brethren in the day of calamity and distress, and may minister to the comfort of the afflicted; and that it is their sin, if they neglect to make these uses of their superiour advantages. Bp. Sanderson.

16. — neither eat nor drink three days.] The usual way of observing such a fast, was to eat nothing until the evening, and then sparingly. Bp. Wilson.

— which is not according to the law.] Being thus recommended to God, she resolved not so much to regard the law as the preservation of her people; for there are some cases in which, to observe the laws of man, would be to offend against the laws of God. Bp. Patrick.

— and if I perish, I perish.] Her meaning is, I will put my life in hazard; I cannot venture it in a better cause; I will do the act, let God give what issue He pleases. Heroical thoughts do well befit great actions. Life can never be better adventured, than where it shall be gain to lose it. Where the necessity of God's church calls for us, no danger should withhold us from all honest means of relief. Bp. Hall. This is a mode of expression resembling the words of Jacob in Gen. xliii. 14, "If I be bereaved of my children, I am bereaved;" and signifying, If it please God that I perish in my undertaking, His will be done; I am content to die in my duty. These words therefore are uttered, not in despondence, or in presumptuous hardihood, but in genuine and virtuous courage, grounded in the fear of God, and strengthened by the means of those religious exercises in which

Before
CHRIST
about 510.

† Heb.
passed.

17 So Mordecai † went his way, and did according to all that Esther had commanded him.

CHAP. V.

1 Esther, adventuring on the king's favour, obtaineth the grace of the golden sceptre, and inviteth the king and Haman to a banquet. 6 She, being encouraged by the king in her suit, inviteth them to another banquet the next day. 9 Haman, proud of his advancement, repineth at the contempt of Mordecai. 14 By the counsel of Zeresh he buildeth for him a pair of gallows.

NOW it came to pass on the third day, that Esther put on her royal apparel, and stood in the inner court of the king's house, over against the king's house: and the king sat upon his royal throne in the royal house, over against the gate of the house.

2 And it was so, when the king saw Esther the queen standing in the court, that she obtained favour in his sight: and the king held out to Esther the golden sceptre that was in his hand. So Esther drew near, and touched the top of the sceptre.

3 Then said the king unto her, What wilt thou, queen Esther? and what is thy request? it shall be even given thee to the half of the kingdom.

4 And Esther answered, If it seem good unto the king, let the king and Haman come this day unto the banquet that I have prepared for him.

5 Then the king said, Cause Haman to make haste, that he may do as Esther hath said. So the king and Haman came to the banquet that Esther had prepared.

Before
CHRIST
about 510.

6 ¶ And the king said unto Esther at the banquet of wine, What is thy petition? and it shall be granted thee: and what is thy request? even to the half of the kingdom it shall be performed.

7 Then answered Esther, and said, My petition and my request is;

8 If I have found favour in the sight of the king, and if it please the king to grant my petition, and † to perform my request, † Heb. to do. let the king and Haman come to the banquet that I shall prepare for them, and I will do to morrow as the king hath said.

9 ¶ Then went Haman forth that day joyful and with a glad heart: but when Haman saw Mordecai in the king's gate, that he stood not up, nor moved for him, he was full of indignation against Mordecai.

10 Nevertheless Haman refrained himself: and when he came home, he sent and † called for his friends, and Zeresh his wife. † Heb. caused to come.

11 And Haman told them of the glory of his riches, and the multitude of his children, and all the things wherein the king had promoted him, and how he had advanced him above the princes and servants of the king.

12 Haman said moreover, Yea, Esther the queen did let no man come in with the king unto the banquet that she had prepared but myself; and to morrow am I invited unto her also with the king.

13 Yet all this availeth me nothing, so long as I see Mordecai the Jew sitting at the king's gate.

Esther had commended herself to His disposal. Bps. Kidder and Patrick.

Esther is the pattern of a truly great character; of love to her country, of compassion, of generous resolution, courage, and patience. Pyle.

See, in the 14th chapter of the Apocryphal book of Esther, the prayer attributed to Esther on this occasion.

Chap. V. ver. 8. — and I will do to morrow as the king hath said.] That is, I will then make known my request. Dr. Wells. Her intention in thus desiring to entertain the king twice at her banquets before she made known her petition to him, was, that she might thereby the more endear herself to him, and dispose him the better to grant the request which she had to make to him. Dean Prideaux.

There was also a singular providence of God in so disposing her mind, that the high honour, which the king bestowed on Mordecai the next day, might in the mean while fall out, and so make way for her petition; as also that Haman might in the mean while make his preparations for the execution of Mordecai. Dr. Wells.

13. Yet all this availeth me nothing, so long as I see Mordecai the Jew sitting at the king's gate.] These words of Haman, spoken thus deliberately after he had called together his friends, are evidently the expressions of a real and painful feeling, and shew that vexation and resentment troubled him to an excessive degree, and had gained entire possession of his mind. Ahab, under the tyranny of similar passions, when he could not have his will concerning Naboth's vineyard, "came into his house heavy and displeased—and laid him down upon his bed, and turned away his face, and would eat no bread:" nor could all his worldly magnificence give him relief.

Those things which availed nothing to the happiness of Haman, under his vexation of spirit, are enumerated by him in his complaint uttered in the presence of his friends. They consist of the greatest distinctions and favours that he could desire from the king, and the most alluring objects of human wishes. Nevertheless his enjoyment of all this prosperity is alloyed by the single circumstance of Mordecai's disrespect, which was made a source of misery by his own passions and imagination.

We may hence take occasion to observe, that the proud, the revengeful, the discontented, the unthankful and impatient, are their own tormentors; whether God immediately execute His judgments on them or not, their own temper of mind is their punishment: that, on the other hand, the various natural passions and affections of the heart work together for good, through the Divine grace, to those who govern them rightly; that humility is a great source of happiness; that it is a joyful and pleasant thing to be thankful; and that it is for our benefit to receive cheerfully our appointed portion, having our desires and purposes

Before
CHRIST
about 510.
† Heb. tree.

14 ¶ Then said Zeresh his wife and all his friends unto him, Let a † gallows be made of fifty cubits high, and to morrow speak thou unto the king that Mordecai may be hanged thereon: then go thou in merrily with the king unto the banquet. And the thing pleased Haman; and he caused the gallows to be made.

CHAP. VI.

1 Ahasuerus, reading in the chronicles of the good service done by Mordecai, taketh care for his reward. 4 Haman, coming to sue that Mordecai might be hanged, unawares giveth counsel that he might do him honour. 12 Complaining of his misfortune, his friends tell him of his final destiny.

† Heb.
the king's sleep fled away.

ON that night † could not the king sleep, and he commanded to bring the book of records of the chronicles; and they were read before the king.

¶ Or, Bigthana,
chap. 2. 21.
† Heb.
threshold.

2 And it was found written, that Mordecai had told of † Bigthana and Teresh, two of the king's chamberlains, the keepers of the † door, who sought to lay hand on the king Ahasuerus.

3 And the king said, What honour and dignity hath been done to Mordecai for this? Then said the king's servants that ministered unto him, There is nothing done for him.

4 ¶ And the king said, Who is in the resigned to the disposal of God, and ever praying that His will be done.

We may hence observe farther, that man's life consisteth not in the abundance of things that he possesseth; that happiness does not depend upon the outward appearance and condition of any person, and that the greatest earthly prosperity is not proof against vexation of spirit, since a small accident, and even an imaginary misfortune, may spoil the enjoyment of it; and that we can have no solid comfort in any state of life, if our mind be out of order, and if our heart be not right with God. For the foundation of all happiness is a wise and understanding heart, endued with the faith and fear of God. With this, through His grace, we shall know both "how to be abased, and how to abound;" and shall learn "in whatsoever state we are, therewith to be content," Phil. iv. 11, 12. Theod, Dr. J. Balguy.

Chap. VI. ver. 1. On that night &c.] The revengeful projects of Haman were no sooner concerted, than they were followed by a wonderful turn of affairs, in which several instances of providential interference concurred towards the rescue of the innocent, and the mortification of this haughty and injurious man. Pyle.

The Scriptures relate many events brought to pass by means which seem disproportionate, unsuitable, and even contrary to the effect. Such events speak God to be their cause, His invisible power supplying the apparent defects in the means. Thus plots contrived in darkness, with all possible caution and secrecy, are by improbable means and unaccountable accidents disclosed and brought to light; "a bird of the air," as the wise man speaks, "telling the matter," or "the stone," according to the expression of the Prophet, "crying out of the wall." In the book of Esther we read, The king cannot sleep; to divert him, the chronicle is called court? Now Haman was come into the outward court of the king's house, to speak unto the king to hang Mordecai on the gallows that he had prepared for him.

Before
CHRIST
about 510.

5 And the king's servants said unto him, Behold, Haman standeth in the court. And the king said, Let him come in.

6 So Haman came in. And the king said unto him, What shall be done unto the man † whom the king delighteth to honour? Now Haman thought in his heart, To whom would the king delight to do honour more than to myself?

† Heb.
in whose honour the king delighteth?

7 And Haman answered the king, For the man † whom the king delighteth to honour,

† Heb.
in whose honour the king delighteth.

8 † Let the royal apparel be brought † which the king useth to wear, and the horse that the king rideth upon, and the crown royal which is set upon his head:

† Heb.
Let them bring the royal apparel.

9 And let this apparel and horse be delivered to the hand of one of the king's most noble princes, that they may array the man † withal whom the king delighteth to honour, and † bring him on horseback through the street of the city, and proclaim before him, Thus shall it be done to the man whom the king delighteth to honour.

† Heb.
wherewith
the king clotheh himself.

† Heb. cause him
to ride.

10 Then the king said to Haman, Make haste, and take the apparel and the horse, for; Mordecai's service is there pitched upon, and inquiry made concerning his recompense; honour is decreed him; so the cruel device of Haman comes out, and he himself suffers. Whence can such events proceed but from the ever watchful care of Him, whose eyes are upon the ways of man, and He seeth all his goings? Dr. Isaac Barrow, Bp. Horne.

2. And it was found written, that Mordecai &c.] It was a singular interposition of Divine Providence, that among the voluminous registers of occurrences, afforded by the affairs of so many provinces, the reader should turn to that part in which Mordecai's service was recorded. Bps. Hall and Patrick.

8. — the crown royal which is set upon his head:] That is, upon the head of the horse, as is commonly understood: the Hebrew word signifies any ornament about the head or neck. Bp. Patrick, Dr. Wells.

9. — and bring him on horseback through the street &c.] Pitts gives an account of a person, who had turned Mahometan, having honours paid to him, very similar to those here described as paid to Mordecai. Strange as the custom may seem of paying honour to a person by putting vestments on him above his degree, and which it is not designed that he should keep, together with the carrying him thus equipped about a large town on horseback, attended by a cryer; we perceive from this instance that it has prevailed no less with Africans, than anciently with Asiatics. Harmer.

10. — Make haste, — and do even so to Mordecai] A marvelous concurrence of circumstances drawn together by the infinite wisdom and power of the Almighty. Who but Haman should be called by the king? And when should Haman be called to advise of Mordecai's honour, but in the very instant when he came to petition for Mordecai's destruction? Bp. Hall. Thus Haman's thirst of revenge caused him to minister to his own grief and humiliation. Bp. Patrick.

Before CHRIST about 510.
 as thou hast said, and do even so to Mordecai the Jew, that sitteth at the king's gate: † let nothing fail of all that thou hast spoken.

11 Then took Haman the apparel and the horse, and arrayed Mordecai, and brought him on horseback through the street of the city, and proclaimed before him, Thus shall it be done unto the man whom the king delighteth to honour.

12 ¶ And Mordecai came again to the king's gate. But Haman hasted to his house mourning, and having his head covered.

13 And Haman told Zeresh his wife and all his friends every thing that had befallen him. Then said his wise men and Zeresh his wife unto him, If Mordecai be of the seed of the Jews, before whom thou hast begun to fall, thou shalt not prevail against him, but shalt surely fall before him.

14 And while they were yet talking with him, came the king's chamberlains, and hasted to bring Haman unto the banquet that Esther had prepared.

CHAP. VII.

1 Esther, entertaining the king and Haman, maketh suit for her own life and her people's. 5 She accuseth Haman. 7 The king in his anger, understanding of the gallows which Haman had made for Mordecai, causeth him to be hanged thereon.

† Heb. to drink.
 SO the king and Haman came † to banquet with Esther the queen.

2 And the king said again unto Esther on the second day at the banquet of wine,

Before CHRIST about 510.
 What is thy petition, queen Esther? and it shall be granted thee: and what is thy request? and it shall be performed, even to the half of the kingdom.

3 Then Esther the queen answered and said, If I have found favour in thy sight, O king, and if it please the king, let my life be given me at my petition, and my people at my request:

4 For we are sold, I and my people, † to be destroyed, to be slain, and to perish. But if we had been sold for bondmen and bondwomen, I had held my tongue, although the enemy could not countervail the king's damage.

5 ¶ Then the king Ahasuerus answered and said unto Esther the queen, Who is he, and where is he, † that durst presume in his heart to do so?

6 And Esther said, † The adversary and enemy is this wicked Haman. Then Haman was afraid ¶ before the king and the queen.

7 ¶ And the king arising from the banquet of wine in his wrath went into the palace garden: and Haman stood up to make request for his life to Esther the queen; for he saw that there was evil determined against him by the king.

8 Then the king returned out of the palace garden into the place of the banquet of wine; and Haman was fallen upon the bed whereon Esther was. Then said the king, Will he force the queen also † before me in the house? As the word went out of the king's mouth, they covered Haman's face.

9 And Harbonah, one of the chamber-signed our destruction, could not countervail the king's damage; forasmuch as the king would have lost more than he had gained, had we been sold. Dr. Wells.

6. — this wicked Haman.] Never till now did Haman bear his true title. Before, some had styled him noble, others great; some magnificent, and some perhaps virtuous; only Esther gives him his own, Wicked Haman. Ill-deserving popularity doth in vain promise to itself a perpetuity of applause; if our ways be really evil, the time shall come when, after all vain flattery, after all our short-lived glory, our sins shall be drawn forth to light, and our iniquities laid before us, to our utter confusion. Bp. Hall.

8. — Haman was fallen upon the bed] It was the custom in those times to sit or lay upon beds, as they ate and drank, and Haman was now in the posture of a person who had fallen as a suppliant at the feet of Esther.

— Then said the king, &c.] The king, finding him in this posture, interpreted his conduct as if he were so impudent as to take liberties with the queen's person in his own palace. Not that he could believe this was really the case, but, in his furious passion, he turned every thing to the worst sense, and made use of it to aggravate Haman's crime. Bp. Patrick.

— they covered Haman's face.] It was the custom so to cover the faces of condemned criminals: a custom also found

12. — came again to the king's gate.] To perform the business of the place which he held, and to shew that he was not elated with the high honour which he had received. It is probable he looked upon this honour as a happy omen of the successful events which followed. Dr. Wells.

— having his head covered.] This was a token of sorrow. See 2 Sam. xv. 30; xix. 4; Jerem. xiv. 3, 4. The same was customary with other nations. Thus Panthea, the wife of Abradatas, when taken captive by Cyrus, is described by Xenophon as sitting covered with a veil, and looking upon the ground; and, among the Greeks, veiling the head is spoken of as a sign of grief. Parkhurst.

13. — If Mordecai be of the seed of the Jews, &c.] They consider the favour shewn to Mordecai to be a certain prelude of Haman's fall; because the new favourite, being a Jew, would shew no mercy to the irreconcilable enemy of the Jewish nation. They had probably observed too the wonderful interpositions of Providence in favour of the Jews during the captivity, and thence concluded that they were especial objects of the Divine protection. Bp. Patrick.

Chap. VII. ver. 4. — although the enemy could not countervail the king's damage.] Although the enemy of our nation, who thus de-

Before
CHRIST
about 510.

† Heb.
arce.

lains, said before the king, Behold also, the gallows fifty cubits high, which Haman had made for Mordecai, who had spoken good for the king, standeth in the house of Haman. Then the king said, Hang him thereon.

10 So they hanged Haman on the gallows that he had prepared for Mordecai. Then was the king's wrath pacified.

CHAP. VIII.

1 Mordecai is advanced. 3 Esther maketh suit to reverse among the ancient Romans, both in their punishment of a parricide, who, when convicted, was immediately hooded, as unworthy of the common light; and in that form of pronouncing sentence on a criminal ascribed by Livy to Tullus Hostilius: "Go, officer, bind his hands, veil his head, hang him on the fatal tree." This custom was noticed in Egypt by Dr. Pococke, who speaks of a man brought before the Bey, like a malefactor, with his hands behind him as if tied, and a napkin put over his head, as malefactors commonly have. Parkhurst, Harmer.

9. — the gallows] In the margin, "the tree." Crucifixion appears to have been the punishment inflicted by Ahasuerus upon Haman. Polycrates of Samos, Cicero tells us, was crucified by order of Oroetes, prator of Darius. One of the capital punishments in Abyssinia is the cross. Bruce.

— Hang him thereon.] Thus, within the compass of a day, Haman's fortune was completely reversed: but a few hours after he imagined his success most certain, this sentence of condemnation was pronounced upon him. Thus also we find many instances in Holy Scripture in which the security of the wicked is suddenly disturbed by the Divine summons: "Thou fool, this night thy soul shall be required of thee," Luke xii. 20. Bp. Andrewes.

When iniquitous enterprises, managed by subtilty or violence, are suddenly and seasonably defeated, then the ever-vigilant Eye, and the all-powerful Hand, are concerned. God doth ever see the deceitful workers of iniquity, though they devise their wickedness in secret. He often doth suffer it to grow on to a pitch of maturity, till it be thoroughly formed, till it be ready to break forth in fearful effects; then in a moment He crusheth it to nothing. God beholdeth unjust men setting out in their designs; He letteth them proceed in full career till they are reaching the object of their wishes; then instantly He checketh, He turneth them back, He overthroweth them. Thus was Haman's plot confounded, when he had procured a royal decree, when he had fixed a time, when he had issued forth letters to destroy the people of God. Thus was Pharaoh overwhelmed when he had just overtaken the children of Israel. Thus perished the designs of Abimelech, of Absalom, of Adonijah, of Sanballat. Thus, when Sennacherib had encamped against Jerusalem with a mighty host, and to all appearance had the city in his power, the Lord did put a hook in his nose, and turned him back into his own land. Almighty God could prevent the very beginning of wicked designs, or could subvert them in any stage of their progress; but He rather winketh for a time at their success, and suffereth the designers to go on till they are elevated to the height of confidence, and till the good are on the brink of ruin: then surprisingly He striketh in with effectual succour; thus declaring how vain is the presumption of the ungodly, how needful and how certain is His protection over His good and faithful servants; how much reason the one hath to dread Him, and the other to confide in Him. Dr. Isaac Barrow.

10. — on the gallows that he had prepared for Mordecai.] That same instrument, which he had reared on high for Mordecai's destruction, is appointed by Providence for his own; and his shame and punishment are rendered as conspicuous as his former honour and prosperity. Dr. J. Balguy, Bp. Hall.

In Abyssinia, when the prisoner is condemned in capital cases, Haman's letters. 7 Ahasuerus granteth to the Jews to defend themselves. 15 Mordecai's honour, and the Jews' joy.

Before
CHRIST
about 510.

ON that day did the king Ahasuerus give the house of Haman the Jews' enemy unto Esther the queen. And Mordecai came before the king; for Esther had told what he was unto her.

2 And the king took off his ring, which he had taken from Haman, and gave it unto Mordecai. And Esther set Mordecai over the house of Haman.

he is not again remitted to prison, but is immediately carried away, and the sentence executed upon him. Among other instances of this, Abba Salama was condemned by the king the morning he entered Gondar, on his return from Tigre, and immediately hanged, in the garment of a priest, on a tree at the door of the king's palace. The same was the practice in Persia, as we learn from Xenophon, and more plainly from Diodorus. Bruce.

In that deliverance of the Jews from Haman's conspiracy, there is no extraordinary manifestation of God's power; no particular cause or agent was in its working advanced above the ordinary pitch of nature; and yet the contrivance or suiting of these ordinary agents appointed by God, is more admirable than if the same end had been effected by means truly miraculous. For a king not to take kindly rest by night, though in a bed of ease, is not unusual: for a king again to seek to solace his waking thoughts by hearing the annals of his kingdom, is more commendable than rare: but that king Ahasuerus should lie awake at that time, specially when Haman did watch and plot the destruction of the Jews; that, causing the chronicles of his kingdom to be read, the reader should light on the place wherein was recorded Mordecai's unrewarded good service, in discovering the treason intended against the king's person; this was from the Keeper of Israel, who neither slumbereth nor sleepeth, and who was marvellous in His people's sight.

It was His doing, likewise, that Esther, by Mordecai's advice, should conceal her nation and parentage until she came in such high favour with the king; that queen Vashti should be displaced, and Esther preferred, about the same time wherein Haman was advanced, and by his advancement enabled to do a remediless mischief to the Jewish nation, if the Lord had not, as the wise man speaks, "made one thing against another." Dr. Jackson.

As miracles display the infinite power of God, so His direction of human affairs exhibits His infinite wisdom, and proves the subordination of all the several ranks of creatures, with whatsoever strength or efficacy they be endowed, to His providence. In wisdom He made them all: in wisdom He marshalleth, He ordereth them all. Dr. Jackson.

The succession of events which led to the deliverance of the Jews from Haman, shew that the providence of God may be at work where men least suppose it; that He in His infinite wisdom makes unlikely accidents subservient to His ends; and that the minute parts of His dispensations may not always afford sufficient ground for our limited faculties to estimate the great purposes of His will. Bp. Hall.

Chap. VIII. ver. 1. — the house of Haman] That is, the whole estate which Haman had possessed; his dwelling, lands, cattle, goods, and treasure. Bp. Patrick.

— what he was unto her.] That is, Esther had made known to the king how Mordecai was related to her. Dean Prideaux.

2. — took off his ring, — and gave it unto Mordecai.] The king made Mordecai the keeper of his seal, in the same manner as Haman had been before. Dean Prideaux.

The bearing of a seal is a token of an high office, either by

Before
CHRIST
about 510.

† Heb. and she wept, and besought
him.

3 ¶ And Esther spake yet again before the king, and fell down at his feet, † and besought him with tears to put away the mischief of Haman the Agagite, and his device that he had devised against the Jews.

4 Then the king held out the golden sceptre toward Esther. So Esther arose, and stood before the king,

5 And said, If it please the king, and if I have found favour in his sight, and the thing seem right before the king, and I be pleasing in his eyes, let it be written to reverse † the letters devised by Haman the son of Hammedatha the Agagite, || which he wrote to destroy the Jews which are in all the king's provinces :

† Heb.
the device.
|| Or,
who wrote.

6 For how can I † endure to see the evil that shall come unto my people? or how can I endure to see the destruction of my kindred?

† Heb. be able that I may see.

7 ¶ Then the king Ahasuerus said unto Esther the queen and to Mordecai the Jew, Behold, I have given Esther the house of Haman, and him they have hanged upon the gallows, because he laid his hand upon the Jews.

8 Write ye also for the Jews, as it liketh you, in the king's name, and seal it with the king's ring: for the writing which is written in the king's name, and sealed with the king's ring, ^a may no man reverse.

^a See chap.
1. 19.

9 Then were the king's scribes called at that time in the third month, that is, the month Sivan, on the three and twentieth day thereof; and it was written according to all that Mordecai commanded unto the Jews, and to the lieutenants, and the deputies and rulers of the provinces which are from India unto Ethiopia, an hundred twenty and seven provinces, unto every province according to the writing thereof, succession or deputation. Thus in Gen. xli. 42, Pharaoh, setting Joseph over the whole land of Egypt, gives him his ring; that is, his seal, as Josephus the historian explains it. Antiochus, declaring his son successor in his kingdom, sends him "the crown, and his robe, and his signet," 1 Mac. vi. 14, 15. Thus in Aristophanes, the taking away of the ring signifies the discharging of a chief magistrate: and a little after, the giving of a ring to another is the making another steward or chief magistrate, by delivering to him the badge of his office. To these instances it may be added, that, in our own nation, the Lord Chancellor or Lord Keeper of the Great Seal, and other high officers of state, are appointed by the King delivering to them the seals of their respective offices. Parkhurst.

— Esther set Mordecai over the house of Haman.] Esther appointed Mordecai to conduct for her the affairs relating to Haman's estate. Dean Prideaux.

9.— in the third month, &c.] That is, a little more than two months after the former decree. Bp. Patrick.

VOL. I.

Before
CHRIST
about 510.

and unto every people after their language, and to the Jews according to their writing, and according to their language.

10 And he wrote in the king Ahasuerus's name, and sealed it with the king's ring, and sent letters by posts on horseback, and riders on mules, camels, and young dromedaries:

11 Wherein the king granted the Jews which were in every city to gather themselves together, and to stand for their life, to destroy, to slay, and to cause to perish, all the power of the people and province that would assault them, both little ones and women, and to take the spoil of them for a prey,

12 Upon one day in all the provinces of king Ahasuerus, namely, upon the thirteenth day of the twelfth month, which is the month Adar.

13 The copy of the writing for a commandment to be given in every province was † published unto all people, and that the Jews should be ready against that day to avenge themselves on their enemies.

† Heb.
revealed.

14 So the posts that rode upon mules and camels went out, being hastened and pressed on by the king's commandment. And the decree was given at Shushan the palace.

15 ¶ And Mordecai went out from the presence of the king in royal apparel of || blue and white, and with a great crown of gold, and with a garment of fine linen and purple: and the city of Shushan rejoiced and was glad.

|| Or,
violet.

16 The Jews had light, and gladness, and joy, and honour.

17 And in every province, and in every city, whithersoever the king's commandment and his decree came, the Jews had joy and gladness, a feast and a good day.

11. Wherein the king granted the Jews — to stand for their life,] The decree procured by Haman against the Jews being by an unreasonable custom irreversible, all that the king could do, in compliance with Esther's request, was to give the Jews, by a new decree, such a power to defend themselves as might render the former decree ineffectual. Dean Prideaux.

12. — upon the thirteenth day &c.] The very day appointed by Haman for their destruction.

15. — in royal apparel] See the note on Dan. v. 7.

— a great crown of gold,] Not a royal crown, but such an one as was worn by the highest princes of Persia. Bp. Patrick.

16. The Jews had light,] Light is often figuratively applied in Scripture to denote prosperity. Bp. Lowth.

The eyes of the Lord are ever upon His church, and though He sometimes suffer it to be brought into tribulation, yet He hath promised concerning it, "No weapon that is formed against thee shall prosper; and every tongue that shall rise against thee in judgment thou shalt condemn," Isai. liv. 17. Bp. Horne.

Before
CHRIST
about 510.

And many of the people of the land became Jews; for the fear of the Jews fell upon them.

CHAP. IX.

- 1 The Jews (the rulers, for fear of Mordecai, helping them) slay their enemies, with the ten sons of Haman.
12 Ahasuerus, at the request of Esther, granteth another day of slaughter, and Haman's sons to be hanged.
20 The two days of Purim are made festival.

about 509.

NOW in the twelfth month, that is, the month Adar, on the thirteenth day of the same, when the king's commandment and his decree drew near to be put in execution, in the day that the enemies of the Jews hoped to have power over them, (though it was turned to the contrary, that the Jews had rule over them that hated them;)

2 The Jews gathered themselves together in their cities throughout all the provinces of the king Ahasuerus, to lay hand on such as sought their hurt: and no man could withstand them; for the fear of them fell upon all people.

3 And all the rulers of the provinces, and the lieutenants, and the deputies, and officers of the king, helped the Jews; because the fear of Mordecai fell upon them.

† Heb.
those which did the business that belonged to
the king.

4 For Mordecai was great in the king's house, and his fame went out throughout all the provinces: for this man Mordecai waxed greater and greater.

5 Thus the Jews smote all their enemies with the stroke of the sword, and slaughter, and destruction, and did † what they would unto those that hated them.

† Heb.
according to their will.

6 And in Shushan the palace the Jews slew and destroyed five hundred men.

7 And Parshandatha, and Dalphon, and Aspatha,

8 And Poratha, and Adalia, and Aridatha,

Before
CHRIST
about 509.

9 And Parmashta, and Arisai, and Aridai, and Vajezatha,

10 The ten sons of Haman the son of Hammedatha, the enemy of the Jews, slew they; but on the spoil laid they not their hand.

11 On that day the number of those that were slain in Shushan the palace † was brought before the king.

† Heb.
came.

12 ¶ And the king said unto Esther the queen, The Jews have slain and destroyed five hundred men in Shushan the palace, and the ten sons of Haman; what have they done in the rest of the king's provinces? now what is thy petition? and it shall be granted thee: or what is thy request further? and it shall be done.

13 Then said Esther, If it please the king, let it be granted to the Jews which are in Shushan to do to morrow also according unto this day's decree, and † let Haman's ten sons be hanged upon the gallows.

† Heb.
let men
hang.

14 And the king commanded it so to be done: and the decree was given at Shushan; and they hanged Haman's ten sons.

15 For the Jews that were in Shushan gathered themselves together on the fourteenth day also of the month Adar, and slew three hundred men at Shushan; but on the prey they laid not their hand.

16 But the other Jews that were in the king's provinces gathered themselves together, and stood for their lives, and had rest from their enemies, and slew of their foes seventy and five thousand, but they laid not their hands on the prey,

17 On the thirteenth day of the month Adar; and on the fourteenth day † of the 509.

† Heb.
in it.

17. — And many of the people of the land became Jews; for the fear of the Jews fell upon them. When Haman's conspiracy was defeated, and the destruction designed against the Jews was, by a wonderful chain of providences, turned upon their enemies, it is said that "many of the people of the land became Jews; for the fear of the Jews fell upon them." Their enemies, though heathens, saw plainly, from what had happened, that the Jews had more than ordinary favour shewed them from heaven, and from thence inferred that their laws and religion must needs be more acceptable there than any other; and therefore left their own for theirs, and became Jews themselves that they might partake of the same privileges and favours with them. Bp. Beveridge.

The dispersion of the Jews throughout the numerous provinces of the Babylonian and Persian empires, became providentially the means of publishing the true religion among the people with whom they were intermixed. Being often eminently distinguished by the royal favour, they were enabled to convey a knowledge of the truth with greater advantage: the evident interpositions of God in the cause of His people also raising exalted sentiments of His religion. Dr. Owen.

Chap. IX. ver. 14. — they hanged Haman's ten sons. A farther instance of the retribution awaiting guilt. Haman had flattered his malicious and sanguinary spirit with the cruel hope of destroying the whole Jewish kindred: now his own sons (of the number of whom he had before boasted) are all cut off, and on the gallows share the reproach of their father. Bp. Hall.

16. — and slew of their foes seventy and five thousand, It is probable that these persons were destroyed in consequence of their having obstinately persevered in measures of active hostility against the Jews, notwithstanding the change in the disposition of the king. On this occasion was displayed the mischievous effect of that absurd law of the Medes and Persians, that the king's decree, when signed by him and sealed with his seal, could not be changed or repealed. For the king was obliged to issue a counter-decree, empowering the Jews to take up arms in self-defence; and in consequence of this, eight hundred men were slain in Shushan, and in the provinces seventy-five thousand. Such was the calamitous result of a rash and unjust decree, ratified at a banquet; when "the king and Haman sat down to drink; but the city Shushan was perplexed." Dr. Hales.

^{Before CHRIST about 509.} same rested they, and made it a day of feasting and gladness.

18 But the Jews that were at Shushan assembled together on the thirteenth day thereof, and on the fourteenth thereof; and on the fifteenth day of the same they rested, and made it a day of feasting and gladness.

19 Therefore the Jews of the villages, that dwelt in the unwall'd towns, made the fourteenth day of the month Adar a day of gladness and feasting, and a good day, and of sending portions one to another.

20 ¶ And Mordecai wrote these things, and sent letters unto all the Jews that were in all the provinces of the king Ahasuerus, both nigh and far,

21 To stablish this among them, that they should keep the fourteenth day of the month Adar, and the fifteenth day of the same, yearly,

22 As the days wherein the Jews rested from their enemies, and the month which was turned unto them from sorrow to joy, and from mourning into a good day: that they should make them days of feasting and joy, and of sending portions one to another, and gifts to the poor.

23 And the Jews undertook to do as they had begun, and as Mordecai had written unto them;

24 Because Haman the son of Hammedatha, the Agagite, the enemy of all the Jews, had devised against the Jews to destroy them, and had cast Pur, that is, the lot, to † consume them, and to destroy them;

25 But † when Esther came before the king, he commanded by letters that his wicked device, which he devised against the Jews, should return upon his own head, and that he and his sons should be hanged on the gallows.

26 Wherefore they called these days Purim after the name of † Pur. Therefore † That is for all the words of this letter, and of that lot. which they had seen concerning this matter, and which had come unto them,

27 The Jews ordained, and took upon them, and upon their seed, and upon all such as joined themselves unto them, so as it should not † fail, that they would keep these two days according to their writing, and according to their appointed time every year;

28 And that these days should be remembered and kept throughout every generation, every family, every province, and every city; and that these days of Purim should not † fail from among the Jews, nor the memorial of them † perish from their seed.

^{Before CHRIST about 509.}

† Heb. crush.

† Heb. when she came.

† That is lot.

† Heb. pass.

† Heb. pass.
† Heb. be ended.

18. — and on the fifteenth day — they rested,] The Jews of Shushan rested a day later than the Jews of the provinces, having had two days of slaughter. Bp. Patrick.

22. — and of sending portions one to another, and gifts to the poor.] They made it a day both of thanksgiving and praise to God, and of feasting with one another: and they sent portions and gifts to their poorer neighbours, that they might partake in the festival. Bp. Patrick. In like manner almsgiving and attention to the poor ought to make part of every Christian festival. Bp. Andrewes. See the note on Neh. viii. 10.

25. — should return upon his own head,] For while he sought direction from the false gods of Persia, his whole undertaking was overruled by the God of Israel. Bp. Patrick.

When such men as Haman are not only supplanted in their wicked contrivances, but dismally chastised for them, these occurrences do more than insinuate Divine wisdom to intervene, countermining and confounding such devices. For He it is who, as the Scripture telleth us, maketh the diviners mad; that turneth wise men backward, and maketh their knowledge foolish; disappointeth the devices of the crafty, so that their hands cannot perform their enterprise; taketh the wise in their own craftiness, and turneth down the counsels of the froward headlong. Dr. Isaac Barrow.

28. — and that these days of Purim should not fail] Josephus bears testimony to the observance of this festival in his time, in the following words: "Hence even now all the Jews that are in the habitable earth keep these days festival, and send presents to one another." It has also been regularly observed by the Jews to this day as an annual solemnity: and it forms a standing monument of the events recorded in this book. Dr. Gray.

The following accounts are found of the ceremonies used at this festival in different ages: some savouring the superstition of the apostate Jews; others, the piety of their forefathers.

The festival has been generally observed by a total rest from labour, by attendance in the synagogues, by sending presents to one another, by giving portions of food and gifts to the poor, and by great rejoicing and festivity. In the synagogue, the book of Esther is solemnly read from beginning to end; all Jews, whether men, women, children, or servants, being required to attend, because they all had a share in the deliverance obtained by Esther. Before the reading begins, three thanksgivings are briefly offered up; in the first, they praise God for counting them worthy to attend this sacred solemnity; in the second, for His wonderful preservation of their forefathers; and in the third, for their having lived to keep another festival in memory of it. The history of Esther is always read on this occasion from a copy written on a roll of parchment, and never from a printed book, it bearing peculiarly the title of the Megillah, or roll of Esther. (See the Introduction.) As often as the name of Haman is read, they beat upon the seats and floors, uttering such exclamations as this, "Let his memory perish:" the very children joining in this outcry.

The book of Esther is read over twice at this festival: first in the evening of the 13th day of Adar, which with the Jews is reckoned the beginning of the 14th; and secondly, on the morning of the 14th. When the reading is ended, they praise God, who pleadeth the cause of His people; and afterward pronounce alternately with loud voices, Cursed be Haman, Blessed be Mordecai; Cursed be Zeresh, (the wife of Haman,) Blessed be Esther; Cursed be all the wicked, Blessed be all the Jews. They also read in the synagogue some passages of the Pentateuch relating to the perpetual enmity between Israel and Amalek. The synagogue is not open after the morning of the 14th, and the remainder of the festival is spent in rest and mirth.

Their feasting on this occasion has among degenerate and unbelieving Israelites been accompanied by intemperance and

Before
CHRIST
about 509.

† Heb.
all strength.

29 Then Esther the queen, the daughter of Abihail, and Mordecai the Jew, wrote with † all authority, to confirm this second letter of Purim.

30 And he sent the letters unto all the Jews, to the hundred twenty and seven provinces of the kingdom of Ahasuerus, with words of peace and truth,

31 To confirm these days of Purim in their times appointed, according as Mordecai the Jew and Esther the queen had enjoined them, and as they had decreed † for themselves and for their seed, the matters of the fastings and their cry.

† Heb.
for their souls.

32 And the decree of Esther confirmed these matters of Purim; and it was written in the book.

licentious diversions; their doctors, as blind and hypocritical guides, forging various excuses and pretences to justify the transgressions of the law which were at these times wantonly committed. Bp. Patrick, Dean Prideaux, Lewis.

At one time they used to erect a gibbet, and upon it to burn the effigy of Haman. In this however it was thought that they had an intention of insulting Christians, by turning into ridicule the death of Christ; and therefore the emperours forbade this part of their ceremonies, under the penalty of forfeiting all their privileges. Cabnet.

Esther and Mordecai appear to have ordained only a feast on the 14th and 15th days of the month Adar: but the Jews observe, as they profess long to have done, a fast on the 13th day of Adar, the day destined by Haman for their extirpation. The month Adar corresponds with parts of our February and March. Dr. Gray.

29. — to confirm this second letter of Purim.] The Jews every where cheerfully agreed to the injunction of Mordecai: but, for fear of any neglect, and to give the greater authority to it, and prevent the memorial of so remarkable a blessing from decaying in after-generations, a second injunction was sent by the queen to confirm it, and exhort all to the careful observance of it. Pyle.

31. To confirm these days of Purim &c.] The former Targum thus paraphrases this verse: "To confirm these days of Purim as Mordecai the Jew and Esther the queen appointed concerning them; and as the Jews ordained for themselves and for their posterity to keep in memory the matter of their fastings and their prayers." Bp. Patrick.

32. And the decree of Esther &c.] Thus the forementioned decree, which confirmed the days of Purim, was recorded and made a publick act. Bp. Patrick.

Chap. X. ver. 1. — the isles of the sea.] Perhaps the isles of the Egean sea, conquered by Darius Hystaspes. Abp. Usher.

3. — Mordecai — was next unto king Ahasuerus, and great among the Jews, &c.] Such were the temporal rewards of Mordecai's exertions in behalf of his countrymen, and dutiful regard for the safety of his sovereign. This may afford us encouragement to be zealously affected in every good thing; to stand to our principles with cheerfulness and courage, to own the doctrines of our church, and to be true to our king, in the most perilous times. Wicked persons act but by a limited commission in this world; and in spite of all their rancour and malice, success will some time or other crown the righteous: and though the followers of Mordecai's virtues may not be made like him in his earthly advancement, yet they shall enjoy peace of conscience and the favour of God. Bp. Andrewes, Dr. Coney.

— seeking the wealth of his people,] Under all revolutions, the Jews of the captivity had the comfort to see that some persons

CHAP. X.

Before
CHRIST
about 495.

1 Ahasuerus's greatness. 3 Mordecai's advancement.

AND the king Ahasuerus laid a tribute upon the land, and upon the isles of the sea.

2 And all the acts of his power and of his might, and the declaration of the greatness of Mordecai, whereunto the king † advanced him, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Media and Persia? † Heb.
made him great.

3 For Mordecai the Jew was next unto king Ahasuerus, and great among the Jews, and accepted of the multitude of his brethren, seeking the wealth of his people, and speaking peace to all his seed.

of their own body were surprisingly advanced into power and authority to patronise and defend their cause: which as it shewed the concern of the Almighty for the welfare of the Jews, must also have excited in their minds a regard for His honour and glory: and must have confirmed their dependence upon His great and precious promises. Dr. Owen.

After the events here related, no man dares frown upon a Jew. They are now become lords in the midst of their captivity: no marvel, if they ordain and celebrate their joyful Purim, for a perpetual memory to all posterities of their happy deliverance. It were pity that the church of God should not have seasons of sunshine, as well as of storm; and should not meet with interchanges of joy in their warfare, before they enter upon the unchangeable joy of their endless triumph. Bp. Hall.

The Jews from the time of the captivity are no more to be looked upon as that free, rich, and glorious people, which they had been either under their former theocracy, as Josephus rightly terms it, or under their opulent and warlike monarchs, and the direction of their Prophets. Their condition, government, manners, their very name, and every thing but their religion, are now entirely changed. And indeed it could hardly be expected otherwise, when we consider, that those that had been carried away into Babylon, were sold for slaves, and dispersed far and wide through that vast empire, according to the custom of those conquerors; and though some of them we find to have attained to very considerable posts, or grown exceeding rich in the land of their captivity, yet these are but few in comparison of those who groaned under the heavy hand of their oppressors; neither were they the former, but the latter, that is, the poorer sort, that came back into Judea; and even of these the whole number that came, either with Zerubbabel, Ezra, or Nehemiah, scarcely amounted to 70,000; among whom a multitude of strangers was likewise intermixed, either by marriages, or otherwise, most of them so indigent, that they were forced to be supported in their journey by the charitable contributions of those that stayed behind.

They were indeed to be governed by their own laws; but, as they still continued in subjection to other nations, to the Persians, Syrians, and Romans, that privilege, as well as the exercise of their religion, very much depended on the arbitrary will of their conquerors, and was often curtailed, and sometimes wholly taken away. Even whilst they were under the Persians, the lives and estates of the whole nation were on the brink of being sacrificed to the ambition of a favourite Haman, had not Esther's interest miraculously prevented the execution of that bloody edict; and so weak did they continue under them, that they were a long time exposed to the injuries of even the neighbouring Samaritans. They seem however to have recovered themselves by degrees, and to have lived in more peace and plenty during the two following centuries; and this is perhaps the reason of that vast chasm of near 250 years in their history, between the death of Nehemiah and the times of the Maccabees, when those illustrious heroes not only shook off the foreign yoke, but raised the glory of their nation by their victories and conquests, and by obliging other nations to embrace the Jewish religion.

But this epocha was but short-lived, and eighty years were hardly expired, before the ungovernable ambition of some of their unworthy successors introduced a general apostasy, and brought them under subjection to the Romans, which they could never more shake off. Herod indeed, whom the Romans raised to the royal dignity, greatly increased the glory and opulence of the Jewish nation; but as he was an Idumean who had gained the crown by the destruction of the Asmonean race, as he was a vassal to the Romans, and a tyrant of the Jews, they could not be said to be either free or happy during his hateful reign, much less under the reigns of his successors, when the government of Judea was split into so many toparchies: so that the nation went from thenceforward from bad to worse, till their total destruction. They were changed in their very name, the title of Israelites being quite lost, and the names of all the other tribes being absorbed in that of Judah; so that, from the period of their return, the whole people were chiefly known by the name of Jews, in opposition to the Samaritans, who were a mixture partly of the ten tribes, partly of revolted Jews, and of other nations. Religion was the thing that received the least change from their reestablishment; and, if we except some apostasies occasioned by persecutions, or the ambition of some of their high priests, we shall find them in the sequel more averse to idolatry, and to all heathenish superstitions, than ever their forefathers had been prone to them before the captivity; such strict observers of the sabbath, as to suffer themselves to be murdered by whole armies, rather than violate it by standing on their defence; in a word, so zealous for their religion, and such strict observers of their oaths, whether of allegiance or confederacy, as to suffer the most bloody persecutions, and horrid butcheries, with the utmost courage and constancy, rather than violate their fidelity to their laws. This was indeed a virtue, which, as Josephus rightly observes, was peculiar to the Jews, and to which no other nation or religion could ever lay any claim, till the sufferings, number, and constancy of the Christian martyrs, did in a great measure eclipse the glory of the Jewish ones. Universal History.

The Jews had many revolutions of peace and war, and some changes in the mode of their government, from the time of their return from the Babylonian captivity, to their complete subjection to the Romans; but their sacerdotal government, as it is sometimes called, continued with but little interruption through this whole space of about 600 years. Having returned into their own country under the sanction and authority of Cyrus, they acknowledged the sovereignty of the kings of Persia till that empire was overturned by Alexander the Great, (according to Dean Prideaux, B. C. 330:) they then became subject to his successors, first in Egypt, afterwards in Syria, till, having been deprived of their civil and religious liberties for three years and a half by Antiochus Epiphanes, (B. C. 168,) they were restored, both to the exercise of their religion, and to their ancient independence, by the piety and bravery of Mattathias and his descendants, (B. C. 165.) Under these Maccabean princes, they became an entirely free state, supported by good troops, strong garrisons, and alliances, not only with neighbouring powers, but with remote kingdoms, even Rome itself. This glory of the Jews was but of short duration: for, though the decline of the kingdoms of Egypt and Syria prevented their interference in the affairs of other states, yet the entire ruin of these two kingdoms, by the great accession of power which it brought to the Romans, paved the way for the destruction of the Jewish commonwealth. Pompey compelled the Jews to submit to the arms of Rome, (B. C. 63,) and from that time their country was tributary to the Romans, although it was still governed by Maccabean princes. The last of that family was conquered and deposed by Herod the Great, an Idumean by birth, but of the Jewish religion, (B. C. 37,) who had been appointed king of the Jews by the Romans, and enjoyed a long reign over the whole of Palestine, in the course of which he greatly diminished the civil power of the high priests. He was succeeded in the government of the greater part of Palestine by his son Archelaus, (B. C. 3,) whose misconduct caused Augustus to banish him, and to reduce his dominions into the form of a Roman province, (A. C. 8.) And thus it appears, that, with the exception of the short predicted period of Antiochus Epiphanes, the kingdom of Judah, for some time independent, but generally tributary, continued to enjoy its own religion, and the form of its civil government, till after the birth of the Messiah. Bp. Tomline.

In the periods which succeed, we find the Jews placed in a different situation from any preceding part of their history. While a sufficient portion of the nation had been restored to Judea, and there settled, to answer the primary purpose of forming a separate people, in order to preserve the Law and the Prophets, rebuild the temple, and prepare the scene where the Messiah was personally to appear, where He was to verify the prophecies, particularly with respect to His descent, the place of His birth, and the minutest circumstances of His personal character and sufferings; where He was to promulgate His religion, and lay down His life for man; another great body of the nation, as we are informed by Josephus, retired into Egypt, built a temple there, publicly exercised their religion, and flourished in such multitudes, under the protection of Alexander and his successors, that the Jews in Egypt nearly, if not entirely, equalled those of Judea in number, wealth, and influence; and at the same time adopted the Grecian language so universally, that it became necessary to translate the Scriptures into Greek for their use, and thus make them accessible to the learned and inquisitive in every country, whenever their attention should be excited to this study. It should be remarked too, that so necessary was such an adjustment of circumstances to produce this salutary effect, in opposition to the exclusive temper of the Jews settled in Judea, that this translation, which must have been received with such joy by the Jewish colonies, was regarded as the subject of national mourning by the Jews at Jerusalem.

The importance of this translation was extremely great. By it the grand truths of religion, the history of Divine providence, and the prophecies announcing the Messiah, became accessible to the learned and inquisitive in every part of the then civilized world. All possibility of either questioning the existence, or falsifying the contents of those prophecies was thus precluded, and the stability of this signal proof of revelation secured; though the rulers, doctors, and priests of that nation, with whom they had been originally deposited, rejected that Divine Personage whom these prophecies announced; and must therefore have wished, had it been in their power, to alter their contents in order to disprove their application.

About the time when this translation was completed, we see the Ptolemies collecting the celebrated library at Alexandria, which for such a length of time formed the greatest depository of learning in the world, and which was so much admired and imitated by other princes. And the circumstance of its being formed in the very same city with the most numerous colony of the Jews in Egypt, while it must have attracted thither all foreigners who were solicitous to acquire learning, must also have given them an opportunity of observing a form of religion so singular as that which the Jews maintained, and of inquiring into its principles and origin; an inquiry which the translation of the Scriptures into Greek rendered practicable: while the cessation of prophecy amongst the Jews, soon after their restoration from captivity, closed the canon of the Jewish Scriptures, and proved that the knowledge which that translation could supply was perfect and complete.

The same providential system of preparation for the introduction of a pure and universal religion was equally conspicuous in many other gradual movements in the world, all concurring to promote the same effect. The inquisitive and vainglorious turn of the Grecian character multiplied philosophick sects, which by their perpetual disputations directed the attention of mankind to religious and moral speculations; gradually undermined the influence, by exposing the absurdity, of Pagan superstition and idolatry; and, though they did not substitute in their room any perfect system of natural religion, yet many of its great truths were occasionally debated upon with spirit and subtlety; and, though they were not clearly proved or practically inculcated, they yet became the objects of general interest and curiosity: so that the want of further information, and, above all, of Divine instruction, which might remove men's doubts and errors on these most awful subjects, was felt and acknowledged by the most sagacious and reflecting minds; and therefore such instruction would be more attentively listened to, and more thankfully and joyfully received.

ESTHER.

Connected with the same system, and tending to promote the same effect, was the great and permanent extension of the Roman empire, which broke down all the barriers of separation between the eastern and western worlds, united the Euphrates and the Thames under the same masters, and blended all the civilized states of Greece and Asia, of Africa and Europe, in one great community: in every part of which the Grecian language, now the language of the sacred records, became as it were the common tongue of the learned and polite; while a perpetual intercourse between the various parts of this mighty empire, the establishment of a firm and regular police through its whole extent, and, above all, that universal peace, which its undisputed ascendancy secured through the entire civilized world, when the Gospel of peace was first promulgated; all these circumstances secured to the teachers of that Gospel ready access to all the nations of the world capable of profiting by the sacred truths they taught, and gave men leisure to consider their unspeakable importance, and examine the evidence to which they appealed. Dr. Graves.

THE BOOK OF J O B.

INTRODUCTION.

THE celebrated Patriarch, whose history is recorded in the following book, has been represented by some sacred criticks as imaginary, and his book as a fictitious dramatick composition. But he was evidently considered as real by the Prophet Ezekiel, who ranks Noah, Daniel, and Job together, as powerful intercessors with God; the first for his family, the second for the wise men of Babylon, and the third for his friends, Ezek. xiv. 14. And the Apostle James celebrates the exemplary "patience of Job," James v. 11. And the book itself, the early admission of which into the Sacred Canon is strongly in favour of its veracity, describes the residence of Job and his friends with all the geographical precision of true history. Dr. Hales.

The Book of Job was certainly written as a literal relation of actual events; for this is evident from the style of the author, from his mode of introducing the subject, and also from the circumstantial detail of habitation, kindred, and condition, as well as from the names of the persons therein mentioned, which correspond with other accounts of the age and country, in which Job is generally supposed to have existed.

It must be observed, that the veracity of the book is not invalidated by the allegorical manner in which some things are related. Human events are literally described; but the proceedings of Providence, of which we are unable to form any apprehension, unless from figurative illustration, are perhaps here, as in other parts of Scripture, parabolically represented under familiar allusions. Dr. Gray.

When Job lived, seems deducible from his being contemporary with Eliphaz the Temanite; thus:

	Abraham └─── Isaac ───┘
1.		1.
	└─── Esau ───┘
2. Esau	Jacob	2.
3. Eliphaz	Levi	3.
4. Teman	Kobath	4.
5. Eliphaz, Temanite	Amram	5.
- - - - -	Moses	-

Dr. Kennicott.

It appears probable that Job himself was the writer of his own story: of whose inspiration we seem to have very clear evidence in this book: namely, from those remarkable words of his to God, chap. xlii. 5, "I have heard of Thee by the hearing of the ear: but now mine eye seeth Thee."

It is plain, that here is some privilege intended which he never had enjoyed before, and which he calls the sight of God. He had "heard of Him by the hearing of the ear," or the tradition delivered down from his forefathers: but he had now a clear and sensible perception of His being and Divine perfections: some light thrown in upon his mind, which carried its own evidence, and of which perhaps we can form no notion, because we never felt it; but which to him had all the certainty and clearness even of sight itself; in short, some manifestations of the Deity made to him, in vision, such as the Prophets had, and from whence they derived their very name of Seers.

If we allow Job himself to have been the writer of the book, there will be evidently two advantages hereby gained to it: as first, that all objections to the historical truth of it will vanish at once.

None could tell us his own story so well as Job; nor have we any reason to question his veracity. The dialogue too will then appear to have been the substance of a real conversation, as no dialogue was ever more natural. If the story be told us in verse, or in the prophetick style and language; as the first of these was a practice of the highest antiquity, the other adds the most sacred and unquestionable authority to it: so that neither truth nor ornament is here wanting, any more than the dignity of the subject, to render this a book of inestimable value.

The other advantage is this: that if Job himself were the writer of the book, then every point of history, and every doctrine of religion here treated of, which coincide with those delivered in the books of Moses, are an additional proof and confirmation of these latter: as being evidently derived from some other source, not borrowed from the Pentateuch. Peters.

But whether we suppose Job the author of the book or not, its great antiquity, and even its priority to the age of Moses, seems to stand on strong grounds. And, upon the whole, perhaps we may not unreasonably conjecture the history of the book to be this.—The poem being originally written either by Job, or some contemporary of his, and existing in the time of Moses, might fall into his hands, whilst residing in the land of Midian, or afterwards when in the neighbourhood of Idumea; and might naturally be made use of by him, to represent to the Hebrews, either whilst repining under their Egyptian bondage, or murmuring at their long wanderings in the wilderness, the great duty of submission to the will of God. The encouragement which the book holds out, that every good man, suffering patiently, will finally be rewarded, rendered it a work peculiarly calculated to minister mingled comfort and rebuke to the distressed and discontented Israelites, and which might therefore well have been employed by Moses for this purpose. We may also suppose that Moses, in transcribing, might have made some small and unimportant alterations, which will sufficiently account for occasional and partial resemblances of expression between it and the Pentateuch, if any such there be.

This hypothesis both furnishes a reasonable compromise between the opinions of the great critics, who are divided upon the point of Moses being the author; and supplies an answer to a question of no small difficulty, which hangs upon almost every other solution; namely, when, and wherefore, a book, treating manifestly of the concerns of a stranger, and in no way connected with their affairs, was received by the Jews into their sacred canon? For Moses having thus applied the book to their use, and sanctioned it by his authority, it would naturally have been enrolled among their sacred writings: and, from the antiquity of that enrolment, no record would consequently appear of its introduction. Dr. Magee.

External happiness and misery are not always in this life the consequences of virtue and vice; this world is not the theatre of Divine retribution; but there is a life beyond the grave, where the good will receive their reward, and the wicked be punished: this is the moral of the book of Job. Michaelis.

The general conduct of this book, as a poem, is of the most interesting kind. It opens with a preface, which describes the person, and advantageous situation of a most worthy and excellent man, called by some a king: see note at ch. i. 3. Then it relates by what means he was deprived of these blessings, and reduced to distresses proportionate to his former prosperity: it describes certain of his former friends as visiting him, and endeavouring to excite his repentance for some secret sins, as they suppose, committed by him; while he protests his innocence of any such guilt. After many charges and vindications between the elder and perhaps more dignified friends of Job, and the Patriarch himself, a person, younger than those friends who had already spoken, then assumes the discourse, and gradually prepares the way for an appearance of the Deity Himself, who reasons on the various works of His creating hand, and the various course of His Providence in respect to them, all of which exceed the ability, conception, or direction, of the human mind: leaving the inference, that He, who thus wisely, though diversely, directs the course of nature, does equally wisely, though equally diversely, direct the ways of good men, who trust in Him. Script. illust. Expos. Ind.

The poem consists of five parts: the first part, containing the first dialogue, or debate between Job and his three friends, occupies chap. iii—xiv; the second, chap. xv—xxi; the third, chap. xxii—xxxii; the fourth part contains the speech of Elihu, chap. xxxii—xxxvii; and the fifth, the answer of God, and Job's submission, chap. xxxviii—xlii. Dr. Hales.

The whole Book of Job, with regard both to sublimity of thought and morality, exceeds beyond all comparison the most noble parts of Homer. Pope.

The style of the book, and the customs incidentally described in it, bear the marks of Patriarchal antiquity. The book contains most sublime descriptions of the power and other attributes of God; and is expressly cited by St. Paul as sacred Scripture, 1 Cor. iii. 19. Gisborne.

CHAP. I.

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

1 The holiness, riches, and religious care of Job for his children. 6 Satan, appearing before God, by calumination obtaineth leave to tempt Job. 13 Understanding of the loss of his goods and children, in his mourning he blesseth God.

THERE was a man in the land of Uz, whose name was Job; and that man

^a Chap. 2. 3. was ^a perfect and upright, and one that feared God, and eschewed evil.

2 And there were born unto him seven sons and three daughters.

Chap. I. ver. 1. — in the land of Uz,] Concerning the situation of this country of Job, different opinions are entertained. It was most probably on the confines of Idumea, if not a part of it. The daughter of Edom is said to dwell in the land of Uz, Lam. iv. 21. Uz was the son of Nahor, Abraham's brother, Gen. xxii. 21. Dr. Blayney. See its supposed situation in the Map of the World, east of the Dead sea.

3. His substance also was seven thousand sheep, &c.] The principal riches of the Bedoween Arabs, no less than of the princes and patriarchs of old, continue to be estimated from the number and quality of their cattle.—Several Arabian tribes can bring into the field only three or four hundred horses, at the same time that they are possessed of more than so many thousand camels, and triple again that number of sheep and black cattle. They rarely kill any of their flocks, living chiefly upon their milk or butter, or else upon what they get in exchange for their wool. Dr. Shaw.

— so that this man was the greatest of all the men of the east.]

3 His || substance also was seven thousand sheep, and three thousand camels, and five hundred yoke of oxen, and five hundred she asses, and a very great || household; so that this man was the greatest of all the † men of the east.

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

|| Or, cattle.

|| Or,
husbandry.
† Heb. sons of the east.

4 And his sons went and feasted in their houses, every one his day; and sent and called for their three sisters to eat and to drink with them.

That Job was certainly a magistrate, a judge at the least, is evident from ch. xxii. 7; and not improbably he was a king; not such as the kings of the earth now are, whose dominions are wider, and power more absolute, yet possibly such as were called kings in those ancient times, and in those eastern parts of the world: that is, a kind of petty monarch and supreme governour within his own territories, though perhaps but of one single city with the suburbs, and some few neighbouring villages. It is here said, that he was "the greatest of all the men of the East;" and in the twenty-ninth chapter he saith of himself, that when he came in presence "the princes and the nobles held their peace," and that he "sat chief, and dwelt as a king in the army." Bp. Sanderson. Perhaps we may be not far from right in contemplating the modern sheiks in Arabia, as bearing considerable resemblance to this holy personage. Script. illust. Expos. Ind.

4. — every one his day;] His birthday, as was the custom among those nations. See Gen. xl. 20. Grotius.

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

5 And it was so, when the days of their feasting were gone about, that Job sent and sanctified them, and rose up early in the morning, and offered burnt offerings according to the number of them all: for Job said, It may be that my sons have sinned, and ^bcursed God in their hearts. Thus did Job [†]continually.

^b 1 Kings
21. 10, 13.
[†] Heb.
all the days.
[†] Heb. the adversary.
[†] Heb.
in the midst of them.

6 ¶ Now there was a day when the sons of God came to present themselves before the LORD, and [†]Satan came also [†]among them.

To celebrate a birthday with great tokens of rejoicing and triumph, was the custom of former ages. Herodotus says, "of all days the Persians shew the highest regard to their birthday:" and he gives us an account of the particular ceremonies which were appropriated to that festival. Chappelow.

5. — sanctified them.] Required them, by messengers, to prepare themselves by washing, and such rites as were then in use; as also by prayer, repentance, &c. to join with him in offering sacrifices for them. Clark.

— It may be that my sons have sinned.] This was a suspicion in Job concerning his children. Hence we may observe, that it is no breach of charity to suspect ill of others, while we intend their good. Indeed, upon a surmise to accuse and charge another, is very uncharitable; but upon a surmise that such an one, my child, or my friend, or my brother, hath sinned, to be induced to pray for him—this is very charitable. A good heart turns its suspicions of others' sinnings and failings into prayers and intercessions, that they may be pardoned; not into accusations and slanders, that they may be defamed. The use which Job made here of his suspicion of his sons' sinning, was to turn it into prayer and supplication for the pardon of their sin. Caryl.

Unfavourable suspicions are not unlawful, if they proceed, not from any corrupt affections, but only from a charitable jealousy of those, over whom we have special interest, so that it may engage us to admonish, reprove, or correct them, when they do amiss: so was Job suspicious of his sons, for sinning and cursing God in their hearts. Bp. Sanderson.

— cursed God in their hearts.] Some way dishonoured God by neglecting to give Him the praise and glory of His mercies. Clark.

Let slip some irreverent words of God. Bp. Wilson.

It is hardly to be imagined, that they, whose lives had been formed by the example of so good and religious a father, could ever be guilty of so aggravating a crime, as, strictly speaking, to curse God. We may suppose, that their elegant and sumptuous entertainments might raise such an excess of mirth, as to occasion an absence of mind, and make them think of God less reverently than they ought. Chuppelom.

Job was only apprehensive, lest, in the gaiety of a festival, his children had let loose their minds from the restraints of religion. Scott.

6. — the sons of God] The good angels, ch. xxxviii. 7; Dan. iii. 25, 28. Clark.

— came to present themselves before the Lord.] Appeared before God in a special manner, for some special end. A parabolical representation of God's providence in the government of the world. Clark.

The decrees of God, the ministry of good, and the machinations of evil angels, are usually expressed in the form of the judgments or counsels of a king; 1 Kings xxii. 19; Zechar. iii. 1. Grotius.

— Satan] Foe to God and man, and the accuser of the brethren. The Greek version in this passage of Job, and in Zechar. iii. 1, renders "Satan" by a word signifying the accuser. Parkhurst.

The grand spiritual "adversary" of mankind is here first introduced in Scripture, under his proper name "Satan," and un-

7 And the LORD said unto Satan, Whence comest thou? Then Satan answered the LORD, and said, From ^cgoing to and fro in the earth, and from walking up and down in it.

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.
^c 1 Pet. 5. 8.

8 And the LORD said unto Satan, [†]Hast thou considered my servant Job, that there is none like him in the earth, a perfect and an upright man, one that feareth God, and escheweth evil?

[†] Heb. hast thou set thy heart on.

9 Then Satan answered the LORD, and said, Doth Job fear God for nought?

der the character assigned to him from hence in the New Testament, of "walking about as a roaring lion, seeking whom he may devour," 1 Pet. v. 8, with allusion to Job i. 7, and ii. 3; and as "the accuser of the brethren, who accused them before God night and day," Rev. xii. 10. Dr. Hales.

The name "Satan," as denoting an enemy, frequently occurs in the Old Testament: see 2 Sam. xix. 22; 1 Kings v. 4; where the word for "adversary" is in the original "Satan." It is extremely probable to me, that the root Satan was introduced into the Hebrew and other Eastern languages, to denote an adversary, from its having been the proper name of the great enemy of mankind. Bp. Watson. See the note on ch. ii. 10.

— and Satan came also among them.] It is not said, that the sons of God and Satan came and presented themselves before the LORD: Satan did not join himself in with them; Satan did not offer himself for any good service; but thither he came, being so ordered by the overruling power of God. Caryl.

7. And the Lord said unto Satan, Whence comest thou?] The LORD, to make him sensible that he was not an absolute prince, but His subject, called to him and demanded an account of him, where he had been, and from whence he came. To which he gave an answer, which expressed, as the restlessness of his mind, and his unwearied diligence, so the limitation of his power, which extends only to this lower world; for he told Him, that he came "from going to and fro in the earth, and from walking up and down in it." Bp. Patrick.

God employs Satan as His instrument, either to inflict punishment, or to bring evils on man, for whatever cause may seem good to the Divine will. But Satan, though hostile to man, and desirous of doing him injury, is bound as it were with a chain, and can never even touch the righteous unless when let loose by God. While "going to and fro, and walking up and down in the earth," Satan might watch Job, but he could not hurt him without permission from God. Rosenmüller.

God decreed to give power to Satan, for the proof of Job's fidelity and patience; and permitted the several calamities which were brought upon Job to make trial of him. Bp. Hall.

— From going to and fro in the earth.] To find advantage to tempt men, 1 Pet. v. 8. Clark.

The most important truths, as we are framed at present, can make but a slight impression on the mind, unless they enter first, like a picture, into the imagination, and from thence are stamped upon the memory.

The Scripture speaks of God after the manner of men; for there is a necessity of condescending to our capacities, and of suiting the revelation to our apprehensions, and to the ideas we are furnished with. As kings therefore transact their most important affairs in a solemn council or assembly, so God is pleased to represent Himself as having His council likewise, and as passing the decrees of His providence, in an assembly of His holy angels. Peters.

9. — Doth Job fear God for nought?] It is an argument of a most malignant spirit, when a man's actions are fair, then to accuse his intentions. The devil had nothing to say against the actions of Job, but goes down into his heart, and accuses his intentions. Malice misinterprets the fairest actions, but love puts the fairest interpretation it can upon foul actions. Caryl.

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

|| Or, cattle.

† Heb.
if he curse thee not to thy face.

† Heb.
hand.

10 Hast not thou made an hedge about him, and about his house, and about all that he hath on every side? thou hast blessed the work of his hands, and his || substance is increased in the land.

11 But put forth thine hand now, and touch all that he hath, † and he will curse thee to thy face.

12 And the LORD said unto Satan, Behold, all that he hath is in thy † power; only upon himself put not forth thine hand. So Satan went forth from the presence of the LORD.

13 ¶ And there was a day when his sons and his daughters were eating and drinking wine in their eldest brother's house:

14 And there came a messenger unto Job, and said, The oxen were plowing, and the asses feeding beside them:

15 And the Sabeans fell upon them, and took them away; yea, they have slain the servants with the edge of the sword; and I only am escaped alone to tell thee.

|| Or,
A great fire.

16 While he was yet speaking, there came also another, and said, || The fire of God is fallen from heaven, and hath burned up the sheep, and the servants, and consumed them; and I only am escaped alone to tell thee.

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

17 While he was yet speaking, there came also another, and said, The Chaldeans made out three bands, and † fell upon the camels, and have carried them away, yea, and slain the servants with the edge of the sword; and I only am escaped alone to tell thee.

† Heb.
rushed.

18 While he was yet speaking, there came also another, and said, Thy sons and thy daughters were eating and drinking wine in their eldest brother's house:

19 And, behold, there came a great wind † from the wilderness, and smote the four corners of the house, and it fell upon the young men, and they are dead; and I only am escaped alone to tell thee.

† Heb.
from aside,
&c.

20 Then Job arose, and rent his || mantle, and shaved his head, and fell down upon the ground, and worshipped,

|| Or,
robe.

21 And said, "Naked came I out of my mother's womb, and naked shall I return thither: the LORD gave, and the LORD hath taken away; blessed be the name of the LORD."

^a Eccles. 5.
15.
† Tim. 6. 7.

10. Hast not thou made an hedge about him, &c.] A figurative expression, signifying, Hast not Thou secured him from injury? See the notes on Hos. ii. 6; Mic. vii. 4.

11. — he will curse thee to thy face.] The phrase is stronger than that used at ver. 5. It imports here an utter and publick renunciation of religion as a vain thing. Scott.

12. — all that he hath is in thy power;] It is here observable, that the devil could have no power over Job, (nor consequently can have over any other of God's servants,) without having first obtained it from God. Calleyer.

— only upon himself put not forth thine hand.] Hence we may remark, that God Himself sets bounds to the afflictions of His people. He limits how far every affliction shall go, and how far every instrument shall prevail. Caryl.

15. And the Sabeans fell upon them,] The Sabeans were a people (as is concluded by most interpreters) inhabiting Arabia Felix, near the country where Job dwelt: they were famous only for robberies, and lived by pillage and plundering their neighbours. Caryl.

17. — The Chaldeans] Chaldea, a country lying between Mesopotamia to the north, Susiana to the east, the Persian bay to the south, and Arabia Deserta to the west. Dr. Wells.

Chaldea was at a vast distance from the land of Edom. But these were a set of profligates, who followed the pilfering life of the wild Arabs; and, like them, it is probable they made excursions through the Arabian deserts, to any distance where there was any hope of plunder. The Arabs deemed it heroism to make long journeys over pathless solitudes in quest of daring adventures. Scott.

19. — a great wind] A whirlwind. Clark.

— from the wilderness,] It is conceived, that this was either the wilderness of Edom, spoken of 2 Kings iii. 8; or else it was Arabia the Desert, which is by way of eminency called the Wilderness. Caryl.

— smote the four corners of the house, and it fell] The following account of a whirlwind is given by Mr. Bruce: "We had scarcely advanced two miles into the plain, when we were inclosed by a violent whirlwind, or what is called at sea the waterspout. — The unfortunate camel, that had been taken by the Cohala, seemed to be nearly in the centre of its vortex. It was lifted, and thrown down at a considerable distance, and several of its ribs broken. Although, as far as I could guess, I was not near its centre, it whirled me off my feet, and threw me down on my face, so as to make my nose gush out with blood. Two of the servants likewise had the same fate. — It demolished one half of a small hut, as if it had been cut through with a knife, and dispersed the materials all over the plain, leaving the other half standing." Script. illust. Expos. Ind.

20. Then Job arose, &c.] Job, who had heard all the rest without disturbance, was overcome with grief at this last word. Bp. Patrick.

— and shaved his head,] Michaelis remarks, that this was done in token of great grief; and cites Curtius in proof, that the Persians did the same on the death of Alexander the Great, according to their custom in mourning; and refers to Lucian, that thus likewise the Egyptians lamented the funeral of their Apis, and the Syrians the death of Adonis. Parkhurst.

Herodotus speaks of it as a general practice among all people, except the Egyptians, to cut off their hair as a token of mourning. At the Friendly Isles in the South Sea, "cutting off the hair is one of their mourning ceremonies;" Cook's and Clarke's Voyage: and at Otaheite, Forster says, "the hair was cut off and thrown upon the bier." Dr. Hales.

— fell down upon the ground, and worshipped,] Whence we may observe, that it becometh us to worship God in a humble manner: and farther, that afflictions send the people of God home to God: afflictions draw a godly man nearer unto God. Caryl. This behaviour was truly sublime: the noblest homage that could be paid by a reasonable being to his great Creator. Scott.

21. — naked shall I return thither:] Into the earth, the common womb or receptacle and repository for all the dead. Clark.

— the Lord gave, and the Lord hath taken away; &c.] Job overlooks all secondary causes, and owns God in all; acknowledging Him to be both just and good in all His ways, and blessing Him for all, whether giving or taking away. Clark.

The things we have are not properly given, but lent. When

Before CHRIST about 1520. 22 In all this Job sinned not, nor || charged God foolishly.

|| Or, attributed fully to God.

CHAP. II.

1 Satan appearing again before God obtaineth further leave to tempt Job. 7 He smiteth him with sore boils. 9 Job reproveth his wife, moving him to curse God. 11 His three friends condole with him in silence.

A GAIN there was a day when the sons of God came to present themselves before the LORD, and Satan came also among them to present himself before the LORD.

2 And the LORD said unto Satan, From whence comest thou? And ^a Satan answered the LORD, and said, From going to and fro in the earth, and from walking up and down in it.

3 And the LORD said unto Satan, Hast thou considered my servant Job, that there is none like him in the earth, ^b a perfect and an upright man, one that feareth God, and escheweth evil? and still he holdeth fast his integrity, although thou movedst

God lent us the use of them, He did not mean to forego the property too: and therefore they are His goods still, and He may require them at our hands, or take them from us when He will, and dispose of them when He pleases: see Hos. ii. 9. What we have, we hold of Him as our creditor: whensoever therefore He shall think good to call in His debts, it is our parts to return them, not with patience only, but with thankfulness, that He hath suffered us to enjoy them so long; and certainly without the least grudging or repining (as too often we do) that we may not hold them any longer. Thus did Job: when all was taken from him, he still "blessed the name of the Lord." Bp. Sanderson.

Chap. II. ver. 3. — without cause.] Without his desert, according to the usual way of speaking, or without any signal guilt to draw upon him so signal a calamity: not but that there might be other very weighty causes or reasons for it; for the Divine wisdom neither does nor suffers any thing "without cause," that is, without a sufficient reason. Peters.

4. — Skin for skin, &c.] The meaning is, "Who is there that will not give another skin to save his own; nay part with his children, as well as his goods, to save his life?" Bp. Patrick.

Rather, "skin after skin." The expression alludes to the well-known fact of the renovation of the skin on any part of the body that has been excoriated, and is plainly proverbial, importing that a man may bear to part with all that he has, and even to have his skin, as it were, stripped off, again and again, provided only that his life be safe. All other losses and calamities may be well borne, as external and superficial, and not coming home to the man's self. Parkhurst.

7. — smote Job with sore boils &c.] Or with a loathsome and universal leprosy; a scrophulous disease common in the East and in hot countries. It is of two kinds, the white and the black. This latter is commonly called elephantiasis, because it renders the skin, like that of the elephant, uneven and wrinkled, with many furrows. Dr. Hales.

The Hebrew words describe Job's disease as a grievous inflammatory ulcer: how long it might last, is unknown; some have conjectured many months; others some years. The name, used in the text for the disease, is rendered in Deut. xxviii. 27, "the botch," or ulcer, "of Egypt:" whence we conclude, that it was no new disease. It has usually been thought to be the elephantiasis. Script. illust. Expos. Ind.

Job is struck with the elephantiasis, a disorder, which, when it me against him, † to destroy him without cause.

Before CHRIST about 1520.

4 And Satan answered the LORD, and said, Skin for skin, yea, all that a man hath will he give for his life.

† Heb. to su allow him up.

5 But put forth thine hand now, and touch his bone and his flesh, and he will curse thee to thy face.

6 And the LORD said unto Satan, Behold, he is in thine hand; || but save his life.

|| Or, only.

7 ¶ So went Satan forth from the presence of the LORD, and smote Job with sore boils from the sole of his foot unto his crown.

8 And he took him a potsherd to scrape himself withal; and he sat down among the ashes.

9 ¶ Then said his wife unto him, Dost thou still retain thine integrity? curse God, and die.

10 But he said unto her, Thou speakest as one of the foolish women speaketh. What? shall we receive good at the hand attains a certain height, (as it appears to have done in this instance,) is incurable, and therefore affords the patient no prospect but that of long continued misery. The reader, who is thus apprised of the Divine motives for allowing this model of human excellence to undergo so hard a trial, anticipates the result; but Job and his friends, we must remember, were ignorant of them, and therefore had no reason to look for the Divine interference. Michaelis.

8. And he took him a potsherd &c.] At the beginning of this disorder (the elephantiasis) an intolerable itching is felt. Hence Job is said to have taken "a potsherd" (or earthen vessel) "to scrape himself withal." Rosenmüller.

— and he sat down among the ashes.] Sprinkling or covering themselves with, rolling or sitting in ashes, &c. were emblematical acknowledgments, as of being obnoxious to the wrath of God, so of grief and contrition: see 2 Sam. xiii. 19; Esth. iv. 1; Jer. vi. 26. We find the Greeks likewise, in violent grief, sprinkling ashes on their head, and lying in ashes. Parkhurst.

9. — Dost thou still retain &c.] Dost thou still retain thy integrity towards God, though thou reapest no advantage from it? It were better to be at once freed from thy misery. Curse God; and He will, by His judgment, make a speedy way for thee out of this torment. Bp. Hall.

— curse God, and die.] Cast off thy reverence of the Divine Majesty, and spare not to reproach that God who has dealt so hardly with thee, though thou die for it. Clark.

10. — the foolish women] So the Hebrews styled idolaters, Psal. lxxiv. 18. The heathens, when any misfortune befell them, were wont to revile their gods. Scott.

— shall we receive good &c.] This return Job made, when tempted to "curse God, and die." He remembered the several prosperous years which had passed over his head, and he knew by whose providence they had been prosperous. Surely there was a debt of gratitude owing on this account, which it became him, as far as possible, to answer. This he considered thoroughly; and therefore, instead of any impatient murmuring at his present sufferings, he resigned himself up entirely to God, and blessed the very hand under which he suffered. If the example of this great man, who is so highly celebrated in holy writ, be of any moment, we may apply it in some measure to every other person who labours under affliction. For though it may not be frequent to be so highly favoured by Providence, as this great man had been in his more early years; yet, who is there that

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

of God, and shall we not receive evil? In all this did not Job sin with his lips.

11 ¶ Now when Job's three friends heard of all this evil that was come upon him, they came every one from his own place; Eliphaz the Temanite, and Bildad the Shuhite, and Zophar the Naamathite: for they had made an appointment together to come to mourn with him and to comfort him.

12 And when they lifted up their eyes afar off, and knew him not, they lifted up their voice, and wept; and they rent every one his mantle, and sprinkled dust upon their heads toward heaven.

13 So they sat down with him upon the hath enjoyed nothing, and received no advantage from the influence of Heaven? Bp. Conybeare.

— and shall we not receive evil? As all sin is supposed in Scripture to be from the devil, so whenever any number of natural causes conspire to produce any very remarkable ill effect upon men, especially upon good and virtuous persons, this is generally ascribed to the devil. But as God Himself is the supreme Governour of the world, nothing can be done but by His permission and consent. Satan is only a mere instrument, and can go no farther than he is allowed; and so we find represented in this book. Dr. John Clarke. The patience of Job is much talked of, and we seldom look farther for any use of this book. But probably it was written in opposition also to the very ancient opinion, which introduced two independent principles; one, good, the other, evil: for this reason, Satan, the author of Job's misfortunes, appears to be brought in with permission from God to afflict Job; and one moral of the history is in Job's reflection, "The Lord gave, and the Lord hath taken away;" and again, "Shall we receive good at the hand of God, and shall we not receive evil?" Bp. Sherlock.

— In all this did not Job sin with his lips. We should here notice, on the one hand, the behaviour of Job's wife, who, instead of encouraging and comforting him, tempted him to murmur against God, and curse Him: and on the other, the wonderful constancy of Job, who always preserved his integrity, and said to his wife, "What? shall we receive good at the hand of God, and shall we not receive evil?" Persons, united by marriage or otherwise, are guilty of a great sin when they do not endeavour to comfort one another, and mutually exhort each other to holiness. Hence also we may learn, that when it pleases God to afflict us, it behoves us humbly to submit to His will, and acquiesce in all His dispensations; knowing that evil, as well as good, proceeds from Him, and that afflictions are not less useful to us, than prosperity and success. Ostervald.

11. — Eliphaz &c. Teman was a city of Edom, Jer. xlix. 7, 20; Ezek. xxv. 12, 13; Amos i. 11, 12. Shuah was a district in the "east country" of Arabia Petrea, where Abraham's sons by Keturah were settled, Gen. xxv. 2, 6. Naamah was a city of Edom, Josh. xv. 21, 41. Dr. Hales.

12. — and sprinkled dust upon their heads toward heaven. This place would be more intelligible were it rendered, And threw dust through the air upon their heads; see Acts xxii. 23, where this custom is alluded to. Dr. Durell.

13. So they sat down with him upon the ground seven days &c.] "Sitting on the ground" is an Oriental phrase, to express their passing the time in the deepest mourning: this, according to the Eastern manner, was for seven days; see Gen. l. 10. Heath.

Chap. III. The two first chapters of this book are written in prose. In the third chapter the poem opens with that kind of tragical distress, which is lofty in its conceptions, and highly ground seven days and seven nights, and none spake a word unto him: for they saw that his grief was very great. Before

CHRIST
about 1520.

CHAP. III.

1 Job curses the day and services of his birth. 13 The ease of death. 20 He complaineth of life, because of his anguish.

AFTER this opened Job his mouth, and cursed his day.

2 And Job † spake, and said,

3 † Let the day perish wherein I was born, and the night in which it was said, There is a man child conceived. † Heb.
answered.
a Chap. 10.
13, 19.
Jer. 20. 14.

4 Let that day be darkness; let not God regard it from above, neither let the light shine upon it.

figurative in its language; which labours for the strongest images, and most energetick words, to express its feelings, and to spread over all objects around it its own gloominess and horror. A paroxysm of such violent grief vents itself in the following imprecations. The passion however subsides a little in the latter part of the speech, and flows in the soft complaining strain of elegy. This impotence of mind in Job, so inconsistent with his former firmness, may probably be accounted for in part from the influence of his disease: to which must be added, his not having obtained any abatement of his affliction, notwithstanding his submission; and his suspicion, from the silence of his friends, that he was to expect no consolation from them. Scott.

Those, who have been affected with Job's disorder, are said to have been weary of life, and to have wished for nothing so much as death: it made them impatient, passionate, discontented with every thing, wild, and desperate. Michaelis.

Ver. 1. — cursed his day. Job wishes he had never been born, or, at least, that he had died immediately after his birth; and describes the happiness of the dead. He then ventures to ask, why God has given existence to the miserable, and why He does not rather put an end to their unhappiness by death, which they long for. Michaelis.

Job is neither rigidly to be taxed with blasphemy or profaneness, nor totally to be excused, especially not flatteringly commended, for this high complaint. It must, as it appears, be granted, that Job discovered much frailty and infirmity, some passion and distemper, in this complaint and curse: yet notwithstanding we must assert him to be a patient man, yea, a mirror of patience; for consider the greatness of his suffering, the multiplicity of his troubles; that his complainings and acts of impatience were but few, but his submissions and acts of meekness under the hand of God were very many: take also into consideration, that, though he did complain, and complain bitterly, yet he recovered out of these complainings; he recalls what he had spoken, and repents of what he had done. Caryl.

These are infirmities proceeding from excessive grief, and are not to be brought forward to excuse our repining against God's providence. All that follows the second verse is expressed in the style of poetry. Bp. Wilson. See the note on Jer. xx. 14.

3. Let the day perish. "The day," namely, his birthday. "Let the day perish," by being deprived of the light of the sun; "the night," by losing the light of the moon and stars: to which he adds other circumstances, to aggravate the horror. Scott.

— There is a man child conceived. The bearing of a son was a matter of great consequence among the Arabians: the form of their appreciation of happiness to a new married woman being, "May you live happily, and bring forth male children." Schultens, Heath.

4. — let not God regard it from above. In Deut. xi. 12, the word, here rendered "regard," is translated "care for." God is here represented, sitting on His throne in heaven, and surveying

Before CHRIST about 1520. 5 Let darkness and the shadow of death stain it; let a cloud dwell upon it; || let the blackness of the day terrify it.

|| Or, challenge it. 6 As for that night, let darkness seize upon it; || let it not be joined unto the days of the year, let it not come into the number of the months.

|| Or, let it not rejoice among the days. 7 Lo, let that night be solitary, let no joyful voice come therein.

|| Or, a leviathan. 8 Let them curse it that curse the day, who are ready to raise up || their mourning.

9 Let the stars of the twilight thereof be dark; let it look for light, but have none; neither let it see † the dawning of the day:

† Heb. the eyelids of the morning. 10 Because it shut not up the doors of my mother's womb, nor hid sorrow from mine eyes.

11 Why died I not from the womb? why did I not give up the ghost when I came out of the belly?

12 Why did the knees prevent me? or why the breasts that I should suck?

13 For now should I have lain still and been quiet, I should have slept: then had I been at rest,

Before CHRIST about 1520.

14 With kings and counsellors of the earth, which built desolate places for themselves;

15 Or with princes that had gold, who filled their houses with silver:

16 Or as an hidden untimely birth I had not been; as infants which never saw light.

17 There the wicked cease from troubling; and there the † weary be at rest.

† Heb. wearied in strength.

18 There the prisoners rest together; they hear not the voice of the oppressor.

19 The small and great are there; and the servant is free from his master.

20 Wherefore is light given to him that is in misery, and life unto the bitter in soul;

21 Which † long for death, but it cometh not; and dig for it more than for hid treasures;

† Heb. wait.

22 Which rejoice exceedingly, and are glad, when they can find the grave?

23 Why is light given to a man whose way is hid, ^b and whom God hath hedged in? ^b Chap. 19. 8.

the universe, to see that all its movements be carried on according to the laws which He has established. Job wishes that the day of his nativity may be rejected from the care of that Providence, by which the constant vicissitudes of day and night are preserved. Scott.

5. — shadow of death.] Such a dismal darkness as is in the place of the dead. Clark.

— let the blackness of the day terrify it.] Let a continued darkness make it terrible to all beholders. Bp. Hall.

Whatever can be imagined most dismal to make a day terrible and abhorred, such as destructive storms, lightnings, thunderings, portents, and the like, I conceive to be comprehended in this phrase. Scott.

7. Lo, let that night be solitary.] In that night let none assemble to converse, or to rejoice. The Arabs had their meetings for conversation in the night; and among the Eastern nations in general, the night was devoted to festivity, Matt. xxv. 1, &c. It is so still among the Moors in Barbary, as Dr. Shaw says. Scott.

8. Let them curse it that curse the day, &c.] Let those men be hired, whose business and employment it is to "curse the days" that are esteemed ominous and inauspicious: let them apply all their skill in "raising" their mournful voices to the highest pitch. Chappelow.

According to the marginal reading, the verse may be thus translated; "Let them execrate it, who curse the (natal) day (compare ver. 1) of those who are about to, or who shall, rouse the "Leviathan:" which was almost sure to be attended with immediate and horrid destruction. See chap. xli. 8—10. "The crocodile," says Hasselquist, "does inexpressible mischief to the people of upper Egypt, often killing and devouring women, who come to the river to fetch water, and children playing on the shore, or swimming in the river." Parkhurst.

It was natural to mention such a terrible casualty in the strongest terms of abhorrence; and to lament those, who so miserably perished, with most bitter imprecations on the disastrous day. Job here calls for the assistance of such language, to execrate the fatal night of his nativity. Scott.

11. Why did I not from the womb?] As soon as I had life in the womb. Clark.

12. Why did the knees prevent me?] Why did the knees of the midwife assist at my birth in preserving my life? Dr. Durell.

14. With kings and counsellors of the earth,] This beautiful description of the grave contains a fine oblique satire on ambition and avarice. Scott.

— which built desolate places for themselves;] By "desolate places," we may understand tombs and sepulchres, which kings and counsellors build for themselves: and the word, which we have here for "desolate places," is in Scripture clearly applied to the grave, or place of burial. We have it in Ezek. xxvi. 20. Caryl.

"Desolate places," those dreary sepulchral mansions, where the body is wasted or consumed. Such for instance as the pyramids of Egypt, some of which were probably older than the times of Job. Parkhurst.

18. — they hear not the voice of the oppressor.] Of the taskmaster, or driver, chap. xxxix. 7. The account given us of the treatment of the Christian slaves in Mequinez, is a lively comment on this passage: "Their respective guardians, or taskmasters, deliver them over at night, as so many sheep, to another, who is appointed to take charge of all; who secures them in one house till next morning, and then they hear the doleful echo of Come out to work." Scott.

19. The small and great are there;] Rather, "there the small and the great are the same;" for that seems to be the precise meaning of the passage. Dr. Durell.

21. — dig for it more than for hid treasures;] Compare Prov. ii. 4; Is. xlv. 3, &c. These expressions of Scripture, which refer to hidden treasures, will perhaps derive a spirit from knowing, that a custom prevails among the Eastern people of burying their riches, by which means vast sums have been lost; that the great as well as the small are persuaded of all the ancient monuments containing some hidden treasures; and that in fact a number of men make a kind of business of going about pretending to discover such treasures. Fragments to Calmet.

23. — to a man whose way is hid, &c.] Why is light cast upon a man whom God hath made so miserable, that there is no way to be hoped of his deliverance from this calamity; whom God hath shut up in this distress, without the possibility of escape? Bp. Hall.

"Whose way is hid," so that he cannot see how to get out of his miseries. Bp. Wilson.

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

† Heb. before my meat.
† Heb.
I feared a fear, and it came upon me

24 For my sighing cometh † before I eat, and my roarings are poured out like the waters.

25 For † the thing which I greatly feared is come upon me, and that which I was afraid of is come unto me.

26 I was not in safety, neither had I rest, neither was I quiet; yet trouble came.

CHAP. IV.

1 Eliphaz reproveth Job for want of religion. 7 He teacheth God's judgments to be not for the righteous, but for the wicked. 12 His fearful vision, to humble the excellency of creatures before God.

THEN Eliphaz the Temanite answered and said,

† Heb.
a word.
† Heb. who can restrain from
words?

2 If we assay † to commune with thee, wilt thou be grieved? but † who can withhold himself from speaking?

3 Behold, thou hast instructed many, and thou hast strengthened the weak hands.

4 Thy words have upholden him that was

24. — my sighing cometh before I eat,] So that I eat only to prolong my misery. All these are no more than the natural ways of expressing great affliction in the Eastern countries, and would at this very day be so understood. Bp. Wilson.

It is in the Hebrew, as the margin notices, “before,” that is, in the presence of, “my meat.” The sight of his food renewed his distress, because it was the means of prolonging a miserable life; or because, as Peters ingeniously conjectures, it brought to his remembrance those happy hours, when “his children were about him,” chap. xxix. 5. Scott.

25. For the thing which I greatly feared is come upon me,] The thing which Job meant here as the greatest of his fears, and which was now come upon him, was probably the loss of his children; for whom an over-tender parent is in continual solicitude. And that Job was such, appears plain from that remarkable circumstance in his story, his constant sacrificing upon occasion of his children's feasting, lest any impiety might have been committed by them in those unguarded hours, that might provoke the Deity to punish them, chap. i. 5. Peters.

26. I was not in safety, &c.] I did not lull myself into security, (chap. i. 5,) and yet that did not prevent me from being miserable. Bp. Patrick.

I never confided in my power, or wisdom, or holiness. The thought of his innocence was the only comfort which Job had: the devil had deprived him of all else, and his friends strive to deprive him of this. Bp. Wilson.

Chap. IV, V. Eliphaz, the first of Job's friends, reproves him for grieving so excessively himself, who had formerly preached patience to others in affliction. He represents God as afflicting the wicked, but not good men. He relates a vision which he had seen, wherein God had convinced him of His justice, and of the meanness and corruption of human nature. He enlarges upon God's judgments on the wicked and their posterity. And he speaks of the usefulness of God's corrections; exhorts Job to improve by those, with which he was visited, and to acknowledge his sins: giving him hopes that he would then be delivered from his misfortunes, and restored to his former condition. Osterwald.

This address of Eliphaz has the appearance of friendship. But several strokes, and the tenour of the whole, too plainly shew, that he supposed the afflictions of his friend to be the punishment of preceding guilt. Scott.

Chap. IV. ver. 5. But now it is come upon thee, &c.] But now falling, and thou hast strengthened † the feeble knees. Before CHRIST

about 1520.

5 But now it is come upon thee, and thou faintest; it toucheth thee, and thou art troubled. † Heb.
the bowing knees.

6 Is not this thy fear, thy confidence, thy hope, and the uprightness of thy ways?

7 Remember, I pray thee, who ever perished, being innocent? or where were the righteous cut off?

8 Even as I have seen, ^a they that plow ^a iniquity, and sow wickedness, reap the same. Prov. 22.
Hos. 10. 13.

9 By the blast of God they perish, and † by the breath of his nostrils are they consumed. † That is,
by his anger, as Isai.
30. 53.

10 The roaring of the lion, and the voice of the fierce lion, and the teeth of the young lions, are broken.

11 The old lion perisheth for lack of prey, and the stout lion's whelps are scattered abroad.

thou canst not learn the same lesson thou didst teach others; for now that affliction is come, thou canst not bear it patiently. Clark.

6. Is not this thy fear, thy confidence, thy hope, &c.] That is, thy fear of God should be thy confidence: and thy hope and thy integrity should go together. Peters.

The original is a period, divided into two members, and may be translated thus: “Should not thy piety be thy confidence? and the uprightness of thy ways, thy hope?” The words may be construed as a friendly admonition to recollect his religious principles, and to support himself by the clearness of his conscience. On the other hand they may import, that no good man would fall into despair under affliction, as he had done. Scott.

— thy fear,] Michaelis remarks, that the word “fear,” reverence, is used for piety, or the fear of God, though the name of God is omitted. See also chap. xv. 4. Parkhurst.

7, 8. — who ever perished, being innocent? &c.] The strong terms which Eliphaz here uses, “who ever perished, being innocent?” and his adding what he had observed himself of the punishment that sometimes remarkably befalls wicked men, contain a shrewd insinuation that he believed Job to have been guilty of some secret sins, for which the hand of God was thus heavy upon him. What follows (ver. 16—19) more and more confirms this notion; for, by the recital of a vision which he had, he intimates to him what a folly it would be to presume to justify himself before God, in whose sight the angels themselves were not pure or perfect. Peters.

Although it be true in general that the innocent never perish, and that God afflicts men for their sins, yet Eliphaz was to blame for concluding from thence, that Job's virtue had not been sincere; since God does also send misfortunes upon the virtuous. It would be a rash and hasty judgment, to believe that men are wicked, or hypocrites, only because they are afflicted; on the contrary, justice and piety require us to judge charitably of them, especially when their lives have been innocent, as Job's had been. Osterwald.

10. The roaring of the lion, &c.] And not only such wicked men as are weak, but the strongest, stoutest, and fiercest, with all their dependents, are destroyed by God. Clark.

By the lions are meant the wicked: they roar over their prey; their roaring being silenced is equivalent to the failure of their schemes. Michaelis.

11. The old lion — the stout lion's whelps] Tyrants and their children soon perish. Bp. Wilson. We have here in the original

Before CHRIST about 1520.
 † Heb. by stealth.
 † Heb. met me.
 † Heb. the multitude of my bones.
 12 Now a thing was † secretly brought to me, and mine ear received a little thereof.
 13 In thoughts from the visions of the night, when deep sleep falleth on men, 14 Fear † came upon me, and trembling, which made † all my bones to shake.
 15 Then a spirit passed before my face; the hair of my flesh stood up:
 16 It stood still, but I could not discern the form thereof: an image was before mine eyes, || there was silence, and I heard a voice, saying,
 17 Shall mortal man be more just than God? shall a man be more pure than his maker?
 18 Behold, he ^b put no trust in his servants; || and his angels he charged with folly:
 || Or, I heard a still voice.
 Chap. 15.
 2 Pet. 2. 4.
 || Or, nor in his angels, in whom he put light.

Before CHRIST about 1520.
 c 2 Cor. 5. 1.
 † Heb. beaten in pieces.
 19 How much less in them that dwell in houses of clay, whose foundation is in the dust, which are crushed before the moth?
 20 They are † destroyed from morning to evening: they perish for ever without any regarding it.
 21 Doth not their excellency which is in them go away? they die, even without wisdom.

CHAP. V.

1 The harm of inconsideration. 3 The end of the wicked is misery. 6 God is to be regarded in affliction. 17 The happy end of God's correction.

CALL now, if there be any that will answer thee; and to which of the saints wilt thou || turn?

2 For wrath killeth the foolish man, and || envy slayeth the silly one.

|| Or, look?
 || Or, indignation.

no less than five different words to express a lion. This animal was esteemed by the Eastern people a creature of so much strength and courage, so far superiour to other beasts, that the Arabians put their invention to the utmost stretch to find out names suitable to his qualities. There are, it is said, more than five hundred appropriated to him. Chappelow.

12. Now a thing was secretly brought to me,] If these observations be not sufficient to convince thee, hear what God Himself secretly whispered to me. Bp. Patrick.

There are different opinions concerning this "thing," word, or oracle, as it may be interpreted; and whether it was real or imaginary only. The circumstances attending it, though it was misapplied by Eliphaz, would incline one to think it was more than a speculative imagination. Revelation by dreams was, we are assured, one of the means that God vouchsafed to make use of to signify His will and pleasure. As to revelations, they were not always made to the best of men: witness the corrupt and deceitful heart of Balaam. And if this was a true revelation, Eliphaz's great fault was in not applying it to a right purpose, but rather to vex and disquiet a good man. Chappelow.

15. — the hair of my flesh stood up:] Thus Homer, speaking of Priam, when terrified at the appearance of Mercury, "His hairs stood upright on his bending limbs." Parkhurst.

17. Shall mortal man be more just than God?] The important instructions conveyed in this Divine vision are, the absolute rectitude of God, the exceeding imperfection of human virtue, and the impiety of arraighing the justice of His moral government. The manifest design of Eliphaz in relating it was, to fix a Divine censure on the latter part of Job's speech, and to warn him against falling into such querulous language any more: since all complaint supposes, that the complainant thinks himself injured by the party of whom he complains. Scott.

18. Behold, he put no trust in his servants; &c.] The imperfection of the most exalted spirits is meant to be pointed out, in comparison with the infinite perfection of the Deity. Scott. Holiness is a communicable perfection: but no creature can partake of it in such a manner and degree, as the Divine nature possesseth it. God is eternally holy, the fountain of holiness: the creatures are derivatively and by participation holy. God is eminently and transcendently so: the creatures in a finite degree. God is immutably so; it is impossible it should be otherwise: but no creature is out of an absolute possibility of sin. In this sense it is here said, that "He putteth no trust in His servants, and His angels He charged with folly:" and chap. xv. 15, "He putteth no trust in His saints; yea, the heavens are not clean in His sight." Abp. Tillotson.

19. — in houses of clay, &c.] Frail mutable bodies, whose original is from the dust, which are crushed sooner than a moth. Clark.

"Houses of clay," or of mud. This description of our frail perishing bodies receives additional force from remarking, that one usual mode of building in the East is literally with mud dried in the sun; and that of course such mud-houses soon decay, and are of short duration. Parkhurst.

— which are crushed before the moth?] Or, more strictly, the moth-worm. Parkhurst.

This creature is usually taken for the moth, which consumes clothes and wool, by reducing them to a dust and powder. The signification of the passage may be; As the habitation of a worm is consumed by its inhabitants, so is the person of man; it is no more capable of resisting disease, than a woollen cloth is capable of resisting decay, when devoured and demolished by the worm appointed to it: otherwise, crushed as a feeble and contemptible insect is crushed; as we crush a moth-worm, without compunction or reluctance. Script. illust. Expos. Ind.

20. They are destroyed from morning to evening:] They are subject or liable to destruction the whole day. Caryl. There is not a moment, wherein man is not sinking and drawing on towards death and corruption. Poole.

21. Doth not their excellency which is in them go away?] Rather, Doth not their excellency go away with them? Dr. Durell. — they die, even without wisdom.] Though they are masters of never so much wisdom in their lifetime, yet in death it all vanishes, together with their other excellencies. Clark.

"They die, even without wisdom:" like beasts, who never think of death, which will deprive them of all that they possess. Bp. Wilson.

Chap. V. ver. 1. — to which of the saints wilt thou turn?] The voice of the spirit or apparition evidently ceases with the last verse of the foregoing chapter; so that what follows must be the words of Eliphaz. Chappelow.

"To which of the saints, &c." of the holy beings, that is, of the angels. Those exalted spirits know themselves to be fallible: which of them, therefore, will countenance thee, in justifying thyself, and complaining against God? Scott. Or, "to which of the saints wilt thou turn?" Canst thou give any instance of holy men afflicted as thou art? Bp. Wilson.

2. — wrath killeth the foolish man,] Wrath may be taken here two ways, either for the wrath of God, or for the wrath of man: in the former sense the meaning is, that the wrath of God kills foolish men; which is an undoubted truth. But the latter seems preferable, which gives the meaning thus: that the wrath of a foolish man kills himself; his own wrath is as a knife at his throat, and as a sword in his own bowels. Caryl.

Eliphaz resumes his position, that men reap what they sow: their sufferings are the fruit of their own criminal passions, Prov. i. 31, 32. He produces another example in support of this principle, and traces up the matter to its source in a fixed law of Providence, which hath ordained natural evil to be the punishment of

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

3 I have seen the foolish taking root:
but suddenly I cursed his habitation.

4 His children are far from safety, and they are crushed in the gate, neither is there any to deliver them.

5 Whose harvest the hungry eateth up, and taketh it even out of the thorns, and the robber swalloweth up their substance.

6 Although || affliction cometh not forth of the dust, neither doth trouble spring out of the ground;

7 Yet man is born unto || trouble, as the sparks fly upward.

8 I would seek unto God, and unto God would I commit my cause:

9 ^a Which doeth great things † and un-searchable; marvellous things † without number:

|| Or,
iniquity.
|| Or,
labour.
† Heb.
the sons of the burning coal lift up to fly.
* Chap. 9.
10.
Psal. 72. 18.
Rom. 11.
33.
† Heb. and there is no search.
† Heb.
till there be no number.

moral. It is to be observed, by what cautious gradations this speaker opens his uncharitable judgment of the case of his friend.
Scott.

— the foolish man, — the silly one.] These are terms in Scripture for impious and wicked men, Prov. i. 7, 32; marking them as persons of a stupid understanding, and seduced by their corrupt passions. The first, "foolish," is applied by Zechariah to an oppressive ruler, chap. xi. 15, 16. The passions of "wrath" and "envy" are specified, because these are two principal sources of injustice and cruelty. Scott.

3. — I cursed his habitation.] I judged him unhappy; and saw a curse hanging over all that belonged to him. Clark.

This passage appears to be explained by Ps. xxxvii. 35, 36.
Rosenmüller.

What Eliphaz says concerning the judgments of God upon the wicked, and the short duration of their happiness, is true: but his application of it to Job is wrong. Ostervald.

4. — the gate,] The court of justice held at or over the gate.
Bp. Stock.

See the note on Gen. xxiii. 10. In the place of judgment, justice took hold of them. Bp. Wilson.

To Dr. Shaw's remark, quoted in the note on Gen. xxiii. 10, may be added, that the square tower, which is the present principal entrance to the Alhambra, or red palace of the Moorish kings in Grenada, from its being the place where justice was summarily administered, was styled "the gate of judgment." Parkhurst.

5. Whose harvest the hungry eateth.] "The hungry," that is, a starveling, a man almost starved with hunger and thirst, a meagre wretch. There seems in this place a manifest allusion to the half-starved Arabs of the desert, who were always ready for plunder, as their descendants are to this day. Parkhurst.

— taketh it even out of the thorns,] As a man is said to fetch a thing out of the fire, or out of the lion's mouth, when he gets it with much peril and hazard; so, what a man gets with much difficulty and labour he is said to get out of the thorns: and the reason is this; because men were wont, when they had gathered in their harvest, to secure it with a thorn hedge, or to lay bushes about their stacks, to keep off cattle or any other annoyances. Caryl.

Or, "whose harvest the hungry taketh even out of the thorns:"
for, being overrun with briars, it is not worth reaping. The plunderer took the remainder. Bp. Wilson.

6, 7. Although affliction &c. &c.] The Hebrew is rather, "For iniquity cometh not forth of the dust, neither doth trouble spring out of the ground;" that is, as the wickedness of men does not proceed from any natural cause, but from their own free wills; so neither are their miseries to be considered as the effects of natural causes, but as the distributions of a free agent likewise, who fits men's punishment to their crimes: and hence man, being prone to sin, is necessarily born to suffer. Peters.

10 Who giveth rain upon the earth, and sendeth waters upon the † fields:

11 ^b To set up on high those that be low; that those which mourn may be exalted to safety.

12 ^c He disappointeth the devices of the crafty, so that their hands || cannot perform their enterprise.

13 ^d He taketh the wise in their own craftiness: and the counsel of the froward is carried headlong.

14 ^e They || meet with darkness in the daytime, and grope in the noonday as in the night.

15 But he saveth the poor from the sword, from their mouth, and from the hand of the mighty.

16 ^f So the poor hath hope, and iniquity stoppeth her mouth.

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

† Heb.
outplaces.
† Ps. 113. 7.
1 Sam. 2. 7.

^c Neh. 4. 15.
Ps. 33. 10.
Is. 8. 10.

|| Or, cannot perform any thing.
^d 1 Cor. 5.
19.

^e Deut. 28.
29.
|| Or, run into.

^f Psal. 107.
42.

God, in His unbounded wisdom and power, is the disposer of all events, and especially of those that happen to men, dispensing them with perfect righteousness and goodness, inasmuch that, sooner or later, the wicked are confounded, and the righteous delivered. This every day's experience confirms: and it should be a powerful motive to engage us to forsake sin, and to put our whole trust in God alone. Ostervald.

8, 9. I would seek unto God, &c.] That is, (for Eliphaz had precluded Job from all attempts to justify himself in the foregoing part of his advice,) I would apply to God by a full and free confession of those sins, which have drawn this sad calamity upon me; to God, who was able to do wonders, (as he presently adds,) and who could and would restore him to his former happy state, if He saw him truly penitent for his past transgressions:
for this is the whole purport of the following part of the speech, ver. 17—27; namely, to give Job hopes of a happy turn to his condition, if he would but do, what Eliphaz thought was absolutely necessary to be done in his case; namely, make a frank confession of those secret crimes and enormities, which had pulled down this severe chastisement on his head. Peters.

10. Who giveth rain.] We may note, that the common blessings of God are not dispensed without a directing Providence.
Nature works not without the God of nature. Caryl.

In those hot climates the spring is of short duration. All summer the earth is without rain: every thing is burnt up, and the fields are turned into a desert. But when the autumnal rains fall, a few plentiful showers produce a sudden resurrection of vegetable nature: the pastures are clothed again with grass, the trees are covered with green leaves, and all things assume a fresh and delightful aspect. Dr. Russell. Eliphaz appears to allude in this place to such a great and beautiful operation of Providence; as a fitting emblem of its effecting a like wonderful transition from a condition of despairing affliction to a state of prosperity and joy. Scott.

11. To set up on high those that be low; &c.] From the works of nature, ver. 10, Eliphaz passes on to man, and describes at large instances of supreme power which God is wont to display in His dealings with him. This verse is to be connected with ver. 9, in the following manner: God doeth great and marvellous things by setting up on high those that be low. Rosenmüller.

13. — the counsel of the froward is carried headlong.] That is, they rush to their own ruin. Bp. Wilson.

14. They meet with darkness &c.] They trip in the plainest way; and see not their danger when it is visible to every body but themselves. Bp. Patrick.

15. from their mouth,] That is, from the reproaches of those crafty ones. Clark.

16. So the poor hath hope,] Great cause to hope in God's mercy for deliverance, by this experience of the Divine goodness to him. Clark.

Before CHRIST about 1520. 17 ^g Behold, happy is the man whom God correcteth: therefore despise not thou the chastening of the Almighty:

12. James 1. 12. Hebr. 12. 5. Rev. 3. 19. 19 ^h For he maketh sore, and bindeth up: he woundeth, and his hands make whole.

39. 1 Sam. 2. 6. Isai. 30. 26. 20 In famine he shall redeem thee from death: and in war † from the power of the sword.

Hos. 6. 1. 1 Ps. 91. 3. † Heb. from the hands. 21 Thou shalt be hid || from the scourge of the tongue: neither shalt thou be afraid of destruction when it cometh.

|| Or, when the tongue scourgeth. 22 At destruction and famine thou shalt laugh: neither shalt thou be afraid of the beasts of the earth.

* Hos. 2. 18. 23 ^k For thou shalt be in league with the stones of the field: and the beasts of the field shall be at peace with thee.

|| Or, that peace is thy tabernacle. || Or, err. 24 And thou shalt know || that thy tabernacle shall be in peace; and thou shalt visit thy habitation, and shalt not || sin.

— iniquity stoppeth her mouth.] Such examples of the justice and goodness of Providence silence the objections of infidels, and the murmurs of all complainants. Scott.

17. Behold, happy is the man &c.] As a further motive to repentance, he represents afflictions as Divine remedies, and displays the blessings they procure to those who are reformed. Scott.

19. — in six troubles: yea, in seven] This expression "six; yea, seven," seems to be a fixed number put for an unfixed, a certain number for an uncertain. We find this kind of speaking frequently in Scripture: in the thirty-third chapter of this book, ver. 29, "Lo, all these things worketh God twice and thrice," we translate, "these things worketh God oftentimes." Caryl.

21. — destruction] Rather, ruin, by calumny or false accusation; as appears from its connexion with "the scourge of the tongue." Scott.

— when it cometh.] Upon others. Clark.

22. — destruction and famine] "Destruction," desolation, by the incursions of lawless men and wild beasts: see Lev. xxvi. 22; Jer. v. 6; Ezek. xiv. 15; Ps. lxxx. 13. "Famine," extreme poverty, the effect of the incursions and depredations above mentioned. Accordingly it follows, "neither shalt thou be afraid of the beasts of the earth." See Hos. ii. 12, 18. Scott.

23. For thou shalt be in league with the stones of the field:] The stones of the field shall not hurt thee, though thou walkest with naked feet. Grotius.

This strong figure of speech may import protection in travelling. The sandals, which the ancients wore, were a very slight guard to the feet in the rough and stony ways of their mountains. Compare Ps. xci. 11, 12. In the former verse he assures security to his vineyards, &c. from the depredations of noxious animals: in the latter part of this, he engages for the security of his person, particularly from the various kinds of serpents, which infested the desert of Arabia, and rendered travelling dangerous, Deut. viii. 15. Scott.

24. — and thou shalt visit thy habitation, and shalt not sin.] The words signify, Thou shalt superintend thy affairs with good success, and not err or fail in the administration of them. Bp. Hall. "Shalt not sin," shalt not miscarry. The original word is a metaphor from skilful slingers, who never miss the mark: Judg. xx. 16, "every one could sling stones at an hair breadth, and not miss." Scott. It signifies to miss of happiness, "our nature's end and aim." Parkhurst.

26. — like as a shock of corn cometh in in his season.] Cometh to the threshingfloor at the season of harvest. Bp. Stock.

VOL. I.

Before CHRIST about 1520. 25 Thou shalt know also that thy seed shall be || great, and thine offspring as the grass of the earth.

|| Or, much. 26 Thou shalt come to thy grave in a full age, like as a shock of corn † cometh in in his season.

† Heb. ascendeth. 27 Lo this, we have searched it, so it is; hear it, and know thou it † for thy good.

† Heb. for thyself.

CHAP. VI.

1 Job sheweth that his complaints are not causeless. 8 He wisheth for death, wherein he is assured of comfort.

14 He reproveth his friends of unkindness.

BUT Job answered and said, 2 Oh that my grief were thoroughly weighed, and my calamity † laid in the balances together!

† Heb. lifted up.

3 For now it would be heavier than the sand of the sea: therefore || my words are swallowed up.

|| That is, I want words to express my grief. Ps. 38. 2.

4 * For the arrows of the Almighty are within me, the poison whereof drinketh up

The Eastern people used not anciently to stack their corn in the straw, to remain for a considerable time, as we do; but to carry it together in heaps, and then presently thresh it in the field: and they observe the same practice to this day. "As a heap of corn comes up" (on the threshingfloor, namely) "in its season," that is, when fully ripe. Parkhurst.

An easy death in a good old age, a worthy and respected character, and an honourable interment, are the ideas conveyed in this rural comparison. Scott.

27. Lo this, we have searched it,] They had, it seems, conferred together on the case of their friend, agreed in their judgment of it, and concerted the plan of their discourse to him. Job accordingly addresses his answer to them all. Scott.

The intent of this speech, however soft and insinuating, is very plain: it was to bring Job to a confession of some secret wickedness, some great enormity, of which his friends supposed him to be guilty. And so, we find, Job understood it; for he complains of the unkindness of the suspicion in the following reply, chap. vi. 14, 15, 25. Peters.

Chap. VI, VII. Job excuses his ebullition of impatience by the greatness of his sufferings, which his friends have not duly appreciated. He rejects in very unfriendly terms the consolation offered by Eliphaz, probably because he knows his disaster to be incurable, and feels no right to expect a miraculous interference to effect his recovery. He declares expressly that he does not expect a cure, and that a speedy death is his only desire: he complains that his friends do not sympathize with him; he laments the general lot of human nature, and his own in particular; he confesses at last, that he is not unjustly punished, but complains that God should so strictly observe and so rigidly punish, offences that cannot injure Him. Michaelis.

Chap. VI, ver. 3. — therefore my words are swallowed up.] By my grief, which drowns them that I cannot speak, and stops my mouth that I am not able to utter what I would say. Clark.

4. For the arrows of the Almighty are within me,] This is uttered by the patient man, when he would excuse his passion by the terror and agony he was in. He had patience enough for the oppression and rapine of his enemies, for the unkindness and reproach of his friends, and for the cunning and malice of the devil; but he was so transported with the sense of God's anger, he could not bear that with temper: the apprehension that all these miseries, of so piercing and destroying a nature in themselves, fell upon him, not only by God's permission, to try and humble him, but proceeded directly from His indignation and resolution ^{Before CHRIST about 1520.} my spirit: the terrors of God do set themselves in array against me.

^{† Heb. of grass.} 5 Doth the wild ass bray † when he hath grass? or loweth the ox over his fodder?

6 Can that which is unsavoury be eaten without salt? or is there any taste in the white of an egg?

7 The things that my soul refused to touch are as my sorrowful meat.

^{† Heb. my expectation.} 8 Oh that I might have my request; and that God would grant me † the thing that I long for!

9 Even that it would please God to destroy me; that he would let loose his hand, and cut me off!

10 Then should I yet have comfort; to destroy him, almost confounded him. We want this apprehension of God's anger, and the pious passion that would attend it; and find out a hundred reasons for any affliction that befalls us, in the pride, and envy, and injustice of men, before we resort to the least consideration that they flow from His displeasure towards us; and are so far from being terrified or perplexed with the sense of His anger, that we seem to be of opinion, that He cannot be angry at all, otherwise we would use the same providence to prevent it, and the same diligence and application to pacify it, as we do towards the anger of those whom we think able or willing to do us good or harm. Lord Clarendon.

— the arrows — the poison whereof drinketh up my spirit:] This alludes to the custom that prevailed among the ancients, of dipping arrows in poison, which appears to have had the effect of producing thirst. The “poisoned arrows” of Horace are famous: and Homer speaks of “poison for smearing arrows.” The Chaldee Paraphrast on Ps. lxiv. 3, alludes to this practice: for what is in Hebrew, “they bend their arrows, bitter words,” he renders, “they anoint their arrows with poison.” Script. illust.

— do set themselves in array against me.] Make war against me; or, attack me in the order and disposition of a regular army. Chappelow. The thick succession of his past calamities, and his apprehension of many more sufferings still to come, seem to be painted in this high colouring. Scott.

5. Doth the wild ass bray &c.] As if he had said, Thou wonderest that my disposition and carriage are so greatly altered from what they were; see chap. iv. 3—5: but thou mayest easily learn the reason of it from the brute beasts, the ass and the ox; which, when they have convenient food, are quiet and contented, but complain when they are in want: see Jer. xiv. 6. And therefore my carriage is agreeable to those common principles of nature, which are both in men and beasts; by which their disposition and deportment is generally suited to their condition. It is no wonder that you, who live in ease and prosperity, do not complain; nor did I, when it was so with me: but if you felt what I feel, you would be as full of complaints as I am. Poole.

6. Can that which is unsavoury be eaten &c.] Can, or do, men use to eat unsavoury meats, with delight, or without complaint? That is, Men commonly complain of their meat, when it is unsavoury; how much more, when it is so bitter, as mine is? See the next note. Poole.

7. The things that my soul refused &c.] The words are to be understood metaphorically: the sense may be, Those grievous afflictions, which according to the common inclinations of human nature I dreaded the very touch and thought of, are now my daily though sorrowful bread; I am forced constantly to feed upon them. Compare Psal. lxxx. 5; cii. 9. Poole.

9. — that he would let loose his hand, and cut me off!] As God made, so doth He still “uphold all things by the word of His power,” Heb. i. 3, inasmuch, that, should He let go His hold of us, and not keep us up in our being, we should immediately fall down into nothing. Job was sensible of this; and it gave occasion to the present exclamation. He knew, that if God did but yea, I would harden myself in sorrow: let ^{Before CHRIST about 1520.} him not spare; for I have not concealed the words of the Holy One.

11 What is my strength, that I should hope? and what is mine end, that I should prolong my life?

12 Is my strength the strength of stones? or is my flesh † of brass?

13 Is not my help in me? and is wisdom driven quite from me?

14 † To him that is afflicted pity should † ^{† Heb. To him that melteth.} be shewed from his friend; but he forsaketh the fear of the Almighty.

15 My brethren have dealt deceitfully as a brook, and as the stream of brooks they pass away;

“let loose His hand,” so as not to support him in his being, he should the same moment be “cut off,” and cease to be. So necessarily do all the creatures upon earth subsist and depend upon the will and power of their Creator. Bp. Beveridge.

10. — I would harden myself in sorrow:] I would set myself to bear the pangs and agonies of death, if I had but this hope, that my misery was near expiring; for I have the testimony of a good conscience, which tells me, that I have not smothered any light which God hath sent me, but that I have been faithful to Him, His cause, and His truth. Caryl.

— for I have not concealed the words of the Holy One.] The great Prophet, the Messiah, appeals to God for His fidelity in similar language, Ps. xl. 10. Scott. His words mean, It has been the business of my life to profess and vindicate piety and religion. So far from concealing those qualities which are peculiar to the Holy One, such as His goodness, kindness, and beneficence; so far from not publishing them to the world, I have laboured, both by precept and example, to influence mankind with becoming sentiments of such Divine excellences. Chappelow.

11. What is my strength, &c.] What evil can there be in my end? I see little hope of life, and have but little comfort in it to desire it; nor any hurt in death that I should dread it. Clark.

13. Is not my help in me? &c.] Do not think that my reason hath forsaken me, and that I do not understand myself. Bp. Patrick. This verse may be rendered, agreeably to the Hebrew, “What if I have no help in me,” that is, if I cannot help myself, if my outward condition be helpless and hopeless, as I confess it is, “is wisdom driven quite from me?” Have I therefore lost my understanding and common reason? Cannot I judge whether it is more desirable for me to live or die; whether I am an hypocrite or not; whether your words have truth and weight in them, or not; whether you take the right method in dealing with me; whether you deal mercifully and sincerely with me, or not? Poole.

14. To him that is afflicted &c.] The meaning is, they who treat a friend with such cruelty, will easily cast off the fear of God. Grotius. This verse yields an excellent moral instruction, very proper to introduce the reproof that follows. Scott.

15. — as a brook.] This simile is exquisitely beautiful, considered as a description of a scene of nature in the deserts of Arabia. But its principal beauty lies in the exact correspondence of all its parts to the thing it is intended to represent. The fulness, strength, and noise of these temporary streams in winter, answer to the large professions made by a man's friends in his prosperity; the drying up of the waters at the approach of summer, to the failure of their friendship in his affliction; and the confusion of the thirsty caravans, on finding the streams vanished, strongly illustrates his feelings on being disappointed of relief from their friendly counsels. Scott.

Though the metaphor from overflowing waters is very frequent in other sacred writers, yet the author of the book of Job never touches upon it but once or twice throughout the whole poem, and that very slightly, though the subject afforded him frequent ^{Before CHRIST about 1520.} 16 Which are blackish by reason of the ice, and wherein the snow is hid:

^{† Heb. they are cut off.} 17 What time they wax warm, † they vanish: † when it is hot, they are † consumed out of their place.

^{† Heb. in the heat thereof.} 18 The paths of their way are turned aside; they go to nothing, and perish.

^{† Heb. extinguish- ed.} 19 The troops of Tema looked, the companies of Sheba waited for them.

20 They were confounded because they had hoped; they came thither, and were ashamed.

^{|| Or, For now ye are like to them.} 21 || For now ye are † nothing; ye see my casting down, and are afraid.

^{Heb. to it.} 22 Did I say, Bring unto me? or, Give a reward for me of your substance?

^{† Heb. not.} 23 Or, Deliver me from the enemy's hand? or, Redeem me from the hand of the mighty?

24 Teach me, and I will hold my tongue: and cause me to understand wherein I have erred.

25 How forcible are right words! but what doth your arguing reprove?

opportunity to do so. Indeed a different face of nature presented itself to him, if, according to the opinion of several learned men, the book was written in some part of Arabia; an opinion rendered more probable by this remarkable comparison, in which Job likens his three friends to a deceitful torrent, which is manifestly taken from the dry and sandy places of Arabia, and adorned with many images peculiar to that country. Bp. Lenth.

The Arabians have several proverbial sayings concerning pretended false friendship. Some are taken from a pool which is filled by sudden hasty showers, and is extremely grateful to a thirsty traveller; but so deceitful, that, when he returns, he finds it quite exhausted. In the same manner they compare a treacherous friend to a torrent, or land flood, which is soon raised, and as soon disappears. Chappelow.

— brooks] Or torrents. The beds of those winter rivers are also called torrents: they are deep vallies between high rocks of granite. Bp. Pococke saw several of them perfectly dry in his journey to mount Sinai, in April. One in particular, which he passed through, was a quarter of a mile broad. Scott.

16. Which are blackish by reason of the ice,] These streams are first formed by the autumnal rains: the warmth and rains of the spring melting the ice and snow on the mountains increase them; they then rush down into the vallies in a large body of turbid water, and assume the appearance of deep rivers. Scott.

18. The paths of their way are turned aside;] Or, "they are shortened:" the currents run shorter and shorter, as the sun continues to beat on them, and their supplies from the mountains fail. Scott.

19. The troops of Tema looked, &c.] That is, the caravans of travellers and merchants: or the wandering Arabs, who lived in tents, may be here likewise understood, who removed with their cattle from one place to another, for the convenience of pasture and water. Chappelow. The road of the caravans, that went with merchandise from Arabia Felix to Egypt, lay through Arabia Petrea, Job's country. The yearly caravan, which goes from Grand Cairo to Mecca, in Arabia Felix, passes the same way. Scott.

The same thought is expressed, Jer. xiv. 2, 3. Peters.

21. For now ye are nothing; &c.] Job at length applies the similitude to his friends. I say this, he observes, because ye are now nothing; ye are of no service in assuaging my affliction, ye have deceived even the lowest expectation of relief, as a torrent, whose waters have passed away, frustrates the hopes of a thirsty traveller. Rosenmüller.

^{Before CHRIST about 1520.} 26 Do ye imagine to reprove words, and the speeches of one that is desperate, which are as wind?

27 Yea, † ye overwhelm the fatherless, and ye dig a pit for your friend. ^{† Heb. ye cause to fall upon.}

28 Now therefore be content, look upon me; for it is † evident unto you if I lie. ^{† Heb. before your face.}

29 Return, I pray you, let it not be iniquity; yea, return again, my righteousness is || in it. ^{|| That is, in this matter.}

30 Is there iniquity in my tongue? cannot † my taste discern perverse things? ^{† Heb. my palate.}

CHAP. VII.

1 Job excuseth his desire of death. 12 He complaineth of his own restlessness, 17 and God's watchfulness.

I S there not || an appointed time to man || upon earth? are not his days also like the days of an hireling? ^{|| Or, a warfare.}

2 As a servant † earnestly desireth the shadow, and as an hireling looketh for the reward of his work: ^{† Heb. gapeth after.}

3 So am I made to possess months of

26. Do ye imagine to reprove words, &c.] Do you imagine that all your arguments are solid and unanswerable, and all my answers but idle and empty words? Or, do you think it sufficient to cavil and quarrel with some of my words and expressions, without giving allowance for human infirmity, or for my extreme misery, which may easily force from me some unbecoming expressions? Poole.

27. Yea, ye overwhelm the fatherless,] That is, you overwhelm me who am a poor, destitute, helpless man, who have no friend, succour, or support. Caryl.

29. Return, I pray you, let it not be iniquity; &c.] Bethink yourselves of the wrong you have done me, and repent of it. Let me not be charged with sin and hypocrisy for what I have said. Think again, and better of it. I doubt not but upon farther consideration the righteousness of my cause and person will fully appear to you. Clark.

30. Is there iniquity in my tongue? &c.] See whether I utter any thing that is false; and whether I possess not a sound judgment to distinguish between right and wrong. Rosenmüller.

Chap. VII. ver. 1. Is there not an appointed time to man upon earth?] This question appears to mean, in general, that, whereas before the flood men lived many hundred years, and after the flood some held out a considerable time, yet now the general period of human life is determined by God to be much shorter. This passage, as well as that in chap. xiv. 5, has been applied to ill purposes, as if every particular man's time were so strictly assigned him by God, that nothing could lengthen or shorten it. But, as for particular persons, it does not hereby appear, that God has determined the time of their death by any absolute or unconditional decree; nor does such an interpretation seem consistent with the promises of long life to pious persons, where God sees best for them, and the threatenings of cutting off the lives of the wicked. See Prov. x. 27; Exod. xx. 12; Ps. lv. 23. Collyer.

— are not his days also like the days of an hireling?] Who has a set time for his painful service, and longs till night comes to put an end to it. Clark.

2. As a servant earnestly desireth the shadow,] Why may not I as passionately wish to see an end of life, as the slave in a hot day gasps for the refreshment of the shade; or the labourer longs for the evening when he may rest and be paid for his pains? Bp. Patrick.

3. So am I made &c.] As if Job had said, When the servant

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

vanity, and wearisome nights are appointed to me.

† Heb.
the evening
be re-measured?

4 When I lie down, I say, When shall I arise, and † the night be gone? and I am full of tossings to and fro unto the dawning of the day.

5 My flesh is clothed with worms and clods of dust; my skin is broken, and become loathsome.

* Ch. 16. 22.

Ps. 90. 6.
& 102. 11.
& 103. 15.
& 144. 4.
Is. 40. 6.
James 4. 14.

6 ^a My days are swifter than a weaver's shuttle, and are spent without hope.

7 O remember that my life is wind: mine eye † shall no more || see good.

† Heb. shall not return.

8 The eye of him that hath seen me shall see me no more: thine eyes are upon me, and || I am not.

† To see, that is, to enjoy.

† That is,
I can live
no longer.

9 As the cloud is consumed and vanisheth away: so he that goeth down to the grave shall come up no more.

10 He shall return no more to his house, neither shall his place know him any more.

11 Therefore I will not refrain my hath wrought all day and is weary, he can lie down at night quietly and rest himself; but alas, the night is as troublesome and laborious to me as the day: when the hireling hath laboured and taken pains, he receives his reward at evening; but my wages are months of vanity, and my rewards are nights of trouble. Caryl.

4. When I lie down, &c.] Two medical writers of antiquity, Aræteus and Celsus, mention dreams as attending on the elephantiasis, and describe them to be such as disturb the rest. Rosenmüller.

5. My flesh is clothed with worms &c.] What a tragical object is here presented to our view! a living corpse. Maundrell, in his description of the ten lepers whom he saw at Sichem in the Holy Land, remarks, "The whole distemper indeed, as it there appeared, was so noisome, that it might well pass for the corruption of the human body on this side the grave." Scott.

— my skin is broken,] That is, cracked and peeled off. Michaelis observes from the ancient physicians, that in the elephantiasis the skin in some places laps over, in others it chaps. Parkhurst.

6. My days are swifter than a weaver's shuttle,] All my happy days are run away in a moment, and there is no hope that I shall recover them. Bp. Patrick.

7. O remember that my life is wind,] The same sentiment occurs in Ps. lxxviii. 39, "For He remembered that they were but flesh; a wind that passeth away, and cometh not again." Rosenmüller.

9, 10. As the cloud is consumed &c.] When Job saith he shall "come up no more," it is not a denial of a dying man's resurrection to life, but of his restitution to the same life; therefore he adds, ver. 10, "he shall return no more to his house:" he doth not say absolutely "he shall return no more," but "he shall return no more to his house." Caryl.

11. Therefore I will not refrain my mouth; &c.] Since there is no hope that my condition shall be better in this world, I will therefore give some vent to the extremity of my sorrow by my complaints. Clark.

12. Am I a sea, or a whale, &c.] Job exclaims against his afflictions, as having neither so fierce and intractable a spirit as to require, nor so much strength as to bear, these severe assaults. Schultens.

Am I a sea,] The Nile is probably meant, which is called a sea in Is. xxvii. 1; Ezek. xxxii. 2; and, as Michaelis observes, in the Koran. The daily increase of the Nile is made the subject of a mouth; I will speak in the anguish of my ^{Before} spirit; I will complain in the bitterness of ^{CHRIST} about 1520. my soul.

12 Am I a sea, or a whale, that thou settest a watch over me?

13 When I say, My bed shall comfort me, my couch shall ease my complaint;

14 Then thou scarest me with dreams, and terrifiest me through visions:

15 So that my soul chooseth strangling, and death rather † than my life.

† Heb. than my bones.

16 I loathe it; I would not live alway: let me alone; for my days are vanity.

17 ^b What is man, that thou shouldest magnify him? and that thou shouldest set ^{Ps. 8. 4.} ^{& 144. 3.} thine heart upon him? ^{Hebr. 2. 6.}

18 And that thou shouldest visit him every morning, and try him every moment?

19 How long wilt thou not depart from me, nor let me alone till I swallow down my spittle?

kind of proclamation at Cairo: and should it be more or less than so many cubits, it would create a publick alarm. When it over-spreads its proper limits, it does great damage, by carrying away large portions of its banks, sometimes towns and villages. The sense may be, Am I an inundation, that thou settest a watch about me? Script. illust. Expos. Ind.

— or a whale, &c.] Probably the creature here intended is the crocodile, which is watched wherever its haunts are known; as there have been melancholy instances of its seizing dogs, cattle, and even women, who going to draw water have ventured too much into the river. In such cases, no doubt, the adjacent inhabitants would watch with great anxiety the motions of so terrible a neighbour. Am I a crocodile, that thou settest a watch for me? Script. illust. Expos. Ind.

In this view how forcible is the complaint of Job, that God had dealt with him as men do with crocodiles; watching them with great attention, falling upon them with repeated blows, and giving not over until they have destroyed them. Harmer.

13. See ver. 4.

15. So that my soul chooseth strangling, &c.] So that, if I had my free choice, my soul would wish to end my sorrow by a violent death, rather than to linger thus in continual torment. Bp. Hall.

So that my soul chooseth — death rather than my life.] Or, literally, "rather than my bones," as in the margin: that is, than life in such a skeleton-like body, so emaciated by my distemper. "Bones" denote the remains of a dead body, Gen. i. 25. Parkhurst.

16. I loathe it; I would not live alway:] My life is a burden to me, I would not live long; I would rather be cut off in the midst of my days, than live to the end of them. Caryl.

17. What is man, that thou shouldest magnify him?] Why should the great, the powerful, the glorious God, contend with weak, miserable, vain man? How unequal is this match! Caryl.

18. And that thou shouldest visit him every morning,] Why shouldest Thou send new afflictions on him every morning; nay, try his strength and courage every moment? Bp. Patrick.

19. How long wilt thou not depart from me,] Must I endure fatigue and trouble to such an excess as to hope for no intermission? Shall my spirits be quite spent and exhausted without being allowed time to take my breath? Chappelow.

— nor let me alone till I swallow down my spittle?] This is

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

20 I have sinned; what shall I do unto thee, O thou preserver of men? why hast thou set me as a mark against thee, so that I am a burden to myself?

21 And why dost thou not pardon my transgression, and take away mine iniquity? for now shall I sleep in the dust; and thou shalt seek me in the morning, but I shall not be.

CHAP. VIII.

1 Bildad sheweth God's justice in dealing with men according to their works. 8 He alledgeth antiquity to prove the certain destruction of the hypocrite. 20 He applieth God's just dealing to Job.

THEN answered Bildad the Shuhite, and said,

2 How long wilt thou speak these things? and how long shall the words of thy mouth be like a strong wind?

^a Deut. 32. 3 ^a Doth God pervert judgment? or doth the Almighty pervert justice?

⁴ 2 Chron. 19. 7. 4 If thy children have sinned against him, and he have cast them away † for their transgression;

5 ^b If thou wouldest seek unto God sometimes, and make thy supplication to the Almighty;

6 If thou wert pure and upright; surely now he would awake for thee, and make the habitation of thy righteousness prosperous.

7 Though thy beginning was small, yet thy latter end should greatly increase.

8 ^c For enquire, I pray thee, of the former age, and prepare thyself to the search of their fathers:

9 (For ^d we are but of yesterday, and know † nothing, because our days upon earth are a shadow:)

10 Shall not they teach thee, and tell thee, and utter words out of their heart?

11 Can the rush grow up without mire? can the flag grow without water?

12 ^e Whilst it is yet in his greenness, and not cut down, it withereth before any other herb.

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

† Heb. in the hand of their transgression.

^b Chap. 22. 23.

^c Deut. 4. 32.

^d Secch. 7. 6. Gen. 47. 9. 1 Chron. 29. 15.

Ps. 144. 14. & 39. 5.

† Heb. not.

^e Ps. 129. 6. Jer. 17. 6.

now a proverbial expression among the Arabs, and signifies the same as "give me time to breathe." Dr. Durell.

20. I have sinned; what shall I do unto thee,] Job having in the former part of this chapter contended with his friends, and expostulated the matter with God, now turns himself to another posture, even to humble his soul, and make confession of his sin. He had justified himself against the accusations of men, but now he accuses and judges himself in the presence of God. Caryl.

— why hast thou set me as a mark against thee,] A mark to intercept Thy arrows upon my breast, so that I know not what to do, I am so burdensome to myself. Hence we may remark, that what presses and burdens the soul above all, is the apprehension that God is against us. Caryl.

21. And why dost thou not pardon my transgression,] Why dost Thou not remove the punishment of my transgression? if Thou dost not come speedily to help me, it will be too late. Clark.

— for now shall I sleep in the dust;] For now I am dying; and when that event is past, if Thou wouldest make farther use of me, for the manifesting of Thy power and my patience, I shall not be at all. Bp. Hall.

In this chapter we are reminded of the vanity and shortness of human life, and of the numerous miseries to which man is here exposed. This truth Job teaches us, when he says, "that there is a kind of warfare appointed to man upon earth;" and when he sets before us his own example, and the greatness of his sufferings. If such is our condition in this world, and Job, a man so holy and so acceptable to God, was treated thus, we ought not to set our hearts too much upon things here below, nor be surprised if God exposes us to divers afflictions; we should rather consider, that He does all in goodness and wisdom; that He sends afflictions to make us sensible of the vanity of this life, and to wean us from the world; and therefore that it is our duty to submit with humility to His will, to acknowledge our unworthiness, and to intreat that He will consider our weakness, and pardon our sins. Ostervall.

Chap. VIII. Bildad infers, from the justice of God, that chastisement implies guilt, and that one is as surely the consequence of the other, as effects in the natural world are inseparable from their causes. This position, he says, was not a discovery of yesterday; it had been uniformly maintained by wise men through all ages past. Job therefore must have been guilty. His children had perished because they acknowledged not their sins: but Job might yet be restored, if he confessed his evil doings, and asked pardon for them. Bp. Stock.

Ver. 2. How long wilt thou speak these things?] This is the first time of Bildad's speaking. There is something peculiar in the manner of his address, which is sudden, passionate, and without preface. Chappelow.

— a strong wind?] Boisterous and violent, swelling and furious, opposing all persons and things that stand in thy way. Poole. The meaning of the verse is, Why dost thou persist to talk in this manner, and with such vehemence expostulate with God? Bp. Patrick.

4. If thy children have sinned against him,] Though 'tis true thy children are destroyed, yet thou art still in a capacity to receive mercy, if thou seekest to God for it, and desistest from those causeless and unthankful complaints. Clark.

8—13. For enquire, I pray thee, &c.] This natural and beautiful comparison appears plainly, by the way of introducing it, to have been a proverbial saying delivered down from their forefathers, and perhaps taught them from their cradles, "Enquire, I pray thee, of the former age, &c." Have not they then transmitted to thee this wise lesson? that as the rush cannot grow up without mire, nor the flag without water, so neither can any thing flourish or prosper long without the blessing of Almighty God: and how should the ungodly or hypocrite expect His blessing? One scarcely knows which to admire most, the piety of the sentiment, or the elegance and justness of the comparison. Peters.

11. Can the rush grow up without mire?] The word rendered "rush," is probably the papyrus, which, having been anciently manufactured for the purpose of writing on, has given name to our paper. It grows in marshy grounds; formerly in great plenty in the canals of the Nile, where it is now scarce; but, according to Bruce, it abounds in the waters of Abyssinia. Script. illust. Expos. Ind. Lucan describes the papyrus by the epithet "bibulus," drinking, soaking, thirsty: which corresponds with great exactness to the nature of the plant, and to its Hebrew name, derived from its remarkably supping up the water in which it grows, according to this passage in Job. It is the same plant of which Moses's ark was made, Exod. ii. 3. The "flag," next spoken of, appears to be a sort of reed, described by Hasselquist as growing near the Nile. Parkhurst.

12. — it withereth before any other herb.] These marsh vege-

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.
† Chap. 11.
20. & 18.
14.
Ps. 112, 10.
Prov. 10.
23.
† Heb.
a spider's
house.

13 So are the paths of all that forget God; and the 'hypocrite's hope shall perish:

14 Whose hope shall be cut off, and whose trust shall be † a spider's web.

15 He shall lean upon his house, but it shall not stand: he shall hold it fast, but it shall not endure.

16 He is green before the sun, and his branch shooteth forth in his garden.

17 His roots are wrapped about the heap, and seeth the place of stones.

18 If he destroy him from his place, then it shall deny him, saying, I have not seen thee.

19 Behold, this is the joy of his way, and out of the earth shall others grow.

tables required a great deal of water: when they were not supplied with their usual moisture, they perished sooner than any other plants. What a just image is this of transient prosperity! Scott.

13. So are the paths of all that forget God; &c.] We may observe, that they who forget God shall quickly wither, how great and flourishing soever they are. Caryl.

Though this be true, yet it was wrong in its application to Job. Bp. Wilson.

14. Whose hope shall be cut off, &c.] A proverbial expression. The same occurs Isaiah lix. 5, "they weave the spider's web." Grotius.

— a spider's web.] Wrought indeed with great labour, but so thin, that the texture of it is easily broken and dissolved. See Is. lix. 5. In the Koran, Infidels, that is, those who do not believe in Mahomet, but particularly Christians, are compared to a spider, which prepareth a house; but verily, it is there said, "a spider's house is the weakest of all houses, did they, the Infidels, but know or consider it." Chappelon.

15. He shall lean upon his house, but it shall not stand:] He may fancy his family to be so great and potent that it will support him; but it shall fall as well as himself: he may endeavour to keep it up by strong alliances, but to no purpose. Bp. Patrick.

16—18. He is green before the sun, &c.] The hypocrite was first compared to a rush, secondly to a spider's web, but now to a goodly tree. This third similitude grants the hypocrite the best of his condition, and puts him in the fairest posture that can be imagined, and yet all proves nought: his root is but rottenness, and his blossom shall go up as the dust, or his branches shall be cut down, and his root stubbed up. Caryl.

17. His roots are wrapped about the heap,] The heap of stones; this denotes his thriving against all opposition: heaps of stones are hindrances to the growing of a tree, to the rooting of it; therefore we set or plant trees in places free from stones: but to shew that he may even overcome, conquer, and subdue those difficulties which hinder his growth, it is here said, that his roots are wrapped about the stones: he grows in places of greatest disadvantage. Or the words may signify the firmness and the seeming strength of his standing. He is rooted, not in some loose and sandy earth, or in tougher clay, but his roots are wrapped about a heap of stones. Caryl.

— about the heap,] Or, "about a spring," so our translators render the original word in Cant. iv. 12. It seems to allude to a plant, throwing out suckers by the water side. "The place of stones" is, in the original, "the house of stones," which is a Hebrew idiom for strong ground. "Seeing the place of stones" is an animated phrase for growing in a strong soil. Scott.

— and seeth the place of stones.] That is, he lives, abides, converses or dwells even where there seems to be the least probability of his stay; he stayeth in the place of stones. Caryl.

18. If he destroy him &c.] That is, if God shall put forth

20 Behold, God will not cast away a perfect man, neither will he † help the evil doers:

21 Till he fill thy mouth with laughing, and thy lips with † rejoicing.

22 They that hate thee shall be clothed with shame; and the dwelling place of the wicked † shall come to nought.

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.
† Heb.
take the un-godly by the hand.
† Heb. shouting for joy.
† Heb. shall not be.

CHAP. IX.

1 Job, acknowledging God's justice, sheweth there is no contending with him. 22 Man's innocency is not to be condemned by afflictions.

THEN Job answered and said,
2 I know it is so of a truth: but how should a man be just || with God? ^{a Ps. 143.2.}
|| Or, before God.

His hand, and touch him, he shall be forgotten. Bp. Wilson.

Mr. Heath justly refers this action to the sun, mentioned ver. 16. The plant endureth the sun, so long as the spring, that nourisheth its roots, continueth to flow; but when that is dried by the increasing heat, his parching beams destroy the plant. Scott.

— it shall deny him,] His place shall deny him. Rosenmüller. This is a strong manner of expressing utter abolition. The figure is a bold personification. Scott. Compare Ps. ciii. 16.

19. Behold, this is the joy of his way,] This is that firm and secure happiness which he promised to himself in this life. Bildad, with keen irony, calls the destruction of the hypocrite "the joy of his way." Capellus.

— others grow.] Other plants shall succeed to his place: that is, his estate shall pass into another family. Scott.

20, 21. Behold, God will not cast away &c.] The meaning is, If you are what you pretend to be, God will certainly restore you to your former happy state. Bp. Wilson.

The whole passage may be connected thus: God will not befriend the hypocrite, but will rather destroy him, and not desist till he has granted to thee such a restoration as shall cause thee to break out into shouts of joy. Rosenmüller.

21. — thy mouth] This sudden turn of the style to the second person is spirited, and catches the attention by surprise. See Bishop Lowth's note on Dent. xxxii. 5. "The mouth being filled with laughter," denotes that smile of joy which is spread over the countenance in some happy change of condition, Psal. cxxvi. 2. Scott.

It is perfectly true, as Bildad here observes, that God is just and wise in all His dispensations; that He is gracious to those who diligently seek Him; and that the wicked always feel the effects of His wrath. Still it is not to be believed that the righteous are never afflicted: and though Bildad's observations be generally true, yet he was hasty and rash in concluding that Job was not acceptable to God, because he was in adversity. God often exposes good men to very great evils, in order to try them, and to make them examples to others; though after all, according to the remark of Bildad, "He will not cast away a perfect man." Ostervald.

Chap. IX, X. The unkind speech of Bildad, the obvious charges of irreligion and hypocrisy, and the taunting irony with which it concludes, overpowered the patience of Job, and in his reply betray him into inconsistencies; at one time he acknowledges the Divine justice, and his own submission to its decrees; at another he seems to arraign it, and complains rather impatiently of his sufferings, as greater than he deserved, and wishes for a public trial before God with his calumniators, to clear his innocence before his speedy death. Dr. Hales.

Chap. IX. ver. 2. I know it is so of a truth:] Job alludes here to

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

3 If he will contend with him, he cannot answer him one of a thousand.

4 He is wise in heart, and mighty in strength: who hath hardened himself against him, and hath prospered?

5 Which removeth the mountains, and they know not: which overturneth them in his anger.

6 Which shaketh the earth out of her place, and the pillars thereof tremble.

^b Gen. 1. 6.
† Heb.
heights.

7 Which commandeth the sun, and it riseth not; and sealeth up the stars.

^c Amos 5. 8.
chap. 38.
31, &c.
† Heb.
Ash, Cesil,
and Cimah.

8 ^b Which alone spreadeth out the heavens, and treadeth upon the [†]waves of the sea.

9 ^c Which maketh [†]Arcturus, Orion, the oracle urged against him by Eliphaz, chap. iv. 17, which he thinks totally irrelevant to the present question. I never thought, he says, of charging God with injustice. I was well aware that no injustice could attach to Him. And how could man be just before his Maker? Who denies that the Deity possesses the right of inflicting, if it please Him, severe sufferings on frail and corrupt man? But does it follow from hence, that I am wicked, or a crafty pretender to piety? Roscnmüller.

3. — one of a thousand.] It would be better expressed thus, “once in a thousand times.” Dr. Durell.

“How should man be just with God?” How should he justify himself before God? No, not in one thing of a thousand that might be objected against him. Bp. Wilson.

Though the uncharitableness and reproaches of Job's friends transported him into some passionate and bold expressions of his own innocence and integrity; yet he no sooner perceived that they took advantage of those expressions to charge him with presumption, as if God had unjustly afflicted him, but he made haste to free himself of that imputation. “How should a man be just with God?” even he who is best prepared for an account with Him, can pay Him nothing but His own coin; and that rather laid up in a napkin, than husbanded and employed as it ought to have been. If he can offer Him a good thought, an honest purpose and intention, he had received them from Him, and, it may be, wanted courage to improve and execute them; and so the world had no more fruit of them, than if his heart had been as wicked as his neighbour's. So that, when he hath said the best he can for himself, there will be no abiding the judgment which must still be deprecated; mercy must be implored; no satisfaction or payment pretended; but an entire release and pardon begged and relied upon. Lord Clarendon.

5, 6. Which removeth the mountains, — overturneth them — shaketh the earth out of her place,] This is evidently a description of an earthquake. During the terrible earthquake at Jamaica, 1692, the mountains were split, they opened, they closed again, they leaped, they fell in heaps. The same prodigious motions attended the earthquakes during an eruption of Vesuvius. Scott, Script. illust. Expos. Ind.

7. Which commandeth the sun, and it riseth not; and sealeth up the stars.] Or forbiddeth them to appear. Bp. Hall. This may refer to that thickness of the atmosphere, which occasionally precedes or accompanies an earthquake. Of this we have many instances. Scott, Script. illust. Expos. Ind.

8. Which alone spreadeth out the heavens, &c.] “Who boweth the heavens;” so Psalm xviii. 9, where, as Scott remarks, is a description at large of the scene, which is here drawn in miniature. Bp. Stock.

By “bowing the heavens,” the Hebrew poets express the descent of those black heavy clouds, charged with thunder, lightning, rain, and wind, that are the prelude of a storm at sea. The storm and Pleiades, and the chambers of the south. Before CHRIST

about 1520.

10 ^d Which doeth great things past finding out; yea, and wonders without number. ^d Ch. 5. 9.

11 Lo, he goeth by me, and I see him not: he passeth on also, but I perceive him not.

12 ^e Behold, he taketh away, [†]who can hinder him? who will say unto him, What doest thou? ^e Isai. 45. 9.
Jer. 18. 6.
Rom. 9. 20.
† Heb. who can turn him away?
† Heb. helpers of pride, or strength.

13 If God will not withdraw his anger, the [†]proud helpers do stoop under him.

14 How much less shall I answer him, and choose out my words to reason with him?

itself, and the power of the Deity in conducting it, are represented in the next member of the period. Scott.

— alone] This word is not superfluous: it asserts the unity of God, in opposition to polytheism. Scott.

— treadeth upon the waves] In the original, as the margin notices, “the high places,” or “heights.” Our translators render it “high places” of the earth, Deut. xxxii. 13; that is, the mountains. “The high places,” or “heights,” of the sea, must therefore mean its billows, rising to a vast height in a storm. The prodigious swell, agitation, and tumult of the sea during an earthquake may be referred to here. Scott.

9. Which maketh &c.] Shepherds seem to have been the first astronomers. The pastoral life of the Arabs led them very early to observe the rising and setting of the stars, in relation to the changes of weather that ensued. The heat of their climate obliged them to feed their flocks by night; and the clearness and beauty of their nocturnal sky drew their attention and admiration. Scott.

When he saith, “which maketh Arcturus, &c.” Job means, which makes them appear, or do their office: for the discourse is not about Creation, but about Providence: so that the meaning is only this, God orders the times of their rising and setting, to distinguish the seasons of the year, and to produce their several effects in every season. Caryl. He ordereth and disposeth them, as the word “maketh” is sometimes used in Scripture. Poole.

No doubt but the names Arcturus, Orion, and Pleiades, are of late invention in comparison with the Hebrew, Ash, Cesil, and Cimah. It must be a fruitless attempt for any one to ascertain the exact meaning of the Hebrew; it can at the best be only conjecture. After all the ingenious, studied thoughts of commentators, no more perhaps is intended by Arcturus, Orion, &c. than to point out to us, as Bishop Patrick writes, that all the constellations of heaven obey God in their several seasons; both those which we see, and those in the other hemisphere. To the same purpose is that which St. Jerome, or rather Venerable Bede, delivers in his comment on this text: “By these constellations, which are more celebrated than almost all the stars in the firmament of heaven, it is signified, that the whole system of the heavenly bodies is under the governance of God.” Chappelow.

11. Lo, he goeth by me, and I see him not:] A description of the inscrutable and often unobserved ways of Providence. Michaelis.

12. Behold, he taketh away, who can hinder him?] Who shall say unto him, What doest thou? Whatsoever God resolveth and determineth concerning us, we must bear it, and quietly submit. Caryl.

13. — the proud helpers do stoop under him.] They who are so highly conceited of themselves, that they will undertake to defend him whom God intends to destroy, Isaiah xxx. 7. Clark.

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

15 Whom, though I were righteous, yet would I not answer, but I would make supplication to my judge.

16 If I had called, and he had answered me; yet would I not believe that he had hearkened unto my voice.

17 For he breaketh me with a tempest, and multiplieth my wounds without cause.

18 He will not suffer me to take my breath, but filleth me with bitterness.

19 If I speak of strength, lo, he is strong: and if of judgment, who shall set me a time to plead?

20 If I justify myself, mine own mouth shall condemn me: if I say, I am perfect, it shall also prove me perverse.

21 Though I were perfect, yet would I not know my soul: I would despise my life.

22 This is one thing, therefore I said it, He destroyeth the perfect and the wicked.

23 If the scourge slay suddenly, he will laugh at the trial of the innocent.

24 The earth is given into the hand of the wicked: he covereth the faces of the judges thereof; if not, where, and who is he?

25 Now my days are swifter than a post: they flee away, they see no good.

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

15. Whom, though I were righteous, &c.] Job here opposes this sentiment of his to the unjust charges of his friends, as if he was guilty of contumacy and perverseness against God. Schultens.

16. If I had called, &c.] Rather, "But if I should call, that He might answer me, I could not easily believe that He would hear my voice: 17. Since He hath broken me with a tempest, and inflicted many wounds upon me without cause: 18. Nor hath given me space to take my breath, so hath He killed me with bitterness." Houbigant.

17. — without cause.] Without any extraordinary guilt which should procure such punishment. Clark. "Without cause;" that is, a cause known to me. Bp. Wilson.

19. — who shall set me a time to plead?] Who will, or can, appoint me a time? namely, for trial. Who can sit as judge between God and me? Parkhurst.

The meaning of the verse is, If I think to right myself by force, it is in vain; for He is infinitely stronger than I: if I choose to decide our dispute by law, who hath authority to call us before him? Heath.

20. If I justify myself, &c.] If I should justify myself there would be something in my very plea to condemn me: it will render my cause worse to pretend I am innocent. Bp. Patrick.

Job here teaches us, that man cannot be justified before God: that if the Lord should enter into judgment with him, he could not "answer him one of a thousand;" and that sinful men, however treated, have no right to complain; but must all be condemned in God's presence, and implore His mercy. What Job here says, shews, that though he insisted he was not a wicked man, he did not pretend to be just before God. We ought all to entertain the same thoughts; continually and seriously to reflect upon these truths; and thereby animate ourselves to the fear of God, submitting to His will, and putting our trust in Him. Ostervald.

21. Though I were perfect, &c.] Although I were not conscious of any transgression, still I would not judge myself, 1 Cor. iv. 3, 4. Grotius.

I would not attempt my justification in His presence: but if He have determined my death, would willingly surrender my life into His hands. Bp. Hall.

22. This is one thing, &c.] All that I affirm is this, and I persist in the opinion, that He lets the innocent suffer sad things as well as the guilty. Bp. Patrick.

Thus in time of plague or famine all suffer. Bp. Wilson.

23. If the scourge slay suddenly, he will laugh at the trial of the innocent.] Or, it will laugh; namely, the scourge. So Schultens. The figure is bold, but not too bold for poetry. Peters. By the scourge is meant public calamities, war, for instance, pestilence, &c.; which involving all characters in one common destruction, are said, by a noble personifying figure, to "laugh" at the sufferings of the innocent. Scott.

Or the sense may be, When a plague comes, which kills in a moment, He, namely God, regards not though it fall upon the innocent. Bp. Patrick. If some common and deadly judgment falls upon a people, so as to destroy both good and bad; or if God inflicts some grievous and unexpected stroke upon an innocent person; His outward carriage is the same both to the good and to the wicked. He neglects the innocent, and seems not to answer their prayers, and suffers them to perish with others, as if He took pleasure in their ruin also. But at the same time Job intimates the cause of God's complacency in the afflictions of the innocent, because to them they are but "trials" of their faith, and patience, and perseverance, tending to God's honour, and their own eternal advantage. Poole.

24. The earth is given into the hand of the wicked: &c.] Is not the government of the world given often into the hands of wicked men, who bribe and pervert justice, and thereby injure the innocent? Bp. Wilson.

Job pursues his argument. The truth of what I have said, that the good and bad suffer promiscuously, is evident from this, that "the earth is given into the hand of the wicked." Rosenmüller.

And as He destroys the righteous, ver. 23, so He prospers the wicked. He blinds them that they cannot discern right from wrong. If it be not as I say, where is any one else that could do so? certainly none else could manage the affairs of the world after this manner but He. Clark.

— he covereth the faces of the judges thereof;] Not that God is any way instrumental in covering the faces of the judges; in making them pass a wrong and unjust sentence. "He covereth &c." is the same thing in Scripture phrase, as, the faces of the judges are covered. Chappelow.

"The judges," being in contrast here with the wicked, that is, a tyrannical ruler, must mean good governors, who administer justice impartially to all. Thus "a man" signifies one who has the virtues proper to the male sex, Eccles. vii. 28; see also Prov. xxviii. 12: "a woman," one who is adorned with the qualities becoming the female sex, Prov. xxxi. 10: and "a king" is a king indeed, who acteth worthy of his royal dignity, Prov. xvi. 10. Of these good rulers he says, God "covereth their faces;" that is, God treats them as condemned malefactors, overwhelming them in calamities, disgrace, and ruin; Job himself being one example of this melancholy truth. See 2 Sam. xv. 30; Esth. vii. 8; Jer. xiv. 3; Isa. xxii. 17; Mic. iii. 7; Mark xiv. 65. Scott.

25. Now my days &c.] This and the following verse are a confirmation of Job's former argument. As he had shewed in general that the wicked are exalted, and the innocent afflicted, so now he shews the latter branch from his own experience or example. "My days," that is, my prosperous days, are gone in a moment. Caryl.

— swifter than a post:] A messenger or regulated courier, appointed to carry with expedition despatches of princes, or letters of private persons. Calmét.

Those who carried despatches sometimes rode dromedaries, a sort of camel which is extremely swift. Lady Montague says, "that after the defeat at Peterwaradin, they far outran the swiftest horses, and brought the first news of the battle at Belgrade."

Before CHRIST about 1520. 26 They are passed away as the † || swift ships: as the eagle that hasteth to the prey.

† Heb. ships of desire. || Or. ships of Ebeh. 27 If I say, I will forget my complaint, I will leave off my heaviness, and comfort myself:

28 I am afraid of all my sorrows, I know that thou wilt not hold me innocent.

29 If I be wicked, why then labour I in vain?

30 If I wash myself with snow water, and make my hands never so clean;

|| Or. make me to be abhorred. 31 Yet shalt thou plunge me in the ditch, and mine own clothes shall || abhor me.

32 For he is not a man, as I am, that I should answer him, and we should come together in judgment.

† Heb. one that should argue. || Or. umpire. 33 Neither is there † any || daysman betwixt us, that might lay his hand upon us both.

Agreeably to this, Dr. Shaw assures us, that the sheik who conducted him to mount Sinai, and rode on a camel of this kind, would depart from the caravan where he was, "reconnoitre another just in view, and return in less than a quarter of an hour." With what energy then might Job say, "My days are swifter than a post!" Instead of passing away with a slowness of motion like that of a caravan, my days of prosperity have disappeared with the swiftness of a messenger carrying despatches, mounted on a dromedary. Harmer.

26. — as the swift ships: &c.] There are but two places in the book of Job, that I remember, where there is any allusion to navigation. One is the present passage, where Job compares the course of human life, and the rapidity with which it passes, to "the swift ships;" (swiftest ships, most excellent for sailing. Houbigant.) Or, as in the margin, "ships of desire;" that is, such as are longed for, and long to be at their destined port, and crowd all the sail they can for that purpose. Peters. Or, "ships of Ebeh," (see the margin,) that is, of the Egyptian papyrus, which seems here to be meant, the woody part of which was anciently used to build vessels with. Parkhurst.

Schultens very ingeniously suggests, that Job compares the days of his prosperity in three several degrees with what we esteem the swiftest in the three elements: namely, with the quick despatches of the post by land; with the more expeditious motion of papyr-vessels by sea; and, which exceeds them both for swiftness, with the flight of the eagle in the air to his prey. Chappelow.

27. If I say, I will forget my complaint, &c.] These words contain a proof of the latter part of Job's assumption. He had affirmed, that an innocent and righteous person may quickly lose all his outward comforts; now he proves that he may be entangled with afflictions beyond hope of escape. This he does, ver. 27 — 29, which he amplifies, ver. 30 and 31. Caryl.

28. I am afraid of all my sorrows,] That is, I no sooner endeavour to comfort myself, but presently my sorrows throng about me; they charge and assault me afresh, when I am purposing to make an escape from them. Caryl.

— I know that thou wilt not hold me innocent.] That Thou wilt not deliver me, as an innocent man, from these sufferings, but wilt afflict me, without measure, as a guilty person. Rosenmüller.

29. If I be wicked, why then labour I in vain?] If I must be condemned as a wicked man, say what I can for myself, then it is in vain for me to endeavour to clear myself, and maintain my own innocence. Clark.

34 Let him take his rod away from me, and let not his fear terrify me:

35 Then would I speak, and not fear him; † but it is not so with me.

Before CHRIST about 1520.

† Heb. but I am not so with myself.

CHAP. X.

1 Job, taking liberty of complaint, expostulateth with God about his afflictions. 18 He complaineth of life, and craveth a little ease before death.

MY soul is || weary of my life; I will || Or. leave my complaint upon myself; I will speak in the bitterness of my soul. † Heb. cut off while I live.

2 I will say unto God, Do not condemn me; shew me wherefore thou contendest with me.

3 Is it good unto thee that thou shouldst oppress, that thou shouldest despise † the work of thine hands, and shine upon the counsel of the wicked? † Heb. the labour of thine hands.

4 Hast thou eyes of flesh? or seest thou as man seeth?

30. — with snow water,] Which is thought to possess the property of cleansing in a greater degree than other water. Rosenmüller.

31. Yet shalt thou plunge me in the ditch,] Thou wilt adjudge me sinful, notwithstanding all my purifyings. Caryl. Though I may seem innocent to myself, and may defend my own cause, yet before God I shall appear most unclean and unrighteous, as if I were plunged into a miry ditch. External things are used figuratively for internal; impurity of body for impurity of soul. See Zech. iii. 3, 4; Rev. vii. 13. Poole.

33. — daysman] Or umpire. In some of the northern parts of England, any arbitrator, umpire, or elected judge, is commonly termed a diestman or daysman. The word "day" in all idioms signifies judgment. Dr. Hammond.

— that might lay his hand upon us both.] "The laying the hand, like a just umpire, on both parties," implies a coercive power to enforce the execution of his decrees: this no one could have on the Almighty; it was therefore vain to contend with Him. Heath, Scott.

34, 35. Let him take his rod &c.] I would open my case, if, while I am speaking, God would remove from me that dominion and authority, which He possesses over me, or that sore affliction which His sovereign power has laid upon me: but "it is not so with me;" I do not find that the Lord hath done any of these things for me. Caryl, Poole.

Chap. X. Job having in the former chapter justified God in afflicting him, and maintained his own integrity, notwithstanding those afflictions, now remonstrates with greater earnestness, that he conceived himself more hardly dealt with than was consistent not only with the goodness of God in His nature, but with that goodness which He had formerly shewn both towards others and towards himself. Caryl.

Ver. 1. — I will leave my complaint upon myself;] I will leave my complaint unrestrained, I will give free scope to it. Rosenmüller.

2. — Do not condemn me; &c.] Do not deal with me as a wicked wretch, and such as my friends take me to be; but acquit me from this censure by withdrawing Thy hand, or shewing me for what great sin it is that I should be more heavily afflicted than others. Clark.

3. — shine upon the counsel of the wicked?] Countenance the reasons and designs of evil men. Bp. Patrick.

4—7. Hast thou eyes of flesh? &c.] Job proceeds upon the same argument, and as he acquits the Lord of injustice or un-

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

5 Are thy days as the days of man? are thy years as man's days,

6 That thou enquirest after mine iniquity, and searchest after my sin?

† Heb. It is upon thy knowledge.

7 † Thou knowest that I am not wicked; and there is none that can deliver out of thine hand.

† Heb. took pains about me.

8 Thine hands † have made me and fashioned me together round about; yet thou dost destroy me.

9 Remember, I beseech thee, that thou hast made me as the clay; and wilt thou bring me into dust again?

* Psal. 159.
14, 15, 16.

10 ^a Hast thou not poured me out as milk, and curdled me like cheese?

† Heb.
hedged.

11 Thou hast clothed me with skin and flesh, and hast † fenced me with bones and sinews.

12 Thou hast granted me life and favour, and thy visitation hath preserved my spirit.

righteous dealing with him, so he appeals to the Lord, (who was able, he knew, to do it upon certain knowledge,) to acquit him of all the unjust charges with which his friends had burdened him: It is not with thee, O Lord, as with mortal judges, who, having "eyes of flesh," can see no farther than the outside of things, and know no more than is told them. "Thy days are not as the days of man." Why then dost Thou deal thus severely with me, as if Thou wert afraid that Thou shouldest overslip Thy day, or want a season for dealing with me? Thou knowest that I am not wicked; there is some other cause for my sufferings: shew me wherefore Thou contendest with me. We may hence observe, that God knows the state of every man and every thing exactly; and that it is a matter of highest consolation to good men to remember that God knows them. Caryl.

7. Thou knowest that I am not wicked; &c.] That is, flagitious. Houbigant. It would be injurious to the character of Job, should we interpret in a severe and rigorous sense, as it is certain his friends too often did, his frequent protestations of his innocence, and his bold appeals to the supreme Judge to prove and try him; for where he is thus strenuous in asserting his integrity, it is only in opposition to the notion which those mistaken friends had entertained of him; namely, that he had been guilty of some gross sins, which he had the art to hide from the world, but that he was in reality a wicked man, and a hypocrite in his behaviour. This is what Job utterly denies and disclaims; though he no where arrogates to himself perfect innocence, or freedom from sin. Peters.

8—13. Thine hands have made me &c.] At ver. 3 of this chapter we found Job questioning with the Lord, "Is it good unto Thee that Thou shouldest oppress, that Thou shouldest despise the work of Thine hands?" In the following passage he insists upon and illustrates that argument by fitting it to his own condition: as if he had said, Am not I the work of Thine hands? ver. 8, and "yet Thou dost destroy me." Caryl.

9. Remember, I beseech thee, that thou hast made me &c.] Need I put Thee in mind, that I was formed by Thee, as the potter works the clay into what shape he pleases? and now Thou art crumbling me in pieces again. Bp. Patrick.

10. — curdled me like cheese?] That is, brought me into shape. Bp. Wilson.

Shall my substance receive so great a change, as to be brought near to its dissolution? This substance, which Thou wert solicitous in "pouring out as milk;" anxiously curious in its formation, when I was in the state of an embryo; blending and proportioning the several parts of the body to each other, so as to

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

13 And these things hast thou hid in thine heart: I know that this is with thee.

14 If I sin, then thou markest me, and thou wilt not acquit me from mine iniquity.

15 If I be wicked, woe unto me; and if I be righteous, yet will I not lift up my head. I am full of confusion; therefore see thou mine affliction;

16 For it increaseth. Thou huntest me as a fierce lion: and again thou shewest thyself marvellous upon me.

17 Thou renewest ‖ thy witnesses against me, and increasest thine indignation upon me; changes and war are against me.

‖ That is,
thy plagues.

18 ^b Wherefore then hast thou brought me forth out of the womb? Oh that I had given up the ghost, and no eye had seen me!

^b Chap. 3.
11.

19 I should have been as though I had bring them to a beautiful perfection. This substance, which was "curdled like cheese;" the several members of which were once a rude uncongealed mass, without contexture, without beauty; but by Thy Almighty power secretly and surprisingly wrought: every loose divided limb receiving from Thee its proper shape and ligament, and taught by Thee its distinct use and office. Chappelon.

13. And these things hast thou hid in thine heart: &c.] Thou hast conferred upon me great and signal blessings; but these evils, which I now suffer, Thou didst reserve for me, and appoint them to be inflicted upon me. Roscnmüller. "This is with Thee" is a phrase, which denotes the secret decree of God, chap. xxiii. 14. Scott.

14. If I sin, then thou markest me, &c.] I cannot offend Thee in the least, but Thou, by whom I was thus formed, must needs know and observe it, and I cannot avoid Thy punishment for it. Bp. Patrick.

15. If I be wicked, woe unto me; and if I be righteous, yet will I not lift up my head.] That is, I cannot, will not hope for any such temporal deliverance upon account of my righteousness, as you are endeavouring to persuade me of, from a mistaken principle; and according to which, if no such deliverance should happen, you are still resolved to condemn me as an innocent man. Peters.

16. — Thou huntest me as a fierce lion:] That is, as if I were a fierce lion: compare chap. iv. 10. The allusion, in this and the following verse, is to that manner of hunting the lion, wherein the hunters, armed with spears and javelins, formed themselves in a ring about the beast, and threw their weapons at him one after another. By this image, Job represents in lively colours the violent and rapid succession of his calamities. Scott.

— thou shewest thyself marvellous upon me.] Thou proceedest after an unusual and extraordinary manner with me, so that every one will wonder at it, Numb. xvi. 29, 30. Clark.

17. Thou renewest thy witnesses against me,] Fresh witnesses of Thine anger rise up against me: Thou multipliest Thy plagues upon me, so that there is no end, but only a change of my conflicts. Bp. Patrick.

The word, rendered "witnesses," may be translated weapons, or attacks, or troops: in either of these ways, the allusion to the chase will be preserved. "Changes and war" means "changes of war;" or successions of war: denoting the war of the chase, carried on by repeated attacks. Scott.

Before CHRIST about 1520. not been; I should have been carried from the womb to the grave.

20 ^c Are not my days few? cease then, and let me alone, that I may take comfort a little,

21 Before I go whence I shall not return, even to the land of darkness and the shadow of death;

22 A land of darkness, as darkness itself; and of the shadow of death, without any order, and where the light is as darkness.

CHAP. XI.

1 Zophar reproveth Job for justifying himself. 5 God's wisdom is unsearchable. 13 The assured blessing of repentance.

THEN answered Zophar the Naamathite, and said,

20. — cease then, and let me alone,] Hence we may observe, that except the Lord withdraw His hand, nothing in the world can give us ease. Caryl.

22. A land of darkness, as darkness itself; and of the shadow of death,] Rather, "a land of darkness, as the darkness of the shadow of death." Dr. Durell.

The original of this gloomy picture, drawn in the deepest shades of horror, is probably the subterraneous chambers of the sepulchral grottoes. Scott.

— without any order,] Where every thing is in such disorder as to resemble the primeval chaos. Capellus.

The conduct of Job is an example of piety and of weakness: of piety, in acknowledging that the Almighty Being, from whom he received his life and all things, was perfectly righteous in all His ways; of weakness, in complaining that it would have been better he had never been born. Let us imitate his piety, and acknowledge at all times the goodness of our Creator: let us avoid his weakness, and submit without murmuring to God's chastening hand. Ostervall.

Chap. XI. Zophar goes beyond Eliphaz and Bildad in the assertion, that none are visited by Divine chastisement but such as deserve it: he maintains that Job's affliction is far short of his desert; and that Job himself would acknowledge it to be so, if he were able to fathom the counsels of God. He urges the vanity of attempting to flee from Divine justice and power, which are exerted always with a view to tame the wildness of human nature; and he concludes with an exhortation to Job to call to mind his past acts of injustice, and presently to make the best reparation for them in his power: the consequence of which would be the recovering of the favour of God, and his former prosperity. Bp. Stock.

Ver. 2. — should a man full of talk be justified?] Acquitted from the crimes with which he is charged, and be accounted righteous merely because of his multitude of words? Clark.

3. — shall no man make thee ashamed?] By confuting thee put thee to shame. Caryl.

4. — My doctrine is pure,] The word "doctrine" is here, by a latitude of signification, used for discourse. Rosenmüller.

5. But oh that God would speak, &c.] Zophar here alludes to the wish expressed by Job, chap. ix. 35. Rosenmüller.

6. — that he would shew thee the secrets of wisdom, that they are double to that which is!] The methods of His providence and wise disposal of things, with which thou art unacquainted, that thou hast deserved far more than He hath laid upon thee. Clark.

— that they are double to that which is!] That in strict justice He might inflict upon thee double to what thou now sufferest. Bp. Hall.

2 Should not the multitude of words be answered? and should † a man full of talk be justified? Before CHRIST about 1520.

3 Should thy † lies make men hold their peace? and when thou mockest, shall no man make thee ashamed? † Heb. a man of lips. † Or, devices.

4 For thou hast said, My doctrine is pure, and I am clean in thine eyes.

5 But oh that God would speak, and open his lips against thee;

6 And that he would shew thee the secrets of wisdom, that they are double to that which is! Know therefore that God exacteth of thee less than thine iniquity deserveth.

7 Canst thou by searching find out God? canst thou find out the Almighty unto perfection?

8 It is † as high as heaven; what canst † Heb. the heights of heaven.

7—9. Canst thou by searching find out God? &c.] These three verses are an illustration or a comment upon the sixth. Zophar having breathed out his wish, that "God would speak, and shew Job the secrets of wisdom, &c." proceeds to prove, that it is need He should, those secrets being such as none can see till they are shewed. Caryl.

These are very reasonable questions which Zophar put to him. It must be owned, that we are not able to account for the method of Divine Providence in many instances; and whosoever is not abandoned of all modesty, must readily acknowledge that it is reasonable that it should be so. For we have not the entire scheme of Providence in our heads at once; we cannot see from the beginning to the end of God's ways; we know not what are the designs, and what will be the issues, of His counsels: and therefore ought to suspend our judgment till the conclusion and winding up of things. Bradford.

7. Canst thou by searching &c.] "Canst thou by searching find out God?" Dost thou know God intimately, and thoroughly within and without? Canst thou pierce into the centre of His perfections, and dive into the bottom of them? And "Canst thou find out the Almighty unto perfection?" Canst thou find out the Almighty to the very last and utmost of Him? so that thou canst say after a thorough search and inquiry, There is no perfection in God beyond this, there is nothing of Him now that remains to be known: this He is, and no other; that He is, and no otherwise; this He can do, and no more; hither doth His power, and knowledge, and wisdom reach, and no farther. "Canst thou do this?" These interrogations have the force of a vehement negation: as if he had said, No, thou canst not: God is unsearchable, He is incomprehensible. Abp. Tillotson. These words represent to us the vanity of an inquisitive temper, and the defect of our knowledge in respect to spiritual objects; but they are not designed to exclude our endeavours after the proof of a Deity, or to stifle those limited notions and apprehensions of the Divine nature and attributes, which God has thought fit to communicate to us. We are to make a right use and exercise of our reason, and to get as fully acquainted with the object of our worship as we can; but we are not to suffer our knowledge to move out of its sphere, or to presume that a finite being can comprehend the nature, or account for all the actions, of an infinite God. Dr. Coney.

8. It is as high as heaven;] The meaning is, The nature and perfections of God are above the understanding of any of His creatures. It is only His own infinite understanding that can frame a perfect idea of His own perfection. Abp. Tillotson.

When we cannot comprehend a thing, we say it is beyond our reach; or, it is too high or too deep for us. But in what a noble manner does Zophar here express such an impossibility! Bishop

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

thou do? deeper than hell; what canst thou know?

9 The measure thereof is longer than the earth, and broader than the sea.

|| Or, make a change.
† Heb. who can turn him away?

10 If he || cut off, and shut up, or gather together, then † who can hinder him?

11 For he knoweth vain men: he seeth wickedness also; will he not then consider it?

† Heb.
empty.

12 For † vain man would be wise, though man be born like a wild ass's colt.

13 If thou prepare thine heart, and stretch out thine hands toward him;

14 If iniquity be in thine hand, put it far away, and let not wickedness dwell in thy tabernacles.

15 For then shalt thou lift up thy face without spot; yea, thou shalt be stedfast, and shalt not fear:

16 Because thou shalt forget thy misery, and remember it as waters that pass away:

17 And thine age † shall be clearer than the noonday; thou shalt shine forth, thou shalt be as the morning.

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

† Heb. shall arise above the noonday.

18 And thou shalt be secure, because there is hope; yea, thou shalt dig about thee, and thou shalt take thy rest in safety.

^a Lev. 26. G.
† Heb. intreat thy face.

19 ^a Also thou shalt lie down, and none shall make thee afraid; yea, many shall † make suit unto thee.

† Heb.
flight shall perish from them.

20 But the eyes of the wicked shall fail, and † they shall not escape, and ^b their hope shall be as || the giving up of the ghost.

^b Chap. 8.
14. & 18. 14.
|| Or.
^a puff of breath.

Lowth produces this passage as an example of the grand manner, in which the Hebrew poets speak of the attributes of God, absolutely considered, without particular mention of the operations and effects that flow from them. Scott.

— deeper than hell;] The concealed or unseen place of the dead: see the note on chap. xxvi. 6. But it may be a question, whether the word, translated “hell,” does not signify sometimes a great invisible depth under ground, without any reference to the dead. See Deut. xxxii. 22; Ps. cxxxix. 8; Ezek. xxxi. 17; Amos ix. 2. Parkhurst.

10. — shut up, or gather together,] Deliver into the enemies' hand, Ps. xxxi. 8, or bring them back after they have been scattered abroad. Clark.

11. For he knoweth vain men:] For He knows vain men, (who mind not what they say or do,) He sees their most hidden wickedness; and will He not punish it? Bp. Patrick.

12. — though man be born like a wild ass's colt.] That is, were he left to himself, and suffered to take his own course without being controlled, did he follow the dictates of his natural appetites, and, void of discipline and instruction, yield to the dominion of headstrong passions, he is then in effect no better than a wild ungovernable creature. This is true in a general sense, but it is said with a particular view, we may suppose, to Job. The reflection is perhaps the more severe, because robbers and plunderers are distinguished by the odious title of “wild asses in the desert, rising betimes for a prey,” chap. xxiv. 5. It was moreover a common reproach among the Arabians, when they spoke of a perverse obstinate man, tenacious of his own ways, and a despiser of other people's advice, to say, “Such an one is a young wild ass by himself.” Chappelow.

14. — tabernacles.] Tents having been the ancient dwellings of men, the term was retained after the invention of more durable and fixed habitations. Job, it is certain, lived in a city, chap. xxix. 7; yet his house is called a “tabernacle,” or tent, chap. xxix. 4. Scott.

15. — without spot;] This is a scriptural phrase to denote innocence and integrity, Numb. xix. 2; Heb. ix. 14; Eph. v. 27. “Fair in calamity” is a character, among the Arabians, of one, who bears his misfortunes with a composed steadiness. They likewise distinguish a man of honour, true nobility, and figure, as having “a fair unspotted countenance.” On the contrary, “a face as black as a coal,” is imputed to the base dishonourable person. Chappelow.

16. — remember it as waters that pass away;] That is, thou shalt not remember it at all. The memory of thy afflictions will be wholly effaced, like the winter torrents, which are utterly evaporated in the beginning of summer, chap. vi. 15, 17. Scott.

17. And thine age shall be clearer than the noonday;] That is, thy latter end shall be full of comfort, and thou shalt rejoice in the serenity of thy condition. Caryl.

18, 19. And thou shalt be secure, &c.] These two verses contain, if I mistake not, a pleasing rural scene; green pastures, wells of water, flocks and herds couched around them, and a little camp of Arabian shepherds inclosing the whole. The expression “thou shalt dig,” refers most probably, as Heath remarks, to digging of wells or springs, a circumstance frequently mentioned in the patriarchal history. The word translated “thou shalt lie down,” denotes properly the decumbent posture of cattle, after they have well fed, and when they repose at night. As to the encampment, it was the custom, as Heath observes, of the Eastern people to pitch their tents nigh wells, for the conveniency of water for their cattle. The security also, here promised, expresses the protection wanted to defend them from wild beasts, and from the incursions of the thievish Arabs of the desert. The “hope,” mentioned in the former of these two verses as the ground of security, can be no other than hope in God: that firm dependence on Divine Providence, which good men are warranted to entertain. Scott.

19. — many shall make suit unto thee.] Shall court thy friendship, as in the instances of Abraham and Isaac, Gen. xxi. 22; xxvi. 28. Grotius.

20. But the eyes of the wicked shall fail,] By being intently fixed on thy happiness, which they cannot enjoy; as the sight is dimmed, while we gaze incessantly on one object. Michaëlis.

“Failing of the eyes” is one of those expressions in Scripture to be admired for their beautiful simplicity. It represents a very eager and passionate desire to obtain that which we are in pursuit of, and at the same time the great uneasiness which must unavoidably follow from a disappointment. One of the appeals which Job makes in vindication of his integrity, is, “If I have caused the eyes of the widow to fail,” chap. xxxi. 16: that is, If I have frustrated her expectations, when she applied to me for relief and assistance in her distress. See Ps. lxxix. 3; and compare chap. xvii. 5. Chappelow.

Chap. XII, XIII, XIV. These three chapters contain Job's answer to the counsels and objections of his third friend Zophar, not excluding what had been said by the two former. There are four things most to be noticed in it: 1st, Job sharply rebukes that kind of spirit and confidence in their own opinion, which he observed in his friends. He pursues this point from the beginning of the twelfth chapter to the end of ver. 4. 2dly, He refutes that opinion which the three had maintained against him; namely, that good or evil things distinguished good or evil men; himself shewing by many arguments, taken from the various administrations of God, that outward evils are often the lot of good men in this life: the theme begins at ver. 5, and is enlarged to the end of the chapter. 3dly, He rejects his friends as physicians of no value; yea, as having wronged God, whilst they seem to be advocates for Him. This subject he prosecutes with much va-

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

CHAP. XII.

1 Job maintaineth himself against his friends that reprove him. 7 He acknowledgeth the general doctrine of God's omnipotency.

AND Job answered and said,
2 No doubt but ye are the people, and wisdom shall die with you.

3 But I have † understanding as well as you; † I am not inferior to you: yea, † who knoweth not such things as these?

4 I am as one mocked of his neighbour, who calleth upon God, and he answereth him: the just upright man is laughed to scorn.

5 He that is ready to slip with his feet is as a lamp despised in the thought of him that is at ease.

6 The tabernacles of robbers prosper, and they that provoke God are secure; into whose hand God bringeth abundantly.

7 But ask now the beasts, and they shall teach thee; and the fowls of the air, and they shall tell thee:

8 Or speak to the earth, and it shall teach

† Heb.
an heart.
† Heb.
I fall not lower than you.

† Heb. with whom are not such as these?

riety from the beginning of chap. xiii. to ver. 7. 4thly, He renews his former plea with God, putting many requests to Him, and strongly arguing for a release from, or at least a mitigation of, his troubles. Caryl.

Chap. XII. ver. 2. No doubt but ye are the people, &c. This is ironically spoken. Ye are the only wise; with you shall all wisdom expire. Capellus.

3. — yea, who knoweth not such things as these? Even the meanest understand that God is infinite in wisdom, power, and justice: but that is not the question between us. Clark.

4. I am as one mocked of his neighbour, who calleth upon God, and he answereth him: These are the words of one, entertaining good hopes of God's assistance. As if he had said, God has heard me before, when I have called upon Him: He will do the same now. Nevertheless you deride me. Poole.

5. He that is ready to slip with his feet To slip with the feet is to fall into affliction. A despised lamp is of the same signification with a smoking firebrand, which last is a proverb for that which is almost spent, and therefore despised and thrown away as useless. Caryl, Poole.

The meaning is, He that is in affliction is despised by them that are in full prosperity. Bp. Wilson.

6. The tabernacles of robbers prosper, As if Job had said; Zophar, thou hast affirmed, that the righteous man is as a shining light: I say, he is but a despised lamp: thou affirmest, that the eyes of the wicked shall fail, &c. but I have seen that the tabernacles of robbers prosper, and that they who provoke God are secure. Caryl.

7—9. But ask now the beasts, &c. The connexion here is to be traced back to the end of the third verse: "yea, who knoweth not such things as these?" Rossmüller.

This beautiful apostrophizing of the inanimate and brute creation, is only a poetical way of saying, that the great Author and Disposer of life had given into the hands of robbers the beasts of the field and the fowls of the heaven, &c. Such men, he complains, possess the largest property and use of the brute creation, and of the produce of the earth; which they abuse to the purposes of luxury and riot. Scott.

7. But ask now the beasts, and they shall teach thee; The creatures teach us that there is a God, and much of that which God thee: and the fishes of the sea shall declare unto thee.

9 Who knoweth not in all these that the hand of the LORD hath wrought this?

10 In whose hand is the || soul of every || living thing, and the breath of † all mankind.

11 ^a Doth not the ear try words? and the † mouth taste his meat?

12 With the ancient is wisdom; and in length of days understanding.

13 || With him is wisdom and strength, he hath counsel and understanding.

14 Behold, he breaketh down, and it cannot be built again: he ^b shutteth † up a man, and there can be no opening.

15 Behold, he withholdeth the waters, and they dry up: also he sendeth them out, and they overturn the earth.

16 With him is strength and wisdom: the deceived and the deceiver are his.

17 He leadeth counsellors away spoiled, and maketh the judges fools.

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

Or, life.
† Heb. all flesh of man.

^a Ch. 34. 3.

† Heb.
palate.

|| That is,
with God.

^b Is. 22. 22.
Rev. 3. 7.

† Heb.
upon.

is—they teach us also ready obedience to the will of God: all creatures obey the law of their creation: they teach us also dependence upon God: the eyes of all wait or look up unto God (Ps. cxlv. 15) that they may receive good. Caryl.

9. — hath wrought this? Has by His Divine power and providence disposed of all things that concern them. Clark.

11. Doth not the ear try words? We may read these words comparatively, (as we find them, chap. xxxiv. 3,) "the ear trieth words, as the mouth tasteth meat." Caryl.

11—13. Doth not the ear try words? &c. Doth not the understanding judge of the truth of what is spoken? therefore do not rashly condemn me or my doctrine without a due trial; much more may they who have lived to a great age attain the knowledge of Divine truths: and though these should want it, still with Him, ver. 13, that is, with God, "is wisdom, &c." Clark.

"Doth not the ear try words, as the palate tasteth food?" Job, being about to speak of the supreme and absolute dominion of God over His creatures, begins with two proverbial expressions, in which he seems to insinuate that he wished for other judges of what he had to say; who, endued with a more mature and solid understanding of spiritual things, were better able to distinguish sincere piety and the just complaint of oppressed innocence from impiety and hypocrisy, and to dispute more prudently concerning God and His providence. Schultens.

13. With him is wisdom &c. The design of this grand discourse on the ways of God to men is, I apprehend, to establish his position, chap. ix. 22, "He destroyeth the perfect and the wicked." That proposition is here proved by induction. He allegeth those great and general calamities, drought, inundation, and the overthrow of kingdoms; which make no distinction between the innocent and the guilty, but involve the most virtuous characters, and the noblest and most important talents, in distress, disgrace, and ruin. Scott.

16. — the deceived and the deceiver are his. God will make both the deceiver and the deceived accountable to Himself: it is from His suzerance that there are any such: in infinite wisdom and holiness He disposeth of the errors of men and of those that lead them into error, ordering how far any man shall deceive, and to what extent his deceit shall prevail: and further, the Lord improves both to serve His own ends, to bring about His counsels, and promote His own glory. Caryl.

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

18 He looseth the bond of kings, and girdeth their loins with a girdle.

19 He leadeth princes away spoiled, and overthroweth the mighty.

Ch. 2. 9.
† Heb.
the lip of the ful.

20 He removeth away the speech of the trusty, and taketh away the understanding of the aged.

Or,
the lip of the strong.

21 He poureth contempt upon princes, and weakeneth the strength of the mighty.

22 He discovereth deep things out of darkness, and bringeth out to light the shadow of death.

† Heb.
leadeth in.

23 He increaseth the nations, and destroyeth them: he enlargeth the nations, and straiteneth them again.

24 He taketh away the heart of the chief of the people of the earth, and causeth them to wander in a wilderness where there is no way.

† Heb.
wander.

25 They grope in the dark without light, and he maketh them to stagger like a drunken man.

18. He looseth the bond of kings, &c.] He dissolves their authority, and reduces them to the condition of servants, attending on their masters with loins girt up, to execute their commands. Bp. Stock.

"He looseth the bond of kings," He destroys their binding power, their authority, by dethroning them. The expression may allude to the royal belt, one of the insignia of majesty; compare Is. xlv. 1. "And girdeth, &c." The tenour of the discourse requires these expressions to be taken in a calamitous sense. The "girdle" therefore must here mean the cord or chain, that was tied about the waist of captives; see Ps. cxlix. 8. The manner of making war in our days is very different from what it was in ancient times. We now see no such catastrophes as princes and their people led into captivity: but these were the usual effects of conquest in former ages. Scott.

20. — taketh away the understanding of the aged.] When Job would set out the uncontrollable power of God to defeat all the counsels and purposes of men, one of the strongest phrases he could find to express it by, was this: for in those early days the highest veneration possible was paid to old age. Peters.

21. — weakeneth the strength of the mighty.] The margin reads, "looseth the girdle of the strong," the valiant, or hero. The girdle in 1 Sam. xviii. 4, is connected with the sword and the bow, as part of the military dress: so we read in 2 Kings iii. 21, "The Moabites gathered all that were able to gird themselves with a girdle," as it is in the margin; that is, to oppose the enemies; "to put on armour," as in our translation. Fragments to Calmet. A zone or girdle was a token of strength. Chappelow. See the note on Is. v. 27.

22. He discovereth deep things out of darkness, &c.] The sentiment is, that, while these terrible revolutions remain in the Divine counsels, they are darkness, utter darkness to us, deep impenetrable secrets: and, when they are discovered in the execution, they astonish and terrify mankind, as though sepulchral darkness covered the face of the earth. The Prophet Daniel speaks in like figurative language of the counsels of God, relating to the four great empires of the world, chap. ii. 21, 22. Scott.

— the shadow of death.] That which hath been contrived in the greatest obscurity. Bp. Patrick.

24. He taketh away the heart &c.] When God takes away the hearts of men, they run strange courses, and go ways which the wise never went; the foot of honesty or of justice treads not their paths. Caryl.

Divine infatuation of the governing powers is here described in

CHAP. XIII.

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

1 Job reproveth his friends of partiality. 14 He professeth his confidence in God: 20 and intreateth to know his own sins, and God's purpose in afflicting him.

LO, mine eye hath seen all this, mine ear hath heard and understood it.

2 What ye know, the same do I know also: I am not inferior unto you.

3 Surely I would speak to the Almighty, and I desire to reason with God.

4 But ye are forgers of lies, ye are all physicians of no value.

5 O that ye would altogether hold your peace! and it should be your wisdom.

6 Hear now my reasoning, and hearken to the pleadings of my lips.

7 Will ye speak wickedly for God? and talk deceitfully for him?

8 Will ye accept his person? will ye contend for God?

forcible language and striking resemblances. Privation of judgment and courage is expressed by God's "taking away their hearts:" in their confusion, mistakes, perplexity, and distress, they resemble persons who have lost themselves in the Arabian solitudes; without a path, without a way-mark, without a light to guide them; and their irresolution and unstable counsels are like the reeling motions of a drunken man. Scott.

25. They grope in the dark without light, &c.] See Is. xix. 14; xxiv. 20; xxix. 9, 10. Rosenmüller.

Chap. XIII. The friends of Job charged him with ignorance of God and His ways: to refute which, he made that excellent confession both of the power and wisdom of God in the foregoing chapter; and concludes his discourse upon those points, at the beginning of this, with an attestation to all from his own knowledge and experience. Caryl.

Ver. 1. Lo, mine eye hath seen all this,] I know, by my own observation and experience, all that I have spoken concerning God's power and wisdom; so that I need not your discourses about them. Clark. These two verses ought not to have been disjoined from the former chapter. They authenticate the facts contained in it. Scott.

3. Surely I would speak to the Almighty, &c.] As if Job had said, I see that I shall avail or profit myself but little by any farther conference with you; therefore, I desire to turn myself to God, from whom I am sure of a good answer. Caryl.

4. But ye are forgers of lies,] My integrity is such, that I dare undertake to clear myself before God; but as for you, ye are authors of false doctrine, namely, that great afflictions are peculiar to hypocrites and wicked men; ye are unskillful and unfaithful, prescribing bad remedies, and misapplying good ones. Clark.

5. — and it should be your wisdom.] To keep the tongue within proper restraint was always reckoned one of the qualities of a wise man. Solomon delivers his opinion in very strong terms, Prov. xvii. 28. The Arabians are remarkable for their proverbs of the same kind. Chappelow.

7. Will ye speak wickedly for God? &c.] Doth God stand in need of untruths to justify His proceedings? cannot He be righteous unless I be wicked? Bp. Patrick.

8. Will ye accept his person?] Will you seek to win the favour of God by assailing me unjustly, as is the practice towards earthly princes? Grotius.

— will ye contend for God?] As if Job had said, If you will

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

9 Is it good that he should search you out? or as one man mocketh another, do ye so mock him?

10 He will surely reprove you, if ye do secretly accept persons.

11 Shall not his excellency make you afraid? and his dread fall upon you?

12 Your remembrances are like unto ashes, your bodies to bodies of clay.

† Heb.
Be silent
from me.

13 † Hold your peace, let me alone, that I may speak, and let come on me what will.

14 Wherefore do I take my flesh in my teeth, and put my life in mine hand?

† Heb. prove, or,
argue.

15 Though he slay me, yet will I trust in him: but I will † maintain mine own ways before him.

16 He also shall be my salvation: for an hypocrite shall not come before him.

engage as patrons of God's cause, and contend for Him, you must do it so as becomes the cause of God; you must not, to gratify God, oppress the poorest man. Caryl.

9—13. Is it good that he should search you out? The ninth and tenth verses are an appendix to, or an enlargement of, his second argument, which began at the seventh verse. There he expostulates thus: "Will ye speak wickedly for God? and talk deceitfully for Him? will ye accept His person?" Will ye make such adventures, will ye run such hazards as these? Here he dissuades them from it; "Is it good that He should search you out?" ver. 9; if He do, you will suffer for your iniquity; for, "He will surely reprove you, if ye do secretly accept persons," ver. 10. If you give wrong judgment for God, you shall not escape His just judgment. Job's third argument is grounded upon the majesty and greatness of God, ver. 11; "Shall not His excellency make you afraid? &c." His fourth, upon their frailty and weakness, ver. 12; "Your remembrances are like unto ashes:" and will you, who are dust and ashes, speak thus, not only before, but concerning the high and the holy God? From all these premises, he draws the wish of the fifth verse; "O that ye would altogether hold your peace!" into a conclusive charge at the thirteenth verse, "Hold your peace, &c." Caryl.

12. Your remembrances are like unto ashes, Whatsoever thing of yours seems memorable, or what monument soever ye shall set up to yourselves, it shall vanish away, and be scattered like ashes. Bp. Hall.

— your bodies to bodies of clay. He threatens them with punishment, for acting so rashly and presumptuously concerning God: or rather he describes their abject state in comparison with the sublimity of the Divine nature. Whatsoever is eminent in you, is like a heap of clay, and shall be reduced to cinder. Why then do you flatter yourselves, and thus exalt yourselves above others, and despise me? Poole.

13. Hold your peace, &c. Job being provoked speaks here with some heat, and is desirous rather to cast himself wholly on God, than to hear his friends any longer. Caryl.

14. Wherefore do I take my flesh in my teeth, &c. Why is my heart torn with anguish, and wherefore am I involved in the greatest danger? Grotius.

The putting any thing valuable "in one's hand," may signify exposing it to danger, on this account; because it is then ready to be snatched away by one that is stronger: whereas a treasure locked up and kept in a retired place is not so easy to be come at, nor affords the like temptation. Dr. Durell.

14, 15. Wherefore do I take my flesh &c. You ask me, Why I should consider my case as desperate? Why I should be thus slow to believe that God will deliver me out of my troubles? You say this looks as if I were conscious of some wickedness that rendered

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

17 Hear diligently my speech, and my declaration with your ears.

18 Behold now, I have ordered my cause; I know that I shall be justified.

19 Who is he that will plead with me? for now, if I hold my tongue, I shall give up the ghost.

20 Only do not two things unto me: then will I not hide myself from thee.

21 Withdraw thine hand far from me: and let not thy dread make me afraid.

22 Then call thou, and I will answer: or let me speak, and answer thou me.

23 How many are mine iniquities and sins? make me to know my transgression and my sin.

24 Wherefore hidest thou thy face, and holdest me for thine enemy?

25 Wilt thou break a leaf driven to and me unworthy of such a deliverance. No: it is not the want of a due hope or trust in God, occasioned by any wickedness I am conscious of, that makes me thus despair of my condition; for "though He slay me, yet will I trust in Him: but I will maintain mine own ways (my integrity) before Him." Peters.

We may hence observe, that trust is due to God in all estates, that it is the best ease to the soul, and the best remedy in evils, and that we can never trust God too much. Caryl.

15. Though he slay me, &c. Though He slay me here, yet I am sure that He will save me hereafter, and be my portion for ever. Caryl.

16. — for an hypocrite shall not come before him. Rather, but an hypocrite, &c. In this latter clause, Job secretly refutes the censure of his friends, who had aspersed him as an hypocrite. Bildad did so obliquely in chap. viii. 13. Job looking up to God as his "salvation," expresses his confidence that he should come "before" God, that is, into His presence, whither no hypocrite could come. Caryl.

18. Behold now, I have ordered my cause; As if Job had said, I address myself to my trial, and plead not guilty. Peters. I am so sure of the goodness of my cause, that I know I shall be acquitted. Bp. Patrick.

19. — if I hold my tongue, &c. I am so full, and my impatience for a trial is so great, that if I have not liberty to give it vent in vindicating myself, I shall expire. Clark.

20—23. Only do not two things unto me: &c. This holy man seems here to recollect himself; and, as fearing that he might have been too bold in his appeal, addresses himself in these verses to the Judge Himself, and beseeches Him, in the most submissive manner, before He enters into judgment with him, to grant him two things; to withdraw His afflicting hand from him, and to vail the terrors of His majesty, that it might not strike him with too great a dread; and then to question him, and he would answer, or permit him to speak, and vouchsafe to inform him what his guilt was, and what were the reasons of these severe afflictions. Several passages in his speech shew very evidently, that Job looked forward to a day of judgment, in which he hoped to have his innocence cleared. The whole tenour of his argument must therefore be referred to a future, not a temporal deliverance. Peters.

23—25. How many are mine iniquities &c. Scarcely ever were the feelings of the human heart, oppressed with such a load of grief, expressed in a more natural or less blamable way: in the last part Job confesses his own meanness, or rather nothingness, in comparison of God, and that in a manner so ingenious and simple, as to shew that his complaints, however passionate and moving, had but a small mixture of pride and stubbornness at the bottom of them. Peters.

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

fro? and wilt thou pursue the dry stubble?

* Ps. 25. 7.

26 For thou writest bitter things against me, and ^a makest me to possess the iniquities of my youth.

† Heb. observed.
† Heb.
roots.

27 Thou putttest my feet also in the stocks, and [†] lookest narrowly unto all my paths; thou settest a print upon the [†]heels of my feet.

28 And he, as a rotten thing, consumeth, as a garment that is moth eaten.

CHAP. XIV.

1 Job intreateth God for favour, by the shortness of life, and certainty of death. 7 Though life once lost be irrecoverable, yet he waiteth for his change. 16 By sin the creature is subject to corruption.

† Heb.
short of days.

MAN that is born of a woman is [†] of few days, and full of trouble.

^a Ps. 102.
11. & 103.
15. & 144.
4. ch. 8. 9.

2 ^a He cometh forth like a flower, and is cut down: he fleeth also as a shadow, and continueth not.

26—28. For thou writest bitter things &c.] The whole relation is carried on in a continued metaphor, alluding to a judiciary proceeding, as if himself were a guilty malefactor, and God the supreme Judge: first, aggravating his faults and pronouncing sentence upon him, ver. 26; secondly, executing the sentence, ver. 27; “Thou putttest my feet in the stocks.” In the close of all Job declares the effect which that sentence, pronounced and executed, wrought upon him, ver. 28; “He, as a rotten thing, consumeth, &c.”

Job may have here had respect to some actual sins of his youth, without any detriment to his argument drawn from that present uprightness of heart and life, which he now pleads, and had so long practised: for it is not his innocence, strictly speaking, which Job insists on, but his integrity. Peters.

27. — the stocks,] The original word appears to signify a clog, or logger, probably such an one as used to be put on the feet of fugitive slaves, or rather malefactors. Parkhurst.

— thou settest a print &c.] The shackles and chains which are upon me leave their marks behind them in my flesh; my feet swell with my heavy fetters. Caryl.

Otherwise, “Thou imprintest Thyself, that is, Thy wrath, on the soles of my feet.” Thou treatest me as the vilest slave: for perhaps he alludes to the bastinadoing of the feet, which has long been a common punishment in the East; but whether as ancient as the time of Job, or whether some other impression on the feet be not intended, I will not take upon me absolutely to determine. Michaelis thinks, that Job moreover refers to the tumours and ulcers in his feet, such as are usual in the elephantiasis, the distemper under which he suffered. Parkhurst.

28. And he, as a rotten thing, &c.] The person is here changed from the first to the third, Job being still the subject of the description. A similar comparison to the latter occurs in Ps. xxxix. 11. Caryl. Such changes of person are very common in the sacred poems. The usage also of the third person for the first, this man for I or me, is frequent in the tragedies of Sophocles. Schultens, Scott.

Chap. XIV. In the last verse of the former chapter Job shewed how weak and miserable a creature man is under the afflicting hand of God: he prosecutes the same argument in the first and second verses of this chapter; from all drawing down this expostulatory conclusion, ver. 3, “and dost Thou open Thine eyes upon such an one?” Caryl.

3 And dost thou open thine eyes upon such an one, and bringest me into judgment with thee?

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

4 [†] Who ^b can bring a clean thing out of an unclean? not one.

† Heb.
Who will give?
^b Ps. 51. 5.
^c Ch. 7. 1.

5 ^c Seeing his days are determined, the number of his months are with thee, thou hast appointed his bounds that he cannot pass;

6 Turn from him, that he may [†] rest, till he shall accomplish, as an hireling, his day.

† Heb.
cease.

7 For there is hope of a tree, if it be cut down, that it will sprout again, and that the tender branch thereof will not cease.

8 Though the root thereof wax old in the earth, and the stock thereof die in the ground;

9 Yet through the scent of water it will bud, and bring forth boughs like a plant.

10 But man dieth, and [†] wasteth away: yea, man giveth up the ghost, and where is he?

† Heb. is weakened,
or, cut off.

An air of sad solemnity is diffused over this whole chapter. It is a train of gloomy ideas, rising successively in a melancholy mind, and closing with a scene highly tragical, the deplorable condition of man in the grave. Scott.

Ver. 2. — like a flower, — as a shadow.] The first of these similies beautifully represents the tender composition of man's elegant frame, which is easily destroyed by the smallest accident: the other illustrates the emptiness of his enjoyments, and the celerity with which his life is continually hasting to its period. Scott.

3. And dost thou open thine eyes upon such an one,] Dost Thou observe all his ways to find some occasion for punishing him, and deal with me according to rigid justice? Clark.

3, 4. And dost thou open thine eyes &c.] These last words plainly refer to the first, and shew the ground of other expostulations; see chap. xv. 14, and xxv. 4. This seems to be the sense of Job's expostulation; “Why art Thou extreme to mark all my errors? Is it reasonable to expect purity from a man born of a woman, who is, by the very condition of his birth, unclean?” The expostulation has a plain reference to the introduction of vanity and corruption by the sin of the woman; and is an evidence, that this ancient writer was sensible of the evil consequences of the fall upon the whole race of mankind. Bp. Sherlock.

5. — his days are determined,] Or cut short. Job probably thought of the longevity of the antediluvian men, and the present abbreviation of human life. Scott. See the note on chap. vii. 1, from Collyer.

6. — till he shall accomplish, as an hireling, his day.] Till, wearied with life, he shall look to death for relief, as the hireling eagerly expects the evening, that he may secure his wages, and rest from his labour. Rossmüller.

7—12. For there is hope of a tree, &c.] The death of man is not like the cutting down of a tree, which soon sprouts again and flourishes in the same place; but rather, like the drying up of a river whose waters disappear, and we see no more of them. So man appears no more upon the stage of this world; “he lieth down, and riseth not: till the heavens be no more.” Peters.

9. Yet through the scent of water it will bud,] The sensitive faculty of smelling is here elegantly ascribed to the root. As soon as it shall have smelt, that is, felt the influence of, the water, it will bud. Chappelow.

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

11 As the waters fail from the sea, and the flood decayeth and drieth up :

12 So man lieth down, and riseth not : till the heavens be no more, they shall not awake, nor be raised out of their sleep.

13 O that thou wouldest hide me in the grave, that thou wouldest keep me secret, until thy wrath be past, that thou wouldest appoint me a set time, and remember me!

14 If a man die, shall he live again? all the days of my appointed time will I wait, till my change come.

15 Thou shalt call, and I will answer thee : thou wilt have a desire to the work of thine hands.

^a Ps. 139. 2.

16 ^d For now thou numberest my steps : dost thou not watch over my sin ?

11. — the sea,] So the Orientals style a lake, or any large body of water. Scott.

12. — till the heavens be no more,] We know from writers both sacred and profane, that it was a very old opinion, that the present frame of nature should be one day dissolved, and be succeeded by a renovation of all things, by new heavens and a new earth. Bp. Sherlock.

Our blessed Saviour speaks in the same language, Matth. v. 18, "Till heaven and earth pass," that is, so long as the world endures. Chappelow.

13—17. O that thou wouldest hide me in the grave, &c.] As if he had said, 'Tired out with the calamities of life, let me then presently undergo my lot, the effect of Adam's sin, and of Thy wrath against it, till the time appointed for us to remain in this separate state be fulfilled; and then remember me, and raise me to that better state, which Thou hast prepared for Thy faithful servants.' And here he breaks off into an expression of joy and admiration, ver. 14, 'If a man die, shall he live, or revive? Is it true, that we shall rise again to a new and better life hereafter? Let me with hope and patience wait this happy change, (my renovation,) how long soever it may be in coming.' He adds, ver. 15, "Thou shalt call, and I will answer Thee; Thou wilt have a desire to the work of Thine hands." He trusted that God would call him forth to judgment; that he should then be admitted to answer for himself before a just and equitable Judge, who knew the uprightness of his heart, and had a love for all His creatures that did not render themselves unworthy of it; and that then he should receive a different sentence from that which his rash ill-judging friends had passed upon him, and be acquitted before them and all the world: though now (as it follows in the next verses) God had seemed to deal so hardly with him, had "numbered his steps, and sealed up his transgression in a bag;" that is, had seemed to take account of every the smallest transgression of his life, and, by the severe chastisements inflicted on him, had laid him open to the bitter censures and reproaches of his three friends: for his hopes of being acquitted in the day of judgment could not entirely subdue that grief and indignation which he had conceived at the cruel usage given him by these men, who measured his guilt by his afflictions, and treated him, upon this account, in all their speeches as a wicked man and a hypocrite. Peters.

13. O that thou wouldest hide me — until thy wrath be past,] We may hence remark, that our only refuge from the wrath of God, is God Himself; that it is our duty to refer all the circumstances of our petitions to the wisdom of God; that there is nothing more desirable than to be remembered by God, which to the righteous is the accomplishment of all their desires: and finally it behoves us to consider, that if it be such a blessing to be had in remembrance by God, what wrath and misery must be reserved for those whom God shall be provoked to cast out of His sight! Caryl.

VOL. I.

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

17 My transgression is sealed up in a bag, and thou sewest up mine iniquity.

18 And surely the mountain falling † cometh to nought, and the rock is removed out of his place.

† Heb.
fudeth.

19 The waters wear the stones: thou † wastest away the things which grow out of the dust of the earth; and thou destroyest the hope of man.

† Heb.
overfloweth.

20 Thou prevailest for ever against him, and he passeth: thou changest his countenance, and sendest him away.

21 His sons come to honour, and he knoweth it not; and they are brought low, but he perceiveth it not of them.

22 But his flesh upon him shall have pain, and his soul within him shall mourn.

14. If a man die, shall he live again?] This question does not denote any doubt on the part of Job, for see chap. xix. 25, &c.; but is an expression of joyful admiration, like that of Solomon, 1 Kings viii. 27. Parkhurst. See the note from Peters on ver. 13—17.

16. — thou numberest my steps:] Thou seemest to call me to an account for every step of my past life. Bp. Wilson.

17. My transgression is sealed] That is, the scroll or record of it, in a bundle; "and Thou tiest up mine iniquity."

The money that is collected together in the treasuries of Eastern princes is told up in certain equal sums, put into bags, and sealed; and it appears to have been so anciently: see 2 Kings xii. 10. Job seems to allude to this custom. Harmer.

18—22. And surely the mountain falling &c.] All these similitudes appear to aim at the same point, which Job had been pursuing a little before, namely, that a man dying shall return no more to his former state: this he shadows out by mountains, rocks, stones, trees, and the fruits of the earth, which are changed and consumed, as if they had never been. Caryl.

19. — and thou destroyest the hope of man.] Thou takest from me all hope of returning to this world again. Clark.

20. — and he passeth:] That is, he dieth; so the word is used chap. x. 21: death is our passage out of the world. Caryl.

— thou changest his countenance, &c.] That lively look which he had before, and makest him pale and ghastly. Clark.

— and sendest him away.] Into another world. Bp. Patrick.

21. His sons come to honour, &c.] And then, whether his children whom he leaves behind be rich, or whether they be poor, it is indifferent to him; for he knows not what passes there. Bp. Patrick.

22. But his flesh upon him shall have pain, &c.] But while he is in the flesh, he cannot but be in pain for them; and his soul is inwardly grieved to see their misery. Bp. Patrick.

Or the twenty-first and twenty-second verses may be interpreted thus: 21. When he is now in the agony of death, striving with his last pangs, he little regards what honour his son has recently acquired, or what shame he hath incurred. 22. But his flesh upon him is in extremity of pain, which takes up all his thoughts and senses; and his soul within him mourns for the present violence of his torment, and for the expectation or fear of the future. Bp. Hall.

Job in this chapter presents us with a lively representation of the frailty of human life, of the miseries to which man is subject in this world, and of the condition to which he is reduced by death. Whilst our experience teaches us that the representation is correct, we ought to praise God that we have in the Gospel, and in the sure and certain hope of the resurrection, strong consolation, and an unfailing remedy against the vanity of this life, and against death itself. Meanwhile our great care should be, to improve the time and other talents with which God hath entrusted us; that so

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

CHAP. XV.

1 Eliphaz reproveth Job of impiety in justifying himself.
17 He proveth by tradition the unquietness of wicked men.

THEN answered Eliphaz the Temanite, and said,

† Heb. knowledge of wind.

2 Should a wise man utter † vain knowledge, and fill his belly with the east wind?

3 Should he reason with unprofitable talk? or with speeches wherewith he can do no good?

† Heb.
thou makest
void.

4 Yea, † thou castest off fear, and restrainest || prayer before God.

|| Or, speech.

5 For thy mouth † uttereth thine iniquity, and thou chooseth the tongue of the crafty.

† Heb.
teacheth.

6 Thine own mouth condemneth thee, and not I: yea, thine own lips testify against thee.

7 Art thou the first man that was born? or wast thou made before the hills?

* Rom. 11.
34.

8 ^a Hast thou heard the secret of God? and dost thou restrain wisdom to thyself?

9 What knowest thou, that we know not? what understandest thou, which is not in us?

10 With us are both the grayheaded and very aged men, much elder than thy father.

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

11 Are the consolations of God small with thee? is there any secret thing with thee?

12 Why doth thine heart carry thee away? and what do thy eyes wink at, 13 That thou turnest thy spirit against God, and lettest such words go out of thy mouth?

14 ^b What is man, that he should be clean? and he which is born of a woman, that he should be righteous?

^b Ch. 14. 4.
1 Kings 8.
46.

15 ^c Behold, he putteth no trust in his saints; yea, the heavens are not clean in his sight.

2 Chron. 6.
36.
Psal. 14. 3.
Prov. 20. 9.
1 John 1. 8.
^c Ch. 4. 18.

16 How much more abominable and filthy is man, which drinketh iniquity like water?

17 I will shew thee, hear me; and that which I have seen I will declare;

18 Which wise men have told from their fathers, and have not hid it:

19 Unto whom alone the earth was given, and no stranger passed among them.

20 The wicked man travaileth with pain

we may be enabled by His mercy in Christ Jesus to support our present sufferings with patience, and be secured in the possession of unmingled and never-fading happiness in the life to come. Ostervald.

Chap. XV. Eliphaz observes, how idly Job talks, and how little proof he exhibits of wisdom, when he is not afraid to defy the Almighty to a contest with him. His own language condemns him as the presumptuous offender, who merited the punishment which had fallen upon him. Why should he be so positive in maintaining his innocence against the concurrent opinions of his friends, who had at least as good opportunities of forming a correct judgment as himself? What folly was it to pretend exemption from blame in the presence of that Being who discovers imperfection in the most exalted of His creatures, but still more in one so tainted with corruption as man! Eliphaz then returns to his first position, that misery implies guilt, which he confirms by the authority of ancient sages, and quotes their description of the progress and period of a wicked man. Bp. Stock.

Ver. 2. — and fill his belly with the east wind? Eliphaz compares Job's speeches to the wind, and to the east wind: to the wind, because of the vanity of them; to the east wind, because they are so hurtful. Caryl.

Pernicious doctrine is here compared to the Simoom, or wind, which blows occasionally in the deserts of Arabia. Michaelis. In those climates, both in spring and summer, if the east wind blows for some days, all the fields are burnt, so that scarce any green thing remains; most of the rivers and fountains are dried up, and nature itself seems almost to die. Scott.

4. Yea, thou castest off fear, The sentiment conveyed here is plainly this: If once Job can persuade men, that God does not interpose to execute judgment in this life, but reserves all things to a distant day of visitation, when the heavens shall be no more, there will be an end of all fear of God, an end of all prayer and supplication to Him. Bp. Sherlock.

7. Art thou the first man that was born? Thou speakest of Providence as if thou wert older than the world, and hadst been present in council with the Deity at the creation. Michaelis.

8. Hast thou heard the secret of God? Hast thou been admitted as a hearer into that great assembly where God's consultations are held? and hast thou drawn wisdom to thyself from thence? Peters.

11. Are the consolations of God small with thee? Why dost thou slight those Divine consolations which we have given thee? Hast thou some secret ones unknown to others? Bp. Patrick.

12. — and what do thy eyes wink at, In token of contempt and scorn. Clark. Wherefore do thine eyes look fierce? Excruciating pain, anguish of mind, and indignation at their cruel treatment, had given perhaps an air of wildness and fierceness to his countenance, which this inhuman censor attributes to passion against God. Scott.

14. What is man, &c.] See the note on chap. xiv. 3, 4.

15. — yea, the heavens are not clean in his sight.] We have here, and at chap. iv. 18, the fall of angels plainly intimated to us. Peters.

16. How much more abominable and filthy is man, How loathsome a creature then is man, who is as prone to sin, as he is disposed to drink when he is thirsty. Bp. Patrick.

17—19. I will shew thee, hear me; &c.] The characters here laid down thus distinctly can belong to none so properly as to Noah and his sons; from whom, in reality, the ancient traditions were delivered down. And it is evident from the Scripture history, that the earth was divided amongst these; that they were all of one family, and that "no stranger passed among them." Peters.

20. The wicked man travaileth with pain all his days, Eliphaz having argued against Job's supposed opinion of his own righteousness, proceeds to confirm his own position, which he largely handles, and illustrates to ver. 31. Caryl. He describes with great strength the terrors of the wicked, and the troubles of an evil conscience. He tells us, that the wicked are as a woman in travail all the days of their life; that they are in perpetual fear;

Before CHRIST about 1520. all his days, and the number of years is hidden to the oppressor.

† Heb. A sound of fears. 21 † A dreadful sound is in his ears: in prosperity the destroyer shall come upon him.

22 He believeth not that he shall return out of darkness, and he is waited for of the sword.

23 He wandereth abroad for bread, saying, Where is it? he knoweth that the day of darkness is ready at his hand.

24 Trouble and anguish shall make him afraid; they shall prevail against him, as a king ready to the battle.

25 For he stretcheth out his hand against God, and strengtheneth himself against the Almighty.

26 He runneth upon him, even on his neck, upon the thick bosses of his bucklers:

27 Because he covereth his face with his fatness, and maketh collops of fat on his flanks.

that they never enjoy any solid peace; and that their prosperity quickly passeth away. This is a truth, which is confirmed by the sense of all men, and the experience of all ages; and ought to inspire us with a great dread of sin. Ostervald.

— the number of years is hidden &c.] His prospect of many years to come may be suddenly shortened: he may be cut off in the height of his career by the stroke of death, when he least expects a change. Chappelow.

21. A dreadful sound is in his ears: &c.] The wicked is here described as threatened by various dangers, though one only calamity may be destined to strike him: his misery is thus multiplied, because his conscience, and Providence, which conceals its intention, threaten him with all. Michaelis.

“A dreadful sound is in his ears, that in peace the destroyer will come upon him.” When there are no signs of invasions, insurrections, or plots against him, his disturbed imagination is continually presenting destruction to him. This is strong painting. Scott.

22. He believeth not that he shall return out of darkness,] If he fall into trouble he despairs of deliverance: instead of being delivered from this, a farther evil, even utter destruction, is ready to seize on him. Clark.

23. He wandereth abroad for bread, &c.] This abrupt transition to the punishment of the wicked transgressor, admirably expresses the suddenness of the event, and presents him to our sight in a most deplorable state of calamity. Scott.

26. He runneth upon him, even on his neck,] The wicked man maketh violent and presumptuous opposition to God, as if he could grapple with and overcome the Almighty; and fearlessly runs upon the most conspicuous judgments of God. Bp. Hall.

These images are borrowed from the single combat, which was much practised in the ancient wars. “Stretching out the hand” is the attitude of defiance: “strengthening himself,” or behaving himself insolently, may denote the haughty terms of the challenge; and “running, &c.” the intrepidity and fury of his attack. These bold metaphors are intended to express the most daring impiety, atrocious violation of the laws of God, with contempt of His vindictive justice. The whole may be thus translated: “For he stretched out his hand against God, and bade defiance to the Almighty. He ran upon Him with his neck,” that is, with his neck stooping and stretched out, the very attitude of a combatant running upon his adversary, “upon the thick boss of His buckler.”

28 And he dwelleth in desolate cities, and in houses which no man inhabiteth, which are ready to become heaps. Before CHRIST about 1520.

29 He shall not be rich, neither shall his substance continue, neither shall he prolong the perfection thereof upon the earth.

30 He shall not depart out of darkness; the flame shall dry up his branches, and by the breath of his mouth shall he go away.

31 Let not him that is deceived trust in vanity: for vanity shall be his recompence.

32 It shall be accomplished before his time, and his branch shall not be green. Or, cut off.

33 He shall shake off his unripe grape as the vine, and shall cast off his flower as the olive.

34 For the congregation of hypocrites shall be desolate, and fire shall consume the tabernacles of bribery.

35 They conceive mischief, and bring forth vanity. 4 Is. 59. 4. Ps. 7. 14.

The Scripture poets represent the Almighty armed with a shield, a sword, and a bow. Scott.

27. Because he covereth his face with his fatness,] Because he is grown rich, powerful, and successful; and his only care is to pamper and please himself. Clark.

28. And he dwelleth in desolate cities,] He possesseth cities which he hath laid desolate; and houses out of which he hath driven the owners, and which are running to ruin. Bp. Patrick.

The foregoing verse marked the sensuality of this wicked man. The character would have been left unfinished, had nothing been added concerning the oppressions by which that luxury was supported. I think, therefore, that by “dwelling in desolate cities, &c.” must be understood his getting possession of them by conquest, and depopulating them, partly by his sword, and partly by severe contributions and taxations. Scott.

29. — neither shall he prolong the perfection thereof upon the earth.] The verse may be thus rendered: “He shall not (continue to) be rich, neither shall his might endure, and their prosperity shall not extend,” or “spread abroad in the earth,” like a flourishing tree. Parkhurst.

30. He shall not depart &c.] He shall not come out of his calamities. The destruction of the tyrant, with his whole family and fortunes, is here represented by that of a lofty tree, which on some dark tempestuous day is fired by lightning, torn up by the wind, and hurled down the precipice on which it grew. Scott.

31—35. Let not him that is deceived trust in vanity:] Eliphaz laid down his doctrine at the 20th verse of this chapter, that a wicked man's life is full of misery; and having insisted long upon the proof, he now gives the application of it. Caryl.

31. Let not him that is deceived &c.] Let not him that is seduced into evil ways trust to uncertain greatness; for disappointments shall be all that he will gain by it: and he shall meet with these where he least expects them; and shall see his children wither away as well as himself. Bp. Patrick.

32. It shall be accomplished before his time, &c.] Affliction shall come when he least thinks of it, like fruit withered before it be ripe. Bp. Wilson.

— his branch shall not be green.] Shall not continue green. His fate shall be like that of a vine or olive, that is withered by drought, or by a poisonous east wind: see the next verse. Scott.

35. They conceive mischief, and bring forth vanity.] See Ps. vii.

Before CHRIST about 1520. CHURIST about 1520. Or, iniquity. forth || vanity, and their belly prepareth deceit.

CHAP. XVI.

1 Job reproveth his friends of unmercifulness. 7 He sheweth the pitifulness of his case. 17 He maintaineth his innocency.

THEN Job answered and said, 2 I have heard many such things: || 3 miserable comforters are ye all.

3 Shall † vain words have an end? or what emboldeneth thee that thou answerest?

4 I also could speak as ye do: if your soul were in my soul's stead, I could heap up words against you, and shake mine head at you.

5 But I would strengthen you with my mouth, and the moving of my lips should assuage your grief.

6 Though I speak, my grief is not assuaged: and though I forbear, † what am I eased?

7 But now he hath made me weary: thou hast made desolate all my company.

8 And thou hast filled me with wrinkles, which is a witness against me: and my leanness rising up in me beareth witness to my face.

9 He teareth me in his wrath, who hateth me: he gnasheth upon me with his teeth; mine enemy sharpeneth his eyes upon me.

10 They have gaped upon me with their mouth; they have smitten me upon the cheek reproachfully; they have gathered themselves together against me.

11 God † hath delivered me to the ungodly, and turned me over into the hands of the wicked. † Heb. hath shut me up.

12 I was at ease, but he hath broken me asunder: he hath also taken me by my neck, and shaken me to pieces, and set me up for his mark.

13 His archers compass me round about, he cleaveth my reins asunder, and doth not spare; he poureth out my gall upon the ground.

14 He breaketh me with breach upon breach, he runneth upon me like a giant.

15 I have sewed sackcloth upon my skin, and defiled my horn in the dust.

16 My face is foul with weeping, and on my eyelids is the shadow of death;

17 Not for any injustice in mine hands: also my prayer is pure.

18 O earth, cover not thou my blood, and let my cry have no place.

14; Is. lix. 4. All his attempts are rendered abortive; yet he still persists in continuing new schemes of fraud. Grotius. — their belly prepareth deceit.] Their secret thoughts do but in the end deceive themselves. Bp. Hall.

Chap. XVI, XVII. Job answers that Eliphaz had said nothing new, nothing worthy of notice. Piety and virtue would not be extinguished, if they had no certain rewards in this life; the truly pious, he declares, would still persevere: he maintains his innocence, and calls God to witness that he is not polluted with secret sins. Michaelis.

Chap. XVI. ver. 4. — I could heap up words against you,] I could tack together (old) sayings against you; alluding to the speech of Eliphaz, who in the preceding chapter had urged such sayings against Job. Parkhurst.

— shake mine head at you.] As a mark of scorn: so Ps. 22. 7, "All they that see me laugh me to scorn: they shoot out the lip, they shake the head." Caryl.

7. — thou hast made desolate all my company.] Thou, Eliphaz, by thy slanders, sanctified by thy years and character, drivest away the few friends my adversity had left me. It is supposed he alludes to chap. xv. 34, "the congregation of hypocrites shall be desolate." Scott.

8. And thou hast filled me with wrinkles, &c.] That is, my friends reproach me with it, as if it were a proof of my being wicked. Peters.

Or thus: the wrinkles that are suddenly grown in my face, bear witness to my extreme suffering. Bp. Hall.

9. He teareth me in his wrath, &c.] This passage is generally referred to God as the agent. Caryl. Or, by a sudden change of the person, expressive of great emotion, he turneth from Eliphaz to the audience; and, instead of continuing his address to him, complaineth bitterly of him. "He," this man, my professed friend, is become my false accuser. Scott. The metaphor is taken from a beast of prey, who rends and tears his prey in pieces; and the same metaphor is carried on through the whole. Heath.

10. They have gaped upon me with their mouth;] My friends, the instruments of God's anger, have treated me with the greatest contempt, and combined to grieve me. Clark.

This was the case with Christ, as it had been with Job. In this, and in many other things, the Jews, who received this book, as written under the influence of the Spirit of God, might have seen that the best of men may suffer wrongfully; and suffer by the malice of men and devils. Such is God's will. Bp. Wilson.

— they have smitten me upon the cheek reproachfully;] A proverbial form of speech for atrocious defamation. Lam. iii. 30. Scott.

13. — he poureth out my gall upon the ground.] A proverbial expression, which appears to be derived from hence; When a beast is taken and slain, it is usual, on taking out the bowels, to pour the gall on the ground, lest the overflowing of it should give a disagreeable flavour to the adjoining parts: so that Job only pursues here the former theme of his sufferings; that he was (as St. Paul speaks of himself, 2 Cor. i. 8,) "pressed out of measure, above strength, inasmuch that he despaired even of life;" which he gives yet more fully in the next verse, "He breaketh me, &c." Caryl.

15. I have sewed sackcloth upon my skin, &c.] I have humbly submitted myself to receive and sustain these dispensations. "The horn" is often put for power and dignity. "There shall I make the horn of David to flourish," Ps. cxxxii. 18. Caryl. See note at 1 Sam. ii. 1.

As "exalting the horn" intimates the highest degree of honour and power, so this phrase of "defiling one's horn in the dust," is an expression of the greatest ignominy and abasement that a person can suffer, especially after having been exalted to a high station. Chappelow.

18. O earth, cover not thou my blood, &c.] Commentators are divided in their interpretations of this passage. Some suppose that Job utters here an imprecation on himself, if he has been guilty of any such offences as his friends would, by insinuation, fasten upon him. According to which interpretation the sense

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.
† Heb.
in the high places.
† Heb. are my scorners.
|| Or, friend.
† Heb. years of number.

19 Also now, behold, my witness is in heaven, and my record is † on high.

20 My friends † scorn me: but mine eye poureth out tears unto God.

21 O that one might plead for a man with God, as a man pleadeth for his || neighbour!

22 When † a few years are come, then I shall go the way whence I shall not return.

CHAP. XVII.

1 Job appealeth from men to God. 6 The unmerciful dealing of men with the afflicted may astonish, but not discourage the righteous. 11 His hope is not in life, but in death.

|| Or, spirit is spent.

MY || breath is corrupt, my days are extinct, the graves are ready for me.

2 Are there not mockers with me? and may be, If it be not true that there is no injustice in my hands, and that my prayer is pure, let my blood be left for the dogs to lick, when I am dead, and let neither God nor man regard my complaint, while I am alive. Others understand him to pray, that his innocence may be cleared, and that his grief and his cries may be every where made known. The sense will then be, "O earth, cover not my blood," so as to withdraw it from the sight of God; see Gen. iv. 10, 11; xxxvii. 26; 1 Sam. xxvi. 20; Is. xxvi. 21; in other words, O that my afflictions may be displayed before the eyes of God and man! a wish, that the earth may not cover his blood before it has made manifest his innocence, which he asserts in the preceding verse: "and let my cry have no place," where it may be concealed; but let it be carried up to heaven. Bp. Patrick, Rosenmüller.

19. Also now, behold, my witness is in heaven.] As if Job had said, I fear no evidence that can be brought against me on earth, and I rejoice in the witness which I have in heaven: though I have none to testify for me here, yet I have One who will testify for me above: "my witness is in heaven, and my record is on high." We may hence remark, that a good man dares appeal to God, and commit his cause to Him, deriving joy and comfort from the reflection, that there is a God in heaven who knows his heart, and is the witness of all his ways. Caryl.

21. O that one might plead for a man with God,] That I might argue my cause as freely with God, as men of the same rank and degree debate their own cases with each other. All that Job seems to intend by uttering this wish, is the desire he has to gain an opportunity of setting himself right in the opinion of men, by that impartial decision of his cause which, he was well assured, God would give upon the whole matter in question between him and his friends, if once He would be pleased to vouchsafe a free and familiar hearing. Caryl.

22. — whence I shall not return.] A return to this world is all that can be reasonably understood both here and chap. x. 21: and it is remarkable, that in both places the words are introduced by a reflection on the bitter usage given to Job by his friends. Peters.

As for the complaints that Job makes in this chapter, and his protestations of innocence, they are not to be interpreted into a declaration that he was exempt from all sin, or into a pretence of justifying himself before God. But as his friends had accused him of bringing on himself by his sins all the miseries which he endured, he meant only that he was not guilty of those heinous sins, by which wicked and ungodly men expose themselves to the Divine vengeance. Every one, who sincerely fears God, should be able to say as much: and this should make us sensible of the happiness of those who endeavour to live uprightly, and can call God to witness their sincerity in studying to serve Him and keep His commandments. Ostervald.

doth not mine eye † continue in their provocation?

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

3 Lay down now, put me in a surety with thee; who is he that will strike hands with me?

† Heb.
lodg.

4 For thou hast hid their heart from understanding: therefore shalt thou not exalt them.

5 He that speaketh flattery to his friends, even the eyes of his children shall fail.

6 He hath made me also a byword of the people; and || aforetime I was as a tabret.

|| Or,
beforethem.

7 Mine eye also is dim by reason of sorrow, and all || my members are as a shadow.

|| Or, my thoughts.

8 Upright men shall be astonished at this, and the innocent shall stir up himself against the hypocrite.

Chap. XVII. ver. 1. My breath is corrupt,] In the margin, "My spirit is spent." The verse may run, "My breath is confined, straitened, oppressed; my days are extinct; the sepulchral cells are ready for me:" for in the elephantiasis, Job's distemper, death is usually caused by a violent suffocation. Parkhurst.

— the graves] The cells or holes in the sepulchral chambers for the coffins; see Ezek. xxxii. 22, 23: the walls of these subterraneous rooms, hewn in the rock, were sometimes scooped into rows of cells, like the holes in a pigeon house, wide and deep enough to receive a coffin of seven or eight feet long. Scott.

2—4. Are there not mockers with me? &c.] As in the fourth verse Job addresses his speech to God, so in the two preceding he points at and addresses himself to his mistaken friends. "Are there not mockers with me? lay down now (some pledge,) put me in a surety with thee; who is he that will strike hands with me?" Which of you, who thus mock and insult me, will venture to try your cause before the Supreme Judge? No, they shew a want of understanding in thus rashly censuring me; and were they to bring their cause before Thee, O God, "Thou wouldest not exalt them," that is, they would be cast in their trial. The sense is very obvious and easy: the change of the person addressed, and the several breaks in the sentence, only shew the earnestness of the speaker, and are both natural and elegant. Peters.

2. — doth not mine eye continue in their provocation?] Is not their unjust provocation continually in mine eye; so that I cannot but be a witness of their injury? Bp. Hall.

3. — who is he that will strike hands with me?] In the days of ancient simplicity, "striking hands" was thought a sufficient ratification of the most solemn engagements. Scott.

5. He that speaketh flattery to his friends, &c.] This is to be understood as an apology for the contemptuous mention of his friends just before. I cannot flatter you, says Job: the man that will give up truth for a compliment, deserves to be punished even in his posterity. Bp. Stock.

6. — aforetime I was as a tabret.] I was in good repute, was as welcome as a tabret. Caryl. Or, "He," namely Eliphaz, "has made me a byword of the people, and I shall be," or "that I may be, an example before them." The word, rendered "tabret" in our version, may signify a sign or example to others, according to the Latin Vulgate. Parkhurst.

7. Mine eye also is dim by reason of sorrow,] It is evident even to common observation, that great sorrow and weeping will have nearly the same effect on the eyes as old age. Compare Ps. vi. 7; xxxi. 9. Parkhurst.

8. Upright men shall be astonished at this,] Upright men hereafter will be astonished at the cruel sentence which my friends pass upon me; and the innocent will resolutely oppose the wicked, when he judges the worse of piety because of my affliction. Bp. Patrick.

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

† Heb. shall add strength.

† Heb.
the possessions.

† Heb.
near.

† Heb.
cried, or,
called.

9 The righteous also shall hold on his way, and he that hath clean hands † shall be stronger and stronger.

10 But as for you all, do ye return, and come now: for I cannot find one wise man among you.

11 My days are past, my purposes are broken off, even † the thoughts of my heart.

12 They change the night into day: the light is † short because of darkness.

13 If I wait, the grave is mine house: I have made my bed in the darkness.

14 I have † said to corruption, Thou art my father: to the worm, Thou art my mother, and my sister.

15 And where is now my hope? as for my hope, who shall see it?

16 They shall go down to the bars of the pit, when our rest together is in the dust.

CHAP. XVIII.

1 Bildad reproveth Job of presumption and impatience.
5 The calamities of the wicked.

THEN answered Bildad the Shuhite, and said,

2 How long will it be ere ye make an end of words? mark, and afterwards we will speak.

3 Wherefore are we counted as beasts, and reputed vile in your sight?

4 He teareth † himself in his anger: shall the earth be forsaken for thee? and shall the rock be removed out of his place?

5 Yea, the light of the wicked shall be put out, and the spark of his fire shall not shine.

6 The light shall be dark in his tabernacle, and his ‖ candle shall be put out with him.

7 The steps of his strength shall be straitened, and his own counsel shall cast him down.

8 For he is cast into a net by his own feet, and he walketh upon a snare.

9 The gin shall take him by the heel, and the robber shall prevail against him.

10 The snare is † laid for him in the ground, and a trap for him in the way.

11 Terrors shall make him afraid on every side, and shall † drive him to his feet.

12 His strength shall be hungerbitten, and destruction shall be ready at his side.

13 It shall devour the † strength of his

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

† Heb.
his soul.

‖ Or. lamp.

† Heb.
hidden.

† Heb.
scatter him.

† Heb.
bars.

9. The righteous also shall hold on his way,] Shall not leave the ways of piety, notwithstanding his crosses, or your wrong censures. Bp. Wilson. Notwithstanding this scandal of my sufferings, and all other discouragements which he may meet with. Clark.

10. — do ye return, and come now:] Give up your unjust opinion of me, and listen to my words, which declare the truth, and contain wholesome instruction. Rosenmüller.

11. — the thoughts of my heart.] Literally, the possessors of my heart: that is, thoughts or purposes, which had taken entire possession of it. Parkhurst.

12. They change the night into day:] My great afflictions change my night into day; causing me to pass over that time of darkness without any rest, so that my thoughts are no less busy than in the day; and so great is the darkness of my misery, that it eclipseth my day, and makes it either short or none. Bp. Hall.

15. And where is now my hope?] Where is my hope of future prosperity, with which you seek to delude me? Clark.

16. They shall go down to the bars of the pit,] Those hopes you speak of shall go down with me to the bottom of the grave, and shall rest with me together in the dust. Bp. Hall.

You see me dying, and yet you bid me hope for better days; (see chap. v. 19—26; viii. 5—7, 20—22; xi. 15—20;) instead of comforting me with a prospect and hope of a reward hereafter, for mine integrity here. Bp. Wilson.

— the bars of the pit,] Or, the hidden recesses of the grave: the same with “the gates of death,” ch. xxxviii. 17; and “gates of the grave,” Is. xxxviii. 10. Chappelow.

Chap. XVIII. Bildad has nothing to add to the argument, that misery is the lot only of the wicked, except an invective against Job for persisting in his opinion, and for expressing it with so much passion and indecency of petulance. He concludes with a laboured description of the inevitable fate of the man who knoweth not God. Bp. Stock.

Ver. 4, 5. — shall the earth be forsaken for thee? &c.] As if Bildad had said, What is this wonderful man, that he expects to see all things destroyed, the earth and the heavens to pass away, that there may be a proper time to do him justice? Is it not more reasonable to think that God will do justice here, than that all the works of nature should be destroyed to make way for judgment? “Yea, the light of the wicked shall be put out, and the spark of his fire shall not shine.” Bp. Sherlock.

6. The light shall be dark in his tabernacle, &c.] The houses of Egypt, according to Maillet, are never without lights in the night-time. If such was the ancient custom, not only of Egypt, but of the neighbouring countries of Judea and Arabia, it will strongly illustrate this passage, ch. xxi. 17; Ps. xviii. 28; cxxxii. 17; Jer. xxv. 10; and other passages. In ch. xxix. 3, there is probably an allusion to the lamps, which hung from the ceiling in the banqueting rooms of the wealthy Arabs. Parkhurst.

An Arabian poet expresses the permanent prosperity of his family, almost in the very words of Bildad: “Neither is our fire, lighted for the benefit of the night-stranger, extinguished.” There is an allusion to the Arabian fires of hospitality, or beacons lighted on the tops of hills by Arabians of distinction, to direct and invite travellers to their houses and tables. Scott.

8. — he walketh upon a snare.] Or, “he runneth to and fro in the toils.” The metaphor is taken from a beast, which the hunters have driven into the toils. He runs here and there striving to find a way out, till at length it fastens upon him. The word “robber” in the next verse having no relation to the preceding metaphor, it would be rendered more properly, “and the noose fasteneth close upon him.” Heath.

11. — shall drive him to his feet.] They shall make him flee or run; force him to have recourse to his feet. Caryl.

This seems to be a metaphor taken from a warrior, who is so sorely pressed in battle, that he has no hope of saving himself, but by betaking himself to his feet and running away. Heath.

12. His strength shall be hungerbitten,] Shall decay for want of food. Clark.

Before CHRIST about 1520. skin: even the firstborn of death shall devour his strength.

^a Chap. 8. 14 ^a His confidence shall be rooted out of his tabernacle, and it shall bring him to the king of terrors.

10. 15 It shall dwell in his tabernacle, because it is none of his: brimstone shall be scattered upon his habitation.

16 His roots shall be dried up beneath, and above shall his branch be cut off.

^b Prov. 2. 22. 17 ^b His remembrance shall perish from the earth, and he shall have no name in the street.

[†] Heb. They shall drive him. 18 [†] He shall be driven from light into darkness, and chased out of the world.

19 He shall neither have son nor nephew among his people, nor any remaining in his dwellings.

20 They that come after him shall be astonished at his day, as they that || went before [†] were affrighted.

|| Or, lived with him.

[†] Heb. laid hold on horror. 21 Surely such are the dwellings of the wicked, and this is the place of him that knoweth not God.

13. — even the firstborn of death shall devour his strength.] The most cruel and painful death shall make an end of all his power and glory. Bp. Hall.

The sentence of death, pronounced on all mankind, gave birth to diseases; which therefore by a sublime allegory are styled the offspring of death: and the most horrible disease, that which hath the preeminence in cruelty, is called his "firstborn," his might and the beginning of his strength. Scott.

14. His confidence &c.] That is, his hopes, his fortune, his family. Heath.

— it shall bring him to the king of terrors.] His broken confidence shall bring him to death: the ruin of all his hopes shall hasten his death. Caryl.

15. It shall dwell in his tabernacle.] Yea, this terror shall dwell and continue in his tabernacle, which, though he possesses it, his conscience tells him is not his own, since he has gained it by extortion and violence; and God shall rain down brimstone upon it, as He did upon Sodom. Bp. Hall.

The Hebrew poets and Prophets used the overthrow of Sodom and Gomorrah as an image of all other desolating judgments of God. Bp. Lowth.

16. His roots shall be dried up beneath.] He shall be like a withered tree, whose roots being once dried up below, the branches are presently cut down for fire-wood. Bp. Hall.

17. — he shall have no name in the street.] Perhaps an allusion is here made to the custom of placing monumental inscriptions near the road. Dr. Durell.

The word rendered "street," means "an out-place;" "a field:" and it is so translated in the text and margin of chap. v. 10. It seems to allude to the want of a sepulchral monument; for the Eastern nations still bury their dead without their cities, in the fields. Parkhurst.

20. — at his day.] The word "day," without any addition, is frequently used in Scripture to signify an eminently evil day, as in Ps. cxxxvii. 7, "Remember, O Lord, the children of Edom in the day of Jerusalem." The meaning of the whole verse is this; As they who lived at the time when God brought those evils upon him were affrighted, so they who come after shall be astonished at him; the former were terrified by the sight of the judgments, the latter shall be astonished at the report of them. Caryl.

CHAP. XIX.

Before CHRIST about 1520.

1 Job, complaining of his friends' cruelty, sheweth there is misery enough in him to feed their cruelty. 21, 28 He craveth pity. 23 He believeth the resurrection.

THEN Job answered and said,
2 How long will ye vex my soul, and break me in pieces with words?

3 These ten times have ye reproached me: ye are not ashamed that ye || make yourselves strange to me.

|| Or, harden yourselves against me.

4 And be it indeed that I have erred, mine error remaineth with myself.

5 If indeed ye will magnify yourselves against me, and plead against me my reproach:

6 Know now that God hath overthrown me, and hath compassed me with his net.

7 Behold, I cry out of || wrong, but I am not heard: I cry aloud, but there is no judgment.

|| Or, violence.

8 He hath fenced up my way that I cannot pass, and he hath set darkness in my paths.

9 He hath stripped me of my glory, and taken the crown from my head.

An allusion is here made to the eighth verse of the former chapter: men will be astonished, not, as Job observed, at the fate of the innocent, but at the severe judgment that befalls the wicked. Michaëlis.

21. Surely such are the dwellings of the wicked.] Though all these observations concerning affliction are true of the wicked, yet they must not be applied to all that are visited with affliction: for affliction is sometimes the portion of God's children, as it was in this case of Job. Bp. Wilson.

Chap. XIX. Wearied with incessant reproaches and accusations, Job, in his reply to Bildad, laments the estrangement of his friends and family in the most pathetic terms; and attributes it to the Divine wrath; and despairing of redress, or the vindication of his innocence in this life, he makes a solemn appeal to his Redeemer; and professes his belief, that he shall be acquitted at his resurrection, in the general judgment: and bids his friends beware, lest God should afflict them with those common visitations here of the sword, &c. which were designed to shew God's judgment on sinners. Dr. Hales.

Ver. 3. — ye make yourselves strange to me.] You act as strangers, not as friends. You reproach me, as if my manner of life had been unknown to you. Bp. Wilson.

4. And be it indeed that I have erred, &c.] If I have erred, I am the sufferer, not you. Roscnmüller.

4—6. And be it indeed &c.] Let it be granted that I am in an error; if ye upon that ground "magnify yourselves against me, and plead against me my reproach," then "know that God hath overthrown me, and hath compassed me with His net:" this answer may put you to silence. As if he had said, The hand of God is upon me; why do you lift up your heads against me? doth it become you to magnify yourselves, because God hath brought me low? Caryl.

7. — there is no judgment.] There is no one to judge between me and my brethren in this case. Caryl.

9. — the crown] This may mean the richer kind of turban, which is worn by persons of distinction among the Arabs at this day. It appears to have been the same with the tiara or diadem. Or the expression may be metaphorical; and the "glory" and "the crown" may denote his dignity, and the honours paid to his authority, justice, and beneficence. Scott.

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

10 He hath destroyed me on every side, and I am gone: and mine hope hath he removed like a tree.

11 He hath also kindled his wrath against me, and he counteth me unto him as one of his enemies.

12 His troops come together, and raise up their way against me, and encamp round about my tabernacle.

13 He hath put my brethren far from me, and mine acquaintance are verily estranged from me.

14 My kinsfolk have failed, and my familiar friends have forgotten me.

15 They that dwell in mine house, and my maids, count me for a stranger: I am an alien in their sight.

16 I called my servant, and he gave me no answer; I intreated him with my mouth.

17 My breath is strange to my wife, though I intreated for the children's sake of † mine own body.

† Heb.
my belly.

10. He hath destroyed me on every side,] He hath brought me to such utter ruin, that, like a tree plucked up by the roots, I have not so much as hope remaining, which is the only comfort of the wretched. Bp. Patrick.

12. His troops come together,] Whole armies of evils, by His order, have at the same time invaded me, and laid so close a siege to me, that not the smallest comfort that I had could escape their fury. Bp. Patrick. These metaphors are borrowed from the works cast up by a besieging army, for the annoyance of a city with their arrows and engines of war, Isai. xxxvii. 33. Scott.

15. They that dwell in mine house,] The clients of my house. The word is that by which the Arabs denote such as put themselves under a great man's protection, are adopted into his family, and become dependent on him for maintenance and security. Schultens, Scott.

17. My breath is strange to my wife,] She will not listen to my words. Caryl.

20. My bone cleaveth to my skin &c.] I am become a very skeleton. Bp. Wilson.

The latter part of the verse may be rendered, "And I have shed (the hair,) or have become bald on the skin of, or which covers, my teeth;" that is, My mustaches are, or the hair is, shed or fallen off from my emaciated lip; which was one symptom of the elephantiasis, Job's distemper. Michaelis, Parkhurst.

22. Why do ye persecute me as God,] Why should you persecute me as God, or claim to yourselves the prerogative, like Him, to know the very secrets of my heart? Are the miseries you see me suffer in my flesh too little to satisfy you, that you are resolved to pierce my very soul with your unjust reproaches? Peters.

— and are not satisfied with my flesh? That is, why are ye not satisfied with the reproaches and slanders with which ye have already worried me? To "eat the flesh" of another is an Arabian phrase for calumniating him. Schultens, Scott.

23. Oh that my words were now written! &c.] It has been supposed, that Job alludes in this passage to letters hollowed in the rock with the iron pen or chisel, and filled up with melted lead, in order to be more legible. The Septuagint, however, seem to have supposed, that he meant the recording of things by engraving accounts of them on sheets of lead. "Who will cause my words to be written, to be put in a book that shall last for ever; with an iron pen and lead," (that is, upon lead,) "or to be engraven on the rocks?" Which cutting of letters on lead marks out an ancient method indeed of perpetuating the memory of things. Harmer.

18 Yea, ‖ young children despised me; I arose, and they spake against me.

19 * All † my inward friends abhorred me: and they whom I loved are turned against me.

20 My bone cleaveth to my skin ‖ and to my flesh, and I am escaped with the skin of my teeth.

21 Have pity upon me, have pity upon me, O ye my friends; for the hand of God hath touched me.

22 Why do ye persecute me as God, and are not satisfied with my flesh?

23 † Oh that my words were now written! oh that they were printed in a book!

24 That they were graven with an iron pen and lead in the rock for ever!

25 For I know that my redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth:

26 ‖ And though after my skin worms de-

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

‖ Or,
the wicked.
* Psal. 41.
9. & 55. 20.
† Heb.
the men of my secret.
‖ Or, as.

† Heb.
Who will give, &c.

‖ Or, After
I shall awake, though this body be destroyed, yet out of my flesh shall I see God.

23, 24. Oh that my words &c.] "Oh that my words were engraved in a memorial with an iron pen and lead;" the lead being to grave upon with the iron pen or style. Pliny informs us, that writing on lead, rolls of lead, was of high antiquity, and came in practice next after writing on the barks and leaves of trees, and was used in recording publick transactions. And "the cutting or sculpturing in the rock for ever," seems to be here mentioned as a different and more durable method than even the engraving on lead. Scott, Parkhurst. It is easy to imagine, that the first inscriptions on stones were engraved on some places of the rocks which were accidentally smoothed and made pretty even. And in fact we find some, that are very ancient, engraved on the natural rock, and, what is remarkable, in Arabia, where it is supposed that Job lived. The Prefetto of Egypt describes some such inscriptions, cut in the hard marble rock, in none of the characters now in use in the East, nor in any of those in which ancient inscriptions before known are found written in those countries. By the expression rendered "printed" in our translation, Job meant to convey the idea of perpetuating his words, as is apparent from the twenty-fourth verse. Harmer.

— oh that they were printed in a book! Oh that they were noted in a register! He wishes that his memorable words might be transmitted to posterity; first, by writing, the usual method of preserving past transactions; secondly, by the still safer method of lodging this writing in the publick archives; thirdly, by inscribing them on lead, as more durable than linen or paper; and lastly, by engraving them in the natural rock, as the most durable of all. Scott.

25. For I know that my redeemer liveth,] However I am judged by you, yet this is my comfort, that I know I have a Judge and a gracious Redeemer to come, who lives eternally when ye shall be gone to dust, and shall one day come down to judge the quick and the dead; and shall in that last day of our general account present Himself here upon earth to the eyes of all flesh. Bp. Hall.

26, 27. And though after my skin &c.] And though after my skin, which you see so miserably affected, this whole frame shall be dissolved and turned to dust; yet I believe that I shall live again hereafter, as truly and as certainly as I do now, and shall appear personally before my Judge, whom I shall see for myself, or in my own cause, prepared to do me justice; and, conscious of my innocence, shall look up to Him with joy and hope; whilst others, my accusers, unable to behold Him, shall look down with shame and confusion. Peters.

That Job spoke not of any sudden restitution, or any change

Before CHRIST about 1520. stroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God:

27 Whom I shall see for myself, and mine eyes shall behold, and not † another; though my reins be consumed † within me.

28 But ye should say, Why persecute we him, || seeing the root of the matter is found in me?

29 Be ye afraid of the sword: for wrath bringeth the punishments of the sword, that ye may know there is a judgment.

CHAP. XX.

Zophar sheweth the state and portion of the wicked.

THEN answered Zophar the Naamathite, and said,

2 Therefore do my thoughts cause me to answer, and for this † I make haste.

in his temporal condition, is evident from the remarkable preface which ushers in this expression, "Oh that my words were now written! oh that they were printed in a book! that they were graven with an iron pen and lead in the rock for ever!" He desires that his words may continue as long as his expectation; that they may remain in the rock, together with his hope, so long as the rock shall endure, even to the day of his resurrection. The same appears from the objections of his friends, who urged against him that he was a sinner, and concluded from thence that he should never rise again; for his sins he pleaded a Redeemer, and for his resurrection he shewed an assurance through the same Redeemer. It is further confirmed by the expressions themselves, which are by no means proper for his temporal restitution: the first words, "I know," denote a certainty; whereas the blessings of this life are under no certainty, nor did Job pretend to it: I know certainly and infallibly, whatsoever shall become of my body at this time, which I know not; but this I know, that I shall rise: the title which he gives to Him on whom he depends, "the Redeemer," shews that he understands it of Christ; the time expressed denotes futurity, "at the latter day." The description of that Redeemer "standing on the earth" represents the Judge of the quick and the dead; and seeing God with his eyes declares his belief in the Incarnation. Bp. Pearson.

In this noble declaration of faith in a future resurrection, Job evidently had no more notion of a miraculous recovery, than Martha of the immediate resurrection of her brother Lazarus, when she professed her faith in the language of Job, "I know that he shall rise again at the last day," John xi. 24. Dr. Hales.

Job, being tired with the opposition of his friends, and the perverse construction they put upon his misfortunes, as if he must needs be wicked as he was miserable, appeals from them to another judgment, ver. 23—25. He insists strongly on his plea; though men would not receive it, yet he wishes it were "graven in the rock for ever;" that it might remain till the time when God would come to judge his cause; for "I know," he adds, "that my Redeemer liveth." Though I myself shall soon be gone, yet my Redeemer lives, and will at the last day call me from the grave; and with my own eyes shall I see God my Saviour. Bp. Sherlock.

Children of God ought to encourage themselves with the same hope in the midst of affliction, and in death itself; and these words of Job's ought to raise their minds to a firm expectation of the resurrection, and of the life to come through Jesus Christ our Saviour. Ostervald.

27. — my reins be consumed within me.] I feel my very vitals fail me, and am hastening on apace towards that death, which shall consign me to a future judgment. Peters.

28. But ye should say, &c.] But ye should rather say, Alas! why do we persecute this distressed man any more, since we find, if we look to the very root and bottom of this our dispute, that

3 I have heard the check of my reproach, and the spirit of my understanding causeth me to answer.

4 Knowest thou not this of old, since man was placed upon earth,

5 ² That the triumphing of the wicked is † short, and the joy of the hypocrite but for a moment?

6 Though his excellency mount up to the heavens, and his head reach unto the † clouds;

7 Yet he shall perish for ever like his own dung: they which have seen him shall say, Where is he?

8 He shall fly away as a dream, and shall not be found: yea, he shall be chased away as a vision of the night.

9 The eye also which saw him shall see he is upright, and innocent of those things whereof we have accused him. Bp. Hall.

29. Be ye afraid of the sword:] Job bids his friends beware, that they were not convinced to their cost of the certainty of a righteous judgment hereafter, by the experience of some one or other of those common plagues, which God was often seen to distribute in this life. He mentions the sword particularly, which destroys promiscuously the good and bad; and is sent or suffered by God with this intent, that men may from thence infer that there is a judgment. The expression in the Hebrew is remarkable, "For wrath (that is, the wrath of God) bringeth the punishments of the sword, that ye may know there is a judgment:" intimating, that the violence and iniquity, which always accompany the ravages of the sword; the many unjust and cruel things which are done and suffered amidst the rage of war; and, in short, every dispensation of Providence which levels the good and bad in this life, are a demonstration of a righteous judgment to be expected hereafter. Peters.

— the sword:] The sword in the hand of earthly magistrates is the emblem of punitive justice. The Scripture accordingly puts a sword into the hand of God, the supreme Magistrate, to signify His retributive justice. And the greatest of all Teachers represents the future punishments of wicked men in terms of allusion to the punishments inflicted by the courts of human judicature, Matt. v. 22. Scott.

Chap. XX. Zophar retorts upon Job for the threat at the close of his last speech, by declaiming like the rest on the transient prosperity and fearful end of great wicked men, insinuating covertly, that Job had all along deserved to be reckoned in this class, although Heaven had not till now been pleased to reveal his guilt. Bp. Stock.

The flaw in Zophar's discourse is this, (which was common to him with all the rest,) that he imagined God never varied from this method, and that therefore Job was, without doubt, a bad man, though it did not appear that he was so, any other way but by his misfortunes. Bp. Patrick.

Ver. 2. Therefore do my thoughts cause me to answer, &c.] Because of thy contumelious words and threatenings, (which I have fully weighed,) I have bethought myself what to answer. Clark.

3. I have heard the check of my reproach, &c.] What Zophar calls "the check of his reproach," was probably Job's stiffness, and persistence in his opinion, still dissenting from his friends, and refusing to be brought over to their judgments. Caryl.

4—7. Knowest thou not this of old, &c.] It seems thou dost not yet understand, though it is a truth as old as the world, that the happiness, boasted of by the wicked, and by him who counterfeits piety, is of no long standing, and will continue but for a few moments. Though he should be advanced to the highest pitch of human greatness, he shall at last be cast out with contempt. Bp. Patrick.

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

|| Or,
The poor shall oppress his children.

† Heb.
in the midst of his palate.

|| Or, streaming brooks.

him no more; neither shall his place any more behold him.

10 || His children shall seek to please the poor, and his hands shall restore their goods.

11 His bones are full of the sin of his youth, which shall lie down with him in the dust.

12 Though wickedness be sweet in his mouth, though he hide it under his tongue;

13 Though he spare it, and forsake it not; but keep it still † within his mouth:

14 Yet his meat in his bowels is turned, it is the gall of asps within him.

15 He hath swallowed down riches, and he shall vomit them up again: God shall cast them out of his belly.

16 He shall suck the poison of asps: the viper's tongue shall slay him.

17 He shall not see the rivers, || the floods, the brooks of honey and butter.

18 That which he laboured for shall he restore, and shall not swallow it down:

10. His children shall seek to please the poor,] This is much stronger than if he had said, "they shall become poor." It is placing them below poverty itself. They shall court the good-will and assistance of the most destitute and abject. Scott, Parkhurst. God many times suffers an estate got by oppression to prosper for a little while: but there is a curse attends it, which descends upon the estate like an encumbrance; and parents, when they think they entail an estate, often entail poverty upon their children. Alp. Tillotson.

12. — though he hide it under his tongue;] As a glutton that gets a sweet morsel between his teeth is loth to lose the taste of it, and therefore does not hastily swallow it down; thus does the carnal man deal with his sin: he keepeth it close, and hideth it under his tongue. Caryl.

14. Yet his meat in his bowels is turned, &c.] As meat mixed with poison, his sin will at last be his ruin. Bp. Wilson.

— the gall of asps] Aelian says, that the poison of asps is extremely subtle, and extends its effects very rapidly over the whole body. Hence the proverb, "bite of an asp," to express an incurable wound. With this verse is connected ver. 16, where "the viper" answers to several Eastern names, which are very near to the original Hebrew word, and which signify a serpent remarkable for a quick and penetrating poison. Script. illust. Expos. Ind.

15. He hath swallowed down riches,] The original word is very forcible: it denotes vast avidity and rapacity; being a metaphor from a ravenous beast devouring his prey. Compare Jer. li. 34. Scott.

— he shall vomit them up again:] He shall be forced to restore with sorrow his ill-gotten riches. God, by His providence, shall take them away, with plagues that will attend the loss of them. Bp. Wilson.

16. He shall suck the poison of asps:] His ill-gotten riches shall prove as great and as deadly a torture, as if, when he squeezed the poor, he had sucked the poison of asps, or been bitten by the viper. Bp. Patrick.

17. He shall not see the rivers, &c.] He shall not see the plenty and happiness which he proposed to himself. He shall have no satisfaction in what he gets by his industry. Such is the certain fruit of injustice and oppression. Bp. Wilson.

— the brooks of honey and butter.] We in these cooler countries have no great notion of butter being described as so ex-

† according to his substance shall the restitution be, and he shall not rejoice therein.

19 Because he hath † oppressed and hath forsaken the poor; because he hath violently taken away an house which he builded not;

20 ^b Surely he shall not † feel quietness in his belly, he shall not save of that which he desired.

21 || There shall none of his meat be left; therefore shall no man look for his goods.

22 In the fulness of his sufficiency he shall be in straits: every hand of the || wicked shall come upon him.

23 When he is about to fill his belly, God shall cast the fury of his wrath upon him, and shall rain it upon him while he is eating.

24 He shall flee from the iron weapon, and the bow of steel shall strike him through.

25 It is drawn, and cometh out of the body; yea, the glittering sword cometh out of his gall: terrors are upon him.

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

† Heb.
according to the substance of his exchange.

† Heb.
crushed.
^b Eccles. 5.
13, 14.

† Heb. know.
|| Or,
There shall be none left for his meat.

|| Or, troublesome.

remely liquid: it appears among us in a more solid state. But as the plentiful flowing of honey, when pressed from the comb into jars, in which it is wont to be kept, may be compared in strong language to a little river; so, according to the Eastern management, butter is equally fluid, and may be described in the same way, when poured from the skin, in which it is made, into jars for the purpose of being preserved. Harmer.

The Eastern butter is a kind of thick cream, not solid, like our lumps of butter. This butter and honey compose the same mess of food, and are eaten mixed together. D'Arvienx says of the Arabs, "One of their chief breakfasts is cream, or fresh butter, mixed in a mess of honey: these do not seem to suit very well together, but experience teaches that this is no bad mixture, nor disagreeable in its taste, if one is a little accustomed to it." Thevenot also says, "the Arabs knead their bread-paste afresh, adding thereto butter, and sometimes also honey." See the same mixture noticed in Isa. vii. 15, 22. Fragments to Calmet.

20. — he shall not feel quietness in his belly,] "Neither is his belly satisfied," as the Latin Vulgate translates it. His vice is described: it is an insatiable appetite of rapine. Scott.

22. In the fulness of his sufficiency he shall be in straits:] The greater his supply of worldly goods, the more he shall be distressed. Bp. Patrick.

24. He shall flee from the iron weapon, &c.] When he desires and hopes to avoid a less danger, he shall fall into a greater. Bp. Hall.

"He would flee from the weapons, but the brassen bow shall strike him through." The word rendered "weapons," signifies arms, or weapons of every sort, as the bow, shield, arrows, &c. Ezek. xxxix. 9; and is here put for the armed host, that is, of evils. God is at war with him. The Scripture arms the Divine Being with a sword, a bow, and arrows, to represent His vengeance, Ps. vii. 12, 13. Compare chap. vi. 4; xv. 24; see also the note on chap. xviii. 14. All his efforts to ward off the calamities which fall upon him will be ineffectual. The Arabian writers are very fond of the idea of a bow, and frequently use it to represent extraordinary, inevitable, and destructive calamities, from the hand of God. Scott.

25. It is drawn, and cometh out of the body; &c.] He is mortally wounded by these judgments: horrors of conscience seize upon him, because he cannot live, and dares not die. Clark.

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

26 All darkness shall be hid in his secret places: a fire not blown shall consume him; it shall go ill with him that is left in his tabernacle.

27 The heaven shall reveal his iniquity; and the earth shall rise up against him.

28 The increase of his house shall depart, and his goods shall flow away in the day of his wrath.

† Heb. of his decree from God.

29 This is the portion of a wicked man from God, and the heritage † appointed unto him by God.

CHAP. XXI.

1 Job sheweth that even in the judgment of man he hath reason to be grieved. 7 Sometimes the wicked do so prosper, as they despise God. 16 Sometimes their destruction is manifest. 22 The happy and unhappy are alike in death. 27 The judgment of the wicked is in another world.

26. All darkness shall be hid in his secret places:] Unforeseen danger shall arise, which he never suspected; and none of his house shall prosper. Bp. Wilson.

Rather, "a total darkness shall be reserved for his treasures;" that is, he shall for ever be as much deprived of them, as if they were still buried in the bowels of the earth; see ver. 21. Dr. Durell.

— a fire not blown shall consume him:] A fire not kindled by man, but sent down from heaven, in the just judgment of God, shall consume him, as thou, O Job, hast, not long since, had lamentable proof. Bp. Hall.

27. The heaven shall reveal his iniquity:] The heaven, by thunder, lightning, or tempests, shall declare itself his enemy; and the earth, by wild beasts or serpents, or some other way, shall make war against him. Bp. Patrick.

28. — in the day of his wrath.] That is, of God's wrath upon him: perhaps, more properly, though less strictly, "in the day of his sufferings;" that is, of the criminal's punishment. Script. illust. Expos. Ind.

29. This is the portion of a wicked man from God, &c.] The posterity of the wicked do many times inherit the fruit of their fathers' sins and vices; and that, not only by a just judgment of God, but from the natural course and consequence of things. And in this sense that expression of Job in the following chapter is often verified, that "God layeth up the iniquity of wicked men for their children," chap. xxi. 19. And experience testifies, that the intemperate and unjust do many times transmit their bodily infirmities and diseases to their children, and entail a secret curse upon their estates, which does either insensibly waste and consume them, or eat out the heart and comfort of them. Abp. Tillotson. We have here a most admirable account of great wicked men: the only fault in Zophar was, in misapplying it to Job; as if God could not in justice afflict any but wicked men. Bp. Wilson.

Chap. XXI. This chapter contains Job's reply to Zophar; in which he enters at large into the momentous question of God's dealings with mankind, in order to shew the falsehood of Zophar's argument of the shortlived triumph of the wicked.

He begins his speech with a gentle complaint of their severe treatment of him, and calls their attention to his reasoning upon this delicate subject, which he reflected on with awe and reverence, "Wherefore do the wicked live, &c." ver. 2—7. He then shews, that the wicked sometimes live long, and prosper, and die in peace; and yet that all this only hardened them in their

BUT Job answered and said,
2 Hear diligently my speech, and let this be your consolations.

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

3 Suffer me that I may speak; and after that I have spoken, mock on.

4 As for me, is my complaint to man? and if it were so, why should not my spirit be † troubled?

5 † Mark me, and be astonished, and lay your hand upon your mouth.

† Heb.
shortened?
† Heb.
Look unto me.

6 Even when I remember I am afraid, and trembling taketh hold on my flesh.

7 ^a Wherefore do the wicked live, become old, yea, are mighty in power?

^a Ps. 17. 10.
& 73. 12.
Jer. 12. 1.
Hab. 1. 16.

8 Their seed is established in their sight with them, and their offspring before their eyes.

9 Their houses † are safe from fear, neither is the rod of God upon them.

† Heb. are peace
from fear.

10 Their bull gendereth, and faileth not; their cow calveth, and casteth not her calf.

wickedness, and led them to cast off all regard to God and religion, ver. 14, 15.

But in touching on this tender ground, the prosperity of the wicked, which his adversaries might misinterpret, as if he were pleading the cause of impiety, he adds an apology for himself, that he was not of the "counsel of the wicked," neither of their opinion nor society; for that he did not consider their prosperity to be owing to themselves, or in their own "hand" or power: that oftentimes God made them terrible examples of His justice, and their children after them: thus admitting his adversaries' arguments, as far as they were just, ver. 16—21.

Still however he contends, in opposition to them, that, in the general course of God's providence, as it appears in fact, however mysterious His ways, good and evil are not seldom dispersed here promiscuously, without any strict regard to merit or demerit, during the whole period of human life, ver. 22—26.

Job next touches on their uncharitable perversion of his calamities into judgments; and as he had before stated his own hope of a resurrection, and a gracious sentence from his Redeemer, so now he closes and completes his masterly argument with a declaration, that the wicked who prosper in this life, and leave their proud monuments behind them, shall receive a dreadful recompense in the future day of judgment, ver. 27. Peters, Dr. Hales.

Ver. 2. Hear diligently my speech,] Let me prevail with you to attend to my discourse: do me this kindness, and it shall serve instead of those consolations which I promised myself from you. Bp. Patrick.

4. As for me, is my complaint to man?] If I had only to do with man in this my misery, and had no other to make my complaint to, I should have just reason to be utterly dejected; but now, I have a God to make my moan unto. Bp. Hall.

5—13. Mark me, and be astonished, &c.] As Job well knew, that this account of the prosperity of the wicked, however necessary to his argument, would have something shocking in it to the ears of those to whom it was addressed, the delicacy with which he introduces it is inimitable. Ver. 5—7, as if he had said, That thus it is in fact, is plain. It is with awe and reverence I speak it. But as for you, I am persuaded, that you will never be able upon your principles to account for it. Peters.

7—13. Wherefore do the wicked &c.] We have here a lively description of worldly felicity, drawn from the manners of Arabia, and adapted to the mode of wealth and sensual gratification in ancient times. Scott.

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

11 They send forth their little ones like a flock, and their children dance.

12 They take the timbrel and harp, and rejoice at the sound of the organ.

|| Or,
in mirth.

13 They spend their days || in wealth, and in a moment go down to the grave.

Chap. 22.
17.

14^b Therefore they say unto God, Depart from us; for we desire not the knowledge of thy ways.

15 What is the Almighty, that we should serve him? and what profit should we have, if we pray unto him?

16 Lo, their good is not in their hand: the counsel of the wicked is far from me.

|| Or,
lamp.

17 How oft is the || candle of the wicked put out? and how oft cometh their destruction upon them? God distributeth sorrows in his anger.

18 They are as stubble before the wind, and as chaff that the storm [†]carrieth away.

† Heb.
stealeth
away.
|| That is,
the punishment of his iniquity.

19 God layeth up || his iniquity for his children: he rewardeth him, and he shall know it.

20 His eyes shall see his destruction, and he shall drink of the wrath of the Almighty.

21 For what pleasure hath he in his house after him, when the number of his months is cut off in the midst?

22 Shall any teach God knowledge? seeing he judgeth those that are high.

23 One dieth [†]in his full strength, being wholly at ease and quiet.

24 || His breasts are full of milk, and his bones are moistened with marrow.

25 And another dieth in the bitterness of his soul, and never eateth with pleasure.

26 They shall lie down alike in the dust, and the worms shall cover them.

27 Behold, I know your thoughts, and the devices which ye wrongfully imagine against me.

28 For ye say, Where is the house of the prince? and where are [†]the dwelling places of the wicked?

29 Have ye not asked them that go by the way? and do ye not know their tokens, 30^c That the wicked is reserved to the day of destruction? they shall be brought forth to [†]the day of wrath.

31 Who shall declare his way to his face? and who shall repay him what he hath done?

32 Yet shall he be brought to the [†]grave, and shall [†]remain in the tomb.

33 The clods of the valley shall be sweet

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

† Heb.
in his very perfection,
or, in the strength of his perfection.

|| Or,
milk pails.

† Heb.
the tent of the tabernacles of the wicked?

* Prov. 16.
4.

† Heb.
the day of wraths.

† Heb.
graves.

† Heb.
watch in the heap.

12. — the organ.] The instrument here spoken of seems to have resembled the modern organ, so far as it consisted of a number of pipes set close, or joined together. We can hardly imagine it was very like the modern organ; it appears rather, from Ezek. xxxiii. 32, to have been, as Calmet observes, "a kind of flute composed of several pipes of unequal length and thickness joined together, which gave an harmonious sound, when they were blown into by moving them successively under the lower lip." It was probably not unlike the pastoral instrument, which the Roman poets ascribe to Pan. Parkhurst.

18. They are as stubble before the wind.] In order to perceive the beauty and propriety of these images, we should recollect the practice in the East of threshing their corn in the open field, so that, if the wind happen to rise, the shattered straw and chaff are easily carried away. Scott.

24. His breasts are full of milk.] Rather, "his pastures are full of milk;" that is, of flocks and herds; he dies in opulence. Scott. Or, "his bowels" or intestines "are full of," or abound with, "fat." Parkhurst.

27. Behold, I know your thoughts.] I know what you would insinuate by the speeches which you make, such as this which follows, ver. 28, "For ye say, &c." As if you should say, what is become of the house of Job, who lived like a prince? or what, in general, is the portion of the wicked? Does not a great and sure destruction overtake them? This is evidently the meaning of the question. The answer follows immediately, ver. 29, 30. Now if they were meant of a temporal destruction, it directly confirms the insinuation of the friends; and the inference would be unavoidable; therefore Job must needs be wicked.

But the true key to it appears to be this: It was the custom of the ancients to bury near the high roads, or in the most publick and conspicuous places; and to erect a pillar or monument over the dead, to preserve his memory. These pillars, if they had any inscription at all on them, recorded, no doubt, the name and titles of the person, and perhaps some of the happiest circumstances of his life, or what was most remarkable in his death. These inscriptions, moreover, usually bespoke attention by "Stop, Traveller;" or words to that purpose. These then probably are the marks or tokens, to which Job directs his friends; and which he advises them either to consult themselves, or to ask the travellers about them: and from thence they would be naturally led to make the inference or conclusion which follows in the next verse. For as they might observe several monuments among the rest, erected for such as had been notoriously wicked in their lives, and yet had run out a long course of years in prosperity, and had been buried at last with great pomp; it is with reason he bids them infer from hence, that the punishment of such as these was reserved for a more solemn season, which was the proper time of retribution, and not the mixed uncertain state of this life, ver. 27—30. Peters.

30. — the day of destruction — the day of wrath.] By the "day of destruction" and the "day of wrath," it will appear from the context, that no other can be meant than the future day of judgment; which to the wicked and ungodly is every where represented in Scripture as a day of wrath, a day of destruction. "They shall be punished (says St. Paul) with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of His power," 2 Thess. i. 9. And so St. Peter (2 Pet. iii. 7) calls the day of judgment, "the day of perdition of ungodly men." And it is remarkable, that where Job declares to his friends, that he had been all along withheld from sinning by a pious awe of the Divine justice, (meaning, probably, the thought of a future judgment,) he uses a similar expression, chap. xxxi. 23, "Destruction from God was a terrour to me." The Hebrew word, as well as that in our translation, is the same that is used here.

To understand it of a temporal destruction, is to suppose Job to cut the neck of his own argument at once, and to fall in with the meaning of his friends. Peters.

33, 34. The clods of the valley shall be sweet unto him, &c.] There he lies quietly in the earth, and none disturbs his ashes.

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

unto him, and every man shall draw after him, as there are innumerable before him.

34 How then comfort ye me in vain, seeing in your answers there remaineth † falsehood?

† Heb.
transgression.

CHAP. XXII.

1 Eliphaz sheweth that man's goodness profiteth not God.
5 He accuseth Job of divers sins. 21 He exhorteth him to repentance, with promises of mercy.

THEN Eliphaz the Temanite answered and said,

2 Can a man be profitable unto God, || as he that is wise may be profitable unto himself?

|| Or,
if he may be profitable, doth his good success depend thereon?

3 Is it any pleasure to the Almighty, that thou art righteous? or is it gain to him, that thou makest thy ways perfect?

4 Will he reprove thee for fear of thee? will he enter with thee into judgment?

5 Is not thy wickedness great? and thine iniquities infinite?

He suffers nothing but what all men shall suffer after him, as innumerable have suffered before him. See then how ill you discharge the office of comforters, whose answers have so little truth in them!

For you maintain, that prosperity is the inseparable companion of piety: when every one can tell you, that none flourish more than the wicked, and that calamities are common to all mankind. Bp. Patrick.

The liveliness of Eastern poetry here represents the dead as having the same perceptions as if they were alive in their sepulchres: "He shall watch in the heap" of earth or stones that cover him; for such, the margin of our translation tells us, is the more exact import of the Hebrew: "the clods" around him, like those in some pleasant valley, or on the border of some torrent, "shall be sweet unto him;" alluding probably to the manner of ornamenting their sepulchres, by planting on or about them flowers and odoriferous herbs or shrubs. Harmer.

Chap. XXII. Job having constantly affirmed, in opposition to his friends, that God equally afflicts the righteous and the wicked; and having intimated, chap. xxi. 4, that his complaint was not to man but to God, Eliphaz asks him, whether God hath any interest in refusing to bring him to that trial which he is so ready to call for. If, Eliphaz adds, God declines Job's challenge, it can be for no other reason, but that He is already fully aware of Job's misconduct, and needs not to investigate the matter. This seems to be the intent of the whole chapter, which may be divided into two distinct parts: the first is reprehensory; for Eliphaz reproves Job severely to the end of ver. 20: the second is hortatory, Eliphaz earnestly moving Job to repentance by many promises, and by assurances that his repentance will not be in vain, from ver. 20 to the end of the chapter. Bp. Stock, Caryl.

Ver. 3. Is it any pleasure to the Almighty, that thou art righteous? If thou art as upright as thou pretendest to be, still God is not indebted to thee for thy righteousness. Clark.

These words teach us that man, by doing good, cannot be profitable to God; that there is no accession of happiness to the Almighty, when we are righteous and walk in integrity; but that the advantage is all to ourselves. If God gives us laws, and commands us to observe them, He only does it for our good; and if we offend and disobey Him, we only hurt ourselves. Ostervald.

4. Will he reprove thee for fear of thee? Will it turn to God's profit, if thou livest never so unblamably? ver. 3. Or, on the contrary, ver. 4, Is He afraid that thou shouldest hurt Him by thy sins, and will He therefore punish thee? Is this the reason

6 For thou hast taken a pledge from thy brother for nought, and † stripped the naked of their clothing.

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

7 Thou hast not given water to the weary to drink, and thou hast withholden bread from the hungry.

† Heb. stripped the clothes of the naked.

8 But as for † the mighty man, he had the earth; and the † honourable man dwelt in it.

† Heb.
the man of arm.

9 Thou hast sent widows away empty, and the arms of the fatherless have been broken.

† Heb.
eminent, or,
accepted for coun-tance.

10 Therefore snares are round about thee, and sudden fear troubleth thee;

11 Or darkness, that thou canst not see; and abundance of waters cover thee.

12 Is not God in the height of heaven? and behold † the height of the stars, how high they are!

† Heb.
the head of the stars.

13 And thou sayest, || How doth God know? can he judge through the dark cloud?

|| Or,
What.

that He now afflicts thee, to prevent the damage they might do Him? Bp. Patrick.

6. For thou hast taken a pledge from thy brother for nought, &c.] Amongst Job's many and grievous afflictions, as it is hard to say which was the greatest, so we are sure this was not the least, that he was to wrestle with the unjust and bitter upbraidings of unreasonable and incompassionate men. They came to visit him as friends, and as friends they should have comforted him. But sorry friends they were, and "miserable comforters," chap. xvi. 2; indeed not comforters, but tormentors; and accusers, rather than friends. Seeing God's hand heavy upon him, for want of better or other proof, they charge him with hypocrisy. And because they would not seem to deal all in generalities, for against this general accusation of hypocrisy it was sufficient for him as generally to plead the truth and uprightness of his heart, they therefore go on more particularly, but as falsely, and as it were by way of instance, to charge him with oppression. Thus Eliphaz by name taxes him in this chapter. Against these foul aspersions, the good man defends himself something largely in the twenty-ninth chapter, in which he declares how he demeaned himself in the time of his prosperity in the administration of his magistracy, far otherwise than was laid to his charge. Bp. Sanderson.

— stripped the naked of their clothing.] The Arabs call their upper garment a hyke; which is a blanket, or gown, five or six yards long, and five or six yards broad. This is wrapped over the tunick, or close-bodied frock, which is the inner garment, and girded about their waist in time of work or action. Persons, who have no hyke or upper garment, but only their tunick and shirt, may be said to be "naked," according to the mode of speaking in the East. Dr. Shaw, Scott. The sense is, Thou hast stripped of their garments even those, who had no more but just enough to cover their nakedness. Bp. Patrick.

7. Thou hast not given water to the weary to drink,] Thou hast been hardhearted to the weary traveller, when thou savest him ready to die with thirst or hunger. Bp. Patrick.

Entertainment of travellers, and charity to the poor, were looked upon by the Arabs, and by the ancient Greeks, as duties of the most sacred obligation. The Odyssey of Homer has some noble sentiments on this subject; and the poems of the Arabs abound with them. The vilest of all characters among them was the inhospitable and avaricious man. Scott.

13. And thou sayest, How doth God know? &c.] It may be, you are so wicked as to imagine, that God cannot, or that He will

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

14 Thick clouds are a covering to him, that he seeth not; and he walketh in the circuit of heaven.

15 Hast thou marked the old way which wicked men have trodden?

16 Which were cut down out of time, † whose foundation was overflown with a flood:

† Heb.
a flood was poured upon their foundation.
* Ch. 21. 14.
|| Or,
to them.

17 ^a Which said unto God, Depart from us: and what can the Almighty do || for them?

* Ch. 21. 16.

18 Yet he filled their houses with good things: but ^b the counsel of the wicked is far from me.

* Ps. 107.
42.

19 ^c The righteous see it, and are glad: and the innocent laugh them to scorn.

|| Or, estate.
|| Or, their excellency.

20 Whereas || our substance is not cut down, but || the remnant of them the fire consumeth.

|| That is,
with God.

21 Acquaint now thyself || with him, and be at peace: thereby good shall come unto thee.

22 Receive, I pray thee, the law from his mouth, and lay up his words in thine heart.

* Chap. 8. 5.

23 ^d If thou return to the Almighty, thou shalt be built up, thou shalt put away iniquity far from thy tabernacles.

not, see the wickedness done upon earth: but consider how He drowned the world for their wickedness. Bp. Wilson.

15. Hast thou marked the old way &c.] This was the way of reasoning in the old world, till God convinced them of their error by destroying them with a deluge of water. Let me therefore advise you not to follow these men's steps, but make your peace with God, by a timely repentance, ver. 21. Bp. Wilson.

15, 16. Hast thou marked &c.] As the universal deluge was a most signal and memorable instance of God's displeasure against wickedness and wicked men, Eliphaz takes occasion here to enlarge upon it as a proper lesson (so he thought it) for his friend, and then closes it with the mention of another destruction either past or to be expected, which is described to be as general, and as fatal to the wicked; see ver. 20. Peters.

16. — whose foundation] Whose habitation; denominated here from its essential part, the better to express the durable materials of which their palaces were formed. Scott.

20. Whereas our substance is not cut down, &c.] This is the lot of wicked men; whereas we, who are righteous and godly, speed otherwise; our substance is both continued and multiplied; but as for them, that which remains of their riches, together with their persons, shall be consumed with the fire of God's displeasure. Bp. Hall.

21. Acquaint now thyself with him,] To "acquaint ourselves with God," is a phrase of the same import with coming to God, and seeking for Him, and many other expressions in Scripture, which signify nothing else but to become religious. Abp. Tillotson.

23. If thou return to the Almighty, thou shalt be built up, &c.] Thou shalt soon feel the comfortable fruits of it: for if thou return to the Almighty, who hath laid thee thus low, He will return to thee, and raise thee up as high as ever: He will pardon thine iniquity, and remove the punishment of it far from thee and thine. Bp. Patrick.

29. When men are cast down,] When thou seest good men cast down, then shalt thou, by the strength of thy faith, say, There shall be an exaltation for these men; and God will find a time to deliver and honour the humble person. Bp. Hall.

24 Then shalt thou lay up gold || as dust, and the gold of Ophir as the stones of the brooks.

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

25 Yea, the Almighty shall be thy || defence, and thou shalt have † plenty of silver.

|| Or,
on the dust.
|| Or, gold.
† Heb.
silver of
strength.

26 For then shalt thou have thy delight in the Almighty, and shalt lift up thy face unto God.

27 Thou shalt make thy prayer unto him, and he shall hear thee, and thou shalt pay thy vows.

28 Thou shalt also decree a thing, and it shall be established unto thee: and the light shall shine upon thy ways.

29 When men are cast down, then thou shalt say, There is lifting up; and he shall save † the humble person.

† Heb. him that hath low eyes.

30 || He shall deliver the island of the innocent: and it is delivered by the pureness of thine hands.

|| Or, The innocent shall deliver the island.

CHAP. XXIII.

1 Job longeth to appear before God, 6 in confidence of his mercy. 8 God, who is invisible, observeth our ways. 11 Job's innocency. 13 God's decree is immutable.

THEN Job answered and said,
2 Even to day is my complaint bit-

30. He shall deliver the island of the innocent:] Rather, "He," that is, God, "shall deliver the habitation of the innocent;" see Is. xx. 6, and the note there. Parkhurst. Or, "The innocent shall deliver a country, and it shall be delivered by the pureness of his hands." Men of exemplary piety and virtue are sometimes the preservers of a whole people, by means of their favour with God. This grand idea of the efficacy of true religion, and the vast utility of virtuous men, is derived from the patriarchal history; see Gen. xviii. 23, &c. Scott. Yea, a whole country shall owe its safety to thy innocence; it shall be delivered by thy pious prayers and blameless actions. Bp. Patrick.

It is "the innocent that delivereth the land," and reprieveth it from destruction, when the sentence of desolation is pronounced against it; "and it is delivered by the pureness of his hands." How great was the goodness of God, which would have spared the five cities of the Salt sea, if among so many thousands of abandoned sinners there had been found but ten righteous, Gen. xviii. 32: nay, which would have pardoned Jerusalem, if in all the "streets and broad places thereof," replenished with a world of idolaters, and swearers, and adulterers, and oppressors, there had been found but one single man, "that executed judgment, and sought the truth" from his heart! Jer. v. 1. When the wrath of God would be let loose to overwhelm a guilty nation, there is some godly Jehoshaphat or other, whose presence God regardeth among them, 2 Kings iii. 14; there is some zealous Moses or other, that "standeth in the gap" to protect them. Bp. Sanderson.

Chap. XXIII, XXIV. In the former chapter Job holds forth an answer to what Eliphaz had laid to his charge, and being still so virulently opposed, he first defends his own integrity, and secondly, in the latter chapter, overthroweth the foundation on which his friends built their general opposition; affirming that there is neither any certain time nor way in which the Lord punisheth wicked men in this world; and that therefore no argument can be framed, nor judgment given, of any man's condition by his present state, or the external dispensations of God towards him. Caryl.

Before CHRIST about 1520. ter : † my stroke is heavier than my groaning.

† Heb. my hand. 3 Oh that I knew where I might find him! that I might come even to his seat!

4 I would order my cause before him, and fill my mouth with arguments.

5 I would know the words which he would answer me, and understand what he would say unto me.

6 Will he plead against me with his great power? No; but he would put strength in me.

7 There the righteous might dispute with him; so should I be delivered for ever from my judge.

8 Behold, I go forward, but he is not there; and backward, but I cannot perceive him:

9 On the left hand, where he doth work,

Chap. XXIII. ver. 2, 3. Even to day is my complaint bitter:] Job, being provoked to a high degree by the freedom Eliphaz had taken with him in his last speech, in charging him directly with the most enormous sins, (chap. xxii. 5, 6,) turns to God, according to his custom, and earnestly begs that He would bring him to his trial; that He would hear the matter fully, and determine between him and his friends. "Oh that I knew where I might find Him! (that is, God;) that I might come even to His seat!" (or tribunal.) Peters.

Even still I have every day more cause than another to complain of my great affliction, and the stroke that I feel from God is more heavy than my groaning can express. Bp. Hall.

3—10. Oh that I knew where I might find him! &c.] What exalted and sublime conceptions Job entertained of the Deity, and how firmly he trusted in Him, under all the pressure of his accumulated trials, may appear from the present specimen, selected out of many, stating His omnipresence and spirituality or invisibility. Dr. Hales.

6, 7. Will he plead against me &c.] I know He is gracious: He would not stand either upon His rigour or His power over me; but would mercifully sustain me, and give me courage and ability to stand out in the maintenance of my sincerity before Him. Upon these terms, a man of upright heart might hold a lowly contention with Him; which once done, being absolved by His most just sentence, I should be delivered for ever from the slanders and condemnations of my unjust censurers. Bp. Hall.

8—10. Behold, I go forward, &c.] We may observe, that the thought which gives, or ought to give the wicked pain, namely, that the eye of God observes them, and that His power and justice reach to a future and invisible state, is what Job takes refuge in, as the only source of comfort to him in the depth of his distress. The present passage is remarkable to this purpose, where, after expressing the greatest earnestness to come before God and take his trial; turning himself this way and that way, and as it were feeling after Him, to find Him out, but in vain, (ver. 8, 9,) he cheers himself at last with this reflection, (ver. 10,) "But He knoweth the way that I take: when He hath tried me, I shall come forth as gold." If we compare this with the several passages in Job's speeches, where he absolutely despairs of any temporal deliverance, we must of necessity understand it of the hope he entertained of having his innocence cleared in the day of judgment.

There is a passage in the Book of Wisdom, which, if not borrowed from this of Job, affords at least a fine illustration of it, ch. iii. 4—6. Speaking of the happy lot of good men after death, who had been wretched and afflicted here, "Though they be pu-but I cannot behold him: he hideth himself on the right hand, but I cannot see him: Before CHRIST about 1520.

10 But he knoweth † the way that I take: when he hath tried me, I shall come forth as gold. † Heb. the way that is with me.

11 My foot hath held his steps, his way have I kept, and not declined.

12 Neither have I gone back from the commandment of his lips; † I have esteemed the words of his mouth more than ‖ my necessary food. † Heb. I have hid, or, laid up. ‖ Or, my appointed portion. Ps. 115. 3.

13 But he is in one mind, and who can turn him? and what^a his soul desireth, even that he doeth.

14 For he performeth the thing that is appointed for me: and many such things are with him.

15 Therefore am I troubled at his presence: when I consider, I am afraid of him.

nished," says the author, "in the sight of men, yet is their hope full of immortality. And having been a little chastised, they shall be greatly rewarded: for God proved them, and found them worthy for Himself. As gold in the furnace hath He tried them, and received them as a burnt offering." Peters.

11, 12. My foot hath held his steps, &c.] The morality of Job was not less excellent than his theology; in these verses he expresses his undeviating obedience to the law of God, and his delight therein. It is evident from this passage, and others, that there was some collection of precepts, or rules of religion and morality in use among the Patriarchs; such were the precepts of the sons of Noah; and there is great reason to believe, that the substance at least of the Decalogue given in Sinai was of primitive institution. The decree of the first council held at Jerusalem by the Apostles seems to refer to such, Acts xv. 28, 29. Compare Gen. ix. 1—6. Dr. Hales.

13. But he is in one mind, and who can turn him?] But, O vain man that I am! how should I hope to alter the determinations of that wise and powerful God! what He hath decreed must be; and who can change His purposes? Bp. Hall.

14. For he performeth the thing that is appointed for me:] For what He hath resolved to inflict upon me, that I find He will accomplish. Bp. Patrick.

— and many such things are with him.] Many such things, as these proceedings with me, doth He, in His great and unlimited power, and unsearchable wisdom, bring to pass; whereof we can give no reason or judgment. Bp. Hall.

15. Therefore am I troubled at his presence:] These words probably are an answer to an objection; for Job's friends had charged him with fear and trouble of spirit at the presence of God, upon another account, even because of the guiltiness of his conscience, or because of his great wickedness: so (chap. xxii. 10) Eliphaz, having shewed him his sin, presently adds the sad effects which were upon him; "therefore snares are round about thee, and sudden fear troubleth thee:" as if he had said, Thou hast been very wicked in thy actions, and therefore thou art so unquiet in thy spirit; thou hast been uncharitable and injurious to men, "therefore thou art troubled at the presence of God." No, says Job, my trouble of spirit does not arise from guilt, (though I have iniquity enough to deserve greater chastenings than those which are upon me,) but the cause of my trouble ariseth from the knowledge and apprehensions which I have of God, who "is in one mind, and who can turn Him? He performeth the thing that is appointed for me; and many such things are with Him." This is the spring and ground of my trouble; I am troubled both with the feeling of my present calamities, and with fear of greater; lest the Lord should again act, and put forth His terrible power upon me. Caryl.

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

16 For God maketh my heart soft, and the Almighty troubleth me :

17 Because I was not cut off before the darkness, neither hath he covered the darkness from my face.

CHAP. XXIV.

1 Wickedness goeth often unpunished. 17 There is a secret judgment for the wicked.

WHY, seeing times are not hidden from the Almighty, do they that know him not see his days ?

^a Deut. 19.
14. & 27. 17.
|| Or,
feed them.

2 Some remove the ^a landmarks ; they violently take away flocks, and || feed thereof.

3 They drive away the ass of the fatherless, they take the widow's ox for a pledge.

4 They turn the needy out of the way : the poor of the earth hide themselves together.

16. For God maketh my heart soft, &c.] By a weight of afflictions God hath broken my spirit, and made me so timorous, that I cannot but dread the danger I am in of suffering more from His Almighty hand. Bp. Patrick.

17. Because I was not cut off before the darkness,] I am astonished at the hand of the Almighty, for I am still upheld by His power in these extremities, and not cut off by death before this darkness of sorrow and misery overwhelmed me ; neither yet hath He restrained these intolerable evils from seizing upon me, but hath caused me to feel them, and not to be swallowed up by them. Bp. Hall.

Chap. XXIV. ver. 1. Why, seeing times are not hidden from the Almighty,] But to answer a little what you have so often asserted : If punishments from the Almighty be so apparent and visible upon the wicked, why do not they, who are truly pious, see the publick and open judgments ? In what follows, Job confutes the rash assertions of his friends about the plagues, which always befall the wicked, by an induction of particulars that prove the contrary. Bp. Patrick.

2. Some remove the landmarks,] As in these countries the pastures and corn fields were not enclosed, they had no other way of distinguishing the limits of each other's grounds but by boundary stones. He here describes that sort of injustice which the Prophet complains of, Mic. ii. 2. Scott.

3. — the ass of the fatherless, — the widow's ox.] This is another species of wrong. They deprive the fatherless and widow of their only means of supporting themselves : for they could not prepare their little farm for sowing without an ox, or beeve, to till it ; or bring in their corn, if they had any, without an ass to carry the burden. Scott.

5. — as wild asses in the desert, &c.] Robbers are here well compared to wild asses, as they lie hid in solitary places. Grotius.

Bochart observes, that a robber can be compared to a wild ass in no other respect, than as he lives in the desert ; for a wild ass is not a rapacious animal. Dr. Durell.

6. They reap every one his corn in the field : &c.] The following is a more intelligible reading of this verse, "they reap corn in the field which is not their own : and the wicked gather the vintage of others." Rosenmuller.

"Corn," in the Hebrew, "mingled corn, or dredge," says the margin. Job apparently alludes to the provender, heap of chopped straw and corn lying mingled together in the field, after having passed under the threshing instrument. Harmer.

7. — they have no covering in the cold.] Irwin found the cold of the desert which he passed through very severe at times : and

5 Behold, as wild asses in the desert, go they forth to their work ; rising betimes for a prey : the wilderness yieldeth food for them and for their children.

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

6 They reap every one his [†] corn in the field : and [†] they gather the vintage of the wicked.

[†] Heb. mingled corn, or, dredge.

7 They cause the naked to lodge without clothing, that they have no covering in the cold.

[†] Heb.
the wicked gather the vintage.

8 They are wet with the showers of the mountains, and embrace the rock for want of a shelter.

9 They pluck the fatherless from the breast, and take a pledge of the poor.

10 They cause him to go naked without clothing, and they take away the sheaf from the hungry ;

11 Which make oil within their walls, and tread their winepresses, and suffer thirst.

very cold rains and snow descend in some of the hilly parts of these southeastern countries. Harmer.

— in the cold.] In Arabia Petrea, Job's country, the day is intensely hot, and the night intensely cold. Dr. Shaw. See the note on Gen. xxxi. 40.

8. — embrace the rock for want of a shelter.] They, that is, "the naked," in the preceding verse, are fain to seek shelter of the rock, to keep them from the violence of the weather. Bp. Hall.

This exactly agrees with what Niebuhr says of the modern wandering Arabs near mount Sinai : "Those who cannot afford a tent, spread out a cloth upon four or six stakes ; and others spread a cloth near a tree, or endeavour to shelter themselves from the heat and the rain in the cavities of the rock. Parkhurst.

9. They pluck the fatherless from the breast,] Nay, the persons of men are not safe from the violence of these outlaws : but they snatch away young children from their mothers' breasts, and carry away the poor, pretending they owe them something, to make them their slaves. Bp. Patrick.

— and take a pledge of the poor.] "And take that which is upon the poor for a pledge : " that is, his upper garment, or hyke, for security of a debt. See the note on chap. xxii. 6. Scott.

10. — take away the sheaf from the hungry ;] They will not suffer him who is ready to starve to eat of the sheaf which he hath gleaned. Bp. Patrick.

11. Which make oil &c.] They cause these miserable creatures to press out their oil and their wine in their cellars, but let them not taste a drop, though they be ready to die with thirst. Bp. Patrick.

Which make oil within their walls, and tread their winepresses, and suffer thirst.] Rather, "they work at midday among their walls, they tread winepresses, and suffer thirst." For it is difficult to say what greater hardships attended making oil within walls than in the open air, nor does any contrast appear between their labour as to this and what followed ; but a contrast does appear between treading winepresses, and suffering thirst, in the latter part of the verse, as in Micah vi. 15, and this thirst may be expected to be most oppressive at midday. Harmer.

"Between, or within their walls they make or press out oil ; " or rather, "between their walls," with which the vineyards were enclosed, Prov. xxiv. 31, "they labour at noonday," or bear the noonday heat, Matt. xx. 12, which it is well known, in those hot Eastern countries, is in the summer time almost insupportable, particularly near walls. Parkhurst.

— and tread their winepresses, and suffer thirst.] Addison describes the misery of the oppressed peasants of Italy with the

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

12 Men groan from out of the city, and the soul of the wounded crieth out: yet God layeth not folly to them.

13 They are of those that rebel against the light; they know not the ways thereof, nor abide in the paths thereof.

14 The murderer rising with the light killeth the poor and needy, and in the night is as a thief.

15 The eye also of the adulterer waiteth for the twilight, saying, No eye shall see me: and † disguiseth his face.

† Heb.
setteth his face in secret.

16 In the dark they dig through houses, which they had marked for themselves in the daytime: they know not the light.

17 For the morning is to them even as the shadow of death: if one know them, they are in the terrors of the shadow of death.

18 He is swift as the waters; their portion is cursed in the earth: he beholdeth not the way of the vineyards.

† Heb. violently take.

19 Drought and heat † consume the snow waters: so doth the grave those which have sinned.

same beautiful energy: The poor inhabitant of that fruitful country

Starves, in the midst of nature's bounty, curst,
And in the laden vineyard dies for thirst. Scott.

In the East they still "tread" their grapes after the ancient manner. Dr. Chandler says, "August 20th; the vintage near Smyrna was now begun: the juice of the grapes was expressed for wine; a man with feet and legs bare treading the fruit in a kind of cistern, with a hole or vent near the bottom, and a vessel beneath to receive the liquor." Parkhurst.

12. — out of the city,] The peaceful inhabitants of towns, who have been plundered by these rovers of the desert, cry to Heaven for redress, but in vain. Bp. Stock.

— yet God layeth not folly to them.] Doth not presently call them to account, nor charge their sin upon them. Caryl.

13. They are of those that rebel against the light;] They sin shamelessly in the face of the sun, against the light of nature, conscience, and Divine revelation: they neither delight nor will walk in those ways to which by this light they are directed. Clark.

"They know not the ways thereof;" either, they do not desire or care to know them, they are willingly ignorant of them; or, they do not approve, nor love, nor choose to walk in them, as "knowing" frequently signifies in the language of Scripture. "Nor abide in the paths thereof:" that is, if they do some good actions, yet they do not persevere in well-doing; they are not constant and fixed in a good course of life. Poole.

16. — they dig through houses,] The materials used for building in Job's country seem to have been mud and slime, which are frequently employed in the East for this purpose: these walls of sunburnt brick, when moistened with copious showers, must have been liable to attacks of this kind; at the same time that the thickness of them makes the term digging peculiarly expressive. Harmer.

18. He is swift as the waters; &c.] Thus doeth the evil man: but shall he prosper in his mischief? No: God shall be avenged of him; he shall pass away swiftly, even as a current of waters: and while he continues here, he enjoys what he has with a curse: his lot shall be barrenness, so that he shall not so much as look 20 The womb shall forget him; the worm shall feed sweetly on him; he shall be no more remembered; and wickedness shall be broken as a tree.

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

21 He evil entreateth the barren that beareth not: and doeth not good to the widow.

22 He draweth also the mighty with his power: he riseth up, and no man is sure of life.

|| Or,
he trusteth not his own life.

23 Though it be given him to be in safety, whereon he resteth; yet his eyes are upon their ways.

24 They are exalted for a little while, but † are gone and brought low; they are † taken out of the way as all other, and cut off as the tops of the ears of corn.

† Heb. are not.
† Heb.
closed up.

25 And if it be not so now, who will make me a liar, and make my speech nothing worth?

CHAP. XXV.

Bildad sheweth that man cannot be justified before God.

THEN answered Bildad the Shuhite, and said, towards the way of the vineyards; he shall have no hope of receiving the benefit of his seasonable culture of the earth. Bp. Hall.

20. The womb shall forget him;] His mother shall be ashamed to own her relation to him: he shall not be remembered with honour, but consigned to infamy: the wicked oppressor shall be utterly and irrecoverably destroyed, as a tree broken to pieces, which will never grow again. Clark, Poole.

23. Though it be given him to be in safety, &c.] Though the wicked man seems to pass his time in much security and confidence, yet the eyes of God are so open upon his ways, that He observes him to take His advantages against him, and to inflict on him suitable judgments. Bp. Hall.

25. And if it be not so now, &c.] If this be not a truth which I have maintained, namely that God many times prospers the wicked and afflicts the righteous, let any one confute me if he can, and shew that my arguments are weak. Clark.

Job, having first described the impiety, the injustice, the cruelty, and other sins of the wicked, and having then desired his friends to take notice that God does not always display His vengeance upon them, but suffers them to succeed in their evil designs, finally observes, that God nevertheless sees them, and that His righteous judgments overtake them. This doctrine highly deserves our serious meditation: that, when we see so much wickedness and impiety prevailing in the world, even among those who profess to know God, our faith may not fail; but we may remember that God sees it as well as we, and in a manner infinitely more perfect; and as nothing escapes His cognizance, so nothing can escape His judgment. Ostervald.

Chap. XXV. This chapter contains Bildad's third contest with Job, in which, waving altogether the point in question, concerning the present troubles of the righteous and the prosperity of the wicked, he first falls into a description of the glory, power, and majesty of God; and 2dly, by way of opposition and comparison, he sets forth the misery and impurity of man. Caryl.

The foregoing discourse of Job was so undeniable, that Bildad here begins to break off the dispute: for he says not a word to it, but only advises him to speak more reverently of the majesty of God, than he imagined Job had done in his appeal to Him, chap. xiii. Bp. Patrick.

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

2 Dominion and fear are with him, he maketh peace in his high places.

3 Is there any number of his armies? and upon whom doth not his light arise?

* Chap. 4.
17, &c. &
15, 14, &c.

4 ^a How then can man be justified with God? or how can he be clean that is born of a woman?

5 Behold even to the moon, and it shineth not; yea, the stars are not pure in his sight.

* Ps. 22. 6.

6 How much less man, that is ^b a worm? and the son of man, which is a worm?

CHAP. XXVI.

1 Job, reproving the uncharitable spirit of Bildad, 5 acknowledgeth the power of God to be infinite and unsearchable.

Ver. 2, 3. Dominion and fear are with him, &c.] He is an awful God, who hath the absolute dominion over all the world: He ordereth the very heavens so, that there is a perfect harmony in all the apparently contrary motions thereof: and contriveth all things so, that they agree to glorify Him! What innumerable troops of glorious angels hath He there above, and what infinite armies of His creatures to execute His will upon all occasions! And how gracious is He in sending forth His light into all the corners of the earth! and how wise in searching all the secrets of human actions and counsels! Bp. Hall.

4. How then can man be justified with God?] As to the origin of the general corruption and depravity of mankind, it seems to be here plainly intimated, that all men are corrupt by descent and inheritance, Bp. Sherlock. See chap. xiv. 3, 4; and the note on that passage.

5. — and it shineth not;] In comparison of Him. Clark.

Chap. XXVI. This chapter contains Job's answer to Bildad, in which he derideth Bildad's dealing with him, as if what he had urged were not only very little to the purpose, but very wide from it; and dwells at large, and in a very lively manner, on the power and perfections of God, His wonderful works and acts of providence; which Bildad had but lightly touched. Caryl, Bp. Patrick.

Ver. 2. How hast thou helped him that is without power?] What powerful support hast thou given to one (Job himself) who is deprived of all strength? A sarcastick rebuke of Bildad. Rosenmüller.

4. To whom hast thou uttered words?] Dost thou think me ignorant of these things? or canst thou pretend to any extraordinary inspiration concerning them? Bp. Patrick.

5, 6. Dead things are formed from under the waters, &c.] In the Old Testament the region of departed souls, called in the Hebrew "Sheol," was supposed to be divided into two parts, the upper and the lower: David makes mention of the latter, Ps. lxxxvi. 13, "Thou hast delivered my soul from the nethermost hell." Gehenna, or the place of perdition, was the name given to this lower part by the later Jews, who, in order to express the great depth to which they conceived it to be sunk, used to describe it as beneath the waters; their notion being, that the waters were placed below the earth, and that the earth floated upon them like a ship.

The above statement may seem to explain the following rendering of ver. 5, 6.

The souls of the dead tremble;

[The places] below the waters, and their inhabitants.

The seat of spirits is naked before Him;

And the region of destruction hath no covering.

Here "the souls of the dead," and "the inhabitants of the places" below the "abyss of waters," appear to bear to each other the same proportion, that is found in the next verse to subsist between

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

BUT Job answered and said,
2 How hast thou helped him that is without power? how savest thou the arm that hath no strength?

3 How hast thou counselled him that hath no wisdom? and how hast thou plentifully declared the thing as it is?

4 To whom hast thou uttered words? and whose spirit came from thee?

5 Dead things are formed from under the waters, || and the inhabitants thereof.

6 ^a Hell is naked before him, and destruction hath no covering.

|| Or,
with the inhabitants.
^a Prov. 15.
11.

7 He stretcheth out the north over the empty place, and hangeth the earth upon nothing.

8 He bindeth up the waters in his thick

"the seat of spirits" and "the region of destruction;" or the Gehenna of the later Jews: so that the passage, on the whole, conveys this meaning; that nothing is or can be concealed from the all-seeing eye of God: that the souls of the dead tremble under His view, and the shades of the wicked, sunk to the bottom of the abyss, can even there find no covering from His sight. Peters, Dr. Magee, Windet.

The Hebrew word "Sheol" signifies "the invisible state of the dead;" and it seems nearly to answer to the Greek "Hades," by which the Septuagint almost constantly render it; that is, "the invisible place;" and to our old English word "Hell;" which, though now scarcely used but for the place of torment, yet being derivative from the Saxon "Hillan," or "Helan," to hide, or from "hole," a cavern, anciently denoted the concealed or unseen place of the dead in general; as is manifest from the version of Ps. xlix. 14; lv. 16; lxxxviii. 9; lxxxix. 44; in King Henry the Eighth's Great Bible, which is retained in our Liturgy; and so it ought to be understood in other places of that translation. Parkhurst.

6. Hell is naked before him.] The meaning is, not merely that the region of death lies in prospect before Him, but that it is under His eye as part of His dominion. Death is the effect of His moral kingdom; and the consequences of death, the destruction of the body in the grave, and the disposal of un bodied souls in Sheol, are operations of His power. Scott.

7. He stretcheth out the north &c.] He hath spread out this glorious hemisphere of the heavens upon the void and empty space of the light and thin air; and hangeth the great ball of the earth in the midst of heaven without any prop or foundation. Bp. Hall.

The "south," in chap. ix. 9, means the southern hemisphere of the heavens: by the "north," therefore, he here intends the northern half of the heavens. The expression "He stretcheth out" is that which the Hebrew poets generally use when they celebrate the formation of the heavens. It is a metaphor from a tent or pavilion, Is. xl. 22. Scott.

— hangeth the earth upon nothing.] This has been formerly questioned by some, and denied by others. But now all agree in it, since so many have sailed round the earth; for that could never have been done, if the earth did not hang in the air, without any thing but the immediate hand of God to support it. But this is no new discovery: for here we see that Job, one of the oldest writers extant in the world, if not the oldest of all, knew it in his day. Bp. Beveridge.

8. He bindeth up the waters &c.] He binds up the waters, and keeps them suspended in the clouds; through which they do not burst all at once, but distil by drops to moisten the earth in due season. Bp. Patrick.

This verse comprehends the whole process of Almighty power in making the air, raising the watery vapours, condensing them

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

clouds; and the cloud is not rent under them.

9 He holdeth back the face of his throne, and spreadeth his cloud upon it.

† Heb. until the end of time with darkness.

10 He hath compassed the waters with bounds, † until the day and night come to an end.

11 The pillars of heaven tremble and are astonished at his reproof.

† Heb.
pride.

12 He divideth the sea with his power, and by his understanding he smiteth through † the proud.

13 By his spirit he hath garnished the heavens; his hand hath formed the crooked serpent.

14 Lo, these are parts of his ways: but into clouds, and sustaining them in that form, so that their contents may not burst all at once upon the earth. Scott.

9. He holdeth back the face of his throne.] He keeps the highest heavens, which is His throne, (Is. lxvi. 1,) from our view, that its lustre and glory (Ezek. i. 26) should not reach us and dazzle our sight. Clark, Michaelis.

11. The pillars of heaven tremble &c.] When God shews Himself angry by sending thunder, tempests, and earthquakes, the very heavens seem to tremble, and the whole universe to be moved by these tokens of His displeasure. Clark.

The figurative expression, "the pillars of heaven," seems intended to represent the heavens under the idea of an immense fabrick supported on stately columns. Their "trembling" and "astonishment" is the animated style of sublime poetry, to denote violent concussions of the air, and agitation of the clouds. The cause is God's "reproof;" that is, thunder, lightning, and tempestuous winds, which are represented by the heathen, as well as by sacred poets, as effects and tokens of God's displeasure at the sins of men. Scott.

12. He divideth the sea with his power.] This passage probably refers to the separation of the waters at the creation: like the parallel passage chap. xxxviii. 8—11. In both places Rahab or "proud" is an epithet of the sea. Dr. Hales.

Or it may be no more than the description of a tempest: and if the former part of ver. 12 mean, that God sometimes by His power raises a violent storm at sea; the latter may be well enough understood of the pride or swelling of the sea itself, allayed again by the same Divine power and will that raised it. Peters.

13. By his spirit he hath garnished the heavens; &c.] Finally by His wise contrivance the heavens were adorned and made thus beautiful as we behold them: His power made the celestial signs. Bp. Patrick. "The crooked serpent" may mean an heavenly constellation, called the great dragon or serpent; which being most eminent, as taking up a considerable part of the northern hemisphere, may well be put for all the rest of the constellations or stars, with which the heavens are garnished. Job was well acquainted with the doctrine of astronomy; and knew the nature and names of the stars and constellations, as appears also from chap. ix. 9, and xxxviii. 31. Poole.

14. Lo, these are parts of his ways: &c.] The works of God are many and wonderful: we know but a very small part of them, and we cannot comprehend all the reasons of His conduct in the government of the world. God is so great, so powerful, so just and wise, that we ought not to presume to question any thing that He does, nor pry into His works with too much curiosity. We ought rather to be firmly persuaded that He governs all things with wisdom, justice, and goodness, and humbly submit to all His dispensations. Ostervald.

Chap. XXVII. Job, having refuted the principle on which his friends had argued, and having silenced them, now undertakes how little a portion is heard of him? but the thunder of his power who can understand?

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

CHAP. XXVII.

1 Job protesteth his sincerity. 8 The hypocrite is without hope. 11 The blessings which the wicked have are turned into curses.

MOREOVER Job † continued his parable, and said,

† Heb. added to take up.

2 As God liveth, who hath taken away my judgment; and the Almighty, who hath † vexed my soul;

† Heb. made my soul bitter.
|| That is,
the breath
which God gave him.

3 All the while my breath is in me, and || the spirit of God is in my nostrils;

to prove to them, on their own principles, that their reasoning was false. Having first declared his resolution to maintain his innocence, he bids them consider how, upon their own principles, they could suppose him a hypocrite: for as he was cut off, and had abandoned all hope of life, what end could it answer to play the hypocrite? a part which could not deceive the all-seeing eye of God: what reliance could such an one have on the Almighty, or how could he dare to call on Him in the day of calamity? But to put the matter beyond all dispute, I will prove to you, says Job, by irrefragable arguments, such as you at least cannot but allow them to be, for they are your own, that it must be, in my condition, to the last degree foolish to play the hypocrite: for all I could propose to gain by it is the long catalogue of misery which I shall run over, which you must allow to be true, having yourselves declared that you have been eyewitnesses of it; (referring to chap. iv. 8; xv. 17; xx. 4.) Why then will you trifle in this manner? Heath.

Ver. 1. — his parable.] See the note on Numb. xxiii. 7.

The original word "Mashal" I take to be the general name for poetick style among the Hebrews, including every sort of it, as ranging under one or other, or all of the characters, of sententious, figurative, and sublime; which are all contained in the original notion, or in the use and application, of the word mashal. Parables or proverbs, such as those of Solomon, are always expressed in short pointed sentences; frequently figurative, being formed on some comparison; generally forcible and authoritative, both in the matter and the form. And such in general is the style of the Hebrew poetry. The verb mashal signifies to rule, to exercise authority; to make equal, to compare one thing with another; to utter parables, or acute, weighty, and powerful speeches, in the form and manner of parables, though not properly such. Thus Balaam's first prophecy, Numb. xxiii. 7—10, is called his mashal, though it has hardly any thing figurative in it; but it is beautifully sententious, and, from the very form and manner of it, has great spirit, force, and energy. Thus Job's last speeches, in answer to the three friends, are called mashals; from no one particular character, which discriminates them from the rest of the poem, but from the sublime, the figurative, the sententious manner, which equally prevails through the whole poem, and makes it one of the first and most eminent examples extant of the truly great and beautiful in poetick style. Bp. Lowth.

2. As God liveth, &c.] As God liveth, who hath not yet given any outward and sensible signification that He hath taken notice of my cause, to clear and avenge me; but, on the contrary, hath laid many sore afflictions upon me. Bp. Hall.

2—4. As God liveth, &c.] The whole passage will be equally clear, if literally rendered thus: "The living God hath taken away my judgment; and the Almighty hath embittered my soul; but all the while my breath is in me, and the Spirit of God is in my nostrils, surely my lips shall not speak wickedness, nor my tongue utter deceit." Dr. Durell.

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

4 My lips shall not speak wickedness, nor my tongue utter deceit.

5 God forbid that I should justify you: till I die I will not remove mine integrity from me.

6 My righteousness I hold fast, and will not let it go: my heart shall not reproach me † so long as I live.

7 Let mine enemy be as the wicked, and he that riseth up against me as the unrighteous.

8 ^a For what is the hope of the hypocrite, though he hath gained, when God taketh away his soul?

9 ^b Will God hear his cry when trouble cometh upon him?

10 Will he delight himself in the Almighty? will he always call upon God?

11 I will teach you || by the hand of God: that which is with the Almighty will I not conceal.

12 Behold, all ye yourselves have seen it; why then are ye thus altogether vain?

† Heb. from my days.

^a Matt. 16.
26.

^b Prov. 1.
28.
Ezek. 8. 18.
John 9. 51.
Jam. 4. 3.

|| Or, being in the hand, &c.

5—8. God forbid that I should justify you: &c.] Though I am quite cast down, as miserable as it is possible to be, in this life; yet God forbid that I should justify your censures of me, by owning that I have played the hypocrite, or been secretly wicked. No, whatever shall befall me, I am resolved that I will still maintain and still hold fast my integrity: I will sooner die than confess the guilt you charge me with. "Let mine enemy be as the wicked;" let him flourish and prosper here as much as his heart can wish, (and he had before shewn that they often do so;) but "what is the hope of the hypocrite, though he hath gained, when God taketh away his soul?" that is, what can he think will become of him after death? what comfort can such an one possibly entertain in the prospect of futurity? Peters.

10. Will he delight himself in the Almighty?] Can he find comfort in God, when the world affords none? which I do now. Will he call upon God in prosperity as well as adversity? There must be a delight in God before there will be any perseverance in duty. Clark.

11. I will teach you by the hand of God:] Rather, "I will instruct you in the power of God;" as the word is rendered, Prov. xviii. 21. Dr. Durell.

12. Behold, all ye yourselves have seen it:] Behold, there is not one of you but hath, by his own experience, found what I am about to say to be certainly true: and yet, such is your vanity, you will defend an ungrounded opinion. Bp. Patrick.

13. This is the portion of a wicked man with God,] I grant that a wicked man (but not all wicked men, as you maintain) sometimes receives such punishments from God as he deserves: which might make other tyrannical oppressors fear to meet with the same vengeance. Bp. Patrick.

14. —shall not be satisfied with bread.] Shall be starved for want of food. Clark.

15. —shall be buried in death:] "Shall rot unburied." The learned Schultens seems to have given the true meaning of the passage, "they shall have death for their burial;" that is, they shall be reduced to so great a degree of misery, that where they die, there they shall rot; and no person shall bury them. This is put in contrast with the costly monuments of the rich. Heath.

16. Though he heap up silver as the dust,] Sir J. Chardin tells us, in his note on this passage, that it is customary through all the East to gather together an immense collection of furniture and clothes, for their fashions never alter. They keep them up 13 This is the portion of a wicked man with God, and the heritage of oppressors, ^{Before CHRIST about 1520.} which they shall receive of the Almighty.

14 If his children be multiplied, it is for the sword: and his offspring shall not be satisfied with bread.

15 Those that remain of him shall be buried in death: and ^c his widows shall not weep. ^c Ps. 78. 63.

16 Though he heap up silver as the dust, and prepare raiment as the clay;

17 He may prepare it, but the just shall put it on, and the innocent shall divide the silver.

18 He buildeth his house as a moth, and as a booth that the keeper maketh.

19 The rich man shall lie down, but he shall not be gathered: he openeth his eyes, and he is not.

20 ^d Terrors take hold on him as waters, a tempest stealeth him away in the night. ^d Chap. 18. 11.

21 The east wind carrieth him away, in wardrobes, as they heap up mud for mortar in building. Harmer.

18. — as a moth,] His house shall be as easily destroyed as the dwelling of the moth, which falls a prey to herself. Grotius.

— as a booth] Like a temporary hut in a garden or vineyard to shelter the guard, who suffers it to fall when the season is over. The same image occurs, Isai. i. 8; Lam. ii. 6. Bp. Stock.

Job here teaches us, that although worldly men may live in affluence, heap up riches, and leave them to their children, their ill-gotten wealth soon passes away, and their posterity are often exposed to want and disgrace. These are visible marks of God's justice towards the wicked; and should serve as a powerful antidote against injustice, pride, and the love of the world. Ostervald.

19. The rich man shall lie down, &c.] Peters thus ingeniously explains this important passage; "The wicked rich man" (for of such Job was speaking) "shall die, but shall not be gathered" to the assembly of good and pious souls: "he openeth his eyes" in the other world "and is not," or finds himself lost and miserable. He observes, that the phrase of "being gathered to their fathers," or "to their peoples," is confined in Scripture to the eminently good and pious. Thus it is applied to Abraham, Gen. xv. 15; xxv. 8; to Isaac, Gen. xxxv. 29; to Moses, Num. xxvii. 13; xxxi. 2; to David, Acts xiii. 36; to Josiah, 2 Kings xxii. 20: whereas the general expression applied to good and bad indifferently is, to "lie down," or "sleep with their fathers," as Jeroboam, 1 Kings xiv. 20; Rehoboam, 1 Kings xiv. 31, &c. To "lie with the uncircumcised" is applied to the wicked; as Pharaoh, Ezek. xxxii. 19—28, &c. for "the uncircumcised shall be cut off from his peoples," Gen. xvii. 14.

By these expressions was denoted the happiness or misery of good or bad souls, in the intermediate state between their death and resurrection. Dr. Hales.

20, 21. Terrors take hold on him] The horror and distraction of a wicked man on his death-bed are here described in a very lively manner. He dies, as most wicked men do, in the utmost tumult and confusion. Peters.

A sudden landflood in the night, no uncommon thing in Arabia, and a furious storm of wind, are the strong images by which such a death are represented. Scott.

21. The east wind] This is the most boisterous and the most

Before CHRIST about 1520. and he departeth: and as a storm hurleth him out of his place.

22 For God shall cast upon him, and not spare: † he would fain flee out of his hand.

† Heb. in fleeing he would flee.

23 Men shall clap their hands at him, and shall hiss him out of his place.

CHAP. XXVIII.

1 There is a knowledge of natural things. 12 But wisdom is an excellent gift of God.

destructive wind that blows in these countries; see the note on chap. xv. 2. It is most violent in the night. Scott.

23. Men shall clap their hands at him,] The striking of one hand against the other with some smartness, which we mean by the term "clapping of the hands," might, and I believe did, obtain anciently, as an expression of joy; not unfrequently, if not always, of the malignant kind. Compare what Jeremiah says of Jerusalem, when it was destroyed, Lam. ii. 15. Harmer.

Chap. XXVIII. This chapter, as it is one of the most beautiful and instructive, so perhaps we might add, it is the most obscure of this book. The subject proposed in it is an inquiry after wisdom; not the wisdom of God, by which we mean the unsearchable depth of His counsels, but wisdom in general, or rather the wisdom proper to man, which therefore, in the last verse, is pointed out as the result of the preceding inquiry.

The chapter begins with a fine description of the indefatigable industry and ardour of mankind in searching after other things, which contribute either to the uses or the ornament of life: how they dig into the bowels of the earth for metals, gold, silver, iron, brass. And though the great Creator hath placed a boundary betwixt light and darkness, yet the industry or avarice of man is without bounds. He searcheth into the land of darkness itself for hid treasures. Peters.

Ver. 1—11. Surely there is a vein, &c.] The first verse speaks of mines: the eleventh verse, which concludes the paragraph, mentioneth man's bringing the riches of them into daylight: the intermediate verses, therefore, may in reason be supposed to relate to the same subject. Scott.

— a place for gold] So the Arabians called the mine. "Gold," says one of their poets, "is thrown away like earth in its places:" it has no value in the mine. Scott.

— where they fine it.] Rather, "which (both the silver and the gold) they fine." Neither silver nor gold is fined in the mine itself. The fining of these metals is mentioned as another instance of man's ability, distinct from his searching them out in the mine. Arabia Felix had anciently its mines of gold, Ps. lxxii. 15, "to him shall be given of the gold of Sheba;" in the Septuagint and Arabick versions, "the gold of Arabia." Sheba was the ancient name of Arabia Felix. Job, who dwelt in Arabia Petrea, could be no stranger to the riches of that neighbouring country. Scott.

2. — brass] He probably means the natural or red brass, which is copper. The modern brass, which the French name yellow copper, is factitious, being made of copper fused with the calamine stone. Scott.

— out of the stone.] With which it is mixed and incorporated in the earth; but by fire and the art of the metallist is separated from it, and taken out of it. Pool.

3. He setteth an end to darkness, &c.] "The stones of darkness," and "the shadow of death," must surely mean the metallick ore in the deep and dark parts of the earth. The agent then who searcheth them out must be man. He also it is whose pride and presumption "setteth an end to darkness;" that is, contracts its bounds by carrying light into the subterraneous caverns when he works the mines. Scott.

— and searcheth out all perfection:] Or, more clearly, "he

SURELY there is || a vein for the silver, and a place for gold where they fine it. Before CHRIST about 1520.

2 Iron is taken out of the || earth, and brass is molten out of the stone. || Or, a mine. || Or, dust.

3 He setteth an end to darkness, and searcheth out all perfection: the stones of darkness, and the shadow of death.

4 The flood breaketh out from the inhabitant; even the waters forgotten of the foot: they are dried up, they are gone away from men.

5 As for the earth, out of it cometh searcheth to every extremity the stones of darkness, &c." that is, he follows the vein of metallick ore as far as it goes. Scott.

4. The flood breaketh out &c.] As the author of the book of Job was perhaps the most concise writer that ever appeared in the world, and his language the most concise; he just gives a glimpse of things, and leaves the rest to be supplied by the imagination of the reader. His thoughts are, like the gold and jewels he speaks of, precious in themselves: but we must sometimes labour hard and go deep for them. Of this we have a farther proof in what follows; where he proceeds to give another instance of the daring spirit and ingenuity of mankind. How they cross the broad rivers and arms of the sea for commerce; where there is no path for the foot of man; where they lessen to the sight, and are tossed upon the waves. This appears to be the meaning of the fourth verse, which may be literally rendered thus; "the flood interrupts from the stranger; forgotten of the foot, they appear less than men, they are tossed;" their feet forget them, and are no longer serviceable to them in this very different way of travelling; they lessen to the sight, as they go off farther and farther from the shores; and lastly, are tossed up and down upon the billows. The same expression is used, Ps. cvii. 27. Peters.

Otherwise, it is evident that this chapter of Job relates to mineralogy and mining: thus then I would explain this difficult verse: "A torrent bursteth forth from the rubbish, forgotten," not thought of, or in a word unexpectedly. "By the foot," that is, an engine worked by the foot, "they are drawn off, by man they are removed." The following quotation from Mr. Catcott's treatise on the Deluge is an excellent though undesigned comment on this passage: "The vast profusion of water, that sometimes ensues the breaking up of the strata in coal-pits, is well known to those who are in the least conversant in that affair; and what amazing quantities are drawn off from deep mines, either by drains, or levels, or raised by engines, is also well known: nay, in digging common wells and ponds, in places where there are no springs above ground, it frequently happens that such a glut of water issues forth, as to endanger the lives of the workmen." Parkhurst.

5. As for the earth, &c.] Here he appears to represent the dangers to which miners are exposed, and which avarice is bold enough to venture through. The surface of the earth produceth corn and other fruits for the sustenance of man and beast: but underneath it is turned to be as it were fire. Its caverns abound with inflammable minerals, for instance sulphur. The sulphureous air in mines has been known sometimes to take fire from the candles of the workmen, and to destroy the miners. Or perhaps he referreth to the "slime-pits" in "the vale of Siddim," near the place which was afterwards turned into a lake, and called the Dead sea. Those slime-pits were holes, out of which issued a liquid bitumen or naphtha, an oily substance. Hanway, in his Travels into Persia, describes some fountains of naphtha, which were actually burning near Baku on the western coast of the Caspian sea. Chaldea abounded with them. The walls of Babylon were cemented with the bitumen or slime. Scott.

5—11. As for the earth, out of it cometh bread: &c.] Job continues in the following verses to give farther instances of the

Before CHRIST about 1520. bread: and under it is turned up as it were fire.

6 The stones of it are the place of sapphires: and it hath || dust of gold.

7 There is a path which no fowl knoweth, and which the vulture's eye hath not seen:

8 The lion's whelps have not trodden it, nor the fierce lion passed by it.

9 He putteth forth his hand upon the || rock; he overturneth the mountains by the roots.

10 He cutteth out rivers among the rocks; and his eye seeth every precious thing.

11 He bindeth the floods † from overflowing; and the thing that is hid bringeth he forth to light.

12 But where shall wisdom be found? and where is the place of understanding?

13 Man knoweth not the price thereof; neither is it found in the land of the living.

14 ^a The depth saith, It is not in me: ^a Rom. 11 33, 34. and the sea saith, It is not with me.

15 † It ^b cannot be gotten for gold, neither shall silver be weighed for the price thereof.

16 It cannot be valued with the gold of Ophir, with the precious onyx, or the sapphire.

Before CHRIST about 1520.

† Heb. from weeping.

† Heb. Fine gold shall not be given for it. Prov. 3. 14. & 8. 11. 19. & 16. 16.

daring and yet successful attempts of mankind to provide themselves with every necessary and convenience of life: such as corn for bread, ver. 5; fountains of water in the dry places, where they are wanted, cut out of the hard rock, ver. 10; and rapid rivers restrained within their channels to prevent the mischiefs of their overflow, ver. 11: to which he adds again, gold, and sapphire, and other precious stones, dug deep from the caverns of the earth, where "the lion's foot never trod, nor the vulture's eye hath reached," ver. 7, 8. In short, that there is scarcely any thing so concealed but what the industry of man had brought to light, wisdom alone excepted; for all this is designed to introduce the great question, ver. 12, "But where shall wisdom be found? and where is the place of understanding?" Peters. In the notes which follow, to the end of the 11th verse, a different interpretation is given of some parts of this obscure passage.

6. The stones of it are the place &c.] Here is the temptation to risk the aforementioned dangers: the rocky earth in those subterraneous caverns is the country and birth-place of sapphires, and other precious stones. There also men find glebes of gold, or golden ore. Scott.

7, 8. There is a path &c.] These two verses are a poetical illustration of man's intrepidity in penetrating these dangerous regions of darkness. The fiercest and most daring creatures of prey would not venture into them: "A path which the fowls of prey know not, &c." He means, the path which leads to the place of sapphires and golden ore; the way into the mines. Scott.

9—11. He putteth forth &c.] These verses appear to describe the prodigious labour of working a mine: for the effect of the operations here specified is, man's bringing forth to light the thing that is hid; that is, the hidden treasure of the earth. Scott.

— he overturneth the mountains &c.] The operation, described here, seems to be the breaking in pieces and dislodging, in order to come at the ore, the hardest flint or marble; which are the roots, that is, the foundation of the mountain. Or perhaps the poet means a still greater work; such as Pliny, quoted by Schultens, strongly paints: "Yet the labour of hewing the rock is comparatively easy. For there is an earth compounded of a kind of clay and grit that is almost impenetrable. This the miners assail with iron wedges and mallets. Nothing is imagined to be harder, except the insatiable hunger after gold, which of all things is the hardest to subdue. Having finished this labour, they cut the props of their arch-work, the prelude and signal of the fall of the mountain. The sentinel on the top of the mountain perceiving the ground under his feet to sink, immediately gives notice of it to the workmen below by his voice and repeated thumps. Away he flies. The mountain splits, and falls with a continued thundering sound, and an incredible blast of wind. The victorious miners gaze upon the overthrow of nature." Scott.

10. He cutteth out rivers &c.] The next operation is to clear away the stones and rubbish, that "his eye may see every precious thing;" that is, lay bare the precious gems and the gold. The means by which this is accomplished, is turning a large body of water upon the ruins. But so wonderful is man's invention, and so indefatigable his avarice, that he cuts a passage even through rocks to collect and convey a strong stream down to the mine for that purpose. "To wash the ruins," says Pliny, "they bring rivers from the tops of mountains a hundred miles off. They carry aqueducts over the valleys, and sometimes hew a way for those pipes through the rocks: they gather the waters into large reservoirs, make sluice-gates to those reservoirs; then let out such a torrent as bears down the largest stones with the violence of its course." Scott.

11. He bindeth the floods &c.] There remaineth still a third operation to exercise the art of man. The subterraneous waters sometimes burst into the mine in great abundance. These he must thoroughly drain off by machines, before "he can bring forth into light the hidden treasures." Scott.

13—20. Man knoweth not the price thereof; &c.] In the intermediate verses betwixt the first and last proposal of this great question, there is made a beautiful repetition of several of the particulars which had been mentioned before, and a fine turn given to each; "The depth saith, It is not in me: and the sea saith, It is not with me:" as if Job had said, Men may dig into the bowels of the earth, and find gold and treasures there; but they will be as far from finding wisdom as ever: and could they traverse the great sea itself, as they run across a river or a strait, yet they would learn that wisdom is not to be acquired in the way of commerce or exchange. One thing we cannot but remark from this passage, how early the race of men had learned to set a value on those precious trinkets which are here so lavishly exposed to view. Peters.

15. — neither shall silver be weighed for the price thereof.] Compare Gen. xlii. 21. The practice of weighing money, says Mons. Volney, is customary and general in Syria, in Egypt, and in all Turkey. No piece, however light, is refused: the tradesman takes out his money-weights, and values it. It is the same as in the time of Abraham, when he bought his burying-ground. Parkhurst.

16. It cannot be valued with the gold of Ophir,] That is, estimated, or compared with it. The word strictly signifies, to be strewn, or laid on the ground, as the ancient merchants laid their commodities to be bartered or exchanged for others: a method of traffick still practised by some nations to this day; as, for instance, by the Moors and Negroes of Africa, in bartering salt and various trinkets for gold. Parkhurst.

— the precious onyx,] It was observed on ver. 1, that Arabia Felix, now called Yaman, had formerly its golden mines. It still boasteth its gems. We are assured by an eyewitness, that precious stones for rings and bracelets are brought thence in great quantities, to the annual fair held at Mecca during the last ten or twelve days of the stay of the pilgrims there.

It is doubtful what gem is meant by that which we translate the onyx: the epithet precious, as Schultens remarks, gives a distinction to it; which the onyx, a sort of agate, does not merit. The Chaldee interpreter renders it beryls. The beryl of the ancients was a transparent gem of a sea-green colour. Scott.

— the sapphire.] The sapphire is of a beautiful sky-blue.

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

|| Or, vessels of fine gold.
|| Or,
Ramothe.

17 The gold and the crystal cannot equal it: and the exchange of it shall not be for || jewels of fine gold.

18 No mention shall be made of || coral, or of pearls: for the price of wisdom is above rubies.

19 The topaz of Ethiopia shall not equal it, neither shall it be valued with pure gold.

c Ver. 12.

20 Whence then cometh wisdom? and where is the place of understanding?

21 Seeing it is hid from the eyes of all living, and kept close from the fowls of the || air.

|| Or,
heaven.

22 Destruction and death say, We have heard the fame thereof with our ears.

23 God understandeth the way thereof, and he knoweth the place thereof.

24 For he looketh to the ends of the earth, and seeth under the whole heaven;

Some will have the Hebrew word to signify the ruby; others the carbuncle, which is a stone of the ruby kind, very rare, and of a rich glowing blood colour. Scott.

17. — the crystal] Or glass, according to the Greek, Latin, and Syriack versions: no wonder that it is here mentioned with gold, and other things of great value, since however common and cheap glass is now among us, yet it is very conceivable, that in the age and country of Job, this beautiful artificial crystal was very scarce, and of consequence highly precious. Parkhurst.

— jewels of fine gold.] Some ornaments or vessels of gold that were of high value for the workmanship as well as for the materials. Scott.

18. No mention shall be made of coral.] According to Pliny, coral was highly esteemed among the ancients. "The Indians value coral as highly as we value pearls, which come from India. The men esteem these gems, as our women do Indian pearls. Their priests and predictors attribute to it something sacred, and affirm that it has the virtue of protecting from dangers those who carry it. So that two things contribute to render it valuable, superstition and beauty." Experience confirms the relation of Pliny: for often in that country a collar of coral sells for a price equal to one of pearls. Script. illust. Expos. Ind.

22. Destruction and death say, &c.] By "destruction and death" must be meant the dead: this interpretation gives a clear and natural sense to the passage. Job had before told us that wisdom and her place were "hid from the eyes of all living," ver. 21, and therefore whither should we go to look for it, but among the dead? "Death and destruction," two synonymous words, are used probably, after the Hebrew manner, to increase the signification, and to denote a long race of their dead ancestors from the beginning of the world downward.

We have here then an answer to the great inquiry, "Where shall wisdom be found, and where is the place of understanding?" "Destruction and death say," that is, the generations of the dead have told us, "we have heard the fame thereof with our ears." We have had something relating to this question about wisdom delivered down to us by tradition from our forefathers: amongst others, these important particulars, that "God understandeth the way thereof," ver. 23; for His knowledge reaches to all things and places: "He looketh to the ends of the earth, and seeth under the whole heaven," ver. 24; and that with a wisdom so infallible, and a power so uncontrollable, as to give a certain weight and measure to things the most uncertain and inconstant with respect to us, the winds and waters; "to make the weight for the winds; and He weigheth the waters by measure," ver. 25. We have had it moreover delivered down to us,

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

25 To make the weight for the winds; and he weigheth the waters by measure.

26 When he made a decree for the rain, and a way for the lightning of the thunder:

27 Then did he see it, and || declare it; he prepared it, yea, and searched it out. || Or, number it.

28 And unto man he said, Behold, ^d the fear of the Lord, that is wisdom; and to depart from evil is understanding. ^d Ps. 111. 10. Prov. 1. 7. & 9. 10.

CHAP. XXIX.

Job bemoaneth himself of his former prosperity and honour.

MOREOVER Job † continued hisparable, and said, † Heb. added to take up.

2 Oh that I were as in months past, as in the days when God preserved me;

3 When his || candle shined upon my head, and when by his light I walked through darkness; || Or, lamp.

says Job, in the same traditional way, that this infinitely wise and glorious Being, when He made the world, not only displayed His own wisdom in the admirable contrivance of it, but at the same time declared what was the wisdom proper to man, the best and truest wisdom to which he could attain; which was, to acknowledge and adore his Maker, and to pay all due obedience to His laws, ver. 26—28. "Unto man He said, Behold, the fear of the Lord, that is wisdom; and to depart from evil is understanding."

We see now the reason why this holy man, amidst all the calamities that had overwhelmed him like a flood, still persists in that well-weighed and generous resolution, which he expresses in the foregoing chapter, and which points out the connexion between these two chapters; "Till I die, I will not remove mine integrity from me. My righteousness I hold fast, and will not let it go: my heart shall not reproach me so long as I live." He then adds, "Let mine enemy be as the wicked, and he that riseth up against me as the unrighteous. For what is the hope of the hypocrite, though he hath gained, when God taketh away his soul?" chap. xxvii. 5—8. Well might Job thus reason and resolve, who had learned from the Divine Oracle this important lesson; that, be circumstances or events of things what they will in this world, yet "to fear God is wisdom, and to depart from evil is understanding." This he was sure of, because God had said it. And here therefore he fixes his foot, where every wise man gladly will, every man of sense and sobriety, who, like Job and his friends, has ever experienced the embarrassments of his own reasonings, upon a Divine revelation.

What the traditions of their ancestors were to these men, that the Bible is to us: and happy were it for us if we paid it the same pious regard: if we would give it its due weight in determining our religious controversies; be studious to enrich our minds with the knowledge of its awful truths, and to form our lives by the simplicity of its admirable precepts: if we would allow these sacred books the privilege, at least, which we so seldom deny to others of any merit, the privilege of a serious and attentive reading! we should then find that they want nothing to recommend them, but their being thoroughly understood. Peters.

Chap. XXIX. Job breaks out into a passionate wish for the return of his past felicity, which he describes at large, together with the good uses that he made of it, and the reverence he impressed on all ranks of people. Bp. Stock.

Ver. 3. When his candle shined upon my head.] The candle or lamp is probably an allusion to the lamps which hung from the

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

4 As I was in the days of my youth, when the secret of God was upon my tabernacle;

5 When the Almighty was yet with me, when my children were about me;

6 When I washed my steps with butter, and the rock poured † me out rivers of oil;

† Heb.
with me.

7 When I went out to the gate through the city, when I prepared my seat in the street!

8 The young men saw me, and hid themselves: and the aged arose, and stood up.

9 The princes refrained talking, and laid their hand on their mouth.

ceiling of the banquetting rooms of the wealthy Arabs. The latter clause, "by his light I walked, &c." refers to the Eastern practice of guiding caravans at night by torches, carried aloft before each division of the travellers. Scott.

4. — when the secret of God was upon my tabernacle;] When there was a secret blessing of God upon me and my family, protecting, directing, and prospering us in all our affairs; whereas now there is a visible curse of God on me and mine. Poole.

6. When I washed my steps with butter,] When I abounded in all sorts of blessings, which is often signified by this and the like phrases; as Gen. xlix. 11; Deut. xxxiii. 24; Job xx. 17; Ps. lxxxi. 16. When I had such numerous herds of cattle, and consequently such plenty of butter, that, if I pleased, I might have washed my feet with it. Poole.

— and the rock poured me out rivers of oil;] Cattle and olive groves made the principal wealth of the Arabs. The best olives grow upon rocky mountains. Hence these bold figures to express uncommon felicity. Scott.

7. When I went &c.] Having described his domestick happiness, he proceeds to represent the honours paid him in publick life. This representation is judiciously intermingled with an account of his impartial and intrepid administration of justice; which is a noble answer to the accusation of Eliphaz, chap. xxii. 6—9. Scott.

— the gate] The court of justice, where was the meeting of the elders to try causes. Bp. Stock. See the notes on Gen. xxiii. 10, and on chap. v. 4.

— when I prepared my seat in the street!] When I sat on the bench in the open place where the people are wont to have their causes heard. Bp. Patrick.

Sitting on a cushion is an expression of honour in the East: and the preparing of a seat for a person of distinction seems to mean, laying things of this kind on a place where such an one is to sit. When Job speaks of "his preparing his seat," it is extremely natural to understand him of his sending his servants to lay a cushion and a carpet on one of the publick seats, or something of that sort, as Sir John Chardin supposes. Harmer.

8. — hid themselves:] Being struck with such reverence of Job's person, that they durst not appear openly before him. Caryl.

The slavish homage of prostration to princes and great men, which prevailed in Egypt, Persia, and the East in general, and still subsists there, was unknown in Arabia at that time. Though Job was "the greatest of all the men of the East," we do not find any such adoration paid to him by his contemporaries in the zenith of his prosperity, among the marks of respect here so minutely described. "When the young men saw him, they hid themselves," in token of reverence; "the aged arose, and stood up" in his presence: "the princes refrained from talking, and laid their hand upon their mouth; the nobles held their peace," and were all attention while he spoke. All this was highly respectful indeed, but still it was manly, and shewed no 10 † The nobles held their peace, and their tongue cleaved to the roof of their mouth.

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

11 When the ear heard me, then it blessed me; and when the eye saw me, it gave witness to me:

† Heb.
The voice of the nobles was hid.

12 Because I delivered the poor that cried, and the fatherless, and him that had none to help him.

13 The blessing of him that was ready to perish came upon me: and I caused the widow's heart to sing for joy.

14 I put on righteousness, and it clothed me: my judgment was as a robe and a diadem.

cringing or servile adulation. And so Sir William Jones describes the genuine Arabs at the present day as a majestick race, who were never conquered, and who have retained their primitive manners, features, and character, with scarcely any alteration. Peters, Dr. Hales.

11. — it gave witness to me:] They who saw me bore testimony to my uprightness and the integrity of my heart. Chapelorn.

13. — ready to perish] Through false accusations, whereby his estate or life was in danger. I caused the widow's heart to sing for joy, on account of her great and unexpected deliverance. Clark.

14. I put on righteousness, and it clothed me: &c.] In all his proceedings, as a magistrate, or a man in authority, Job sought to do justice to all. Caryl.

Where silence against foul and false imputations may be interpreted a confession, there the protestation of a man's own innocence is ever just, and sometimes necessary. When others do us open wrong, it is not vanity, but charity, to do ourselves open right: and whatsoever appearance of folly or vain boasting there is in so doing, they are chargeable with all that compel us thereunto, and not we. "I am become a fool in glorying," saith St. Paul, "ye have compelled me," 2 Cor. xii. 11. It was neither pride nor passion in Job, but such a compulsion as this, that made him so often in this book proclaim his own righteousness. See chap. xxii. 6, and the note there. Bp. Sanderson.

— it clothed me: &c.] This metaphor of clothing is much used in the Scriptures in this notion, as applied to the soul and things appertaining to the soul. See Ps. cix. 29; Isa. xi. 5; Rom. xiii. 14; 1 Tim. ii. 9, 10; Eph. vi. 14, &c. By his speech of "putting on righteousness and judgment as a robe and a diadem," Job signifies that the glory and pride, which kings and potentates are wont to take in their crowns and sceptres and royal vestments, is not more than the glory and honour which he placed in doing justice and judgment. He considered that to be true honour, not which is reflected from these empty marks and ensigns of dignity, but which springs from those virtues, whereof these are but dumb remembrances. "He put on righteousness, and it clothed him:" and "judgment" was to him, what to others "a robe and a diadem" are, honourable and delightful.

In this and the three following verses we have to consider as laid down to us in the person, and from the example of Job, some of the principal duties which attend any situation of eminence or authority, either in church or state; more especially any office appertaining to the administration of justice, ver. 14: secondly, a forwardness in the works of mercy, compassion, and charity, ver. 15: thirdly, diligence in examination, ver. 16: and fourthly, courage and resolution in executing, ver. 17. Bp. Sanderson.

— a diadem.] The usual headdress of the Turks, Persians, Arabs, and other Eastern nations to this day, is the turban, which consists of a cap, and a sash of fine linen or silk wound round the bottom of the cap; and which appears from the present passage to have been worn in the East as early as the time of Job. In Before CHRIST about 1520. 15 I was eyes to the blind, and feet was I to the lame.

16 I was a father to the poor: and the cause which I knew not I searched out.

† Heb. the jaw-teeth, or, the grinders. 17 And I brake † the jaws of the wicked, and † plucked the spoil out of his teeth.

† Heb. I cast. 18 Then I said, I shall die in my nest, and I shall multiply my days as the sand.

† Heb. opened. 19 My root was † spread out by the waters, and the dew lay all night upon my branch.

† Heb. renew. † Heb. changed. 20 My glory was † fresh in me, and my bow was † renewed in my hand.

21 Unto me men gave ear, and waited, and kept silence at my counsel.

22 After my words they spake not again; and my speech dropped upon them.

23 And they waited for me as for the rain; and they opened their mouth wide as for the latter rain.

24 If I laughed on them, they believed it not; and the light of my countenance they cast not down.

25 I chose out their way, and sat chief, and dwelt as a king in the army, as one that comforteth the mourners.

CHAP. XXX.

1 Job's honour is turned into extreme contempt. 15 His prosperity into calamity.

BUT now they that are † younger than I † Heb. of fewer days than I. have me in derision, whose fathers I would have disdained to have set with the dogs of my flock.

2 Yea, whereto might the strength of their hands profit me, in whom old age was perished?

3 For want and famine they were † soli- † Or, dark as the night.

Is. lxii. 3, it is used for the royal turban; and in Zech. iii. 5, for the high priest's. Parkhurst.

This beautiful manner of speaking is still preserved among the Arabs. One of their proverbs is, "Knowledge is a diadem to a young person, and a chain of gold about his neck." Scott.

18. Then I said, I shall die in my nest, &c.] Then did I please myself in the confidence of my continuing happiness; and durst boldly resolve, I shall die in peace and fulness of days in my own house. Bp. Hall.

The image is taken from the eagle, who builds his nest on the summit of a rock. Security and ease are the points of resemblance intended. Scott.

19. — the dew lay all night upon my branch.] It is well known that in the hot Eastern countries, where it rarely rains during the summer months, the copious dews, which fall there during the night, contribute greatly to the nourishment of vegetables in general. And "this dew," says Hasselquist, speaking of the excessively hot weather in Egypt, "is particularly serviceable to the trees, which would otherwise never be able to resist the heat; but with this assistance they thrive well, and blossom, and ripen their fruit." Parkhurst.

20. — my bow was renewed in my hand.] A bow always bent is an image employed to represent unabated power and strength. Rosenmüller.

22. — my speech dropped upon them.] Like rain, refreshing them. Fragments to Calmet.

23. — as for the rain; — the latter rain.] In the foregoing verse, the soft insinuating force of his political and religious instruction was compared to the dropping dew. Here the copiousness of his eloquence is likened to the abundant rains which fall in autumn in those countries; and the high acceptableness of it, to the avidity with which the earth, burnt up by the summer's drought, devours those rains. The alteration which they produce in the withered fields is so astonishingly great, that Dr. Russell scruples not to call it "a resurrection of vegetable nature."

The same ingenious author informs us, that the first autumnal rains fall about the middle of September; the second, or latter, about twenty or thirty days after. The first are inconsiderable, the latter fall in great abundance. Scott. Concerning what are usually called the former and the latter rains, see the notes on Deut. xi. 14; xxviii. 12.

24. If I laughed on them, &c.] Or sported and jested with them, that is, carried myself familiarly and pleasantly with them, it was so acceptable to them to see me well pleased with them, that they could scarce believe their senses. Yet my familiarity did not breed in them contempt or presumption, so as to grieve me or make my countenance fall, as it does in cases of shame or sorrow, Gen. iv. 5. They were very cautious not to abuse my smiles, or to give me any occasion to change my countenance or carriage towards them. Poole.

25. I chose out their way, &c.] The phrase of "choosing out their way," denotes supremacy both in the state and in the affairs of religion, Exod. xviii. 20.

The next sentence represents him encamped with his subjects on some military expedition, with the authority of a royal general: "I shall pitch my tent as a king in the army."

The last clause, "as one that comforteth the mourners," may mean, animating his troops when they were dispirited; or, in a larger and more noble sense, his being the father of his people, ever touched with their distresses, and ready to exert his utmost ability for their relief. Scott.

Whilst Job was in prosperity, he was respected by all; but as soon as he fell into adversity, every one forsook him. Thus it happens every day: men make their court to those that have riches, and honours, and credit in the world; but abandon them as soon as they are deprived of these advantages: and virtue is commonly but little esteemed when it is not attended with worldly prosperity. The opinions of men are extremely vain and unreasonable: we ought not, therefore, to make any great account of them, nor build our happiness upon them. Ostervald.

Chap. XXX. Job paints his miserable reverse of fortune, the universal contempt into which he is fallen, the dreadful and unceasing torments of his disease; breathing at the same time a petition to God for mercy, and begging that his persecution might not be extended to his very ashes. Bp. Stock.

The section, ver. 1—14, appears to be a strong and spirited description of those villanous Arabs, who, when Job was in his prosperity, had felt the severity of his justice, and fled into the lurkingplaces of the desert. Upon the loss of his authority, these miscreants came out of their dens to revenge themselves upon him by the most scurrilous abuse. In drawing their character, he insists much on the misery of their habitation and way of living, as circumstances very expressive of the turpitude and barbarity of their manners. Scott.

Ver. 1. — younger.] The vast respect paid to their elders by the Eastern people, quickened their sensibility of contempt from their juniors. Scott.

— whose fathers I would have disdained to have set with the dogs of my flock.] Whose fathers I would have disdained to make the keepers of those dogs which tended upon my flocks. Bp. Hall.

2. Yea, whereto might the strength of their hands profit me,] For what use could I make of them, who had wholly lost their time, and lived idly and unprofitably? Bp. Hall.

3. For want and famine they were solitary;] Though they

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

† Heb.
yesternight.

tary; fleeing into the wilderness † in former time desolate and waste.

4 Who cut up mallows by the bushes, and juniper roots for their meat.

5 They were driven forth from among men, (they cried after them as after a thief;)

6 To dwell in the cliffs of the valleys, in † caves of the earth, and in the rocks.

7 Among the bushes they brayed; under the nettles they were gathered together.

8 They were children of fools, yea, children of † base men: they were viler than the earth.

9 ^a And now am I their song, yea, I am their byword.

10 They abhor me, they flee far from me, † and spare not to spit in my face.

† Heb. men of no name.

• Ps. 35. 15.
& 69. 12.

† Heb. and withhold not spittle from my face.

were in want, and ready to perish with hunger, yet no man could look after them, or pay them any regard. Caryl.

— fleeing into the wilderness in former time desolate and waste.] These words would be clearer, if they were rendered thus: Fleeing lately into the wilderness which is desolate and waste; or, into the wilderness, unto desolation and destruction. Dr. Durell.

4. Who cut up mallows by the bushes,] The word, here translated "mallow," seems to signify a herb of a saltish taste, which grows in salt places, whether near the sea, or in the desert. Athenæus says, it is the food of the miserable. Script. illust. Expos. Ind. The plant is described by Job as "cropped upon the shrub;" which exactly agrees with what the Arab writers say of the Maluck or Halimus, namely, that they ate the tops of it. Parkhurst.

Biddulph says, that "he saw many poor people gathering mallows and three-leaved grass, and asked them what they did with it; and they answered, that it was all their food, and that they boiled it, and did eat it. Then we took pity on them, and gave them bread, which they received very joyfully, and blessed God that there was bread in the world." This was in Syria, not far from Aleppo. Whether mallows was one of the herbs Job precisely meant, may be doubted. As Biddulph went to Jerusalem some time before the Bible was undertaken by the command of King James I. the observation he made of the poor people's eating mallows in Syria, might engage the learned translators so to render the word used in this passage of Job. Harmer.

— and juniper roots for their meat.] Rather, the Genista or Spanish broom. I cannot find any modern instance of the root of this shrub being eaten for food; but it is certain that the shoots, leaves, barks, and roots of other shrubs and trees, have been eaten among many nations in times and places of famine and scarcity. Parkhurst.

5. They were driven forth from among men,] This verse discovers the true cause why the men before spoken of lived solitary in the wilderness; their retirement was not voluntary but compulsory. Caryl.

They were cast out of all civil society, as pests not to be endured: and whenever they were discovered lurking about towns, an outcry was raised against them as against the pilfering Arabs of the desert; with whom, it is likely, they herded. Scott.

6. To dwell — in caves of the earth, &c.] St. Jerome says, that the southern parts of Judea are full of caves under ground, and of caverns in the mountains, to which the people retired in time of danger. Compare Judg. vi. 2; 1 Sam. xiii. 6. Parkhurst.

The following passage, in which notice is taken of the like circumstances in these deserts, is not inapplicable: "If in the course of our travelling we did not fall in with the hovel of the Kabyles, or the encampments of the Arabs, we had nothing to 11 Because he hath loosed my cord, and afflicted me, they have also let loose the ^{Before} ^{CHRIST} ^{about 1520.} bridle before me.

12 Upon my right hand rise the youth; they push away my feet, and they raise up against me the ways of their destruction.

13 They mar my path, they set forward my calamity, they have no helper.

14 They came upon me as a wide breaking in of waters: in the desolation they rolled themselves upon me.

15 Terrors are turned upon me: they pursue † my soul as the wind: and my † Heb.
welfare passeth away as a cloud. ^{my princ-} ^{pal one.}

16 And now my soul is poured out upon me; the days of affliction have taken hold upon me.

17 My bones are pierced in me in the night season: and my sinews take no rest.

protect us from the inclemency either of the heat of the day, or the cold of the night, unless we met with some accidental grove of trees, the shelve of a rock, or sometimes by good fortune a grotto. At these times our horses were the greatest sufferers: and as they were always our first care, we gathered for them stubble, grass, boughs of trees, and such like provender, before we sat down and examined what fragments of some former meal were reserved for ourselves." Dr. Shaw.

The rocks of Arabia Petrea abound in caves. At this day, the Arabs who dwell in the mountains of that country are a bad people; the worst of all the Arabs, as Bishop Pococke informs us. Scott.

7. Among the bushes they brayed;] Made a noise like wild asses through hunger, cold, and other sufferings. Clark. See chap. vi. 5.

— under the nettles they were gathered together.] The nettle is a plant so low, that no persons could assemble under it: the Latin Vulgate always renders the word brier, bramble, or the like: and Scheuchzer says, We must absolutely have recourse to tall shrubs, which are thorny, prickly, and burning. Dr. Shaw says, "There is no great variety of plants to be met with in these deserts. Those which I have seen are generally indebted to the cleft of some barren rock, or to the sandy plain, for their support, and to the nightly dews for their nourishment." Script. illust. Expos. Ind.

11. — loosed my cord,] This seems to be an allusion to the "stretched cords," by which Job's tent was fixed to the ground. Dr. Durell. Because God hath bereaved me of that power and honour which I formerly enjoyed, therefore they let loose the reins of their obedience and respect to me. Bp. Hall.

Perhaps, "Because He (God) hath loosened my bow-string," that is, hath made me weak and helpless, in opposition to what he had said by a like image, (ch. xxix. 20,) "and afflicted me, therefore they," my rascally persecutors before described, "have let go the rein," that is, thrown off all restraint, "before me." Parkhurst.

Or, the phrase "He hath loosed my cord," seems equivalent to that in chap. xii. 18, "He looseth the bond of kings." Scott.

13. — they have no helper.] Rather, there is no helper among them, none ready to assist me. Dr. Durell.

14. They came upon me as a wide breaking in of waters:] Rather, They came as a wide torrent; they rolled themselves in order to destroy. Dr. Durell.

15. — they pursue my soul as the wind:] With rapidity and violence, as when a person is attacked by a storm. Rosenmüller.

16. — my soul is poured out upon me;] Job's soul was once a cistern full of strength, liveliness, joy, and comfort; but his long sufferings and afflictions had almost emptied and drawn him dry to the bottom. Caryl.

17. My bones are pierced in me] My substance is bored or

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

18 By the great force of my disease is my garment changed: it bindeth me about as the collar of my coat.

19 He hath cast me into the mire, and I am become like dust and ashes.

20 I cry unto thee, and thou dost not hear me: I stand up, and thou regardest me not.

† Heb. turned to be cruel.
† Heb. the strength of thy hand.
21 Thou art † become cruel to me: with † thy strong hand thou opposest thyself against me.

22 Thou liftest me up to the wind; thou causest me to ride upon it, and dissolvest my || substance.

|| Or, wisdom.
23 For I know that thou wilt bring me to death, and to the house appointed for all living.

corroded from off me, eaten into holes with sores. Michaelis observes, that in the elephantiasis, Job's distemper, "in process of time tumours are formed, and these tumours degenerate at length into incurable sores, which penetrate one after another." Parkhurst.

It is too common a spectacle to see even among Europeans, at Rio de Janeiro, as well as native whites and negroes, that dreadful disease, the elephantiasis, which, destroying the sound texture of the integuments of the human frame, swells, distorts, and discolours wherever it attacks; enlarging the patient's misshapen limbs to the bulk of those of the huge animal, the resemblance to whom, in that particular, occasioned the appellation which this horrid disorder has received. Sir G. Staunton's Embassy to China.

18. By the great force of my disease is my garment changed: &c. The passage may be rendered, "with great force He layeth hold of my garment, and enfolds me by the collar of my robe. He hath cast me into the mire, &c." The idea is taken from a man struggling with another, laying hold of his garment, casting him to the earth, and rolling him in the mire. Job compares the disease and affliction which laid hold of him to such a struggle. Houbigant. Or, it requires great force, when I would shift my clothes, to pull them off: my outward garment, by the filthy matter of my sores, being glewed as fast to me, as the collar of my shirt. Bp. Patrick.

20. — I stand up, I offer myself to Thy view as an object of compassion, and pray to Thee. Clark.

Standing was the usual posture of prayer among the Hebrews. Scott.

21. Thou art become cruel to me: It is remarkable, that the very same word is used, Jer. xxx. 14, where God Himself declares how He had dealt with His own people, and expresses it in the following terms: "I have wounded thee with the wound of an enemy, with the chastisement of a cruel one." Peters.

— with thy strong hand thou opposest thyself against me. The turn of the sentence in the original is somewhat different, and is literally thus, "With Thy strong hand Thou hatest me;" which gives us a plain direction how the passage ought to be understood; Thou hast dealt with me as if Thou hatest me, or as men use to deal with those whom they hate. Peters.

22. Thou liftest me up to the wind: Thou tosses me up with Thy judgments, as dust or chaff is blown up by the wind. Bp. Hall.

It is very probable that this remarkable figurative representation refers to a sand-storm; especially such an one as Bruce describes, when, says he, we saw a number of prodigious pillars of sand at different distances, at times moving with great celerity; at others stalking on with a majestic slowness; at intervals coming as if in a very few minutes to overwhelm us; again retreating so as to be almost out of sight, their tops reaching to the very clouds. There the tops often separated from the bodies; and these, once disjoined, dispersed in the air, and did not appear more, &c. The comparison may represent Job's dignity exalted in the air, 24 Howbeit he will not stretch out his hand to the † grave, though they cry in his destruction.

25 ^b Did not I weep † for him that was in trouble? was not my soul grieved for the poor?

26 When I looked for good, then evil came unto me: and when I waited for light, there came darkness.

27 My bowels boiled, and rested not: the days of affliction prevented me.

28 I went mourning without the sun: I stood up, and I cried in the congregation.

29 ^c I am a brother to dragons, and a companion to || owls.

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

† Heb.
heav.
b Rom. 12.
15.
Ps. 35. 13.
† Heb.
for him that was hard of day?

^c Ps. 102. 6.
|| Or,
owls.

rising to great grandeur, importance, and even terror in the eyes of the beholders; riding upon the wind; and at length dissipated and dispersed, like a pillar of sand melting into the undistinguished level of the desert. This comparison seems precisely adapted to the mind of an Arab, who must have seen or heard of similar phenomena in the countries around him. Frag. to Calmet.

23. — to the house appointed for all living. The ancient belief was, that the souls of all men went to Sheol; (see the note on ch. xxvi. 5, 6:) which, as in the largest sense it took in the receptacle of good and bad souls, was in Job's phrase the house of assembly for all the living. Of the state or condition of the souls there, very little is said in the Old Testament; because good men looked beyond it for a reward of their piety, when they should be released from this state of death, and obtain a blessed resurrection: which hope they expressed by the care bestowed upon their dead bodies, to have them decently interred, and, if possible, in the sepulchres of their ancestors. And as for their souls, they believed that they should be gathered to their fathers, or their people; that is, to their religious ancestors, or to the abode of the blessed, there to remain in a state of peace and hope till the grand period of the resurrection, when they were to emerge into a new state of life and being. This seems evidently to have been the ancient notion of the state of death, and to have obtained universally in the first ages of the world. Peters.

24. Howbeit he will not stretch out his hand to the grave, God's afflicting hand will not pursue me to the grave; for though men cry out when they are sent thither, yet when they are there, all their sufferings and complaints are ended. Bp. Patrick.

The passage may be rendered, "But yet He will not stretch out His hand against the grave: surely in His destruction or destroying" (namely, of me) "a shout (would be) to them;" that is, to death and the grave before mentioned. The sense of this violently pathetick and obscure passage seems to be, that God would not extend Job's punishment beyond the grave, and therefore that even in death and the grave he would shout for joy in being relieved from his present sufferings. Parkhurst.

27. — prevented me. Rather, rushed in upon me. Dr. Durell.

28. I went mourning without the sun: I spend my days in mourning without any comfort, and am so oppressed with sadness, that I neither care nor desire to see the light of the sun. Clark.

— and I cried in the congregation. Among that company that came about me to behold me. Clark.

29. I am a brother to dragons, &c. Affinity in disposition and circumstances, as well as in blood, is denoted by the term "brother" among the Eastern nations. Scott.

The verse may be paraphrased thus: My pain foretells me to such lamentable cries, that I might seem to be associated with dragons and owls in some horrible desert, whose howlings and shrieks are wont to be held most mournful and ominous. Bp. Hall.

The purport of the passage is, I am like to wild creatures; first, to the tanim or phocæ, which frequent the inhospitable shores of the sea, and are notorious for mourning and whining;

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

30 My skin is black upon me, and my bones are burned with heat.

31 My harp also is turned to mourning, and my organ into the voice of them that weep.

CHAP. XXXI.

Job maketh a solemn protestation of his integrity in several duties.

I MADE a covenant with mine eyes; why then should I think upon a maid?

2 For what portion of God is there from above? and what inheritance of the Almighty from on high?

3 Is not destruction to the wicked? and a strange punishment to the workers of iniquity?

4 Doth not he see my ways, and count all my steps?

5 If I have walked with vanity, or if my foot hath hastened to deceit;

2 2 Chron.
16. 9.
ch. 21.
Prov. 5. 21.
& 15. 3.

see the note on Lam. iv. 3: and secondly, to the ostrich of the desert, (as in the margin,) whose mourning and lamenting is often of long continuance. See Mic. i. 8, where the same creatures are associated: and the remark of Dr. Shaw on that place. Script. illust. Expos. Ind.

30. My skin is black upon me,] In the elephantiasis, as Michaelis observes, which appears to have been Job's disease, "at first the whole skin becomes red, then of a leaden colour, or even quite black." Agreeably to this, the 28th verse may be rendered, "I go," or "am grown black without the heat," namely, by his distemper. Parkhurst.

31. My harp also is turned to mourning, &c.] These seem proverbial expressions for a most melancholy change of condition from happy to wretched. We cannot form an adequate idea of the force of the latter expression, "the voice of them that weep," without reading the accounts which travellers have given us of the excessive lamentations of the Easterns in their funeral processions. Scott.

Notwithstanding the complaints which Job makes of his friends, his chief complaint is, that God Himself seemed to have forsaken him. It is a small thing to be rejected of men, if God with His favour look upon us; but our condition is really deplorable, when God seems to hide His face from us, and answers us not in the time of trouble. The condition to which Job was reduced, ought to comfort those whom God causes to pass through the like trials. However, from what befell Job, they should likewise learn to moderate their complaints, to undergo their sufferings with patience, and to wait with resignation till it shall please God to deliver them in His due season. Ostervald.

Chap. XXXI. In this chapter Job makes a full profession of his integrity, and declares at large his strict adherence to the rules of duty, as they relate to God and man; binding the heaviest curses on himself, by imprecations of Divine vengeance, if he swerved from the truth. And this he did to wipe off the aspersions which his friends had cast on him, to clear himself from the charge of hypocrisy, or open transgression. Caryl.

Here is an amazing instance and example of a very great prince, who, when he had no superiour to control him, gave such instances of his chastity, temperance, justice, charity, compassion, devotion, &c. as few of his quality have imitated, worthy as they are all of imitation. Bp. Wilson.

Ver. 1, 2. I made a covenant with mine eyes; &c.—For what portion of God &c.] For if I had suffered my eyes and my heart to rove after these unlawful lusts, what could I have looked up for at the hand of God but due vengeance? Bp. Hall.

6 † Let me be weighed in an even balance, that God may know mine integrity. Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

7 If my step hath turned out of the way, and mine heart walked after mine eyes, and if any blot hath cleaved to mine hands; † Heb.
Let him
weigh me in balances of justice.

8 Then let me sow, and let another eat; yea, let my offspring be rooted out.

9 If mine heart have been deceived by a woman, or if I have laid wait at my neighbour's door;

10 Then let my wife grind unto another, and let others bow down upon her.

11 For this is an heinous crime; yea, it is an iniquity to be punished by the judges.

12 For it is a fire that consumeth to destruction, and would root out all mine increase.

13 If I did despise the cause of my manservant or of my maidservant, when they contended with me;

2—4. For what portion of God is there from above?] When Job asserts the same thing with his antagonists, namely, that a sure destruction attends the wicked, that it is their portion, their inheritance from God; he must certainly be understood in a sense different from theirs, and can only refer to a final retribution in a future state: for the intimation conveyed in the 4th verse, had he meant it of a temporal destruction, was what his antagonists had repeated to him again and again, and had urged it as an argument of his guilt, that he was thus miserably destroyed. Peters.

5. If I have walked with vanity, &c.] The word rendered "vanity" signifies falsehood, and is properly applied to idols: and the phrase is here peculiarly adapted to that signification; for "I walked with," signifies in Scripture phrase paying acceptable service to the Deity. So Enoch is said to have "walked with God." So that the meaning is, If I have paid religious worship to idols. The word "deceit" seems to look the same way; as all idols in Scripture language are a lie, an imposture, a fraud. A parallel passage is Ps. xxiv. 4. Heath.

6. Let me be weighed in an even balance,] Similar allusions to weighing the characters of mankind are frequent in Scripture. See Is. xxvi. 7; Dan. v. 27; 1 Sam. ii. 3. Fragments to Calmet.

10. Then let my wife grind unto another,] That is, Let her be so degraded, that, instead of having her corn ground for her, she shall perform that servile office herself; not for herself, nor for me, but let her grind for another. Grinding was the work of the women in the East, and esteemed a very servile, as well as laborious employment. Frag. to Calmet. See the note on Exodus xi. 5. Otherwise the phrase here used is a decent expression for her committing adultery, as many learned men have understood it. This sense seems best to suit the context, and particularly the latter part of the verse, in which, as usual in Hebrew poetry, the same sentiment is repeated in other words. Parkhurst.

Then let my wife become false to my bed, and repay my sin with the like adultery; let me be plagued, as I deserve, in my own kind: for this had been a capital offence, worthy to be punished by the sword of authority. Bp. Hall.

12. For it is a fire that consumeth to destruction,] Such great wickedness would have called down upon me the Divine vengeance, which would have spent its fury against me, like a fire laying all things waste, and consuming the fruits of the earth. Rosenmüller.

13, 14. If I did despise the cause of my manservant &c.] Job here speaks plainly of the future, of something which he was infallibly to expect, had he behaved unjustly to his slave: whereas could we suppose him to mean it of any temporal judgment or

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

14 What then shall I do when God riseth up? and when he visiteth, what shall I answer him?

¶ Or. did he not fashion us in one womb?

15 Did not he that made me in the womb make him? and || did not one fashion us in the womb?

16 If I have withheld the poor from their desire, or have caused the eyes of the widow to fail;

17 Or have eaten my morsel myself alone, and the fatherless hath not eaten thereof;

¶ That is,
the widow.

18 (For from my youth he was brought up with me, as with a father, and I have guided || her from my mother's womb;)

19 If I have seen any perish for want of clothing, or any poor without covering;

20 If his loins have not blessed me, and if he were not warmed with the fleece of my sheep;

21 If I have lifted up my hand against the fatherless, when I saw my help in the gate:

22 Then let mine arm fall from my shoulder blade, and mine arm be broken || from the bone.

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

23 For destruction from God was a terror to me, and by reason of his highness I could not endure. ¶ Or, the chancel-bone.

24 If I have made gold my hope, or have said to the fine gold, Thou art my confidence;

25 If I rejoiced because my wealth was great, and because mine hand had † gotten much;

† Heb. found much.

26 If I beheld † the sun when it shined, or the moon walking † in brightness;

† Heb.
the light.

27 And my heart hath been secretly enticed, or † my mouth hath kissed my hand:

† Heb.
bright.

28 This also were an iniquity to be punished by the judge: for I should have denied the God that is above.

† Heb.
my hand hath kissed my mouth.

29 If I rejoiced at the destruction of him that hated me, or lifted up myself when evil found him:

30 Neither have I suffered † my mouth to sin by wishing a curse to his soul.

† Heb.
my palate.

31 If the men of my tabernacle said not, visitation of God, what is it that he had to expect? he seems to think his condition so miserable already, that it was scarcely possible for him to fall lower; and therefore he often and earnestly wishes for death, as the happiest event that could befall him. We need not question, therefore, but that he had here an eye to the future judgment; and it is remarkable, that he expresses himself in the same phrase here as in chap. xix. 25. Peters.

17. Or have eaten my morsel myself alone,] This verse affords us a beautiful picture of liberality and tender charity, which would not eat even the least morsel of bread without imparting some little portion to the poor and needy. Schultens.

The following passage, describing a custom that prevails among the Arabs, is illustrative of their hospitality: "No sooner was our food prepared, than one of the Arabs, after having placed himself upon the highest station he could find, invited three times with a loud voice all his brethren, the sons of the faithful, to come and partake of it; though none of them were in view, or perhaps within a hundred miles of us. This custom however they maintain to be always a token of their great benevolence, as it would be of their hospitality likewise, if they had an opportunity to shew it." Dr. Shaw.

As we were at table, there came by a stranger wearing a white turban, who, after having saluted the company, sat down to the table without ceremony, eat with us during some time, and then went away, repeating several times the name of God. They told us, that it was some traveller who, no doubt, stood in need of refreshment, and who had profited by the opportunity, according to the custom of the East, which is to exercise hospitality at all times, and to all persons. De la Roque, Fragments to Calmet.

21. If I have lifted up my hand against the fatherless,] If I have used my power injuriously against the fatherless, when I saw that my sentence would have been seconded, and would have prevailed on the bench. Bp. Hall. See chap. xxix. 7, and the notes there.

Such was Job's "religion pure and undefiled," who "visited" the orphan and "widow in their affliction, and kept himself unspotted from the world:" no wonder then that it was accepted before "God, even the Father," James v. 11. This surely is Gospel faith; and the Apostle James, in his excellent practical Epistle, seems to allude particularly to the case of Job, whose "patience" he expressly celebrates in the following marked passages, chap. i. 2, and 26. Dr. Hales.

23. For destruction from God was a terror to me, &c.] For I never thought that I could escape the Divine vengeance; the dread of which affrighted me, when men could not, from all such insolence; for I know that I could not support myself against the majesty of God. Bp. Patrick.

26—28. If I beheld &c.] If, when I have beheld Thy glorious creatures, the sun and the moon, I have given way to any idolatrous conceits, and have ascribed Divine honour unto them, as my heathen neighbours do; this were indeed a heinous and capital wickedness. Bp. Hall.

The only species of idolatry noticed in this book is Zabianism, or the worship of the heavenly bodies, which is the earliest on record, and an additional proof of the high antiquity of the composition; especially as it is noticed with abhorrence, as a novelty, deserving judicial punishment. We learn from Sir William Jones, that the people of Arabia very soon fell into the common, but fatal, error of adoring the sun and the firmament, the planets and fixed stars. Dr. Hales.

27. — or my mouth hath kissed my hand:] So Lucian mentions the Greeks, even in his time, worshipping the sun by kissing their hand, and then thinking their adoration complete. Minucius Felix remarks, that when the heathen Cæcilius observed the statue of Serapis, "he, according to the custom of the superstitious vulgar, moving his hand to his mouth, kissed it with his lips." Apuleius, who lived in the second century, speaking of one Æmilian, probably a Christian, says, "If he passes by a temple, he thinks it wicked to move his hand to his lips, as a sign of adoration." Parkhurst.

We are told that the Mahomedans begin their worship with bringing their two thumbs together, and kissing them three times, and at every kiss touching their foreheads with their thumbs. When they cannot kiss the hand of a superiour, they kiss their own, and put it to their foreheads; they venerate an unseen being, whom they cannot touch, in the same manner. Harmer, Dr. Durell.

31. If the men of my tabernacle said not, &c.] He appeals to his own domesticks for his bounty towards them and liberality to all others. The clearest translation of this verse is, "If the man of my tabernacle do not say, Who can produce a person not satisfied from his flesh?" that is, from his provisions. The Chaldee interpreter understood it in the same manner, "who cutteth of his flesh unsatisfied?" Scott.

Before CHRIST about 1520. Oh that we had of his flesh! we cannot be satisfied.

¶ Or, to the way. 32 The stranger did not lodge in the street: but I opened my doors || to the traveller.

¶ Or, after the manner of men. 33 If I covered my transgressions || as Adam, by hiding mine iniquity in my bosom:

34 Did I fear a great multitude, or did the contempt of families terrify me, that I kept silence, and went not out of the door?

¶ Or, behold, my sign is that the Almighty will answer me. 35 Oh that one would hear me! || behold, my desire is, that the Almighty would answer me, and that mine adversary had written a book.

33, 34. If I covered my transgressions as Adam,] The passage should be thus translated:

Did I cover, like Adam, my transgression,
By hiding, in my lurkingplace, mine iniquity;
Then let me be terrified at the great assembly,
And let the contempt of the families strike me down;
Let me be cut off and never go out of my door.

The preceding passage contains a reference to the history of the first man, and his endeavours to hide himself after his transgression. Dr. Magee.

Amongst the particulars wherein Job vindicates his integrity, one is, that he was ready to acknowledge his errors. The allusion to Adam's hiding himself is proper and apposite; but if the passage be rendered, as in the margin, "after the manner of men," it becomes an accusation of others; and the vindication of himself has a mixture of pride in it, which does not suit the character of the speaker. Bp. Sherlock.

"Covering of sin" is spoken in several senses. God covers sin, when He hides it, as it were, from His sight, and will not observe it, Neh. iv. 5; Ps. lxxxv. 2; compare Ps. xxxii. 1. Man covers his own sin, when he clokes or palliates it, Ps. xxxii. 5; Prov. xxviii. 13: that of another, when he conceals or says nothing of it, Prov. xvii. 9; compare Prov. x. 12. Parkhurst.

34. Did I fear &c.] This passage seems to intimate, that it was customary among the Arabs to assemble all the families in a tribe for trying a delinquent of high rank. Job imprecates on himself such a solemn condemnation, in case he had concealed, in this apology, any crime whereof he had been guilty. The punishment which he imprecates, is, execration by the whole tribe, a life of obscurity, and perpetual imprisonment in his own dwelling. Scott.

35, 36. Oh that one would hear me! &c.] Oh that mine adversary had written a book, that is, a roll, accusation, or bill! surely I would take it on my shoulder, and would bind it as a crown upon me, that is, upon my head. Fragments to Calmet.

36. Surely I would take it upon my shoulder, &c.] Surely I would not endeavour to obscure it, but openly expose it to be read by all; nay, wear it as a singular ornament, which would turn to my honour, when the world should see it disproved. Bp. Patrick.

— and bind it as a crown to me.] As a tiara, diadem, or turban. Linen is one of the oldest materials that ever were written upon, as appears by the bandages of the Egyptian mummies still preserved; and to this Job here probably alludes: this might readily be not only "taken on his shoulders," but "bound about his head." Parkhurst.

However dissimilar "binding a writing about the head" may be from our customs, yet we meet with such a practice in the East even to our days. For when a governor under the Great Mogul is receiving letters or orders from his master, the moment he sees the packet, he alights from his horse, and falls prostrate to the ground: which done, he takes the present from the messenger, binds it fast upon his own head, and returning to the court room, where he usually despatches business, reads it, and returns an answer immediately. Parkhurst.

36 Surely I would take it upon my shoulder, and bind it as a crown to me. Before CHRIST about 1520.

37 I would declare unto him the number of my steps; as a prince would I go near unto him.

38 If my land cry against me, or that the furrows likewise thereof † complain;

39 If I have eaten † the fruits thereof without money, or have † caused the owners thereof to lose their life:

40 Let thistles grow instead of wheat, and || cockle instead of barley. The words of Job are ended.

† Heb. weep.

† Heb. the strength thereof:

† Heb. caused the soul of the owners thereof to expire, or, breathe out.

† Heb. caused the soul of the owners thereof to expire, or, breathe out.

† Heb. caused the soul of the owners thereof to expire, or, breathe out.

† Heb. caused the soul of the owners thereof to expire, or, breathe out.

† Heb. caused the soul of the owners thereof to expire, or, breathe out.

† Heb. caused the soul of the owners thereof to expire, or, breathe out.

37. I would declare unto him the number of my steps;] I would help him with such informations against myself as he would never be able to find out; and when I had done, I would encounter him boldly and courageously, as some warlike prince would come into the field against a weak enemy. Bp. Hall.

38. If my land cry against me, &c.] If any part of my land was unjustly gained, or I have defrauded of their wages those who ploughed it. Bp. Patrick.

39. — have caused the owners thereof to lose their life;] Killing them, that so I might have quiet possession of it. Clark.

40. — thistles — cockle] What is precisely meant by the Hebrew words cannot be ascertained. In general, however, he imprecates barrenness upon his land. Scott.

This chapter deserves to be read and meditated upon with great attention; for it contains noble sentiments concerning the principal duties of religion, and particularly purity and chastity, justice and charity, the dread of God's judgments, alms, and compassion on the miserable, contempt of worldly goods, piety towards God, the love of our enemies, and confession of sins. If Job had such pure and exalted notions, and behaved with so much prudence and piety in his time; much more must it be the duty of Christians to think and act as he did. Osterwald.

Here ends the controversy between Job and his friends. The grand question in debate between them was, Whether Job was a sinner and a hypocrite, or not. Both parties draw their arguments from the providence of God, which, they both agreed, could not act wrong.

The friends represent his extraordinary calamities as a visible judgment on him for his sins: and because he had none that were publick and notorious, they at first insinuate, and afterwards plainly assert, that he must needs have been guilty of some secret bosom sin, and that of the deepest die, that could subject him to such extreme misery: for that God never afflicts in so remarkable manner, but for sins of great magnitude. For which they appeal to experience: "Recollect, I pray thee," says Eliphaz, "what innocent person ever perished? and when were the righteous cut off?" chap. iv. 7. "Behold," says Bildad, "God will not cast off the perfect man, neither will He help the evil doers," chap. viii. 20; and Zophar tells him bluntly, "Know therefore, that God exacteth of thee less than thine iniquity deserveth!" chap. xi. 6.

Job, on the other hand, defends himself, by setting before them another view of Providence. He denies an exact retributive justice in this life, arguing from the general course of it; whereas they argued chiefly from extraordinary exceptions: they had seen a good man sometimes remarkably delivered; and oftentimes a wicked man remarkably punished. But he bids them reflect, how many they had known, who were notoriously wicked, and had nevertheless prospered a long time, and no extraordinary calamity befell them in the course of their lives, nor in their deaths. And though it was not so easy to discern who were really good, (a bad inside being often covered by a good outside,) yet he bids them consider what ravages were sometimes made, either by the pesti-

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

CHAP. XXXII.

1 Elihu is angry with Job and his three friends. 6 Because wisdom cometh not from age, he excuseth the boldness of his youth. 11 He reproveth them for not satisfying of Job. 16 His zeal to speak.

† Heb. from answering.

SO these three men ceased † to answer Job, because he was righteous in his own eyes.

2 Then was kindled the wrath of Elihu the son of Barachel the Buzite, of the kindred of Ram: against Job was his wrath kindled, because he justified † himself rather than God.

† Heb.
his soul.

3 Also against his three friends was his wrath kindled, because they had found no answer, and yet had condemned Job.

† Heb. expected Job
in words.

4 Now Elihu had † waited till Job had spoken, because they were † elder than he.

† Heb.
elder for days.

5 When Elihu saw that there was no answer in the mouth of these three men, then his wrath was kindled.

† Heb. few of days.

6 And Elihu the son of Barachel the Buzite answered and said, I am † young, and ye are very old; wherefore I was afraid, and † durst not shew you mine opinion.

† Heb.
I feared.

7 I said, Days should speak, and multitude of years should teach wisdom.

lence or the sword; and they must needs be convinced that many good men must unavoidably suffer with the bad, in such great and general devastations. So that no certain conclusion could be drawn of men's being either good or bad, from what they enjoyed or what they suffered in this world. And therefore it was rash, and even wicked in them, to charge him with heinous sins, without any apparent foundation besides the greatness of his sufferings.

This is evidently the way of reasoning on both sides; and the leading object for Job's repeated wishes for an immediate trial before God with his accusers: and when that failed, his hope of a future resurrection at the day of judgment was, by such a solemn appeal, to convince them, if possible, of his innocence. Peters, Dr Hales.

Chap. XXXII, XXXIII. When the opponents of Job had been put to silence, Elihu takes up the subject, and blames both parties: Job, for having been hurried away, by the violence of his feelings, "to strive against God;" his three adversaries, for having brought charges against Job which they could not prove. He solves the question between them, by affirming that calamity is not to be regarded as an evidence of guilt; but still, that even in the good there lurks a certain taint of sin of which themselves are not conscious; and that this must be corrected by some severe remedy, lest the righteous fall insensibly into impiety: and moreover, that these are salutary inflictions, not punishments. Rosenmüller.

Chap. XXXII. ver. 1. — because he was righteous in his own eyes.] They found that he was resolutely bent to justify himself, let them say what they could. Clark.

2. — the Buzite, of the kindred of Ram:] Of Syrian extraction: for Buz was the son of Nahor, who was a Syrian. Grotius. See Gen. xxii. 20.

3. — because they had found no answer,] No convincing reply, such as could silence Job. Bp. Wilson.

6. — I am young, &c.] For a youth to speak in such an as-

8 But there is a spirit in man: and ^a the inspiration of the Almighty giveth them understanding.

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

^a Ch. 38. 36.
Prov. 2. 6.
Eccles. 2. 26.
Dan. 1. 17.
& 2. 21.

9 Great men are not always wise: neither do the aged understand judgment.

10 Therefore I said, Harken to me; I also will shew mine opinion.

11 Behold, I waited for your words; I gave ear to your † reasons, whilst ye searched out † what to say.

† Heb.
understandings.
† Heb.
words.

12 Yea, I attended unto you, and, behold, there was none of you that convinced Job, or that answered his words:

13 Lest ye should say, We have found out wisdom: God thrusteth him down, not man.

14 Now he hath not || directed his words against me: neither will I answer him with your speeches.

|| Or,
ordered his
words.

15 They were amazed, they answered no more: † they left off speaking.

† Heb.
they removed speeches from themselves.

16 When I had waited, (for they spake not, but stood still, and answered no more;)

17 I said, I will answer also my part, I also will shew mine opinion.

† Heb.
words.

18 For I am full of † matter, † the spirit within me constraineth me.

† Heb.
the spirit of
my belly.

sembly on so delicate and difficult a subject, and after his superiours in age, and men renowned for wisdom, had given up the dispute, exposed him to the danger of discovering his weakness and folly, and of being thought forward and presumptuous. Scott, Poole.

7, 8. I said, Days should speak, &c.] I said, as in good manners I ought, those who are ancient and full of days should speak; and those who had the experience of many years, should be most able to teach wisdom to such as are younger: but I see, all is not in age; there is a Spirit of God which, breathing where it listeth, maketh a difference in men. Bp. Hall.

8. — inspiration of the Almighty] The word used here, which we translate "inspiration," is used by Moses, Gen. ii. 7, to signify the inspiration or breath of life: and therefore we may justly take it to mean here, not what Christians call the grace of God, but rather that original ability of mind which God has given to man. Shuckford.

13. Lest ye should say, We have found out wisdom:] Do not think or say, that you have, by your great wisdom, convinced Job, upon this ground, that God hath afflicted him, not man; that God, being just, punishes none but a sinner; and that therefore Job is a hypocrite: I shall deal with him in another way. Bp. Hall.

14. Now he hath not directed his words against me:] I am not engaged in this discourse, by any provoking words of Job, as you have been, but merely out of zeal for God, and love to truth, and a sincere desire to minister to Job matter both for conviction and comfort; neither will I answer him with such weak arguments and provoking language as you have used. Clark.

15. They were amazed, &c.] Here Elihu turns his speech to the auditors. Clark. As if he had said, Sec, I beseech you, all that hear us, how these disputants are amazed; how silent they are, as if their speech had forsaken them. Bp. Patrick.

18. — the spirit within me constraineth me.] As he was a young man, he does not claim much authority from his own sayings; but he claims it from the inspiration of the Almighty, by whose

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

† Heb. is not opened.
† Heb. that I may breathe.

19 Behold, my belly is as wine which hath no vent; it is ready to burst like new bottles.

20 I will speak, † that I may be refreshed: I will open my lips and answer.

21 Let me not, I pray you, accept any man's person, neither let me give flattering titles unto man.

22 For I know not to give flattering titles; in so doing my maker would soon take me away.

CHAP. XXXIII.

1 Elihu offereth himself instead of God, with sincerity and meekness, to reason with Job. 8 He excuseth God from giving man an account of his ways, by his greatness. 14 God calleth man to repentance by visions, 19 by afflictions, 23 and by his ministry. 31 He inciteth Job to attention.

WHEREFORE, Job, I pray thee, hear my speeches, and hearken to all my words.

2 Behold, now I have opened my mouth, my tongue hath spoken † in my mouth.

3 My words shall be of the uprightness

† Heb. in my palate.

Spirit he was actuated, ver. 8, and whose oracles he was delivering. Heath.

19. — as wine which hath no vent; it is ready to burst like new bottles.] Bottles made of skin were used anciently by most nations, and still are used in the East. It appears from a figure found among the ruins of Herculaneum, that, after the skin had been stripped off the animal, and properly dressed, the places where the legs had been, were strongly closed up; and where the neck was, an opening was left for receiving and discharging the contents of the bottle. Such bottles, when full, must have differed greatly from the same when empty. On receiving the liquor they must be greatly swollen and distended; and no doubt, they must be swollen still further by the fermentation of the liquor within them, as that advances to ripeness: so that in this state, if “no vent” be given to it, the liquor may overpower the strength of the bottle; or, by searching every crevice and weaker part, if it find any weaker part, it may penetrate by that. Hence arises the propriety of “putting new wine into new bottles,” which, being in the prime of their strength, may resist the expansion, the internal pressure of their contents, and preserve the wine to due maturity; while old bottles may without danger contain old wine, the fermentation of which is already past. See Matt. ix. 17; Luke v. 38.

The Arabs use a larger kind of bottle, named girba, which is thus described by Bruce: “A girba is an ox's skin squared, and the edges sewed together very artificially by a double seam, which does not let out water, much resembling that upon the best English cricket balls. An opening is left at the top of the girba, in the same manner as the bung-hole of a cask. Around this, the skin is gathered to the size of a large handful, which, when the girba is full of water, is tied round with whiplcord. These girbas generally contain about sixty gallons each, and two of them are the load of a camel. They are then all besmeared on the outside with grease, as well to hinder the water from oozing through, as to prevent its being evaporated by the heat of the sun, which in fact happened to us twice, so as to put us in imminent danger of perishing by thirst.” Fragments to Cabinet.

22. For I know not to give flattering titles;] I dare not soothe and flatter any man in a false conceit: if I should do so, I know that God would be sure to be speedily avenged of me. Bp. Hall.

of my heart: and my lips shall utter knowledge clearly.

4 The Spirit of God hath made me, and the breath of the Almighty hath given me life.

5 If thou canst answer me, set thy words in order before me, stand up.

6 ^a Behold, I am † according to thy wish in God's stead: I also am † formed out of the clay.

7 Behold, my terror shall not make thee afraid, neither shall my hand be heavy upon thee.

8 Surely thou hast spoken † in mine hearing, and I have heard the voice of thy words, saying,

9 I am clean without transgression, I am innocent; neither is there iniquity in me.

10 Behold, he findeth occasions against me, he counteth me for his enemy, 11 He putteth my feet in the stocks, he marketh all my paths.

12 Behold, in this thou art not just: I will answer thee, that God is greater than man.

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

^a Chap. 9.
35. & 13.
20.

† Heb.
according to thy mouth.

† Heb. cut out of the clay.

† Heb. in mine ears.

The protestation, here made by Elihu, that he would speak freely and impartially, should prompt us always to speak with sincerity, without being restrained by any regard to men; especially when the glory of God, and their good, require us to speak the truth. Ostervald.

Chap. XXXIII. ver. 4. The Spirit of God hath made me,] Creation being proper to the true God, the Holy Ghost, or Spirit of God, is therefore the true God. When God said, “Let Us make man,” He spake to the Son and Holy Ghost, Gen. i. 26. Such a wonderful harmony is there betwixt all parts of Holy Scripture! Bp. Wilson.

Elihu here alludes to Gen. ii. 7. Rosenmüller.

6. — in God's stead:] To plead His cause against thee, and answer thee, as thou desiredst. Clark.

7. Behold, my terror shall not make thee afraid,] Look upon me; the combat is not unequal, as thou complainedst when thou lookedst upon God, chap. ix. 34; xiii. 21: thou seest no dreadful majesty in me to affright thee, nor any power to oppress thee. Bp. Patrick.

10. Behold, he findeth occasions against me,] He seeks to overthrow all my purposes and pursuits. Rosenmüller.

These words are not taken exactly from the speeches of Job, but are charged upon him by Elihu, who puts this construction upon Job's words. The first branch of this sentence, “Behold, He findeth occasions against me,” is not to be found in Job's speeches: and as for the other which occurs, chap. xiii. 24, “Wherefore hidest Thou thy face, and holdest me for Thine enemy?” though there may be something faulty in the expostulation, yet it is very much alleviated by those expressions of humility and self-abasement which immediately precede and follow it. See ver. 23, 25. Peters.

11. He putteth my feet in the stocks,] He presseth me with very close and sore afflictions. Caryl. See the note on chap. xiii. 27.

12. Behold, in this thou art not just:] Though in the former part of thy life thou mightest carry thyself without blame, yet in this thou deservest censure, that thou hast so obstinately maintained thy innocence, as if God dealt too hardly with thee. Clark.

— God is greater than man.] He is too great to be withstood, too just to do wrong, too good to delight in any man's

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.
† Heb. he answereth
not.

13 Why dost thou strive against him?
for † he giveth not account of any of his matters.

14 For God speaketh once, yea twice, yet man perceiveth it not.

15 In a dream, in a vision of the night, when deep sleep falleth upon men, in slumberings upon the bed;

† Heb.
he revealeth,
or, uncover-
eth.

16 Then † he openeth the ears of men, and sealeth their instruction,

17 That he may withdraw man from his † purpose, and hide pride from man.

† Heb.
work.

18 He keepeth back his soul from the pit, and his life † from perishing by the sword.

† Heb. from passing by the sword.

19 He is chastened also with pain upon his bed, and the multitude of his bones with strong pain:

misery. We ought therefore quietly to submit to His dispensations, as the very best. Bp. Wilson.

14. — God speaketh once, yea twice, &c.] Many times and divers ways God solicits and admonishes men; yet such is the dulness and security of their hearts, that they either do not, or will not, hear and understand them. Bp. Hall.

15—18. In a dream, in a vision of the night, &c.] Elihu having said in the former verse, that “God speaketh once, yea twice, yet man perceiveth it not,” proceeds to give an instance of the several ways by which God speaks to man: as first, ver. 15, in dreams and visions; for his instruction, ver. 16; next, to encourage repentance and humiliation, ver. 17; and lastly, to secure his safety, ver. 18. Caryl.

16, 17. Then he openeth the ears of men, &c.] Then and by these means He causeth men to hear, and imprinteth in their hearts His instructions; that He may prevail with man, to withdraw him from those evil courses and resolutions which he hath undertaken; and that He may convince him of his proud and insolent conceits, which he hath harboured in himself. Bp.
Hall.

17. That he may withdraw man from his purpose,] Rather, his “doing,” or “work,” as in the margin; namely, all actions and words which proceed from pride, mentioned in the next clause, or from any other corrupt affection. Scott.

— and hide pride from man.] That is, keep him humble.
Want of true humility was Job's great fault. Elihu takes pains to convince him of this, but all in vain, till God awakened him, ch. xlii. 6; then he saw his fault and was humbled. Bp. Wilson.

18. — the pit,] This is one of the names of the sepulchral grot, denoting it to be a place of putrefaction. Scott.

19—22. He is chastened &c.] These verses point out the second method which the wisdom of God employs for the humiliation of man, and for the revelation of His mind unto him: God speaketh unto him by pain and sickness. Caryl.

22. — the destroyers.] The instruments of death and destruction: probably the diseases, which by God's appointment are ready to give the fatal blow. Poole. The sense of the verse is, There is but a step between him and his grave; the pangs of death being ready to seize upon him. Bp. Patrick.

23—26. If there be a messenger with him, &c.] When a man is thus soundly humbled, if a faithful messenger and minister of God, which is not easy to be found, shall shew that man his true estate, then will God be gracious to him. Bp. Hall.

— a messenger] One sent by the providence of God, or by special commission from Him, to assist the sick man with his instructions and prayers. Scott.

— an interpreter,] A rare person, that can expound the mind of God. Bp. Patrick.

“One among a thousand” is an expression to signify the difficulty of meeting with such a person. Chappelon.

— his uprightness:] His duty; what right reason and re-20 ^b So that his life abhorreth bread, and his soul † dainty meat.

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

21 His flesh is consumed away, that it cannot be seen; and his bones that were not seen stick out.

^b Psal. 107.
18.
† Heb. meat of desire.

22 Yea, his soul draweth near unto the grave, and his life to the destroyers.

23 If there be a messenger with him, an interpreter, one among a thousand, to shew unto man his uprightness:

24 Then he is gracious unto him, and saith, Deliver him from going down to the pit: I have found † a ransom.

† Or, an atonement.
† Heb. than childhood.

25 His flesh shall be fresher † than a child's: he shall return to the days of his youth:

26 He shall pray unto God, and he will ligion required from a man in his situation; repentance, submission, and prayer to God for pardon. The instruction is supposed to be effectual; as appears from the following verses. Scott.

24. Then he is gracious unto him, &c.] God mercifully accepts his repentance, and saith, “Deliver him,” that is, He shall be delivered, “from going down to the pit.” Scott.

A blessing or benefit is here promised on God's part, which is deliverance from the ill consequences and punishment of sin:
and though temporal death be here immediately intended, yet that is a type of our deliverance from eternal death, which is expressly promised in the Gospel. But then there is a condition required on our part: “If any say, I have sinned, and perverted that which was right, and it profited me not,” ver. 27. In which words are contained, first, a penitent confession of our sins to God: “If any say, I have sinned,” that is, if he make a penitent confession of his sin to God: secondly, a true contrition for our sin, not only for fear of the pernicious consequences and the punishment that will follow it, implied in these words, “and it profited me not,” for this is but a very imperfect contrition; but from a just sense of the evil nature of sin, and the fault and offence of it against God, that we have done contrary to right and our duty: “If any say, I have sinned, and perverted that which was right.” Thus a true and perfect contrition for our sins is made a necessary condition of our deliverance from the punishment due to them. Abp. Tillotson.

— I have found a ransom.] Or, “an atonement,” as in the margin. Whatever is a means of averting punishment, and conciliating the Divine favour, is termed in Scripture an atonement.
The intercession of Moses, Exod. xxxii. 30; and the act of Phinehas, Numb. xxv. 13; are so called: and here the sick man's repentance. See Ecclus. xxxv. 3. Scott.

25. His flesh shall be fresher &c.] A beautiful description of the sick man's recovery. The word, translated “shall be fresher,” is an elegant metaphor from plants; which, having been withered by a long drought, recover their vigour and verdure on the falling of a shower of rain. Scott.

— fresher than a child's:] This was probably a proverbial form of expression. Compare 2 Kings v. 14. Schultens, Chappelon.

26. He shall pray unto God.] Prayer is a duty never out of season, yet at some times more in season than at others, and most of all in time of affliction: “Is any man afflicted? let him pray,” James v. 13. And among all afflictions, that of sickness seems to be a special call for this duty; therefore in the fourteenth verse of the same chapter, soon after the Apostle had said, “Is any afflicted? let him pray;” he adds, “Is any sick among you? let him call for the elders of the church, and let them pray over him.” But to desire others to pray for us in bodily sickness, and neglect it ourselves, is an ill symptom of a sick soul: the prayers of others are rarely beneficial to any, unless they either pray, or have a desire to pray, for themselves. Caryl.

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

Or,
He shall look upon men, and say, I have sinned, &c.
Or,
He hath delivered my soul, &c.
and my life.
† Heb.
twice and thrice.

be favourable unto him: and he shall see his face with joy: for he will render unto man his righteousness.

27 || He looketh upon men, and if any say, I have sinned, and perverted that which was right, and it profited me not;

28 || He will deliver his soul from going into the pit, and his life shall see the light.

29 Lo, all these things worketh God † oftentimes with man,

30 To bring back his soul from the pit, to be enlightened with the light of the living.

31 Mark well, O Job, hearken unto me: hold thy peace, and I will speak.

32 If thou hast any thing to say, answer me: speak, for I desire to justify thee.

33 If not, hearken unto me: hold thy peace, and I shall teach thee wisdom.

CHAP. XXXIV.

1 Elihu accuseth Job for charging God with injustice. 10 God omnipotent cannot be unjust. 31 Man must humble himself unto God. 34 Elihu reproveth Job.

FURTHERMORE Elihu answered and said,

2 Hear my words, O ye wise men; and give ear unto me, ye that have knowledge.

— he shall see his face with joy:] He shall be sensible that God is pleased with, or looks graciously upon him. Chappelon.

— his righteousness:] The reward of his present holiness; and will deal with him according to that, and not according to his former wickedness. Clark.

27, 28. He looketh upon men, and if any say, &c.] The marginal reading is, "He shall look upon men, and say, I have sinned, &c." He hath delivered my soul from going into the pit, and my life shall see the light." The passage may be thus paraphrased: And he, as becomes a true penitent, casting his eyes upon his neighbours, shall openly confess and say, I have offended God, and He hath justly chastised me; I have done wickedly, and He hath punished me according to my desert: but hath redeemed me from that death into which I was going; and not only made me live, but given me hope that I shall enjoy prosperous days. Bp. Patrick.

The words of his confessional and thanksgiving hymn, or rather the substance and burden of it, are, "I have sinned, &c." Scott.

28. — his life shall see the light.] Shall be prolonged in comfort and prosperity. Clark.

30. To bring back his soul from the pit,] He repeats, from ver. 18, the merciful design of Divine admonitions and corrections, in order to fix the persuasion of it in the mind of Job. Eliphaz and Zophar had hinted this, chap. v. 17, 18; and xi. 11, 12. But Elihu expatiates on the subject. His aim likewise differs from theirs. The reclaiming of a wicked man, such as they supposed Job to be, was the point they had in view; whereas Elihu speaks of these Divine rebukes, applied to the cure of faults which are not inconsistent with general goodness. Scott.

Job seems to have considered the subject in this view; for when he is called upon "to answer, if he had any thing to say," by Elihu his youthful but friendly monitor, who, unlike the rest, "desired to justify him" where he was right, and to "teach him wisdom" where he was wrong, ver. 31—33, he held his peace; and listened in respectful silence to his sage admonitions, though rather severe, without attempting any reply. Dr. Hales.

Chap. XXXIV. As Job makes no reply to Elihu, being con-

3 ^a For the ear trieth words, as the † mouth tasteth meat.

4 Let us choose to us judgment: let us know among ourselves what is good.

5 For Job hath said, I am righteous: and God hath taken away my judgment.

6 Should I lie against my right? † my wound is incurable without transgression.

7 What man is like Job, who drinketh up scorning like water?

8 Which goeth in company with the workers of iniquity, and walketh with wicked men.

9 For he hath said, It profiteth a man nothing that he should delight himself with God.

10 Therefore hearken unto me, ye † men of understanding: ^b far be it from God, that he should do wickedness; and from the Almighty, that he should commit iniquity.

11 ^c For the work of a man shall he render unto him, and cause every man to find according to his ways.

12 Yea, surely God will not do wickedly, neither will the Almighty pervert judgment.

13 Who hath given him a charge over

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

^a Ch. 12. 11.
† Heb. palate.

† Heb.
mine arrow.

† Heb. men
of heart.

^b Deut. 32.
4. ch. 8. 3.
& 26. 23.

Ps. 92. 15.
Rom. 9. 14.
^c Ps. 62. 12.

Prov. 24. 12.
Jer. 32. 19.
Ezek. 33. 20.

Mat. 16. 27.
Rom. 2. 6.
2 Cor. 5. 10.

1 Pet. 1. 17.
Rev. 22. 12.

scious probably that he was in part, at least, obnoxious to the charge brought against him, Elihu renews the subject, and shews, in answer to Job's complaints, that it is the height of presumption to impute injustice to God; who, as the Governour of the world, if He were not influenced by kindness in His conduct towards His creatures, but were to deal with them according to His power, would utterly destroy them. Elihu remarks farther, how indecorous and rash it is to accuse of injustice a Being, infinite in wisdom as well as power. Rosenmüller.

Ver. 1. — answered and said,] Rather, "spake and said," as ch. iii. 2, and xxxv. 1; for none had replied to Elihu. Dr. Durell.

4. Let us choose to us judgment:] Elihu requests here that Job's friends would proceed judiciously and fairly in the cause before them. Caryl.

5. See note on chap. xxvii. 2.

6. Should I lie against my right?] Rather, I am disappointed or frustrated of my right. Dr. Durell.

7. What man is like Job, &c.] There is no man, that pretends to be wise and holy as Job, who would thus expose himself to the scorn of the world in his insolent challenges; or would thus turn off the grave admonitions of his friends with scorn and contempt. Bp. Hall.

Elihu's expressions may seem too severe in this place. They are only a strong way of saying, that Job's complaints were too much akin to those of atheistical men, who revile Providence, and ridicule religion. Scott.

8. Which goeth in company with the workers of iniquity,] Who speaks of God's service and dispensations as wicked men are wont to do, ver. 9, as if he were one of their society; and acts like the wicked when God afflicts them. Clark.

9. For he hath said, It profiteth a man nothing &c.] Job, so far from using such infidel language, had entered his protest against it, chap. xxi. 14—16. Notwithstanding which, his complaint of hard measure from God, and of the frustration of all the hopes he had formed of a reward to his virtue, would scarce admit of any other construction. See chap. xix. 10; xxix. 18; xxx. 21, 26. Scott.

13. Who hath given him a charge over the earth?] This argu-

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

† Heb.
all of it?
* Ps. 104. 29.
† Heb.
upon him.
* Eccles. 12.
7. Gen. 3.
19.

† Heb.
bind?

† Deut. 10.
17. 2 Chron.
19. 7. Acts
10. 34.
Rom. 2. 11.
Gal. 2. 6.
Ephes. 6. 9.
Colos. 3. 25.
1 Pet. 1. 17.
† Heb.
they shall take away
the mighty.
* Prov. 5. 21.
& 15. 3.
chap. 31. 4.
2 Chron. 16.
9. Jer. 16.
17.

the earth? or who hath disposed † the whole world?

14 ^d If he set his heart † upon man, if he gather unto himself his spirit and his breath;

15 ^e All flesh shall perish together, and man shall turn again unto dust.

16 If now thou hast understanding, hear this: hearken to the voice of my words.

17 Shall even he that hateth right † govern? and wilt thou condemn him that is most just?

18 Is it fit to say to a king, Thou art wicked? and to princes, Ye are ungodly?

19 How much less to him that ^f accepteth not the persons of princes, nor regardeth the rich more than the poor? for they all are the work of his hands.

20 In a moment shall they die, and the people shall be troubled at midnight, and pass away: and † the mighty shall be taken away without hand.

21 ^g For his eyes are upon the ways of man, and he seeth all his goings.

22 There is no darkness, nor shadow of death, where the workers of iniquity may hide themselves.

23 For he will not lay upon man more than right; that he should † enter into judgment with God.

24 He shall break in pieces mighty men † without number, and set others in their stead.

25 Therefore he knoweth their works, and he overturneth them in the night, so that they are † destroyed.

26 He striketh them as wicked men † in the open sight of others;

27 Because they turned back † from him, and would not consider any of his ways:

28 So that they cause the cry of the poor to come unto him, and he heareth the cry of the afflicted.

29 When he giveth quietness, who then can make trouble? and when he hideth his face, who then can behold him? whether it be done against a nation, or against a man only:

30 That the hypocrite reign not, lest the people be ensnared.

31 Surely it is meet to be said unto God, I have borne chastisement, I will not offend any more:

32 That which I see not teach thou me: if I have done iniquity, I will do no more.

33 † Should it be according to thy mind?

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

† Heb. go.
† Heb. without searching out.

† Heb.
crushed.
† Heb.
in the place
of beholders.
† Heb. from after him.

† Heb.
Should it be from with thee?

ment is founded on the sovereignty of God over all men; the sum and force of it may be stated thus: He cannot do injustice to any, who of right possesseth an absolute power to do what He will towards men. But God hath such a power; therefore He cannot do any injustice. Caryl.

14, 15. If he set his heart upon man, &c.] If God should resolve to deal with man according to His absolute power; if He should call back that life and soul which He hath given him; there would be no abiding, all flesh would perish at once. Bp. Hall.

17. Shall even he that hateth right govern? &c.] "What? shall He who hateth right" (as Job in his impatience had supposed God to do) "govern? and wilt thou condemn Him who is evidently just?" That is, Shall not the Judge of all the earth do right? Parkhurst.

17—19. Shall even he that hateth right govern? &c.] Miss Smith, in her translation of this passage, by a close adherence to the original, has given an excellent sense to the whole. She renders these verses thus:

Shall He who hateth right govern?
And wilt thou condemn Him who aboundeth in justice?
Who saith to the king, Thou art unprofitable;
Wicked to the nobles:
Who lifteth not up the faces of princes,
Nor turneth away from the cry of the poor;
For they are all the work of His hands. Dr. Magee.

20. In a moment shall they die, &c.] He shall fetch away the great commanders of the earth at a time when it is least expected; even in the deepest security shall He cause astonishment and tumult in the death of the mighty ones. Bp. Hall.

22. There is no darkness, &c.] Not death itself shall conceal "the workers of iniquity" from the eye of God, or withdraw them from His justice. Men may flatter themselves, if they please, with the hope of annihilation; but they will find themselves fatally disappointed when they come to make trial of the other state. Peters.

23. — that he should enter into judgment with God.] That man should therefore have any just cause of contention with God, or any ground of evil against Him. Bp. Hall.

24. — without number,] "Without searching," as in the margin; without a formal process, which He needeth not. Parkhurst.

25. Therefore he knoweth their works, &c.] Forasmuch as God overturneth them, it is an argument that He knoweth what they are, and what they have been doing. Caryl.

— in the night,] Suddenly, unexpectedly. Caryl.

26. He striketh them as wicked men &c.] This is a metaphor taken from publick executions, which are performed in publick places, amidst a variety of spectators, for the sake of the example. Heath.

Their punishment is open and exemplary. It is the triumph of Providence over tyrants. The expressions of the sacred writer allude to the publick execution of malefactors. What is translated, "in the open sight of others," is, in the original, in the place of spectators. And what is rendered "He striketh them," is literally, He clappeth his hands at them, as in chap. xxvii. 23, and in the last verse of the present chapter. It is a gesture of exultation and derision. Compare Lam. ii. 15; Ezek. xxv. 6. Scott.

29. When he giveth quietness, who then can make trouble?] If He shows favour to the poor and oppressed persons last mentioned, or to any other persons or people, as it follows in the latter part of the verse; or if He withdraws His favour and assistance from them, and thereby exposes them to oppression and calamity; no man or creature can hinder God's design and work. Poole.

30. That the hypocrite reign not, &c.] Yea, not only does God execute His judgments upon the people, but also upon the great potentates of the earth, striking wicked tyrants with His plagues, lest the people should be too much oppressed by their injustice. Bp. Hall.

31. Surely it is meet to be said unto God, &c.] Instead of complaining of God and His dealings with thee, it would have better become thee to submit patiently, saying, Since it is Thy pleasure to chastise me, I will endeavour to bear the affliction without murmuring. Clark.

33. Should it be according to thy mind? &c.] Dost thou think it meet that God should proceed in His judgments according to

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

† Heb. of heart.

|| Or.
My father,
let Job be tried.

he will recompense it, whether thou refuse, or whether thou choose; and not I: therefore speak what thou knowest.

34 Let men † of understanding tell me, and let a wise man hearken unto me.

35 Job hath spoken without knowledge, and his words were without wisdom.

36 || My desire is that Job may be tried unto the end because of his answers for wicked men.

37 For he addeth rebellion unto his sin, he clappeth his hands among us, and multiplieth his words against God.

CHAP. XXXV.

1 Comparison is not to be made with God, because our good or evil cannot extend unto him. 9 Many cry in their afflictions, but are not heard for want of faith.

ELIHU spake moreover, and said,
2 Thinkest thou this to be right, that thou saidst, My righteousness is more than God's?

thy conceits? If you and I should determine what were fit for Him to do, He would still take what course He thought best, whether we liked or disliked it. Bp. Hall.

36, 37. My desire is &c.] My desire is, that Job's speeches concerning God's providence may be fully scanned, till the point be brought to an issue; because he speaks in behalf of the wicked, teaching them how to argue against God and His providence, quarrelling with God, justifying himself in the evil he hath spoken, and insulting over us. Clark.

37. For he addeth rebellion &c.] Job's discontent with the measures of Providence towards him broke out in his very first speech, grew more loud and vehement in the course of the dispute, and arrived to its height in his presumptuous challenge of God, chap. xxi. 35—37. This progress and increase are what Elihu marks by the expression, "he addeth rebellion unto his sin." The phraseology denotes continual augmentation; like that in Ps. lxi. 27, "add iniquity unto their iniquity." Compare Ps. lxxxiv. 7. Scott.

— he clappeth his hands &c.] He exults not only over his three opponents, but also over God Himself, particularly in chap. xxxi. 35—37. Scott.

Chap. XXXV. Elihu, who has undertaken to instruct at the same time both Job and his friends, observes that our piety can be of no advantage, nor our wickedness injurious to the Deity; but that God punishes the wicked for the sake of mankind, though not so quickly as the impatient sufferers expect, who in their misery are apt to forget all former blessings, and the Being who bestowed them. Michaelis.

Vcr. 2. Thinkest thou this to be right, &c.] By insisting so much on your own righteousness, and complaining of God's dealings with thee, thou in effect makest thyself more righteous than God. Clark.

4—8. I will answer thee, &c.] As if Elihu had said, I know that neither thy sins can do any hurt to God, nor can thy righteousness do Him any good; but thy sins may hurt thee, and thy righteousness advantage thyself: therefore lay aside such wicked and desperate thoughts as these. Caryl.

4. — and thy companions] For they also had erred with Job, in supposing that temporal prosperity ought to be annexed by the justice of God to piety and virtue; they differed only as to the fact, whether it really was so in Job's case. Elihu combats the principle, that the Almighty is obliged, by any regard to His own interest or happiness, to distribute reward or punishment. Bp. Stock.

3 For thou saidst, What advantage will it be unto thee? and, What profit shall I have, || if I be cleansed from my sin?

4 † I will answer thee, and thy companions with thee.

5 Look unto the heavens, and see; and behold the clouds which are higher than thou.

6 If thou sinnest, what doest thou against him? or if thy transgressions be multiplied, what doest thou unto him?

7 ^a If thou be righteous, what givest thou him? or what receiveth he of thine hand?

8 Thy wickedness may hurt a man as thou art; and thy righteousness may profit the son of man.

9 By reason of the multitude of oppressions they make the oppressed to cry: they cry out by reason of the arm of the mighty.

10 But none saith, Where is God my maker, who giveth songs in the night;

11 Who teacheth us more than the beasts

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

|| Or,
by it more than by my sin?

† Heb.
I will return to thee
words.

^a Ps. 16. 2.
Rom. 11 2.
ch. 22. 3.

5. Look unto the heavens, &c.] This is a sublime sentiment in a plain dress. One view, says he, of the magnificent scenery of the lofty sky will extinguish all low conceptions of its almighty Author. It will strike the mind with a vast idea of His infinite superiority to all other beings, and of the impossibility of His gaining or suffering by the good or bad behaviour of His reasonable creatures. Scott.

6. If thou sinnest, what doest thou against him?] If thou sinnest, what dost thou hurt Him? Is His holiness, justice, power, the less, because thou hast transgressed? Is aught diminished from His essence by this offence? Bp. Hall.

9. By reason of the multitude of oppressions &c.] This offended Job: the poor cry, and they have no helper, no deliverer. See chap. xxiv. 12. Elihu grants these general truths, that many are oppressed, that many cry out under their oppressions, and that many remain undelivered from, and unrelieved in their oppressions. God seems sometimes not to regard the cries of the afflicted, nor does He presently take vengeance on oppressors according to their folly; yet he acquits God of any such imputation as the words of Job seem to insinuate. "The oppressed cry," (saith Elihu,) but not with a right frame of heart; they cry, rather as oppressed with the weight of their own sufferings, than as touched with a sense of their sins, or reverence for the sovereignty of God, who has given them up to the power of their oppressors; or as having faith in Him for their deliverance, or quiet submission to His will: these may either be said not to pray at all, or they pray not with such holy aims and designs, with such integrity and uprightness of heart, as become the people of God. They pray under the control of impatience, or moved with envy at the power of their adversaries, or with a desire of the utmost revenge; and therefore God takes no notice of their prayers, ver. 12, 13, "There they cry, but none giveth answer; surely God will not hear vanity, neither will the Almighty regard it." Caryl.

10. But none saith, &c.] Many make formal flourishes, but none heartily acknowledge the powerful and just hand of God, who gives due and seasonable comfort to the soul, in the deepest and darkest night of our sorrows. Bp. Hall.

When God avengeth not the oppressed, it is to be attributed to their want of piety: He neglecteth them, because they neglect Him. They murmur, but they do not pray; they are clamorous, but they are not humble. Bp. Stock.

11. Who teacheth us more &c.] By bestowing the noble gift of reason, God hath qualified us for religion; and laid us under the highest obligation to be religious. Scott.

Before CHRIST about 1520. of the earth, and maketh us wiser than the fowls of heaven?

12 There they cry, but none giveth answer, because of the pride of evil men.

13^b Surely God will not hear vanity, neither will the Almighty regard it.

14 Although thou sayest thou shalt not see him, yet judgment is before him; therefore trust thou in him.

15 But now, because it is not so, || he hath visited in his anger; yet || he knoweth it not in great extremity:

16 Therefore doth Job open his mouth in vain; he multiplieth words without knowledge.

CHAP. XXXVI.

1 Elihu sheweth how God is just in his ways. 16 How Job's sins hinder God's blessings. 24 God's works are to be magnified.

ELIHU also proceeded, and said, 2 Suffer me a little, and I will shew thee † that I have yet to speak on God's behalf.

† Heb. that there are yet words for God.

3 I will fetch my knowledge from afar, and will ascribe righteousness to my Maker.

4 For truly my words shall not be false: he that is perfect in knowledge is with thee.

12. There they cry, &c.] The oppressed cry for help; yet as they are wicked men, who still cherish the pride of their hearts against God, God regards them not. Clark.

14. Although thou sayest thou shalt not see him, &c.] Although thou sayest, that God gives thee no assurance of His presence by any sensible demonstration; yet He will be sure to execute true, though secret judgment, in all the cases of men: and therefore acknowledge thou Him, and trust in Him. Bp. Hall.

15, 16. But now, because it is not so, &c.] But now, because it is not so, namely, that Job humbleth himself before God, and trusts in Him for deliverance, He hath visited in His anger: yet though Job is in great extremity of suffering, he is not brought thereby to the knowledge of God and himself: and hence it is manifest, that he pours forth complaints without success; thereby discovering his ignorance of God and himself. Clark.

Chap. XXXVI, XXXVII. In this last address to Job, Elihu brings forward no new assertion or saying of his to be proved against him; nor does he reprove Job for any new fault: but insists on the proof of what himself had asserted before, to shew that God is righteous, which he does by looking through the various works of God, those especially which are wrought on high, the meteors of the airy region, the rain, the snow, the lightning, and the thunder; which all declare, as the wisdom and power, so the justice and righteousness of God, who proclaims by these teachers how terrible He is, and will be to wilful and impenitent sinners. Caryl.

Chap. XXXVI. ver. 3. — from afar,] From God's wonderful works in nature since the beginning of the world, ver. 26, and chap. xxxvii. Clark.

4. For truly my words shall not be false;] Be assured that I will not seek to baffle thee with sophistical arguments: he that discourses with thee is none of those subtle disputers, but loves sincere and solid reason. Bp. Patrick.

6. He preserveth not the life of the wicked;] Suffers them not all to go unpunished; but will, in due time, execute judgment upon them. Clark.

5 Behold, God is mighty, and despiseth not any: he is mighty in strength and † wisdom.

Before CHRIST about 1520. † Heb. heart.

6 He preserveth not the life of the wicked: but giveth right to the || poor.

|| Or, afflicted. ^a Ps. 34. 15.

7^a He withdraweth not his eyes from the righteous: but with kings are they on the throne; yea, he doth establish them for ever, and they are exalted.

8 And if they be bound in fetters, and be holden in cords of affliction;

9 Then he sheweth them their work, and their transgressions that they have exceeded.

10 He openeth also their ear to discipline, and commandeth that they return from iniquity.

11 If they obey and serve him, they shall^b spend their days in prosperity, and their^b years in pleasures.

† Heb. they shall pass away by the sword.

12 But if they obey not, † they shall perish by the sword, and they shall die without knowledge.

13 But the hypocrites in heart heap up wrath: they cry not when he bindeth them.

† Heb. Their soul dieth.

14 † They die in youth, and their life is among the || unclean.

|| Or, sodomites. || Or, afflicted.

15 He delivereth the || poor in his affliction.

7. He withdraweth not his eyes from the righteous;] He neither forgets nor neglects to reward them, though never so poor and afflicted: these righteous poor are sometimes advanced by God to royal dignity, 1 Sam. ii. 8; Psal. cxiii. 7, 8; and continue in their dignity, yea, and increase in it in spite of all opposition. Clark.

8—10. And if they be bound in fetters, &c.] Though all afflictions are evils in themselves, yet they are good for us, because they discover to us our disease, and tend to our cure. They are a sensible argument and conviction to us of the evil and danger of sin. We are not sufficiently sensible how great an evil sin is, till we feel the dismal effects and consequences of it. And therefore to rectify our apprehensions concerning it, God makes us to suffer by it. Thus Elihu describes the happy effects of affliction in these verses. God doth but invite and intreat us by His mercies, but His judgments have a more powerful and “commanding” voice. When He “holds man in cords of affliction, then He openeth their ear to discipline.” In prosperity we are many times incapable of counsel and instruction, but when we are under God's correcting hand, then we are fit to be spoken with. Abp. Tillotson.

10. He openeth also their ear to discipline,] To fit them for instruction, that they may listen to God's chastening. Caryl.

12. — they shall perish by the sword, and they shall die without knowledge.] They shall die by some violent death for their folly, because they would not learn by God's correction. Clark.

13—15. But the hypocrites in heart &c.] The difference between him who makes a specious display of piety, and him who possesses it in sincerity, is manifested by the effect of afflictions on each. The hypocrite, while under chastisement, is so far from calling on God suppliantly, that he provokes Him more and more to anger by an obstinate refusal to amend: hence he comes to an untimely end, and is involved in the same destruction with the most abandoned; see chap. xxvii. 8. The righteous, on the contrary, as being more open to instruction, when they have been taught by misfortunes, are delivered by God out of their troubles. Rosenmüller.

15. He delivereth the poor in his affliction,] God delivers them

Before CHRIST about 1520. tion, and openeth their ears in oppression.

† Heb. the rest of thy table.

16 Even so would he have removed thee out of the strait into a broad place, where there is no straitness; and † that which should be set on thy table should be full of fatness.

‡ Or, judgment and justice should uphold thee.

17 But thou hast fulfilled the judgment of the wicked: ‡ judgment and justice take hold on thee.

18 Because there is wrath, beware lest he take thee away with his stroke: then a great ransom cannot † deliver thee.

† Heb. turn thee aside.

19 Will he esteem thy riches? no, not gold, nor all the forces of strength.

20 Desire not the night, when people are cut off in their place.

21 Take heed, regard not iniquity: for this hast thou chosen rather than affliction.

22 Behold, God exalteth by his power: who teacheth like him?

23 Who hath enjoined him his way? or in affliction, when He hath opened their ears by oppression. Caryl.

17. But thou hast fulfilled the judgment of the wicked:] Thou hast fully pleaded the cause of the wicked, and justified their hard and reproachful speeches, uttered in rage against God, condemning Him, and justifying themselves. The just indignation of God hath already seized upon thee. Clark.

19. — not gold, nor all the forces of strength.] These words would be more intelligible, if they were rendered, as they might be, “not gold, nor all the powers of wealth.” Dr. Durell.

20. Desire not the night,] Do not thou wish for the night, as thinking that that silent and quiet time might give thee ease from thy thoughts, while thou hast to do with a God, who can in an instant cut off whole nations, much more thee, who art but a weak and frail man. Bp. Hall.

21. Take heed, regard not iniquity: &c.] Thou hast rather chosen to tax the proceedings of God in thy weak impatience, than meekly to suffer his infliction. Bp. Hall.

22, 23. Behold, God exalteth by his power: &c.] Elihu, by this commendation of the power and wisdom of God, seems to comfort Job in the hope of better things if he would hearken to his counsel: for as God had greatly afflicted and broken him, so He was as mighty to heal those breaches and deliver him: He only waited to see him in a better frame of mind, that He might be gracious; see Is. xxx. 18. Caryl.

23. Who hath enjoined him his way?] This passage ought to be rendered, “Who can charge Him with His way, or, animadvert upon Him for His way?” Dr. Durell.

24. Remember that thou magnify his work, which men behold.] The Creator doubtless did not bestow so much curiosity, and exquisite workmanship and skill upon His creatures, to be looked upon with a careless inturious eye; especially to have them slighted or contemned: but to be admired by the rational part of the world, to magnify His own power, wisdom, and goodness, throughout all the world, and the ages thereof. The more we search and discover of His works, the greater and more glorious we find them to be; the more worthy of, and the more expressly to proclaim, their great Creator. To make such researches then is to answer the ends, for which God hath bestowed so much art, power, and wisdom about His works, as well as given us senses to view and survey them, and an understanding and curiosity to search into them: it is to follow and trace Him, where and whither He leads us, that we may see and admire His handy work ourselves, and set it forth to others, that they may see, ad-who can say, Thou hast wrought iniquity? Before CHRIST about 1520.

24 Remember that thou magnify his work, which men behold.

25 Every man may see it; man may behold it afar off.

26 Behold, God is great, and we know him not, neither can the number of his years be searched out.

27 For he maketh small the drops of water: they pour down rain according to the vapour thereof:

28 Which the clouds do drop and distil upon man abundantly.

29 Also can any understand the spreadings of the clouds, or the noise of his tabernacle?

30 Behold, he spreadeth his light upon it, and covereth † the bottom of the sea.

31 For by them judgeth he the people; he giveth meat in abundance. † Heb. the roots

32 With clouds he covereth the light;

mire, and praise it also. Such is the recommendation of Elihu: “Remember that thou magnify His work, which men behold. Every man may see it; man may behold it afar off.” Dr. Derham.

This verse ought to have begun a new chapter: for it begins a new head of discourse, which is continued to the end of the ensuing chapter. The subject is the incomprehensible wisdom and power of God, in forming the meteors of rain, thunder, &c. and using them to serve the ends of His moral government. The scope of the discourse is, to convince Job of his ignorance of the ways of Providence, by his ignorance of the works of creation; and to humble him for his presumption in finding fault with what he did not, could not, understand. Scott.

— his work,] The visible creation, the heavens in particular; in which He has made manifest His eternal power and Godhead, Ps. xix. 1; cii. 25; Rom. i. 20. Scott.

27. For he maketh small the drops of water: they pour down rain according to the vapour thereof:] This passage may be rendered, “For He maketh small the drops of water, which poureth down rain through His vapour.” Dr. Durell.

29—31. Also can any understand the spreadings of the clouds, &c.] “The spreadings of the clouds;” that is, the covering of the sky with clouds, the prelude to a thunder storm. By “His tabernacle” are meant, the clouds; see Psal. xviii. 11. Scott.

It is wonderful to observe with what a variety of natural and sublime expressions the thunder is described to us in this book, and all of them with reference to the Deity; as “the noise of His tabernacle;” the “murmurs of His mouth;” that “by which He judgeth His people;” and the like. Peters.

30. Behold, he spreadeth his light upon it,] Behold, when the heaven is overcast with clouds, He sendeth forth His bright beams, and enlighteneth and cheereth the face thereof; and again He sendeth such gloomy and dark clouds, that the blackness and obscurity thereof shade even to the bottom of the sea. Bp. Hall.

Or, “Behold, He spreads upon it,” that is, the cloud, “His light,” or lightning; “and overspreads,” namely with the lustre of it, “the bottom of the sea.” Parkhurst.

31. For by them judgeth he the people;] He makes use of the clouds for quite contrary ends; both to punish mankind by storms, tempests, and floods; and to make a plentiful provision for them by fruitful showers. Bp. Patrick.

32. With clouds he covereth the light;] By clouds also He sometimes hideth the sun from us, so that it cannot ripen the

Before CHRIST about 1520. and commandeth it not to shine by the cloud that cometh betwixt.

33 The noise thereof sheweth concerning it, the cattle also concerning † the vapour.

† Heb. that which goeth up.

CHAP. XXXVII.

1 God is to be feared because of his great works. 15 His wisdom is unsearchable in them.

AT this also my heart trembleth, and is moved out of his place.

2 † Hear attentively the noise of his voice, and the sound that goeth out of his mouth.

† Heb. Hear in hearing.

3 He directeth it under the whole heaven, and his † lightning unto the † ends of the earth.

† Heb. light.
† Heb. wings of the earth.

4 After it a voice roareth: he thundereth with the voice of his excellency; and he will not stay them when his voice is heard.

5 God thundereth marvellously with his fruits; and sometimes only intercepts its beams awhile, that it may not burn them up with immoderate heat. Bp. Patrick.

33. The noise thereof sheweth concerning it,] The noise of thunder, which is in the clouds, sheweth and presageth the rain, which will pour down from it; and the very cattle have a kind of notice, and give a certain intimation, by signs and tokens, of the falling of that moist vapour. Bp. Hall.

Chap. XXXVII. ver. 1. At this] At the consideration of the thunder. Bp. Hall, Clark.

2. Hear attentively the noise of his voice,] So as to observe God's great power manifested therein. It seems not improbable, that while Elihu was speaking, it thundered greatly: and that that tempest began, with which God ushered in His speech. Bp. Hall, Clark.

4. — with the voice of his excellency;] With His majestic voice. Dr. Durell.

— he will not stay them when his voice is heard.] He will not check the rain and storm, (chap. xxxvi. 27, &c.) which come quickly after the thunder. Clark.

7. He sealeth up the hand of every man;] He stops the labour of those whose business is in the fields; and maketh the husbandmen know that He disposeth of all things as He pleaseth. Bp. Patrick.

8. Then the beasts go into dens, &c.] The low grounds are covered with water; the beasts of prey flee to the caverns of the mountains for safety; they crouch there, and watch impatiently for the drying of the valleys. Scott.

9. Out of the south &c.] The marginal rendering is juster. The period will then be, "Out of the chamber cometh the storm, and cold from the scattering or dispersing winds." The "chamber," or rather the "secret chamber," denotes those unknown regions, whence the winds have their origin: or the meaning may be, that winds are part of the treasures of God, always in readiness whenever He pleases to employ them; see Ps. cxxxv. 7; cxlviii. 8. The "dispersing" winds are supposed to be those which blow from the northern points, and by scattering the clouds or dissolving them, make such a clear sky in sharp frosty weather, as is described in ver. 11. These three verses are a description of stormy, cold, and frosty weather: winds cold and freezing are still among "the great things which God doeth, and which we cannot comprehend." Scott.

10. — and the breadth of the waters is straitened.] Those rivers, which before had no confinement or restraint, but were at voice; great things doeth he, which we cannot comprehend.

6 For ^a he saith to the snow, Be thou on the earth; † likewise to the small rain, and to the great rain of his strength.

7 He sealeth up the hand of every man; that all men may know his work.

8 Then the beasts go into dens, and remain in their places.

9 † Out of the south cometh the whirlwind: and cold out of the † north.

10 By the breath of God frost is given: and the breadth of the waters is straitened.

11 Also by watering he wearieth the thick cloud: he scattereth † his bright cloud:

12 And it is turned round about by his counsels: that they may do whatsoever he commandeth them upon the face of the world in the earth.

13 He causeth it to come, whether for † correction, or for his land, or for mercy.

Before CHRIST about 1520.

^a Psal. 147.

16, 17.

† Heb.

and to the shower of rain, and to the showers

of rain of his strength.

† Heb.

Out of the chamber.

† Heb.

scattering winds.

† Heb.

the cloud of his light.

† Heb.

a rod.

liberty to enlarge and widen their surface, are now retarded in their course. Chappelow. Snow, cold, frost, and ice, were no strangers in Judea, which bordered on Arabia Petrea, supposed by some to be Job's country, 1 Chron. xi. 22; Psal. cxlvii. 16, 17: nor yet in Arabia Petrea; see chap. vi. 16. It may be thought incredible, that there should ever be such severe cold in those warm climates as to freeze lakes and rivers. But Mr. Dawes informs us, that in the year 1756-7, at Aleppo, they had a very sharp winter, which destroyed all the fruits of the earth. The cold was so very intense, that the mercury in Fahrenheit's thermometer, exposed a few minutes to the open air, sunk entirely into the ball of the tube. Millions of olive trees, that had withstood the severity of fifty winters, were blasted in this; and thousands of souls perished merely from cold. Was not this a frost sufficient to freeze a lake or river? and yet Aleppo is so warm a climate, that the same author tells us, they were obliged to sleep on the terrace of their houses in the summer. Scott.

11. Also by watering he wearieth the thick cloud:] He expends all the moisture of the thick cloud in watering the earth. Bp. Hall.

Rather, "Even by serenity He wearieth the thick cloud." Chappelow.

— he scattereth his bright cloud:] Rather, "He scattereth the cloud by his light or darkness." Dr. Durell.

The whole verse may be thus translated, "Also the clear sky dispelleth the thick cloud, His sun scattereth the extended clouds." We have here a picture of the sky in a clear sharp freezing day. Scott.

12 And it is turned round about by his counsels: &c.] The unsettled and irregular motions of the clouds proceed, not from any power of their own, but from His superiour direction: they, like all other created things, may be said in some sense to receive their commission from their Maker. Chappelow.

13. He causeth it to come, whether for correction, &c.] The moral use, which God makes of meteors, wind, rain, &c. can be but twofold. They are either for correction or for mercy. The situation of the words, "or for His land," between those members of the partition, seems very uncouth, and perplexes the sense. A small transposition will render the period clear and easy:

Whether for correction or for mercy,

Verily for His earth He causeth it to come. Scott.

— it] That is, the work which He commandeth the meteors to do upon the habitable parts of the earth. Scott.

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

14 Hearken unto this, O Job: stand still, and consider the wondrous works of God.

15 Dost thou know when God disposed them, and caused the light of his cloud to shine?

16 Dost thou know the balancings of the clouds, the wondrous works of him which is perfect in knowledge?

17 How thy garments are warm, when he quieteth the earth by the south wind?

18 Hast thou with him spread out the sky, which is strong, and as a molten looking glass?

19 Teach us what we shall say unto him;

It deserves our regard, that all the works of Nature are prepared by God to be His instruments, either for judgment or for mercy: "The treasures of snow and hail are reserved against the time of trouble, against the day of battle and war," chap. xxxviii. 22, 23. Bp. Sherlock.

14. Hearken unto this, O Job:] Hearken unto this discourse of God's various proceedings: then say, whether it be fit to murmur against so great a Being; and whether it be possible for thee to comprehend His secret counsels, who canst not comprehend His ordinary works. Clark.

15. Dost thou know when God disposed them,] He means God's disposing of His "wondrous works" or operations, ver. 14, in such a manner as to produce such and such effects. Scott.

— caused the light of his cloud to shine?] Caused the light to illuminate the cloud. Dr. Durell.

Or "caused his luminous clouds to shine." He means perhaps those bright clouds, fringed with gold, and stained with the richest tints, which often in a summer evening attend the setting sun. Some eminent commentators explain this passage of the rainbow; but the expressions may appear too vague to allow that limitation. Scott.

16. Dost thou know the balancings of the clouds, &c.] The clouds remain suspended, so long as their pressure is exactly balanced by the counter pressure of the air, which is underneath them. When the equipoise is destroyed, they often precipitate in rain. But the law of the equilibrium, and the causes which destroy the balance, are so mysterious in their operation, that our knowledge of these matters is extremely superficial. Scott.

17. How thy garments are warm, &c.] How comes it to pass, that the air is so hot, as that thou canst not bear thy clothes, when, in a calm season, the south sun shines upon thee, and the warm southern winds blow in thy face? Bp. Hall.

He describes an Arabian noonday in the height of summer, when the sun is in his full strength, and not a breath of wind stirring to cool the sultry air. The word "wind" is not in the original. "The south" means the south quarter of the heavens, when the sun is in the meridian. The excessive heat, and bright transparency of the air, in a summer's noon, especially in the warmer climates, perplex philosophy with many difficult questions. Scott.

18. — which is strong, and as a molten looking glass?] Which seems to us so firm and solid, as if it were a mirror of some strong polished metal. Bp. Hall.

The Eastern mirrors are of polished steel, and for the most part convex. Sir J. Chardin.

Polished steel has much of that brilliant deep blue gray cast, which is very striking in an Arabian sky, of whose depth of tint we are very incompetent judges: in fact, the higher we ascend on mountains, the deeper, the blacker, the sky becomes; so that, as Mr. de Saussure informs us, the deepest blue riband was hardly deep enough. We may therefore understand this passage, as speaking of an atmosphere, extended, resplendent, clear, brilliant for we cannot order our speech by reason of darkness. Before CHRIST about 1520.

20 Shall it be told him that I speak? if a man speak, surely he shall be swallowed up.

21 And now men see not the bright light which is in the clouds: but the wind passeth, and cleanseth them.

22 † Fair weather cometh out of the north: with God is terrible majesty. † Heb. Gold.

23 Touching the Almighty, we cannot find him out: he is excellent in power, and in judgment, and in plenty of justice: he will not afflict.

24 Men do therefore fear him: he respecteth not any that are wise of heart.

as a mirror, polished with the utmost skill and assiduity. Script. illust. Expos. Ind.

19. Teach us what we shall say &c.] These concluding verses are the peroration; wherein he represents to Job the rashness and danger of disputing with God; sets forth the incomprehensibility of the schemes of Providence; insists that they are planned and executed with most perfect equity and justice; and exhorts him and all mankind, to annihilate themselves before their Maker, in profoundest reverence of His adorable majesty. Scott.

20. — if a man speak, surely he shall be swallowed up.] If a man will be opposing Him in his speech, and questioning His justice, surely he shall be confounded. Bp. Hall.

21. And now men see not the bright light &c.] Rather, And now men see not the light, which is bright above (or within) the clouds, till the wind passeth and cleanseth them. Dr. Durell.

21, 22. — men see not] Or, men cannot look at the bright line which is in the sky, when the wind hath passed and cleansed it. That is, when the sky is in such a clear and dazzling state as he had described, ver. 18. He beautifully applies that resplendent image to the purpose of shewing the insufferable splendour of the Divine majesty. Scott.

If men be not able with their weak eyes to behold the brightness of the sun, which shineth in the light clouds when the wind passes through and disperses them, and when the air is cleared by the north winds; how shall they be able to stand before God, and to hold contention with Him, whose majesty is terrible beyond the powers of our apprehension? Bp. Hall.

22. — with God is terrible majesty.] Rather, Above is God of tremendous majesty. Dr. Durell.

23. Touching the Almighty, we cannot find him out:] This great and worthy sentiment is the sum of his whole speech in justification of God. The incomprehensibility and infinite perfection of God silence all objections to His government. This is a sufficient answer even to those two perplexing difficulties in the measures of Providence, which Job had started; the destruction of the righteous with the wicked in general calamities, and the prosperity of so many profligate men to the very end of their lives. "For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are His ways higher than our ways, and His thoughts than our thoughts," Isai. lv. 9; and the ways and thoughts of an infinitely perfect Being cannot be otherwise than right. Scott.

— in plenty of justice:] Rather, plenteous in justice. Dr. Durell.

— he will not afflict.] Willingly, (Lam. iii. 33.) or without just cause, or beyond what is necessary. Clark.

24. Men do therefore fear him: &c.] The best wisdom of man is but foolishness to Him: He makes no reckoning therefore of that vain wisdom, with the conceit of which men are wont to please themselves. Bp. Hall.

These words of Elihu engage us most seriously to reflect upon the wonders of nature, and particularly upon the thunder, snow,

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

CHAP. XXXVIII.

1 God challengeth Job to answer. 4 God, by his mighty works, convinceth Job of ignorance, 31 and of imbecility.

THEN the LORD answered Job out of the whirlwind, and said,

2 Who is this that darkeneth counsel by words without knowledge?

3 Gird up now thy loins like a man; for I will demand of thee, and † answer thou me.

4 ^a Where wast thou when I laid the foundations of the earth? declare, † if thou hast understanding.

rain, clouds, the winds, and the various seasons of the year. In all these things we discover, first, the infinite power of God; and next, His wisdom, justice, and goodness: since God makes use of all these things, and of their different effects, as means to promote the good and happiness of mankind; and sometimes He makes them serve as instruments of correction. We are here therefore called upon to consider attentively the wonderful manner in which the world is governed: and to make use of the mercies which God vouchsafes us, and of His chastening dispensations, which are all designed to teach us to know and fear Him. Here ends the dispute between Job and his friends. Ostervald.

"Let men therefore fear Him who beholdeth all the wise in heart as nothing." This great instruction is the point of aim throughout Elihu's speech: this is the sublime moral of the whole poem. To establish this primary duty of all religion by His own authority, the Deity Himself at last appears; the design of whose speech to Job is to reduce him to this reverent submission, and by his example to enforce it upon all others. Scott.

Chap. XXXVIII—XLII. Jehovah Himself is introduced with an answer to Job, which shall bring his mind to a better temper, and fit him for his restoration. The manner in which this latter part of the poem is conducted, has been well delineated by Scott.

"The design of this appearance of the Almighty is not to vindicate the injured character of Job. That is done by a second appearance, which was afterwards made to Eliphaz singly, chap. xlii. 7, 9; and which comes not within the limits of the poem.

"Neither is the design of this speech to decide the controversy in the dialogues about the ways of Providence: for the decision of that dispute was not intended by the poem, but was reserved for the subsequent history. The scope of the speech is to humble Job; and to teach others by his example to acquiesce implicitly in the disposals of God, from an unbounded confidence in His wisdom, equity, and goodness. This surely is an end worthy of the interposition of the Deity.

"The method taken in the speech to accomplish its design, is a series of questions and descriptions relative to natural things, admirably fitted to convince this complainant, and all others, of their incapacity to judge of God's moral administration, and of the danger of striving with their Maker." Bp. Stock.

The Almighty's speech, in this and the following chapters, is by much the finest part of the noblest and most ancient poem in the world. Bp. Patrick says, Its grandeur is as much above all other poetry, as thunder is louder than a whisper. Longinus has a chapter on interrogations, which shews that they contribute much to the sublime. This speech of the Almighty is made up of them. Interrogation seems indeed the proper style of Majesty incensed. It differs from other manner of reproof, as bidding a person execute himself does from a common execution: for he that asks the guilty a proper question, makes him in effect pass sentence on himself. Dr. Young.

Chap. XXXVIII. ver. 1. Then the Lord answered Job out of Vol. I.

5 Who hath laid the measures thereof, if thou knowest? or who hath stretched the line upon it? Before CHRIST about 1520.

6 Whereupon are the † foundations thereof † fastened? or who laid the corner stone thereof; † Heb. sockets. † Heb. made to sink.

7 When the morning stars sang together, and all the sons of God shouted for joy?

8 ^b Or who shut up the sea with doors, ^b Ps. 104. 9. when it brake forth, as if it had issued out of the womb?

9 When I made the cloud the garment thereof, and thick darkness a swaddling-band for it, the whirlwind,] No sooner had Elihu spoken the foregoing words, but there was a sensible token of the presence of that most dreadful majesty of God, chap. xxxvii. 22. For there arose an unusual cloud, and a voice came out of it as loud as a tempest, which addressed itself to Job. It is probable that God appeared and spoke to Job in this manner, partly because this was His usual method in those times, as we see, Exod. xix. 18; Numb. ix. 15, 16: see also 1 Kings xix. 11; Ezek. i. 4: and partly that Job and his friends might be more thoroughly humbled and abased within themselves, and prepared the better to receive, and longer to retain, the instructions which God was about to give them. Bp. Patrick, Poole.

2. — that darkeneth counsel &c.] Who by his vain and ignorant speeches throws a cloud, as far as he is able, over the minds of men, concerning the purposes of God in the administration of human affairs. Capellus.

3. Gird up now thy loins like a man; &c.] Prepare thyself for the combat with Me, which thou hast often desired, like a valiant man who means to grapple with his adversary. Clark.

4. Where wast thou &c.] The sentiment conveyed in these striking interrogations is, that He alone, who made the world, is capable of judging how it ought to be governed. This and the three following verses speak of the creation of the earth; and in terms of architecture, which denote exact proportion, nice arrangement, and durable solidity. Scott.

7. — the morning stars] That is, the holy angels, glorious and shining like the morning star. Compare 1 Kings xxii. 19; Dan. xii. 3; 1 Cor. xv. 41; Luke xx. 36. Parkhurst.

8—11. Or who shut up the sea &c.] The waters were coeval with the earth, and covered it in the beginning. The gathering of them together into a proper receptacle was the great work of the third day of creation. They then took the denomination of "seas," or "the sea;" and likewise retained the name of "the deep." This operation of Almighty power, together with the measures taken to prevent the sea from overflowing the earth, is the subject of these four verses. Scott.

8. — with doors,] See also ver. 10, "And set bars and doors." The shores, Prov. viii. 29; Jer. v. 22; promontories in particular, and high rocky coast, are a restraint upon the ocean, and a security to the earth. These are the "barred doors," which in part keep the waters of the sea within the bounds assigned to them. Scott.

— when it brake forth, as if it had issued out of the womb?] Simply thus: "when it brake forth, issuing out of the womb." Dr. Durell. The subject here is the collection of part of the mass of waters into a channel, to form the sea and surround the earth. "The womb" therefore, out of which the waters of the sea issued, seems to have been the subterraneous abyss; the sea under ground, as the Arabs call it. Scott.

9. When I made — thick darkness a swaddlingband for it,] Rather, "a swaddlingcloth:" when I enveloped it in thick clouds for its immediate clothing, and surrounded it by extensive darkness as a wrapper, involving it wholly. It was a custom

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

Or, established my decree
upon it.
† Heb.
the pride of thy waves.

† Heb.
wings.

10 And || brake up for it my decreed place, and set bars and doors,

11 And said, Hitherto shalt thou come, but no further: and here shall † thy proud waves be stayed?

12 Hast thou commanded the morning since thy days; and caused the dayspring to know his place;

13 That it might take hold of the † ends of the earth, that the wicked might be shaken out of it?

14 It is turned as clay to the seal; and they stand as a garment.

among the ancients, when they had washed a new-born child, to wrap it in a cloth. Fragments to Calmet.

The eruption of the sea from the great abyss, was compared, in the preceding verse, to the breaking forth of an infant out of the womb. This image is naturally followed by the "garment" and the "swaddlingband," to which are resembled those thick and dark clouds, that frequently arise over the sea, and encompass it. Scott.

10. And brake up for it my decreed place.] In the margin we read, "and established my decree upon it;" which is a much better sense. Dr. Durell. The phrase is of the same import as that in Prov. viii. 29. The decree, which God imposed on the mighty ocean, is that wonderful law of gravitation in fluids, by which, all the parts of them exerting an equal pressure upon one another, the equilibrium of the whole mass is maintained. Scott.

11. And said, Hitherto shalt thou come, &c.] There is a character of great magnificence in all that precedes; but this is signally sublime. We are struck with admiration to see the vast and ungovernable ocean receiving commands, and punctually obeying them: to find it, like a managed horse, raging, tossing, and foaming but by the rule and direction of its Master. Dr. Young.

12—15. Hast thou commanded the morning &c.] Raise up thy thoughts still higher, and tell Me, dost thou remember since the morning light was made? Bp. Patrick.

12. — since thy days;] These words imply, that this had taken place before the birth of Job, and that the settled course of nature had been ordained by God from the creation of the world. Rosenmüller.

— and caused the dayspring to know his place;] "The morning" and "the dayspring" are but two different names for one and the same thing; break of day until sunrising. Its regular appearance in the East is here marked. In the first sentence of verse 13, the diffusion of the morning light over the whole face of the earth is expressed by the beautiful figure of "taking hold of the ends of the earth." In the second sentence, the moral benefit of the morning to mankind is noticed: "that the wicked might be shaken out of it." In those times and countries the courts of justice sat in the morning, Judges vi. 31; Ps. ci. 8; Jer. xxi. 12. Scott. Or, as Dr. Hammond argues, the passage more probably refers to the dispersing of those, whom the darkness of the night encourages to wickedness; thieves, treacherous persons, and others, whom the light would discover. Chappelow.

14. It is turned as clay to the seal;] Or, "It," that is, the earth, "is changed as clay by the seal." During the darkness of the night, the earth is a perfect blank; in which state it resembles clay that has no impression. By the morning light falling upon the earth, innumerable objects make their appearance upon it: it is then changed, like clay which has received the stamp of the seal. Such appears to be the meaning of this elegant simile. Sealing upon clay is still practised in the East. When the corn-granary at Grand Cairo, belonging to the Sultan, is full, the inspectors, says Norden, having shut the door, put on their seal upon a handful of clay, which they make use of instead of wax. Scott.

15 And from the wicked their light is withholden, and the high arm shall be broken.

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

16 Hast thou entered into the springs of the sea? or hast thou walked in the search of the depth?

17 Have the gates of death been opened unto thee? or hast thou seen the doors of the shadow of death?

18 Hast thou perceived the breadth of the earth? declare if thou knowest it all.

19 Where is the way where light dwelleth? and as for darkness, where is the place thereof, — and they stand as a garment.] All things upon the earth present themselves to our view, and are like a garment, with which the earth is, as it were, clad and adorned. Clark. Or, men, especially guilty malefactors, are shifted by the breaking forth of the light, like so many separate garments. Bp. Hall.

15. And from the wicked their light is withholden, &c.] By a bold figure the wicked are here said to be deprived of their light, when the morning has dispelled the darkness; for darkness is light to them, whose "high arm" is said to be "broken:" because in the morning they lose their boldness, and hide themselves through fear; but in the night they are daring and resolute. Rosenmüller.

16. Hast thou entered into the springs of the sea? &c.] We now descend into the lower parts of the earth. For it should seem that by "the sea," or "deep," we are to understand the sea below ground, the waters of the great abyss: and that by "the gates of death," and "the doors of the shadow of death," is meant the entrance into Sheol, the world of departed spirits, which these men supposed to be placed under the waters of the abyss. Scott.

God, by the display of His omnipotence, not only shews Job what large amends He could make good men for all their sufferings in the great day of the resurrection; but hints to him by the question, that He could as easily do it before, and admit them to what degree of happiness He pleased immediately on their dissolution. "Hast thou," says God, "looked into Sheol, the intermediate state, the region of departed spirits? Hast thou seen how the souls of men are disposed of after death, and how amply the afflictions of good men may be made up to them there? What room then for such complaints as thou hast now been uttering?" This seems to be the drift of the question. In short, the great lesson which we are to learn from this Divine speech, and the decision here put to the controversy, is, that our disputes about the providence of God proceed from ignorance and folly; that the first duty of a creature is to resign himself to the will of his Creator; to do His commands with pleasure; receive His dispensations with submission; be thankful to Him for the good, and patient under the evil, that He sends; to consider life with its appendages as the free gift of God, which therefore we should employ in His service, be ready to give up freely when He calls for it, and trust to Him for a future happy state. Peters.

18. Hast thou perceived the breadth of the earth? &c.] Nay, so far from having penetrated into all the dark caverns of the earth, dost thou so much as understand all that grows upon the surface of it? Bp. Patrick. We now ascend from below the centre of the earth to its surface; from the region of death to the world of life. Scott.

19. Where is the way where light dwelleth? &c.] This question differs from that in ver. 12—15. That related to the morning, and its benefit to mankind: this to settling the precise boundary of light and darkness, that is, day and night. One half of the earth is enlightened, the other half is in darkness, at the same instant. Job is now asked, whether he was witness to that operation of creation, by which the limits of light and darkness were fixed, and knew the extent both of one and the other. The question is put in figurative language: Light and Darkness are represented as persons; each has its separate dwellingplace and pe-

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.
† Or, at.

20 That thou shouldest take it || to the bound thereof, and that thou shouldest know the paths to the house thereof?

21 Knowest thou it, because thou wast then born? or because the number of thy days is great?

22 Hast thou entered into the treasures of the snow? or hast thou seen the treasures of the hail,

23 Which I have reserved against the time of trouble, against the day of battle and war?

24 By what way is the light parted, which scattereth the east wind upon the earth?

25 Who hath divided a watercourse for the overflowing of waters, or a way for the lightning of thunder;

26 To cause it to rain on the earth, where no man is; on the wilderness, where in there is no man;

27 To satisfy the desolate and waste ground; and to cause the bud of the tender herb to spring forth?

culiar jurisdiction; the bounds of one never encroach on those of the other. Scott.

20. That thou shouldest take it to the bound thereof; Or, "Surely thou canst guide (take) us to its border; yea, certainly thou canst shew the roads which lead to its house. Thou must know, for thou wast born at that time; as to the number of thy years, they are many." This is lofty irony. Heath, Scott.

22—38. Hast thou entered &c. This whole passage relates to those changes in the state of the atmosphere, which we call the weather. Scott.

22. Hast thou entered into the treasures of the snow? &c. Didst thou ever enter into My storehouse of meteors, which I have decreed to bring forth upon all occasions of My judgment upon men? Bp. Hall. The inspired poet still keeps in view the moral purposes, for which the Deity employs His natural works. "The time of trouble" may signify, not winter in general, but those severe winters, in which there falls such abundance of snow and hail, as does infinite damage to the fruits of the earth, to cattle, and to human kind. Scott.

24. By what way is the light parted; The word should be rendered "lightning," as in chap. xxxvii. 3; on account of its accompaniments, wind, rain, and thunder. Bp. Stock.

Dost thou know how the lightning comes to break forth from the cloud; and how that vapour, there included, scatters with great violence a blustering wind upon the earth? Bp. Hall.

25. Who hath divided a watercourse &c. Who hath caused the clouds to pour down stores of rain by drops on such and such places, as if it were guided by pipes or channels? Clark.

26. To cause it to rain — where no man is; This circumstance, "where no man is," is dwelt upon, to shew the provision which the Creator makes for the sustenance of wild beasts. Compare Psal. civ. 10, 11; Joel ii. 22. This instance of the power and providence of God might also be intended to suggest, that He, who turns the barren wilderness into fruitful pasture, is equally able to change a miserable condition into a happy one. Such an instruction is a strong motive to confidence in God in the most desperate situation, as Job thought his own to be. Compare ch. v. 9—11; and see the note there. Scott.

28. Hath the rain a father? Rather, "Who is the father of the rain?" and so it corresponds with the next sentence, "Or who hath begotten the drops of dew?" The first mechanical agents in the production of "rain" and "dew," are known only to Him, whose name is Wonderful. Scott.

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

28 Hath the rain a father? or who hath begotten the drops of dew?

29 Out of whose womb came the ice? and the hoary frost of heaven, who hath gendered it?

30 The waters are hid as with a stone, and the face of the deep † is frozen.

31 Canst thou bind the sweet influences of † † Pleiades, or loose the bands of † Orion?

32 Canst thou bring forth † Mazzaroth in his season? or canst thou † guide Arc-turus with his sons?

33 Knowest thou the ordinances of heaven? canst thou set the dominion thereof in the earth?

34 Canst thou lift up thy voice to the clouds, that abundance of waters may cover thee?

35 Canst thou send lightnings, that they may go, and say unto thee, † Here we are?

36 "Who hath put wisdom in the in-

† Heb. is taken.

† Or, the seven stars.

† Heb.

Cimah.

† Heb.

Casil.

† Or, the twelve signs.

† Heb.

guide them.

† Heb.

Behold us.

° Chap. 32.

8. Eccles.

2. 26.

30. The waters are hid as with a stone; The waters, hardened into the substance of stone, and losing for a time their natural character, "hide themselves;" because no trace of water appears, while every thing is bound by frost. Rosenmüller.

The Son of Sirach has given a beautiful description of this wonderful operation and appearance of nature, Eccclus. xliii. 20. Scott.

— the deep This cannot here mean the sea. A frozen sea was never seen in Arabia, or its neighbourhood. Neither could such a phenomenon be so much as heard of in those days, when navigation had not reached to the high northern latitudes. The word signifies, in the Arabick language, any deep gathering together of water, whether fountain, river, or lake. A frozen lake might be known even in Arabia, or in some of the adjacent countries. See the remark on chap. xxxvii. 10. Scott.

31, 32. Canst thou bind &c. See chap. ix. 9, and the note there. Canst thou alter the seasons of the year, or cause a restraint of the spring, summer, autumn, &c.? Canst thou bring forth those hidden stars of the south? or direct the northern constellations in their courses? Bp. Hall. He is now asked, whether he has power over the heavenly bodies, to direct their motions, control their action upon the earth, and prevent the seasons and weather which they are apt to produce. Scott.

31. — the sweet influences &c. "The sweet influences" are the pleasant season of spring: "the bands" are the rigours of winter, when the earth is bound with frost. The chief attention of the Arabs was, not so much to the planets, as to the fixed stars; their rising and setting, and their supposed influence in producing rain, wind, heat, cold, and all other changes of weather. Scott.

32. Canst thou bring forth Mazzaroth &c. St. Chrysostom explains Mazzaroth of the twelve signs of the zodiack. Our marginal version adopts that explanation. Scott.

33. Knowest thou the ordinances of heaven? Knowest thou what laws God hath made for the motions and influences of the heavens; and what power He hath given to their operations on the earth? Bp. Hall.

35. — Here we are? This surprising figure of speech, which gives intelligence and a voice to the lightnings, expresses with great sublimity the punctuality with which inanimate creatures observe the laws prescribed to them, and perform the service enjoined them by their Creator. The author of Baruch has imitated this wonderful prosopopœia, chap. iii. 34. Scott.

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

ward parts? or who hath given understanding to the heart?

37 Who can number the clouds in wisdom? or † who can stay the bottles of heaven,

38 || When the dust † groweth into hardness, and the clods cleave fast together?

39 ^d Wilt thou hunt the prey for the lion? or fill † the appetite of the young lions,

40 When they couch in their dens, and abide in the covert to lie in wait?

41 ^c Who provideth for the raven his food? when his young ones cry unto God, they wander for lack of meat.

† Heb. who can cause to lie down.
|| Or, When
the dust is turned into mire.
† Heb. is poured.
^d Psal. 104.
21.
† Heb.
the life.
^c Ps. 147. 9.
Matth. 6.
26.

37. Who can number the clouds in wisdom? &c.] With all the wisdom that thou hast, canst thou count the number of the clouds, whose showers thou art as unable to stop, as to make them run? Bp. Patrick.

— who can stay the bottles of heaven, &c.] Canst thou “stay the bottles of heaven,” when they have given as much rain as may fit the earth for bearing fruit, the light dust being now turned into lumps of earth? Caryl.

Or, as in the margin, “Who can cause the bottles of heaven to lie down?” The work of Providence described in these verses, is the collecting and arranging of the clouds in the most fitting season, and then disposing them in the most proper manner for emptying themselves in profitable showers on the arable lands. The clouds are compared to those earthen jars, in which the Eastern people keep their water and their wine; “the bottles,” or pitchers, “of heaven.” See 1 Sam. 10. 3; Isa. xxx. 14; Lam. iv. 2. The disposing of the clouds in a proper manner for emptying themselves is denoted by the position into which a pitcher or jar is put for pouring out its contents: who can “lay along” the pitchers of heaven? This image is similar to the inclined urn, which the heathen poets place in the hand of a river-god. The urn represents the fountain from which the river flows: and what fountains are to rivers, the clouds are to rain. Schultens, Scott.

38. When the dust groweth into hardness, &c.] These showers are sent to soften the glebe, and prepare it for plowing, when it has been baked and hardened by the long drought of summer. Compare Psal. lxx. 9—13. Scott.

39. Wilt thou hunt the prey?] This verse should have begun a new chapter: for we here pass to quite a new topick, the brute animals which inhabit the air, the land, and the water. The subject is continued with a few short interruptions unto the end of the Almighty's speech. Those species of animals are selected, in which the wisdom, power, and providential care of the Creator are most eminently displayed. The tendency of the descriptions is, to raise in our minds such admiration of the Deity, as will effectually extinguish discontent, and silence murmurings against His dispensations. Scott.

— for the lion?] The word signifies “a lioness,” properly when giving suck. Parkhurst. The question turns upon making provision for the lioness, and her family of sucking whelps. The wonderful providence of God effects this, by the tender feelings of parental affection which He has infused into this savage animal, and by the peculiar fierceness and swiftness which he has given to it, to hunt the prey that she may have a supply of milk for her young. Scott.

— or fill the appetite of the young lions,] This is a different question. It relates to qualifying the young weaned lions to provide for themselves. Scott.

41. Who provideth for the raven his food?] The providence of God, particularly in the supplies afforded to the ravens, is divers times taken notice of in the Scriptures. Thus our Saviour, Luke xii. 24, “Consider the ravens, &c.” It is a manifest argument of the Divine care and providence, in supplying the world with food

CHAP. XXXIX.

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

1 Of the wild goats and hinds. 5 Of the wild ass. 9 The unicorn. 13 The peacock, stork, and ostrich. 19 The horse. 26 The hawk. 27 The eagle.

KNOWEST thou the time when the wild goats of the rock bring forth? or canst thou mark when ^a the hinds do ^a calve? Psal. 29. 9.

2 Canst thou number the months that they fulfil? or knowest thou the time when they bring forth?

3 They bow themselves, they bring forth their young ones, they cast out their sorrows.

4 Their young ones are in good liking, and necessities, that the ravens, accounted as unclean, and little regarded by man, destitute of stores, and that live by accidents, by what falleth here and there; that such a bird, I say, should be provided with sufficient food: especially if that be true which Aristotle, Pliny, and Ælian report, of their want of affection and cruelty to their young; that they expel them their nests as soon as they can fly, and then drive them out of the country. Dr. Derham.

The reason given why the raven is particularly mentioned as an object of the care of Providence, is because, by her clamorous and importunate voice, she particularly seems to be always calling upon Him. Hence in Greek, a verb, derived from the word which signifies a raven, means to ask earnestly. Dr. Young.

Perhaps the raven is mentioned here, instead of being introduced among other birds in the next chapter, because he lives on carrion, and may be supposed to feed on carcases which the lion leaves. The difficulty of meeting with such kind of food renders the Divine power more illustrious in preserving this species of creatures. Compare Psal. cxlvii. 9. Scott.

Chap. XXXIX. ver. 1. Knowest thou the time &c.] Canst thou understand or dispose of the conceptions and births of the wildest creatures? Bp. Hall. Not mere knowledge, but providential care and protection is intended here. “To know” is used in this sense, Ps. xxxi. 7, “Canst thou mark,” rather, “Canst thou watch over and preserve the calving of the hinds?” that is, the hinds when they calve. Scott.

— the wild goats of the rock] This animal is called also ibex, and in French bouquetin, which name means “goat of the rock.” It is a species of wild goat, so called from the wonderful manner in which they mount to the top of the highest rocks; to which quality the sacred writers allude in the other two passages, besides this, where the word occurs, 1 Sam. xxiv. 2; Psal. civ. 18: and to this natural historians bear abundant witness. Johnston, in his History of Quadrupeds, says, “It is certain there is no crag of the mountains so high, prominent, or steep, but this animal will mount it in a number of leaps, provided only it be rough, and have protuberances large enough to receive its hoofs in leaping.” And Buffon, after observing that this animal and the chamois greatly resemble each other, adds, “but the rock-goat, as being more nimble and strong, mounts to the very top of the highest mountains, whereas the chamois inhabits only the second stage.” Parkhurst.

2. Canst thou number the months that they fulfil? &c.] “Canst thou number” is here equivalent to “Canst thou appoint the number:” see chap. xiv. 5. And “knowing” means operative providential care, as in ver. 1. Scott.

3. — their sorrows.] “That is, their young ones, brought forth with severe throes. Caryl. It is observed by Bochart and others, that hinds bring forth their young with great difficulty. Dr. Durell.

4. Their young ones are in good liking, &c.] Their young ones are lusty and strong; they grow up in the open fields; they leave their mothers, and return to them no more. Bp. Patrick.

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

they grow up with corn; they go forth, and return not unto them.

5 Who hath sent out the wild ass free? or who hath loosed the bands of the wild ass?

† Heb.
salt places.

6 Whose house I have made the wilderness, and the † barren land his dwellings.

† Heb. of the ex-
actor.

7 He scorneth the multitude of the city, neither regardeth he the crying † of the driver.

8 The range of the mountains is his pasture, and he searcheth after every green thing.

9 Will the unicorn be willing to serve thee, or abide by thy crib?

— they grow up with corn;] The word rendered “corn” means the clear open field or country, as opposed to the dwellings and cultivation of men. The animals here mentioned do not thrive with corn, but with the few shrubs and hardy plants growing in the open country or desert: a circumstance which makes their preservation and “good liking” more wonderful. Parkhurst, Scott.

Perhaps “the hind” is associated in this passage with the “rock-goat,” because the former inhabits the forest, and roams amid its wildnesses, as the rock-goat roams amid the fastnesses of the mountains. Script. illust. Expos. Ind.

5. — the wild ass] This animal is found in considerable numbers in the deserts of Libya and Numidia; in the eastern and southern Tartary; in Persia, Syria, &c. “The wild asses,” says Buffon, “differ from the tame ones, only by the effects of independence and liberty: they are more strong and nimble, more courageous and lively; but they are the same in the shape of their bodies.” Parkhurst.

— free?] This word does not here imply an antecedent state of bondage. It signifies freedom in opposition to slavery; an exemption from the servitude to which the domestick ass is made subject: which exemption is expressed in the next sentence by “loosing the bands of the wild ass.” Scott.

6. Whose house I have made the wilderness;] See above, Parkhurst's note on ver. 5. The wild ass is a gregarious animal, for they go in herds to pasture and to watering; yet in Hos. viii. 9, he is said to be “solitary,” because he frequents lonely places. Scott.

— and the barren land] In the Hebrew, as the margin notices, the “salt places:” either salt marshes, or salt deserts. Professor Pallas, describing a female wild ass, brought to Petersburg, says, “She preferred brackish water to fresh, and never drank of what was troubled. She loved bread sprinkled with salt, and sometimes would eat a handful of salt. I was told, that, when at Derbent, she always ran to drink of the Caspian sea, though fresh water was nearer to her. She also selected plants impregnated with saline particles, or those of bitter juices.” This circumstance greatly adds to the expression and correctness of this passage. Animals, which inhabit the desert, must often be at a loss for water; and this animal, the Professor says, would often pass two whole days without drinking. Script. illust.

7. He scorneth the multitude of the city, &c.] The wild asses have their sight, hearing, and smelling, equally good; so that it is impossible to approach them in an open country. They are adapted to running, and of such swiftness that the best horses cannot equal them: all the ancient writers do justice to their fleetness, and their Hebrew name expresses this quality. Professor Pallas, Script. illust.

8. The range of the mountains is his pasture;] The Persians call this animal by a name signifying the mountain-ass; because he prefers the most arid deserts of the mountains. Professor Pallas.

9. — the unicorn] Most probably the rhinoceros; in the original, the reem. In Numb. xxiii. 22, (see the note there,) the

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

10 Canst thou bind the unicorn with his band in the furrow? or will he harrow the valleys after thee?

11 Wilt thou trust him, because his strength is great? or wilt thou leave thy labour to him?

12 Wilt thou believe him, that he will bring home thy seed, and gather it into thy barn?

13 Gavest thou the goodly wings unto the peacocks? or || wings and feathers unto the ostrich?

|| Or,
the feathers of the stork and ostrich.

14 Which leaveth her eggs in the earth, and warmeth them in dust, strength of Israel is compared to “the strength of the reem.” Job makes frequent allusion to his great strength, and ferocity, and indocility. He asks, “Will the reem be willing to serve thee, or abide by thy crib?” that is, Will he willingly come into thy stable, and eat at thy manger? And again: “Canst thou bind the reem with a band in a furrow, and will he harrow the valleys after thee?” In other words, Canst thou make him to go in the plough or harrow? The rhinoceros does not eat hay or grass, but lives entirely upon trees. Bruce. He is also extremely ill-suited to domestick labours; since, when of full age, he is perhaps as untameable and untractable as any creature living. Buffon says, “In Bengal, Siam, and other southern parts of India, where the rhinoceros is perhaps still more common than in Ethiopia, and where the natives are accustomed to train elephants, he is regarded as an irreclaimable animal, of which no domestick use can be made.” Fragments to Calmet, Script. illust.

13. Gavest thou the goodly wings unto the peacocks?] The original word is one of the Hebrew names of the ostrich. The peacock was probably not known in Syria, Palestine, or Arabia, before the reign of Solomon, who first imported it. It was originally from India. Besides, the ostrich, not the peacock, is allowed on all hands to be the subject of the following parts of the description. Scott.

— Gavest thou the goodly wings &c.] The passage may be rendered thus from the original: “The wing of the ostrich is quivering or expanded: the very feathers and plumage of the stork.” When the ostrich is full grown, the neck, particularly of the male, which before was almost naked, is now very beautifully covered with red feathers. The plumage likewise upon the shoulders, the back, and some parts of the wings, from being hitherto of a dark grayish colour, becomes now as black as jet; whilst the rest of the feathers retain an exquisite whiteness. They are “the very feathers and plumage of the stork:” that is, they consist of such black and white feathers as the stork is known to have. Dr. Shaw.

Or, “The wing of the ostriches is fluttered or quivered:” This camel-bird, as the Persians call it, cannot fly from the ground; but, assisted by the quivering motion of its wings, moves at an astonishing rate. But “is it like the wing of the stork and its plumage?” Is it, like that, employed in protecting and providing for the creature's offspring? No: “for she (the hen ostrich) depositeth her eggs in the earth, &c.” Parkhurst.

14. Which leaveth her eggs in the earth, &c.] As for the stork, the lofty fir trees are her house, Ps. civ. 17: but the improvident ostrich depositeth her eggs in the earth. Scott. She deposits or trusts them there. Several natural historians have supposed the eggs of the ostrich to be hatched entirely by the sun: whereas the original word signifies actively, that “she heateth them,” namely, by incubation. The ostrich lays from thirty to fifty eggs: the first egg is deposited in the centre; the rest are planted as conveniently as possible round about it. In this manner she is said to “lay,” deposit, or trust, “her eggs in the earth, and to warn them in the sand; and forgetteth,” as they are not placed, like those of some other birds, upon trees, or in the clefts of rocks, &c.

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

15 And forgetteth that the foot may crush them, or that the wild beast may break them.

16 She is hardened against her young ones, as though they were not her's: her labour is in vain without fear;

17 Because God hath deprived her of wisdom, neither hath he imparted to her understanding.

"that the foot" of the traveller "may crush them, or that the wild beast may break them." Dr. Shaw.

16. She is hardened against her young ones, &c.] A very little share of that natural affection, which so strongly exerts itself in most other creatures, is observable in the ostrich: for upon the least distant noise or trivial occasion, she forsakes her eggs or her young ones, to which perhaps she never returns; or, if she does, it may be too late, either to restore life to the one, or preserve the lives of the others. The Arabs meet sometimes with whole nests of their eggs undisturbed; some of which are sweet and good, others are addle and corrupted: others again have their young ones of different growths, according to the time it may be presumed they have been forsaken by their dams. They oftener meet a few of the little ones, no bigger than well-grown pullets, half-starved, straggling and moaning about, like so many distressed orphans, for their mother. Thus the ostrich may be said to be "hardened against her young ones, as though they were not her's; her labour," in hatching and attending them thus far, "being in vain, without fear," or the least concern of what becomes of them afterwards. This want of affection is also recorded, Lam. iv. 3. Dr. Shaw.

17. Because God hath deprived her of wisdom,] The want of that natural instinct to provide for, and nurse up, her young, which most other creatures are endowed with, is here attributed to God: "Because God hath deprived her of wisdom, &c." And the singular care of the Creator in this case is very remarkable, in supplying some other way the want of the parent animal's care and affection; so that the young should notwithstanding be bred up in those large and barren deserts of Arabia and Africa, and such like places, where those birds dwell: the most unlikely and unfitting, in all human opinion, to afford sustenance to young helpless creatures; but the fittest, therefore, to give demonstrations of the wisdom, care, and especial providence of the infinite Creator and Conservator of the world. Dr. Derham.

Considering the great voracity of this camel-bird, and the extreme barrenness of those parts of the desert which they chiefly frequent, it is wonderful not only how the little ones should be brought up and nourished; but even how those of fuller growth, and much better qualified to look out for themselves, are able to subsist. Dr. Shaw.

18. What time she lifteth up herself on high, &c.] Or, as the words may be translated, "when she raiseth herself up to run away," namely, from her pursuers, "she scorneth," or laughs at "the horse and his rider." Dr. Shaw. The ostrich usually appears in a couchant posture, but rises suddenly to her full height, when alarmed and preparing to move forward. Bp. Stock. When these birds are surprised by persons coming suddenly upon them, whilst they are feeding in some valley, or behind some rocky or sandy eminence in the deserts, they will not stay to be curiously viewed and examined. Nor are the Arabs ever dexterous enough to overtake them, even when they are mounted on their most esteemed horses. "They, when they raise themselves up for flight, laugh at the horse and his rider." They afford him an opportunity only of admiring at a distance the extraordinary agility and the stateliness likewise of their motions, the richness of their plumage, and the great propriety of ascribing to them "an expanded quivering wing;" see ver. 13, and the note. Nothing certainly can be more beautiful and extraordinary than such a sight. The wings, by their repeated, though unwearied, vibrations, equally serving them for sails and oars; whilst their feet,

18 What time she lifteth up herself on high, she scorneth the horse and his rider. Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

19 Hast thou given the horse strength? hast thou clothed his neck with thunder?

20 Canst thou make him afraid as a grasshopper? the glory of his nostrils is † terrible.

† Heb. terror.

no less assisting in conveying them out of sight, are no less insensible of fatigue. Dr. Shaw.

Adanson, in his voyage to Senegal, speaking of two ostriches taken in Africa, gives this account of their motion, which he had particularly observed. "To try their strength, I made a full grown negro mount the smallest, and two others the largest. This burden did not seem to me at all disproportioned to their strength. At first they went a pretty high trot: when they were heated a little, they expanded their wings, as if it were to catch the wind, and they moved with such fleetness as to seem to be off the ground. Every body must have seen a partridge run, and must know that there is no man whatever able to keep up with it: and it is easy to imagine, that, if this bird had a longer step, its speed would be considerably augmented. The ostrich moves like the partridge, with both these advantages: and I am satisfied that those I am speaking of would have distanced the fleetest race horses that ever were bred in England." Parkhurst.

19. Hast thou given the horse strength? &c.] It is very difficult to express violent motions, which are fleeting and transitory, either in colours or in words. In poetry it requires great spirit in thought, and energy in style, which we find more of in the Eastern poetry, than in either the Greek or Roman. The great Creator, who accommodated Himself to those He vouchsafed to speak to, hath put into the mouths of His Prophets such sublime sentiments and exalted language, as must abash the pride and wit of man. In the Book of Job, the most ancient poem in the world, we have such paintings and descriptions in great variety. The description of the horse in particular, under all the disadvantages of having been written in a language little understood; of being expressed in phrases peculiar to a part of the world, whose manner of thinking and speaking seems to us very uncouth; and, above all, of appearing in a prose translation; is nevertheless so transcendently above all heathen descriptions, notwithstanding there are two very fine ones by Homer and Virgil, that hereby we may perceive how faint and languid the images are, which are formed by mortal authors, when compared with that which is figured, as it were, just as it appears in the eye of the Creator. In this description are all the great and sprightly images that thought can form of this generous beast, expressed in such force and vigour of style, as would have given the great wits of antiquity new laws for the sublime, had they been acquainted with these writings. I cannot but particularly observe, that whereas the classical poets chiefly endeavour to paint the outward figure, lineaments, and motions; the sacred poet makes all the beauties to flow from an inward principle in the creature he describes, and thereby gives great spirit and vivacity to his description. Steele.

— hast thou clothed his neck with thunder?] Homer and Virgil mention nothing about the neck of the horse, but his mane. The sacred author, by the bold figure of thunder, not only expresses the shaking of that remarkable beauty in the horse, and the flakes of hair, which naturally suggest the idea of lightning; but likewise the violent agitation and force of the neck, which in the Oriental tongues had been flatly expressed by a metaphor less bold than this. Steele.

20. — the glory of his nostrils is terrible.] The disdainful snortings which he sends out of his nostrils in his pride and courage, are terrifying like thunder, ver. 19. Caryl. This is more strong and concise than that of Virgil, which yet is the noblest line that was ever written without inspiration; "And in his nostrils rolls collected fire." Steele.

Before CHRIST about 1520. 21 || He paweth in the valley, and rejoiceth in his strength: he goeth on to meet † the armed men.

|| Or, His feet dig. 22 He mocketh at fear, and is not affrighted; neither turneth he back from the sword.

† Heb. the armour.

23 The quiver rattleth against him, the glittering spear and the shield.

24 He swalloweth the ground with fierceness and rage: neither believeth he that it is the sound of the trumpet.

25 He saith among the trumpets, Ha, ha; and he smelleth the battle afar off, the thunder of the captains, and the shouting.

26 Doth the hawk fly by thy wisdom, and stretch her wings toward the south?

† Heb. by thy mouth. 27 Doth the eagle mount up † at thy command, and make her nest on high?

28 She dwelleth and abideth on the rock, upon the crag of the rock, and the strong place.

24. He swalloweth the ground &c.] This expression intimates the rapidity and eagerness of the horse. He is described as rushing forward to battle, and, as it were, devouring the intermediate space; that is, traversing it with such speed, as to appear to swallow it down with one effort. Rosenmüller.

"He swalloweth the ground" is an expression for prodigious swiftness in use among the Arabians, Job's countrymen, at this day. It is indeed the boldest and noblest of images for swiftness. Steele.

— neither believeth he &c.] Neither doth he conceive any terror at the signal for battle, but believeth it not for joy. Bps. Hall and Stock.

"He rejoiceth in his strength;" "he mocketh at fear;" "neither believeth he that it is the sound of the trumpet;" "He saith among the trumpets, Ha, ha;" are signs of courage, as was before said, flowing from an inward principle. There is a peculiar beauty in his "not believing it is the sound of the trumpet;" that is, he cannot believe it for joy; but when he is sure of it, and is "amongst the trumpets, he saith, Ha, ha;" he neighs, he rejoices. Steele.

It is natural, that when things come to pass which are most of all agreeable to our wishes, but beyond our hopes, we scarcely believe our senses that they have happened. Job, speaking of God, says, "If I had called and He had answered me, yet would I not believe that He had hearkened unto my voice," chap. ix. 16; whereby he at the same time intimates the Divine Majesty and awfulness, and his own humility and desperation. "If I laughed on them, they believed it not," says Job of his dependents, chap. xxix. 24: magnifying hereby his own extreme dignity and authority, blended with condescension; and their unmingled veneration towards him. By one and the same circumstance, applied to the war-horse, his ardour and eagerness and impatient thirst for the battle, are wonderfully depicted. "He swalloweth the ground with fierceness and rage; neither believeth he that it is the sound of the trumpet: he saith among the trumpets, Ha, ha; and he smelleth the battle afar off, the thunder of the captains, and the shouting." From which passage, most distinguished by universal admiration, it is abundantly manifest, how greatly this poem excels in description: at the same time we may conclude, that in other instances the correctness and beauty of its representations would not be less evident, if we were equally well acquainted with the animals themselves and their properties. Bp. Lowth.

26. Doth the hawk fly by thy wisdom,] Is it by thy appointment that the hawk stretches her wings, to fly into the warmer climates of the south? Bp. Hall.

29 From thence she seeketh the prey, and her eyes behold afar off. Before CHRIST about 1520.

30 Her young ones also suck up blood: and ^b where the slain are, there is she.

^b Math. 24. 28. Luke 17. 37.

CHAP. XL.

1 Job humbleth himself to God. 6 God stirreth him up to shew his righteousness, power, and wisdom. 15 Of the behemoth.

MOREOVER the LORD answered Job, and said,

2 Shall he that contendeth with the Almighty instruct him? he that reproveth God, let him answer it.

3 ¶ Then Job answered the LORD, and said,

4 Behold, I am vile; what shall I answer thee? I will lay mine hand upon my mouth.

5 Once have I spoken; but I will not answer: yea, twice; but I will proceed no further.

Some of the genus of hawks are, as Bochart and others observe, birds of passage. The hawk therefore appears to be introduced here as a specimen of that astonishing instinct, which teaches birds of passage to know their times and seasons; when to migrate out of one country into another for the benefit of food, or a warmer climate, or both. The stork is of this kind, Jer. viii. 7. Scott, Parkhurst.

27. Doth the eagle mount up at thy command,] Fly directly upward, which no other bird is able to do? Clark. Buffon observes, that the eagle is of all birds that which mounts to the greatest height. Parkhurst.

28. She dwelleth and abideth on the rock,] To illustrate this passage, it may be remarked from Buffon, that the eagle usually constructs its airy, which is flat, and more properly a flooring of sticks and twigs than a nest, between two rocks, in a dry and inaccessible place. Parkhurst.

29. From thence she seeketh the prey, &c.] The eagle is said to be of so acute a sight, that when she is so high in air that man cannot see her, she can discern the smallest fish under water. Dr. Young.

The eagle has an excellent sight, but little smell in comparison of the vulture: he therefore hunts only by view. Buffon.

30. Her young ones also suck up blood: &c.] The young eagle is wont (and who taught it him?) to suck in the blood of his prey; and where carcasses are, thither, by a strange sagacity of nature, he is drawn to resort. Bp. Hall.

Chap. XL. ver. 2. Shall he that contendeth with the Almighty instruct him?] Shall he that pleads against God's proceedings teach Him how to govern the world better? "he that reproveth God, let him answer it." Let him that censures God's actions answer what has been already advanced. Clark, Dr. Durell.

The design of this and of the other chapters is, to shew us how little we understand of the works of God; and that therefore it is the highest presumption to question the reasons and justice of His providence. Bp. Wilson.

5. Once have I spoken; &c.] I have spoken once and again foolishly, but I will not defend what I have unadvisedly said, nor proceed further in such presumptuous expressions and accusations of Thy providence. Clark.

The confession which Job makes of his own vileness and presumption, should teach us what effect ought to be produced in our minds by the wonderful works of creation; namely, that they ought to convince us of our own weakness and ignorance, and so humble us before God, that we may never think or say

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.
Chap.
8. 3.

6 ¶ Then answered the LORD unto Job out of the whirlwind, and said,

7 ^a Gird up thy loins now like a man : I will demand of thee, and declare thou unto me.

Ps. 50. 21.
Rom. 3. 4.

8 ^b Wilt thou also disannul my judgment? wilt thou condemn me, that thou mayest be righteous?

9 Hast thou an arm like God? or canst thou thunder with a voice like him?

Ps. 104. 1.

10 ^c Deck thyself now with majesty and excellency; and array thyself with glory and beauty.

11 Cast abroad the rage of thy wrath: and behold every one that is proud, and abase him.

any thing contrary to the profound submission which we owe Him. Ostervald.

6. Then answered the Lord &c.] Then, the more to humble and convince him, the Divine Majesty spake again after the same manner as before. Bp. Patrick.

7. Gird up thy loins &c.] See note on chap. xxxviii. 3.

8. Wilt thou also disannul my judgment? &c.] Is there any reason to suspect My care of mankind, who have shewn it so much about other creatures? Canst thou not defend thyself, but thou must also complain of Me? Must I be condemned that thou mayest be justified? Bp. Patrick. By "disannulling God's judgment" is meant "condemning God," as the latter sentence explains it. Job's complaints and manner of justifying himself amounted to charging God with injustice. Scott.

10. Deck thyself now with majesty &c.] The magnificent scenery in this and the four following verses presents to us the Almighty arrayed in the splendours of Divine majesty, exerting His supreme dominion, and manifesting His righteous vengeance by thundering and lightning on the heads of haughty tyrants, and hurling them down to the bottom of Hades. See Isai. xxx. 30. Job is ironically required to invest himself with the attributes of Deity, and to assume the glorious ensigns of Divine majesty; that he may execute judgment on proud oppressors, and other profligate men, of whose impunity and prosperity he had so loudly complained. Scott.

— array thyself with glory and beauty.] To understand those expressions in Scripture which speak of Jehovah being arrayed or clothed with majesty, strength, honour, or the like, we must recollect the glorious manner in which He vouchsafed to appear to His people in fire, light, and clouds. Parkhurst.

12. — tread down the wicked in their place.] In the very place of their exaltation. Scott. Permit no one of an infamous character to continue easy and undisturbed: put a stop as soon as possible to their vicious example. Chappelow.

13. Hide them in the dust &c.] Cast them down from their splendid elevation into the obscure abodes of death, as condemned malefactors. "To bind the face" is a phrase for treating a person as a convict condemned to die. See the note on chap. ix. 24. "The dust" is the grave, chap. xvii. 16; and the "secret" place is another expression for the sepulchre; or else it means the secret abodes of Sheol, the receptacle of departed souls. Scott.

14. — that thine own right hand can save thee.] That thou art self-sufficient, the author and preserver of thy own happiness; therefore a god, and a match for Me. This humiliating sarcasm makes way for another mortification: for the Almighty next sends him to two of His creatures, behemoth and leviathan; and bids him prove his high courage in an open encounter with either of them. Scott.

15. Behold now behemoth,] The learned Bochart contends, that the behemoth is the hippopotamus; that is, the sea-horse, or,

12 Look on every one that is proud, and bring him low; and tread down the wicked in their place. Before CHRIST about 1520.

13 Hide them in the dust together; and bind their faces in secret.

14 Then will I also confess unto thee that thine own right hand can save thee.

15 ¶ Behold now || behemoth, which I made with thee; he eateth grass as an ox. || Or, the elephant, as some think.

16 Lo now, his strength is in his loins, and his force is in the navel of his belly.

17 || He moveth his tail like a cedar: the sinews of his stones are wrapped together. || Or, He scotteth &c.

18 His bones are as strong pieces of brass; his bones are like bars of iron.

more properly speaking, the river-horse; which the ancient Greek writers, and the Prænestine pavement described in Shaw's Travels, represent as an amphibious quadruped found in the Nile, and which is still sometimes to be met with in Upper Egypt. And he has supported his opinion with so much learning and plausibility, that I believe it has been generally embraced and acquiesced in by the learned since his time. It must be confessed, however, that most of the characters given of the behemoth correspond also to the elephant. Parkhurst.

— which I have made with thee;] Rather, "near thee;" that is, in thy neighbourhood. As if God had said, There is no need to seek for arguments of My power from a distance, since they lie close at hand. Among the beasts which I have made in the Nile, which borders on thy country Arabia, how wonderful is the river-horse! Bochart. Or, "whom I made thy fellow-creature." This is a humbling stroke. Scott.

— he eateth grass as an ox.] That the river-horse, an aquatic animal, living for the most part at the bottom of the Nile, should eat grass as an ox, is a surprising and singular circumstance, and therefore not omitted by other authors. Bochart.

16. — his strength is in his loins, &c.] It is well known that the loins are the seat of strength: compare Nahum ii. 1; Ps. lxxix. 24. As to the latter part of the verse, the river-horse is protected all over his body, no less in his navel and his belly, than in other parts, by a skin of impenetrable solidity and thickness. This is not the case with the elephant, whose softest and most vulnerable part is the belly. Bochart.

17. He moveth his tail like a cedar:] "He moveth his tail, which is as a cedar." The tail of the hippopotamus might be compared to a cedar, on account of its smoothness, roundness, thickness, and strength. Bochart. Buffon says, that "his tail is like a tortoise's, only incomparably thicker;" and Scheuchzer, that "though short, yet it is thick, and may be compared to the cedar, for its tapering, yea conical shape, its smoothness, thickness, strength, and rigidity." Parkhurst.

18. His bones &c.] "His (smaller) bones are compact bars of brass, his (larger, projecting) bones like a forged bar of iron." No doubt these words are intended to express the extraordinary hardness of the behemoth's bones; but it does not appear that the bones of the elephant are in this respect different from, or harder than, those of other animals: whereas, the bones of the hippopotamus are probably much harder than those of the elephant, if we may judge by the superiour hardness of his tusks: of which Buffon says, "they are very strong, and of a substance so hard as to strike fire with steel." Parkhurst.

The meaning is, that the bones of the river-horse are not, as in most fishes, mere cartilages, but like brass and iron, very hard, firm, and strong. They are, in fact, extremely strong: the tooth of this animal surpassing in hardness, and in the diffi-

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

19 He is the chief of the ways of God : he that made him can make his sword to approach unto him.

20 Surely the mountains bring him forth food, where all the beasts of the field play.

21 He lieth under the shady trees, in the covert of the reed, and fens.

22 The shady trees cover him with their shadow ; the willows of the brook compass him about.

† Heb.
he oppress-
eth.

23 Behold, † he drinketh up a river, and culty with which it is carved, that of the elephant, whose tooth is as hard as any part about him. Bochart. No creature is known to have stronger limbs than the river-horse. Harmer.

19. He is the chief of the ways of God :] That is, one of the most remarkable quadrupeds He hath made. The word "way" denotes the manner of God's acting or proceeding ; also, as in this place, His works or actions themselves. See Prov. viii. 22. "Jehovah possessed me in the beginning of His way ;" that is, of His work of creation. Parkhurst.

— he that made him can make his sword to approach unto him.] That is, can put forth His power and destroy him. Caryl. Rather, the words may be rendered, "He who made him has made fast his weapon ;" (Parkhurst;) alluding to the tusks of the hippopotamus, the fixed insertion of which is remarkable in this animal. Fragments to Calmet. The word, rendered "sword," properly means that sort of sword which the Greeks called harpè, and which was crooked or bent like a sickle. The river-horse is here said to be furnished with such a sword, because he has teeth standing out of his mouth, gently bent, sharp, and long, with which he cuts down and destroys the corn, &c. as with a harpè, or sword crooked like a sickle. The Greek poets and other writers speak of the teeth of the river-horse by this name ; and describe his voracity in laying waste the fields. It is more agreeable to the general sense of the context to understand the words in this manner, than to suppose them to signify that God alone is able to destroy the animal by His power, as by a sword. Bochart.

20. Surely the mountains bring him forth food,] This is the true reason why the behemoth, though a water animal, is armed with such teeth as have been just noticed ; namely, because he feeds, not so much in the water, as on land, where grass as well as corn is cut down with a sickle, or instrument of the like shape. By "the mountains" may be understood the hills and eminences bordering on the Nile. And they are the rather specified, by reason of the strangeness and wonderfulness of an aquatic animal feeding, not only on land, but in such a situation with other beasts and cattle. Bochart.

— where all the beasts of the field play.] It appears to be the intention of this passage, to express the security of the inferior creatures from injury by this inoffensive animal, which permits even their frolics and sportiveness without interruption. Fragments to Calmet.

21. He lieth — in the covert of the reed, &c.] This is agreeable to the description which other writers give of the river-horse. Bochart. In the Prænestine pavement the river-horse is represented hiding and sheltering himself among the reeds of the Nile. He is properly an amphibious animal, living constantly in fens and rivers. Harmer.

23. — he drinketh up a river, and hasteth not:] That is, he drinks at his leisure, without fear. Caryl.

Rather, "Behold, the stream may press upon him, he will not be terrified ; he will be secure, though Jordan rush against his mouth." So Bochart excellently renders this passage. Buffon, speaking of the hippopotamus, says, "He is pleased with being in the water, and stays there as willingly as upon the land. He remains a long time at the bottom of the water, and walks there as in the open air." To the same purpose Mr. Watson, in his Animal World Displayed, "The hippopotamus spends part of its life under water ; it comes out of the water in an evening to hasteth not : he trusteth that he can draw up Jordan into his mouth.

24 || He taketh it with his eyes : his nose pierceth through snares.

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

|| Or,
Will any take him in his sight, or, bore his nose
with a gin ?

CHAP. XLI.

Of God's great power in the leviathan.

CANST thou draw out || leviathan with an hook ? or his tongue with a cord † which thou lettest down ?

|| That is,
a whale, or,
a whirlpool.
† Heb. which thou
drownest.

sleep ; and when it goes in again, it walks very deliberately in over head, and pursues its course along the bottom as easy and unconcerned as if it were in the open air. The rivers it frequents are very deep ; and, when they are also clear, this affords a most astonishing sight." Other writers speak to the same effect. And, further to illustrate this passage, it may not be amiss to add from Maundrell's Travels, that, when he visited the river Jordan, March 30, "the water was very turbid, and too rapid to be swum against. For its breadth, it might be about twenty yards over : and in depth, it far exceeded his own height." Parkhurst.

24. He taketh it with his eyes : &c.] This verse may be thus rendered : "Though one seize him in a trap by the eyes or visage, yet his nose forces itself through the snares ;" which agrees very well with what is said above of his vast force, and the impenetrability of his skin by iron. Dr. Durell.

Chap. XLI. The irony is continued. Job is now addressed as a man of prowess, sufficient to combat and subdue another creature, much more formidable than the behemoth, in regard of the armour with which it is furnished, both for defending itself and attacking its enemy. This creature is named Leviathan. The crocodile has found so powerful an advocate in Bochart, that all other claimants are put to silence. The characters in the description perfectly correspond to that animal, allowance being made for poetical ornaments and heightenings. The description is not intended merely for the purpose of embellishment. It has a nobler design. That design is clearly explained, ver. 10, "None is so fierce that dare stir him up : who then is able to stand before Me ?" Hence Job is taught to tremble at his danger, in having provoked by his murmurs and litigation the displeasure of the Maker of this dreadful animal. His high spirit is now brought down, his conviction is completed, and his repentance and submission satisfy the Almighty. Scott.

Ver. 1. Canst thou draw out leviathan with an hook ?] From this passage Hasselquist observes, that the leviathan "means a crocodile by that which happens daily, and without doubt happened in Job's time, in the river Nile ; to wit, that this voracious animal, far from being drawn up by an hook, bites off and destroys all fishing tackle of this kind which is thrown out in the river. I found," adds he, "in one that I opened, two hooks which it had swallowed, one sticking in the stomach, and the other in a part of the thick membrane which covers the palate." Parkhurst.

The taking of the crocodile is most difficult. Diodorus says, they are not to be taken but by iron nets. When Augustus conquered Egypt he struck a medal, the impress of which was a crocodile chained to a palm tree, with this inscription, "No one has bound me before." Dr. Young.

The crocodile is of too great weight and magnitude to be drawn out of the river, as fish usually are, with an hook. And from the scaly quality, Ezek. xxix. 4, and the hardness of his coat, or because "his scales stick (so thick) together that they cannot be sundered," (below, ver. 17;) there is therefore no danger of having "his skin filled with barbed irons, or his head with fish spears," ver. 7. From these apposite characteristics the crocodile may be well taken for the leviathan, as described in this chapter of Job, and elsewhere alluded to in the Holy Scripture : where the leviathan is called "the piercing serpent," or "dra-

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

2 Canst thou put an hook into his nose? or bore his jaw through with a thorn?

3 Will he make many supplications unto thee? will he speak soft words unto thee?

4 Will he make a covenant with thee? wilt thou take him for a servant for ever?

5 Wilt thou play with him as with a bird? or wilt thou bind him for thy maidens?

6 Shall thy companions make a banquet of him? shall they part him among the merchants?

7 Canst thou fill his skin with barbed irons? or his head with fish spears?

gon," Is. xxvii. 1; where Pharaoh is called "the great dragon," or leviathan, Ezek. xxix. 3; where "the heads also of the leviathan," that is, of Pharaoh or of Egypt, are said to be "broken in pieces," Psal. lxxiv. 14; otherwise expressed in the preceding verse, by "breaking the heads of the dragons in the waters," or in the Red sea. Harmer.

— or his tongue with a cord which thou lettest down?] Rather, "or tie his tongue with a cord." Dr. Durell.

2. Canst thou put an hook into his nose? or bore his jaw through with a thorn?] Rather, "Canst thou put a rope about his nose, or bore his jaw through with a hook?" Dr. Durell. The former word in the original means a rope or muzzle, properly a rope made of bulrushes. The latter, which properly signifies a thorn, is also used for a hook, sharp like a thorn. Bochart. Or it signifies a clenched ring of iron, passed through the nose of a beast, in order the better to manage him by means of a rope fastened to it: as is still usual in the East with regard to camels and buffaloes. See 2 Kings xix. 28; Is. xxxvii. 29. The question then is, "Wilt or canst thou put a rope in his nose?" that is, in a hole bored through his nose; "or bore his cheek through with a ring?" Compare Ezek. xxix. 4, where Pharaoh king of Egypt is described under the similitude of this same dreadful animal. Parkhurst.

4. Will he make a covenant with thee? &c.] In the same manner as the conquered are wont to redeem their lives from their conquerors at the price of their liberty. "A servant for ever;" that is, for the whole of his life. Bochart.

5. — wilt thou bind him for thy maidens?] That they may play with him. The crocodile is particularly hostile to boys and girls, who sometimes, approaching the Nile too incautiously, have fallen a prey to him. Aelian mentions several instances of the crocodile devouring children: and Maximus Tyrius relates a story of an Egyptian woman, who had a son of the same age with a young crocodile. He says, the animal was gentle, as long as it continued weak; but when it increased in size, it discovered its natural disposition, and killed the child. Bochart. See the note on chap. iii. 8.

6. — among the merchants?] The word seems to denote the associated merchants, or merchants companions, who belonged to the same caravan. Parkhurst.

7. Canst thou fill his skin with barbed irons?] Canst thou pierce his skin with barbed hooks? Bp. Hall. This question is not applicable to the whale; but it is to the crocodile, whose skin is impenetrable to weapons. Bochart. See the note from Harmer on ver. 1.

— fish spears?] Instruments, not very unlike the Eastern ox-goads, (see the note on Judges iii. 31,) have been used for catching fish; and were meant by our translators, when they employed the term "fish spears" in this place: but then they must have been sharper than goads, in order to secure the fish. So Camden, in his account of our native island, tells us, that those who live by the sides of Solway Frith hunt salmons, whereof there is great plenty there, with spears, on horseback. Harmer.

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

8 Lay thine hand upon him, remember the battle, do no more.

9 Behold, the hope of him is in vain: shall not one be cast down even at the sight of him?

10 None is so fierce that dare stir him up: who then is able to stand before me?

11 Who hath prevented me, that I should repay him? ^a whatsoever is under the whole ^a Ps. 24. 1. & 50. 12. 1 Cor. 10. 26.

12 I will not conceal his parts, nor his power, nor his comely proportion.

13 Who can discover the face of his garment? or who can come to him || with || Or, within.

The weapons mentioned in this verse are undoubtedly such as fishermen used for striking large fish at a distance. Scott.

8. Lay thine hand upon him, remember the battle, do no more.] The latter clause would be clearer if it were rendered, "but remember that thou wilt have no other conflict;" for this is doubtless the sense. The note in the old version is, "if thou once consider the danger, thou wilt not meddle with him." Dr. Durell. Such dread will come upon thee, that thou wilt think of flight, rather than of battle, when by the very touch thou shalt have discovered that his skin is capable of resisting every stroke. Bochart.

9. Behold, the hope of him is in vain:] The hope of making him a prey is vain. Grotius. Or, the hope of him who shall have laid hands on the crocodile. Bochart.

10. None is so fierce that dare stir him up:] What is said of the lion, Gen. xlix. 9; Numb. xxiv. 9; is here said of the crocodile: "None is so fierce or so bold as to stir him up," when, satiated with the fishes which he has devoured, he reposes asleep upon the shore. Pliny and others describe this as the custom of the crocodile. Bochart.

11. Who hath prevented me, that I should repay him?] Who hath done Me any favour in helping Me to make or govern the world, or in furthering My actions, that I may repay it unto him? Bp. Hall.

The sentiment in this verse demonstrates the folly and impiety of contending with God, as Job had done. He is all-sufficient and independent, and therefore cannot be indebted to any for their service. He is the Proprietor of all beings; He therefore cannot injure any one by taking away his possessions and enjoyments: for He takes only what He gave. Submissive resignation to His disposals therefore is the duty of every reasonable creature. Scott.

12. — his comely proportion.] The comeliness of his form; that is, for fighting or combat: the advantage of his structure, both for his own security, and for destroying and devouring, &c. Parkhurst.

13. Who can discover the face of his garment?] Rather, "who can uncover the face of his garment?" for "the face of his garment" would by a common hebraism signify the upper or external garment. Dr. Durell. Who is able to turn over that skin, with which he is covered as with a garment? Bp. Hall. The crocodile never casts his skin, as serpents do. Bochart.

This obscure sentence seems to describe that terrible helmet, which covers the head and face of the crocodile. The translation might be, "Who can uncover his mailed face?" If in Job's days they covered their war horses in complete armour, the question may refer to taking off the armour, and leviathan's skin be represented by such an image. Scott.

— who can come to him with his double bridle?] "Who can come upon him with the doubling of his rein?" that is, with a bridle having two reins. Parkhurst. Rather, "Within his double bridle who will come?" The expression used here means the double fold of his jaws. Bp. Stock. In Greek, as in Hebrew,

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

† Heb. strong pieces of shields.

14 Who can open the doors of his face? his teeth are terrible round about.

15 His † scales are his pride, shut up together as with a close seal.

16 One is so near to another, that no air can come between them.

17 They are joined one to another, they stick together, that they cannot be sundered.

18 By his neesings a light doth shine, and his eyes are like the eyelids of the morning.

19 Out of his mouth go burning lamps, and sparks of fire leap out.

20 Out of his nostrils goeth smoke, as out of a seething pot or caldron.

21 His breath kindleth coals, and a flame goeth out of his mouth.

those parts of the lips, which terminate on both sides at the jaw-bones, are called "bridles." Bochart. This interpretation of Bochart best agrees, not only with the structure of the preceding hemistich, but with the following verse. Parkhurst.

14. Who can open the doors of his face? That is, his immense jaws, which he separates at pleasure with a vast and horrible opening, like folding doors. It has been said, that "when the crocodile begins to gape, in order to take in his prey, he becomes all mouth." Bochart.

— his teeth are terrible round about. Rather, perhaps, "the rows of his teeth are terrible." His mouth is said to be so large that he can take in a whole sheep: and he has thirty-six sharp pointed teeth in each jaw. Dr. Durell.

15. His scales are his pride, shut up together as with a close seal. The latter clause should be rendered, "He is shut up close as with a seal." Dr. Durell. In this and the two following verses is described the compactness of the scales, by which the whole body of the animal is covered, as if by iron plates closely united together. This circumstance, which is notoriously true of the crocodile, cannot be applied to the whale, whose skin is smooth and free from scales. Bochart.

18. By his neesings a light doth shine, &c. When he sneezeth, he maketh as it were a fire to break forth at his nostrils and eyes; and when thou beholdest his eyes, thou wouldest think that thou sawest the sun rising in the morning. Bp. Hall.

The former clause is nearer the literal truth than at first view may be imagined. The crocodile, say the naturalists, lying long under water, and being there forced to hold his breath, when he emerges, the breath long repressed is hot, and bursts out so violently that it resembles fire and smoke. The horse suppresses not his breath by any means so long, neither is he so fierce or animated: yet Virgil, the most correct of poets, ventures to use the same metaphor concerning him. This may afford a caution against a false opinion of the Eastern boldness from passages ill understood. As to the latter clause, "his eyes are like the eyelids of the morning," I think this gives us as great an image of the thing it would express, as can enter the thought of man. It is not improbable that the Egyptians stole their hieroglyphick for the morning, which is the crocodile's eye, from this passage. Dr. Young.

The Egyptian painters of hieroglyphicks, for the purpose of representing the morning, paint the eyes of the crocodile; because, as that animal emerges from the water, his eyes appear before the rest of his body. Bochart.

19. Out of his mouth go burning lamps, &c. Much the same things as are said in this and the two following verses concerning the crocodile have been said by other writers concerning the river-horse. In fact, there is a relation between these two animals, and they resemble each other particularly in their mode of 22 In his neck remaineth strength, and † sorrow is turned into joy before him.

23 † The flakes of his flesh are joined together: they are firm in themselves; they cannot be moved.

24 His heart is as firm as a stone; yea, as hard as a piece of the nether milstone.

25 When he raiseth up himself, the mighty are afraid: by reason of breakings they purify themselves.

26 The sword of him that layeth at him cannot hold: the spear, the dart, nor the † habergeon.

27 He esteemeth iron as straw, and brass as rotten wood.

28 The arrow cannot make him flee: slingstones are turned with him into stubble.

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

† Heb. sorrow rejoiceth.
† Heb.
The full-
ings.

‡ Or,
breastplate.

breathing: for, having kept in their breath a long time whilst under the water, they breathe with so much the more earnestness when they begin to emerge. As torrents which have burst their barrier, the breath, having been long repressed, then becomes so hot, and breaks forth with such violence, that it seems to vomit out flames from the mouth and nostrils. Bochart.

22. — sorrow is turned into joy before him. Rather, "sorrow goeth before him;" that is, he causes sorrow wherever he goes. This animal, it is well known, occasions great ravages in a country. See ver. 25. Dr. Durell. The phrase is not unusual among the poets, who ascribe Anger, Rage, and Terroure, to Mars, the god of war, as his companions and attendants, who accompany and go before him on his way. Bochart.

The word, rendered "sorrow," signifies fainting from terroure; and the whole verse may be thus translated: "Strength dwelleth on his neck, and fainting exulteth before him;" that is, as soon as men see him, they immediately faint. But both the image and the expression in Job are wonderfully sublime. Parkhurst.

23. The flakes of his flesh are joined together. "The flakes;" that is, the more prominent parts of his flesh. Bochart. "The ribs (or bones) of his body cleave fast together." Dr. Durell.

25. When he raiseth up himself, &c. When he begins to shew himself on the top of the waters, the fearless mariners and seamen tremble, by reason of the dashing of the waves one against another, caused by his violent motion, which threatens them with death; they betake themselves to their devotions, confess their sins, and beg pardon that they may be cleansed from them, and call upon God for mercy, Jonah i. 5. Clark.

Or, "On his rising up the valiant shrink; on the breakings (of whatever he is assaulted with, see the following verses) they are out of their wits." So the French translation; "and they know not where, or whereabouts they are, seeing how he breaks every thing." Parkhurst.

26. — the habergeon. The original word, which occurs only in this place, is supposed to mean a coat of mail; but this is evidently inconsistent with the context, which treats not of defensive, but of offensive armour. Bochart. It signifies a kind of strong javelin, spear, or halberd: and it seems to have been of a stronger make than either of the other weapons noticed in this verse, and therefore is mentioned after them. Parkhurst. It probably means a trident or fishing spear. Bruce.

28. — slingstones are turned with him into stubble. Or, "He throweth about slingstones as stubble," he dasheth them about with as much ease. An extraordinary instance of the force of a crocodile is related by Maillet: "I saw one last year twelve feet long, which had not eaten for five and thirty days, having had his mouth closed during the whole of that time. With one stroke of his tail, he upset five or six men and a bale of coffee, as easily as I

Before CHRIST about 1520. 29 Darts are counted as stubble: he laugheth at the shaking of a spear.

† Heb. Sharp pieces of the pitcher. 30 † Sharp stones are under him: he spreadeth sharp pointed things upon the mire.

31 He maketh the deep to boil like a pot: he maketh the sea like a pot of ointment.

32 He maketh a path to shine after him; one would think the deep to be hoary.

|| Or, who behave themselves without fear. 33 Upon earth there is not his like, || who is made without fear.

34 He beholdeth all high things: he is a king over all the children of pride.

CHAP. XLII.

1 Job submitteth himself unto God. 7 God, preferring could upset six chess-men." What strength then must one of twenty feet have, and in its full strength, not weakened by so long a fast! Heath.

30. Sharp stones are under him: &c.] The meaning of this may be, that, on account of the hardness of his skin, the crocodile can recline at ease on rocks, stones, and the sharpest things. Bochart. The belly of the crocodile is penetrable by a bullet, and perhaps also by a sword. Nevertheless it is hard enough to be insensible of pain, when he lieth on sharp stones and ragged rocks, which are in the bed of the Nile. In that part of the Nile, where the cataracts are, and which the crocodiles mostly frequent, its bed is of granite marble. Scott.

31. — he maketh the sea like a pot of ointment.] "The sea," that is, the Nile; as in Is. xi. 15: the Nile is often so called by the Arabian writers, on account of the size of the river, and because at certain times it is spread over the whole of the Delta, like a sea. "Like a pot of ointment," by reason of the mud and slime which he stirs up, when he agitates the waters; probably also with a view to the sweet smell, which many writers have noticed as belonging to the crocodile. Bochart.

34. He beholdeth all high things: &c.] That is, he looks upon them with disdain; he despises them: see Cant. i. 6. Many stories are on record of crocodiles destroying and devouring other animals, greatly their superiours in height: men, oxen, buffaloes, boars, horses, camels, &c. Bochart.

— the children of pride.] Literally, "the sons of elation or height." The phrase plainly means, as Bochart observes, the larger and stronger kinds of animals or wild beasts. Parkhurst.

There is in this speech a most happy gradation. After a magnificent but just description of the terribleness of the river-horse, the Almighty is represented as going on with His expostulations, something after this manner. But dreadful as this animal is, barbed irons and spears have sometimes prevailed against him: but what wilt thou do with the crocodile? "Canst thou fill his skin with barbed irons, or his head with fish spears? The sword of him that layeth at him cannot hold, &c." See verses 7, 26—29. What wilt thou do with this creature, O Job? This is to finish the expostulation in the strongest and most majestick manner. Harmer.

The argument of Omnipotence, insisted on in these four chapters, when duly considered, as Peters justly remarks, includes in it a full, perfect, and sufficient vindication of the ways of God with man. For if "He can do all things," and "nothing is impossible with God," He can have no temptation to do wrong; for "God cannot be tempted with evil, neither tempteth He any man," Jam. i. 13; though for wise and salutary purposes, for correction, for discipline, for purification of heart and life, and preparation for a better world, He tries the best men, like Job, and proves them in the furnace of affliction, that "they may come forth like gold;" while, by His all-governing and all-controlling providence, He restrains the craft and subtilty of the devil or Job's cause, maketh his friends submit themselves, and accepteth him. 10 He magnifieth and blesseth Job. Before CHRIST about 1520. 16 Job's age and death.

THEN Job answered the LORD, and said,

2 I know that thou canst do every thing, and that || no thought can be withholden from thee. || Or, no thought of thine can be hindered. * Ch. 38. 2.

3 ^a Who is he that hideth counsel without knowledge? therefore have I uttered that I understood not; things too wonderful for me, which I knew not.

4 Hear, I beseech thee, and I will speak: I will demand of thee, and declare thou unto me.

5 I have heard of thee by the hearing of the ear: but now mine eye seeth thee.

man, working against them, to shake their faith, and "sift them as wheat;" saying to the former, as to the ocean originally, "Hitherto shalt thou come, but no further; and here shall thy proud waves be stayed." At the same time, of His infinite mercy and goodness, He is not severe to mark what they have done amiss, upon their hearty repentance and true faith: for "He knoweth whereof they are made, He remembereth that they are but dust." Dr. Hales.

Chap. XLII. Jehovah, having confounded all the false reasonings of Job, and sufficiently humbled him, proceeds now to condemn the principle maintained by the three friends, which He affirms "not to be right." As an atonement therefore for their behaviour, He commands them to offer a sacrifice for themselves; and, as some compensation to Job, they have the mortifying penance enjoined them of begging his prayers in their behalf. He, whom they had represented as the vilest of men, was the only intercessor whom God would accept. Job is at length not only restored to his former prosperity; but, as a recompense for his past sufferings, blessings flow in upon him in a double tide, which he enjoys to a very old age, and leaves to a numerous posterity. Heath.

Ver. 2. I know that thou canst do every thing, &c.] This complete submission contains, 1st, A full acknowledgment of God's almighty power and supreme dominion, ver. 2; by thus glorifying the sovereign authority of God, Job tacitly condemns himself for not having meekly submitted to it: 2dly, A like acknowledgment of the unsearchable wisdom of Divine Providence, with an explicit condemnation of himself for his objections and murmurings against it, ver. 3: 3dly, He humbly begs of God to vouchsafe a gracious audience to his petition, and to instruct him farther in his duty, ver. 4: 4thly, He declares that this visible manifestation of the Almighty to him had impressed him with a deeper and more reverent sense of the Divine perfection and majesty, than he had before conceived by means of instruction only, ver. 5: Lastly, he expresses his repentance in the strongest terms of self-condemnation and humble sorrow, ver. 6. This complete submission may not improperly be called the catastrophe of the poem: it is not indeed a change of Job's outward condition: it is an alteration infinitely more important and beneficial; an alteration in the temper and state of his mind. He is brought back to his duty, and his soul returns to its rest. The restoration of his health and prosperity quickly followed, and is the subject of the ensuing narrative, where the style changes to historical prose. Scott.

3. Who is he that hideth &c.] I am sensible of the justice of Thy reproof, (see chap. xxxviii. 2,) and confess my presumption in speaking of things above my reach, which I ought humbly to admire, not arrogantly censure. Bp. Patrick. Our own humiliation begins at the exaltation of God. Caryl.

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

6 Wherefore I abhor myself, and repent in dust and ashes.

7 ¶ And it was so, that after the LORD had spoken these words unto Job, the LORD said to Eliphaz the Temanite, My wrath is kindled against thee, and against thy two friends: for ye have not spoken of me the thing that is right, as my servant Job hath.

8 Therefore take unto you now seven bullocks and seven rams, and go to my servant Job, and offer up for yourselves a burnt offering; and my servant Job shall pray for you: for † him will I accept: lest I deal with you after your folly, in that ye have not spoken of me the thing which is right, like my servant Job.

9 So Eliphaz the Temanite and Bildad the Shuhite and Zophar the Naamathite went, and did according as the LORD commanded them: the LORD also accepted † Job.

10 And the LORD turned the captivity of Job, when he prayed for his friends: also the LORD † gave Job twice as much as he had before.

† Heb.
his face, or,
person.

† Heb.
the face of Job.

† Heb. added all that had been to Job unto the double.

6. Wherefore I abhor myself, &c.] This humble confession and self-abasement of Job was graciously accepted: it covered all his imperfections; his passionate complaints wrung from him by the extremity of sufferings, corporeal and mental; his despair and weariness of life; his frequent wishes for death; his eagerness to enter upon his trial; his earnest request, and even expostulations with his Judge, to bring him to it, or at least to acquaint him with the reasons of such severe afflictions. Such shades and blemishes in the character of this illustrious Patriarch argue somewhat of impatience in this heroick pattern of patience. But God is ever ready to pass over the frailties and infirmities of human nature, where there is a tried and resolute integrity, determined to adhere to God in all trials and temptations, whatever may be the result. Dr. Hales.

7, 8. — the Lord said to Eliphaz &c.] Here is a repetition of the same declaration, in express terms, by God Himself, that Eliphaz and his companions “had not spoken of Him the thing that was right,” and that Job had. Now it is impossible to find any thing in their speeches, which should make the difference here supposed, if we set aside the doctrine of a future state. For in this view the others would really speak more worthily of God than Job, by endeavouring to vindicate His providence in the exact distribution of good and evil in this life: whereas Job’s assertion, chap. ix. 22, that “this is one thing, therefore I said it, He destroyeth the perfect and the wicked,” which is the argument that he insists upon throughout, would, upon this supposition, be directly to charge God with making no distinction between the good and bad; which in a ruler is an error, that reflects both on his wisdom and on his justice.

But now take the other life into the account, and the subject will appear in a contrary light; and we shall easily see the reason why God approves of the sentiments of Job, and condemns those of his friends. For let us suppose the friends of Job to argue, which seems to be the general tendency of their arguments, that the righteous are never afflicted without remedy here, and the wicked never prosperous upon the whole in this life, which is a wrong representation of God’s providence; and Job to argue on the other hand, that the righteous are sometimes afflicted here, and that without remedy, but shall be rewarded in a life to come; and that the wicked prosper here, but shall be punished here-

Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

11 Then came there unto him all his brethren, and all his sisters, and all they that had been of his acquaintance before, and did eat bread with him in his house: and they bemoaned him, and comforted him over all the evil that the LORD had brought upon him: every man also gave him a piece of money, and every one an earring of gold.

12 So the LORD blessed the latter end of Job more than his beginning: for he had fourteen thousand sheep, and six thousand camels, and a thousand yoke of oxen, and a thousand she asses.

13 He had also seven sons and three daughters.

14 And he called the name of the first, Jemima; and the name of the second, Kezia; and the name of the third, Keren-happuch.

15 And in all the land were no women found so fair as the daughters of Job: and their father gave them inheritance among their brethren.

16 After this lived Job an hundred and after; which is the true representation of the Divine proceedings; and here is a very apparent difference in the drift of the one discourse and of the other: for Job in this view speaks worthily of God, the rest unworthily.

The best moral argument, which mankind ever had, to believe a life to come, is this, on which Job insists: that good and evil are for the most part dealt out here promiscuously. On the contrary, the topick urged by his friends, and which they push much too far, that God rewards and punishes in this world, tends in its consequence, like that other opinion, which was held in after-times, that virtue is its own reward, to sap the very foundation of that proof, which we have from reason, of another life. It is no wonder therefore, that the sentiments of the one are approved, and those of the other condemned.

And, taking the matter in this light, we may be almost led to conclude, that as God bestowed upon Solomon all other temporal advantages in reward for his asking wisdom, so He restored Job to all his temporal prosperity and happiness, and gave him a long enjoyment and increase of it, as a recompense to him for having so well defended the doctrine of a future state. Peters.

9. — the Lord also accepted Job.] The Lord also heard the prayer that he made for his friends, and so accepted of his person and devotion, that He forgave their offence upon his intercession. Bp. Hall.

10. And the Lord turned the captivity of Job, &c.] And the Lord released that miserable affliction, under which Job had been held bound, when out of his meekness and charity he was content to pray for his persecuting friends. Bp. Hall.

To “turn the captivity,” seems to have been a proverbial phrase for a happy reverse of condition. For certainly it here includes all that God did for this excellent man. Scott.

11. Then came there &c.] When Job had humbled himself, and God had accepted him, He quickly turned the hearts of his friends to regard him with kindness, Prov. xvi. 7. Clark.

— every man also gave him a piece of money.] It was an ancient custom, which is still observed in the East, never to visit a person of distinction without paying him the compliment of a present. It is uncertain, whether one kind of present made to Job on this occasion, was a sheep, or a piece of money, that had the figure of a sheep stamped upon it. Scott. See the note on Gen. xxxiii. 19.

Before
CHRIST
about 1520. forty years, and saw his sons, and his sons' sons, even four generations.

17. So Job died,] It has been urged as an objection against Job being the author of this book, that his death is mentioned at the conclusion of it. But this is easily accounted for, in the same way as the death of Moses recorded at the conclusion of the Book of Deuteronomy, which is generally believed to be an addition by some other hand. See the note there. The story, as told by Job himself, might probably conclude at the tenth, or be continued to the twelfth verse of this chapter. Peters.

The circumstance of the remote antiquity of this book, it being presumed to be prior to the Pentateuch, and therefore the oldest book in the world, stamps the highest value upon it, as a most faithful and authentick monument of the language, the learning, the manners, and the religion, of the earlier and purer patriarchal ages: it is a valuable voucher for all those historical facts and doctrines, which it notices jointly with the books of Moses, such as the creation of the world, the ministry of good angels, the agency of bad, the fall of Adam, the universal deluge, &c.: while the difference of the manner, and the new circumstances which it incidentally relates, not to be found in the Pentateuch, prove it to be also an independent voucher, which derived information from different sources or traditions, preserved in Aram's and Jocktan's families. Dr. Hales.

There is one thing to be observed on the conduct of Job's friends, and their rash unkind censures of him, which may help to set the poem in a proper light. Their harsh and unfounded reproofs were made admirably subservient to the great design of Providence with respect to Job, and the end proposed by the Divine wisdom to exhibit him as a pattern to all succeeding generations. For neither could his sufferings have been so complete, nor consequently his patience so exemplary, had not God permitted this, which may be almost called the severest trial of all, to befall him. There is scarcely any thing, which a man of a generous mind is so little able to bear, as ignominy and reproach; especially the reproaches of those, who have been his friends. This therefore is a very delicate circumstance, that could not be omitted, if the afflictions of this good man were intended to be shewn in their proper light, so as to make his virtue, and the reward of it, the more conspicuous. Peters.

17 So Job died, being old and full of days. Before
CHRIST
about 1520.

The grand moral of the book is to shew,

1st, That God sometimes permits the best men to be afflicted by Satan, and that most grievously, in this life, to prove their faith, patience, humility, and resignation to His will:

2dly, That this world is not a perfect state of retribution for virtue and vice: but that 3dly, All the inequalities, which are to be found here, will be completely redressed in a future state, at the general judgment, in which the good will be finally rewarded, and the wicked punished.

Job indeed was one of the best men that ever lived; but he was not exempt from the frailties and infirmities of human nature: and he failed in some measure under his last and sorest trial. Still, with all his imperfections, he will shine forth to the end of time an admirable example and an heroic pattern of piety and patience; to be exceeded only by that inimitable Standard of perfection, who, in His state of humiliation, was "meek and lowly of heart;" who was "in all points tempted like as we are," and that "by the devil," but yet "did no sin, neither was guile found in His mouth;" and who was "perfected by sufferings" in this life, that He might be transcendently "exalted at the right hand of God:" the blessed "Seed of the woman," THE MAN JESUS CHRIST. Dr. Hales.

The following are the Chapters from the Book of Job, appointed for Proper Lessons on Sundays and Holydays.

CHAP. I.	-	-	-	-	St. Luke,	-	-	-	-	-	Evening.
— XXIV, XXV.	-	-	-	-	St. Simon and St. Jude,	-	-	-	-	-	Morning.
— XLII.	-	-	-	-	Ditto.	-	-	-	-	-	Evening.

UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA LIBRARY
Los Angeles

This book is DUE on the last date stamped below.

UC SOUTHERN REGIONAL LIBRARY FACILITY

D 000 701 859 1

